Two deer watch from afar when residents go into the woods to cut cedars and poplars for them to eat. There are about 80 deer living in the area of Chandler Township where the men are cutting trees and leaving foodstuffs. The deer have already eaten all the natural food in the area they can reach.

They're out to help the deer

By DON DIBLEY

Six men are traipsing through the snow-covered woods, following deer tracks.

The men are armed but not with guns or bows — they carry chainsaws and an ax.

They've taken time out on a Saturday afternoon — as they do many weekends — to cut down trees so deer can live.

They're going to a deer yard, a place where deer congregate in the winter as they search for food and shelter.

About 80 deer are trying to survive the harshness of winter in this Chandler Township swamp.

All around is evidence the deer have had a rough season — foliage stripped away from the bottom of cedars and poplars from ground level up to about five feet, branch stubs gnawed off.

There is also ample evidence someone has been trying to help them — trees cut down so the animals can munch on the upper limbs, empty crates that once contained garden vegetables, scraps of potatoes and other foods on the ground.

Lettuce, cherry tomatoes, salt licks, hay — they help. But the deer cannot survive by just eating people-type foods which are not their natural sources of nutrition. Their digestive systems can't handle the change in diet. DNR conservation officer Tom Sweet says.

Sweet has come along with this band of private citizens on Saturday to saw down some cedar trees so the deer can have something to nibble on.

But the venture is not a state Department of Natural Resources event. It is a group of residents getting together to do something to help.

Some of those involved in the cutting are hunters who, among other reasons, are trying to insure next season's herd. But some are not hunters; they are just people who want to help.

Those who have come along, with Sweet are Dave Williams, Jack Howard, Ken Howard, Myron Matz and Chip Daniels. They have been joined at other times by other residents of the area where the deer live.

When they reach the cutting area Dick Florenski is cutting marketable trees under a permit with the DNR, but he stops to help cut cedar for feed.

A little push is necessary to topple a cedar whose top is stuck among the branches of other trees. Once the men have completed their work, the deer re-enter the area to nibble at their new food supply.

It's been an especially rough winter for the deer, Sweet says, because the three major storms of January buried ground-level food and because the acorn supply was low.

When the temperature is low, the deer need more to eat. And January was cold as well as snowy. So the deer's natural food supply was depleted early.

A "winter severity index" that wildlife biologists use shows how bad the winter has been for the animals, Sweet says. In a typical year there are the equivalent of 60 days of severe weather, but January alone had the equivalent of 40.

Meanwhile, weather forecasters are predicting that March will be another harsh month.

The weather causes another problem for the deer, too. Roaming dogs chase them through the deep snow, catch them by nipping at the tendons in their hind legs and kill them. Sweet points out that dog owners are responsible for the actions of their animals and that dogs are required by law to be tied up.

The amount of poaching has been reduced in recent months, Sweet says, in large part because residents have taken an active role in helping stop illegal hunters.

Two convicted poachers recently were sentenced to spend 50 days in jail and to pay $1,300 each in fines after being caught thanks to the help of an alert citizen, Sweet says.

Sweet says residents needn't wait until they see an illegal action taking place. If they see someone acting suspiciously, they should call the DNR or the state police, he says.

There is also a toll-free hotline they can call. And rewards they can receive.

The Report All Poaching hotline at 1-800-292-7800 is manned day and night. Persons reporting poachers or fish and game law breakers are eligible for rewards if the violators are found guilty.

Congressman works to ease job crunch

Area Cong. Bob Davis is working in three areas to try to ease the region's economic plight, he said on a stop in Boyne City last week.

One problem he and other Michigan congressmen are having, though, is getting colleagues from more prosperous states to understand the depth of the troubles here.

"If you aren't unemployed, it doesn't mean as much as when you lose your job," he said in explaining that some congressmen don't seem as concerned about the state's woes as Michigan representatives would like them to be.

One area Davis said he is working in to help get the state back on its feet is in trying to get government contracts and facilities for the area.

Selfridge Air National Guard base outside Detroit is one of two main sites being eyed by the Defense Department for an air facility, he said.

Selfridge was an Air Force base until about a decade ago.

While the facility would be far from his northern Michigan district, Davis said, at least it would provide some jobs in the state.

A big problem in obtaining approval to put the facility at Selfridge, he said, is that Oregon is also bidding for it and the chairman of Senate committee considering it is Mark Hatfield — of Oregon.

Efforts are being made to get the Department of Transportation to reverse its decision to decommission the Coast Guard cutter Mackinaw at Cheboygan. Davis is also trying to get the Coast Guard returned to Defense Department jurisdiction.

Another area Davis is working in is trying to get the federal government to excuse Michigan's penalty because its unemployment fund ran dry. If the government does not drop the penalty, businesses — which pay the money used to write unemployment checks — will have increased jobless fund bills.

Davis is also trying to interest companies in locating in northern Michigan.

Forestry-related industries, in particular, are showing an interest, he said, citing the Weyerhaeuser plant being build in Grayling as an example.

He said the "time has come to give the Federal Reserve Board a message." The Federal Reserve is an independent government panel which sets the money policies which dictate interest rates.

Davis said there are signs that Reagan administration is preparing to move in an effort to bring interest rates down, but right now it seems more interested in tackling the high unemployment.

He said he does not foresee a good year in 1982 for the U.S. auto industry, on which much of Michigan's economy depends. He did anticipate another good year for the tourism industry, however.

Two new laws to hinder municipalities -- Clifton

BY BARBARA CRUDEN

Two new laws—and another proposed one—will seriously affect city and township budgets, Boyne City manager Tim Clifton says.

In the Truth-in-Assessing Act, Clifton told the city commission, communities can no longer factor up their assessed valuations to match the State Equalized Valuation. Instead local governments will have to increase their local assessments.

If they want to differ from the SEV, they will have to hold hearings and vote on a resolution.

Clifton said this law won't affect Boyne City as much as some others, because the city employs the county assessor.

"But the one I feel is the largest infringement upon home rule," Clifton said, "is the Truth-in-Taxation Act."

In it, he said, local governments "cannot levy taxes which generate more dollars than were collected the previous year, even if the millage rate remains the same or declines, without a public hearing and a separate resolution."

Even though the land values have risen and even though a city does not increase the millage rate, the taxes collected from the land cannot increase, except where there is new construction and where increased millage is voted on, he said.

Thus, while city expenses are affected by inflation, these expenses would no longer be offset by the inflation affecting property values.

By contrast, Clifton said, increases in state and federal expenses are met with increases in income tax money. In other words, the state can benefit from higher incomes, but localities may not take the benefit of higher land values.

So unless property taxes are locally increased following a public hearing and a separate vote, the city could be in a bind in trying to cover the costs of its responsibilities, he said.

Clifton said the bill, which includes designating even the size of type required for a newspaper notice of the public hearing, "makes a shambles of home rule statutes."

The third tax bill, which has not yet passed—Property Tax Credit Front-loading (HB4250)—will amount to a convenience for some people and, according to Clifton, an additional expense for the city.

HB 4250 applies to property tax circuit-breakers in which tax credits are given to people over 65, paraplegics, and other categories.

Clifton said the state may change who gets the credits, but the plan is to include the forms in the assessment notices, instead of having the people go out to obtain them. (And many did not, not knowing they qualified.)

This bill's problems only indirectly concern voters as it effects are on clerical work-hours and cash flow in the city government, Clifton said.

Non-residents on panel?

With the loss of two members recently, the Boyne City Parks and Recreation Commission requested the city commission Tuesday, Feb. 23, to "consider a referendum vote...to allow people to serve on commissions and boards from outside the city limits."

According to commissioner Thelma Behling, they're not asking the city to hold a special election but would have the request appear on the next regular ballot in August.

Behling said people from outside the city are involved in fund-raising for the parks and are often immediately concerned with the airport, and would make interested and valuable board members.

She gave as an example someone interested in serving on a board, whose children go to school, and who shops in the city, but who can't because he lives a few rods outside city limits.

"They may not be in the city, but they have been hometown people," she said. Commissioner Bill Grimm said, "You'd have to put restrictions on how many to allow from outside the city. Some boards—like the Board of Review—couldn't operate that way."

Many people regularly attend board meetings as ex officio members, but the city charter doesn't permit them to vote.

Behling said, the boards only make recommendations to the city council where the decisions are actually made, so control would not be lost even if people outside were serving on the boards.

She added, if people from outside or young people below voting age could serve as members, "we could get better qualified boards" with the increase in selection.

Another problem is the frequency with which no quorum would be present for a meeting.

Commissioner Steve Moody suggested the ordinance be changed regarding the stated size of the commission. He said there would be enough people to take care of the work if even only three were from in the city with ex officio members filling out the board. The charter requires a quorum to be the majority of those appointed to the board.

Linda Christensen, ex officio member of the parks and recreation commission, said she would bring back from commission a recommendation on how big a board members would like.

The city commission would then vote on whether it wanted to change the make-up of the panel.

Ej-Florida picnic set

The Boyne City American Legion and its auxiliary will celebrate the Legion's birthday March 4. There will be a pot-luck dinner with the auxiliary furnishing the meat. Bring a dish to pass. For information, call either Dorothy Pelton at 536-7831 or Clara Davis at 582-7717. Speakers will be Rev. Ray Giffin and his wife on their China trip and missionary work.

Girl Scouts on Feb. 13. Thirty six Junior Scouts from East Jordan, Boyne City and Charlevoix gathered for sliding and refreshments. East Jordan Girl Scouts thank Mr. and Mrs. Joe Powell for the use of their facilities and sliding hill.

Nancy LaCroix is a patient in Room 304 of the Osteopathic Hospital in Traverse City. Her birthday is Feb. 24.

Theresa Walden received word that her great granddaughter Katrina Sadlowski of Troy was in the hospital over the weekend with pneumonia. The paternal grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Sadlowski, Katrina's mother, is the former Kathy Dougherty of East Jordan.

DuWayne Dougherty Jr. from Northern Michigan University at Marquette was home to celebrate his father's birthday on Valentine's Day.

About 40 people from East Jordan attended the Snow Flake luncheon Feb. 11 at Boyne Highlands.

Mr. and Mrs. Harvey Dumas and his sister Pearl from Holly were here visiting Florence Cole of East Jordan.

The Pinochle Club met at Marie Woodcock's home on Feb. 11 with Florence Cole winning first prize.

Bud Brown and Mike

Kelly and a couple of friends went fishing in Hancock, then came to East Jordan to visit grandmother and mother-in-law, Mrs. Lorna Ingalls and Brown's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Henry Brown.

Mr. and Mrs. Ernie Allen from Sault Ste. Marie, Mich., were here visiting her sister Helen Argetsinger of East Jordan and her son Rodney Pearsall of Charlevoix.

The East Jordan-Florida picnic will be held at noon on Thursday, March 11, at the Zephyrhills Park building on Highway 50W in Zephyrhills, Fla. There will be entertainment following lunch. Take your own table setting and beverage and a dish to pass.

Campus Life Sweetheart Sheri Sutliff of Boyne City is surrounded by her court at the 14th annual pageant. Sheri received a $150 scholarship, a tiara and a bouquet of roses. ## "Devil's Invention"

A lesson from the past...

Almost a century has passed since Silvio Dolza heard a Sicilian clergyman assail the steam engine as the "devil's invention."

History, of course, has proven the clergyman wrong. But time hasn't erased the sermon from John Dolza's memory, for his father—Silvio—stressed it as an example of the dangers of ignorance and superstition.

"God made fire the enemy of water," the clergyman warned. "Great fires will make water disappear. He made water the enemy of fire; indeed much water will kill a fire. The men that try to marry fire and water in engines are sacrilegious and are working against God."

"To us it sounds ridiculous, but the opposition to modern things of most of the Sicilian leaders proved to be a very, very serious handicap for many years," John Dolza says.

The lesson accompanied Dolza and his engineering skills when he immigrated to the United States as a young man. He worked for General Motors for many years, then began Dolza International Engineering. Credited with more than 120 inventions, he lives in Fenton.

Through his 80 years Dolza has seen countless technological changes. But although the machines change—nuclear power is on the energy forefront that steam power held a century ago—Dolza sees a disheartening similarity between his father's time and today's fight against nuclear power.

"The opposition to nuclear power is very, very harmful," he says. "With the price of imported energy, keeping these nuclear plants from being completed is just plain criminal."

He points out that Italy paid a high price for a similar mistake long ago, when 10- and 15-year-old children were forced to work in underground sulfur mines.

"These youngsters died of tuberculosis caused by malnutrition, no ventilation in the tunnels and sulfur dioxide," he says. Meanwhile, American ingenuity found a way to inject steam into the ground, melt the sulfur and make it float through nearby wells to aboveground collectors. This technique, besides discarding the dangerous child labor, was more economical.

John Dolza

In Italy, however, prejudice against steam power blocked the new technology. The opposition killed Italy's sulfur industry.

"When I see on television mostly young people opposing nuclear power plants, I realize with great sadness that ignorance is just as serious today as a century ago," he says.

"Imported oil is making us poorer and poorer, and the money spent abroad comes back to buy off our land and its resources. Oil for power stations will be even more prohibitive in the future than now."

"I've never seen anything so safe or so respectful of its surroundings as nuclear energy. I think the developers have to be congratulated for a step forward," Dolza says.

"If we are to follow the antinuclear power plant logic, then we would all go back to nature and live in caves."

"Nuclear power does not put smoke into the atmosphere. It does not put sulfur dioxide into the atmosphere. It does not put dust into the atmosphere. We need nuclear energy."

"It would show the future financial disaster if this nation permits itself to lose its muscles by accepting the intimidations of ignorance."

Getting old -- and wiser

The birthdays of president Washington and Lincoln have been celebrated by the government, the state, the post office and banks. Many offices knocked out for a day in recognition of the contributions these men to their country.

And now that things are back to normal, my birthday is coming up. The difference here is that mine will be little noted nor long remembered. Trade associations will not grasp the opportunity to turn it into a gala commercial bonanza. No large signs will be erected asking customers to buy stuff in my honor.

That's because no far-flung fuss is worked up unless the gentleman in question has been lied about in our history books. However, I do feel that I am half-way there. I have been lied about. Some of which is true.

Our two presidents' birthdays are celebrated in the dead of the winter. Mine comes in March, just before the first shank of Spring, on the Second Sunday of Lent. It is celebrated only by the city removing those Christmas trimmings from light poles in the business district.

Each year as my birthday sneaks up on me I get an upset stomach and rush to the drug store to buy those things advertised on television guaranteed to put down any gastrinomial flare-up.

My trouble stems from the fact that the older I get, the smarter I get. This has been going on so long that I am now so smart I can hardly stand it. My head aches just thinking about it.

In no way is this revelation an egotistical boast or a tooting of my own horn. (My horn gave out on my fiftieth and I can no longer toot worth a hoot.) I'm merely doing my readers a favor by warning them of things to come—that they will get smarter as they get older; and that they should be prepared to wrestle with several trash bags full of intelligence when they get to be my age.

I am pleased and grateful to be able to alert my readers to a situation they will face as time goes on. After all, getting smarter as you get older has more draw backs than President Reagan's plan to put two Japanese cars in every garage.

Looking back I can see how unfair life is. I needed all this intelligence years ago when I tried to wring gasoline out of milkweeds and failed. It's a sad thing when you go belly up just because you ain't smart.

Life3 should be turned around. A person should be smart when he's young and dumb when he's old. I do not need all this intelligence pecking away at me. If I knew who he was, I would give it to that fellow who tried to push off the metric system on a nation that adds and subtracts on its fingers.

The reason we celebrate Washington's and Lincoln's birthdays and not mine is because they were both young and smart at the same time—a trick worked out by those people who write our history books.

To those who snicker when I say people get smarter as they get older, let me warn: "Just you wait and see how smart and confused you will become when you get to be my age."

On the march to March

It may be a coincidence, but look at all the famous people born in February. I'm not one for astrology. Instead, I think it has to do with courage.

Conceived in May when it is easy to be brave, these women and men came to the world as babies nine months later in the season when courage is most needed.

Even Valentine's Day with the heart for a symbol represents courage because, you see, the French word for "heart" is "coeur" making courage mean "with the heart."

School teachers and students can tell you about February's need for courage.

Owners of businesses up here can tell you, also.

And at night (what no stars again!) we may start to ruminate about where to from here.

It's better to hunch up those covers and go to sleep. Such rumination can be ruinous.

Better to weigh things in the daylight.

Better, in some respects, if we could sleep through all of February like the ground hog.

Except that now is the time for courage! For making like George Washington at Valley Forge. Look at what we have survived this winter.

There's a young fellow I know who walked 10 miles or so in January to get to night classes because he couldn't afford to get his car fixed. I don't know how often he did it, but there he is.

There's the red squirrel making energetic leaps across the snow. How did he manage winter without central heating?

Red again—it's the red stripe on the back of the woodpecker's head. Such a tiny flash of color in all the black and white woods. Such a small warm heart in the cubic miles of cold.

Somebody told me winter is good for us. It kills the disease bugs.

Not knowing that much about biology, I can at least agree it kills certain fungi that send roots into the spirit and nothing the fiber.

Nothing more anti-fungi than having to dig out the car.

And now that the car's out, let's see—who would like to go for a ride?

You see how it is? In February we go from schuss to slush.

It's the spelling. I never could say February right.

Big Rock crew wins 5th safety award

For the fifth consecutive year employees of Consumers Power Company's Big Rock Point nuclear power plant have earned the utility's top recognition for safety, the President's Award.

Big Rock employees will again share the award with employees from the company's Palisades and Midland nuclear plants. This is the second year the firm's nuclear operations has competed as a group. Previously, each plant competed as a single unit.

Big Rock has won the President's Award in 1977, 1978, 1979 and 1980. And the facility has completed four years without a lost-time injury.

On Jan. 18, Big Rock employees completed one-million man hours without a lost-time injury. The last lost-time injury was on Aug. 3, 1977.

In addition, in 1981, Big Rock Point did not have an injury which required any medical treatment.

This is the first time a generating plant within the company has accomplished this feat and only the second time any unit within the history of the company has reached this type of milestone.

Big Rock Point had a safety performance index of .000 in 1981. This is the lowest SPI possible. The index is determined under a formula which computes manhours worked, number of medical cases, and severity of injuries and traffic accidents.

The President's Award was developed in 1948 as a part of the company's accident prevention program. Its purpose is to stimulate enthusiasm for safety on-the-job, at home and on the highways.

The award was presented during ceremonies at the plant. John D. Selby, the company's chairman of the board, made the presentation.

CP chief: No more nuclear plants

Don't expect Consumers Power to start construction of any more nuclear power plants.

That word came from Consumers president John Selby during a press conference held Friday, Feb. 21, at the utility's Big Rock Point nuclear power plant.

A recurring theme in Selby's comments was high costs — for construction, for the licensing process and for the license amendment procedure.

He said the monetary risk involved in trying to get a plant licensed has grown "way out of proportion."

Where a few years ago it would have cost a utility $10 million to $25 million to go through the licensing process, the front-end costs now are in the neighborhood of $250 million.

And there's no guarantee of getting an operating license, Selby pointed out. Utilities such as Consumers are not willing to spend that kind of money, he said.

"Our shareholders don't want to eat it (a loss from not getting licensed); our customers don't want to eat it." Selby also said federal regulations play a role in the move away from building nuclear plants.

"If Big Rock were designed and built today, it wouldn't be as simple" as it was constructed, he said. Federal codes and regulations would make it more complicated, he said, while emphasizing that the Big Rock plant is safe.

Big Rock is one of three nuclear plants the utility owns. It is the older and smaller of the two operating plants, and is also the more trouble-free. (See related story.) The Palisades plant is in operation near South Haven and a plant is being built near Midland.

Selby said that if the company were to consider building another electricity-generating facility, it would probably be a coal-fueled one.

The two economical choices are nuclear and coal, he said. "Anything else would be way out of sight in cost."

He said nuclear is less expensive per kilowatt hour in Michigan, but the start-up costs are just too high.

"I'd be very reticent about a nuclear choice. When we make a choice, I would guess it would be a coal plant."

Selby said other utility executives he has spoken with around the country have reached similar conclusions.

Some help for utilities interested in building nuclear plants, he said, may be coming from the Reagan administration.

President Reagan has two appointees on the Nuclear Regulatory Commission board; three remain from the Carter era.

Two of the three Carter appointees, Selby said, "fit the definition of being anti-nuclear." One of these, he said, has stated his intention to resign and Reagan has picked his successor.

The NRC staff, he said, needs to have a set of consistent orders to work with. Under the old board, he said, the staff did not have proper guidance.

Letters

Editor,

The Boyne City High School drama department would like to thank Kaden's Emporium and the Boyne City Dairy Queen for their support of our program.

The response of the public for our Feb. 18 Talent Show was 450 people—which shows how much the city cares for its students.

This was the first show of its kind for our drama department and Boyne City came out in full. The Boyne City business community and public are the greatest!

Editor,

As a genealogy project I am doing research work on the descendants and ancestors of John and Elizabeth Bacon who were my great grandparents.

Through some old post cards I have of my dad's, I came across one signed "cousins Nedda, Mamie, Lillie and Walter Wheatons" dated early part of the century.

I would appreciate hearing from any of these Wheatons or their descendants or even anyone that knows any thing about them.

East Jordan mayor Archie Nemecek congratulates David Campbell on being awarded the city's first Citation for Community Service. Campbell, son of Mr. and Mrs. Frank Campbell, received the award for "serving the city with extraordinary merit." Campbell had volunteered his help during last year's and this year's Fiddlers' Jamborees, working 14 hours each time clearing snow and aiding recreation director Pat Berlo.

Group home is certified

Spring Ridge Group Home in Boyne Falls has had its state certification renewed. The eight-bed facility was given state health department certification, and not licensing, because it is licensed by other agencies. Because some of its residents have the cost of their care reimbursed by Medicaid, certification that federal standards are met was necessary.

There are 2 types of ski patrols

The unsung heroes of a ski resort are members of the ski patrol.

Without these people a ski resort could never start up their lifts.

There are two types of patrol, Professional Ski Patrol and the National Ski Patrol.

To become a professional ski patroller a skier must have passed a course in advanced emergency first aid and be adept at skiing and the operation of a toboggan, for onhill rescues.

A professional will also train with the National Ski Patrol in chairlift evacuations.

To become a member of the National Ski Patrol a skier first must receive the advanced emergency first-aid card, which consists of 60 to 80 hours of schooling.

Then begins a one year term of apprenticeship.

At the year's end he is then tested by the patrol director and training director on toboggan and skiing proficiency.

Once he has passed these tests, he reaches the level of "basic" National Ski Patrol, and can patrol at his home area.

During the second year a patroller can train to a higher level and be tested for a "senior" patroller.

The senior patroller can ski at any resort within his region, if he is needed.

The highest level of the National Ski Patrol is called "national".

This is awarded on a national basis, and the applicants must have three years service at the "senior" level, have taken courses in avalanche and mountaineering, and have served his area beyond the normal duty of a patroller.

The Ski Patrol is the first on the hill when the slopes open for the day, and the last off to insure the safety of skiers.

They have the authority to revoke a lift pass for reckless skiing, or close a slope due to hazardous terrain.

They are at a skiing accident within seconds of it happening and work hand-in-hand with the local clinics and ambulance services if a skier requires medical treatment that they cannot provide.

Longest lift

Killington, Vt. operates the longest ski lift in North America, a gondola that travels 3.5 miles up the mountain.

SKI ADVISER

PACK THE HOLE IN BUMPS

When steep mogul runs become icy, snow-ski contact is the name of the game. If you allow yourself to get thrown into the air, you'll be out of control in seconds.

Skiing over mogul tops as much as possible (instead of in the troughs) is a good approach to skiing icy bumps. This naturally involves a lot of absorption (A) and extension of leg joints.

It's during the extension phase on the downside of the mogul that you'll probably encounter difficulty retaining contact with the snow. To avoid becoming airborne as the bottom drops out from under your skis, think of pushing your feet down against the snow (B) as if you were attempting to fill in the hole on the back side of the bump with your boots. When this motion becomes a habit and you can maintain contact with the snow at all times, try edging your skis during the extension phase to increase control over your turns.

X-country skiing is easy

Cross-country skiing is exhilarating, invigorating, and simply a lot of fun, but a bad introduction to the sport can turn away many prospective cross-country ski fanatics.

Howard Peterson, executive vice president of marketing for the United States Ski Association, offers some helpful suggestions to cross-country skiers ready to take their first glides on their skis.

The first and most important thing to do, says Peterson, is to know your equipment.

"Get the feel of having skis on your feet, and don't overdo it. There are probably a few muscles you'll use that aren't used to the exercise involved in cross-country skiing."

The next thing to do is to choose a terrain that is suitable to the kind of skiing that you want to undertake.

"Start at your own pace," advises Peterson. "Going up and down hills may be more than you want to tackle at first."

If you are unsure as to how much is too much to undertake when beginning to cross-country ski, Peterson suggests ski lessons.

"One or two lessons at a touring center or municipal park programs can make a world of difference in the ease and enjoyment of your ski experience. You can probably find a good place to take a lesson or two from your local ski shop."

Above all, Peterson maintains that you keep cross-country skiing fun.

"Let your own desires define what cross-country skiing is and will become to you. The beauty of the sport is in the doing—as you choose to do it."

Trip to the moon

The Jackson Hole, Wyo., aerial tram has traveled a distance greater than that from earth to the moon in its 16 years of operation. Last summer, the 63-passenger tram made its 100,000th trip to the summit and that equals one quarter of a million miles, the distance between earth and its moon.

Feeding birds good winter hobby

Feeding wild birds during the winter can be an enjoyable hobby that can be as simple and inexpensive or as complex and costly as you want to make it.

All that's required is some kind of container that will keep food dry, food that the wild birds in your area will eat, and the commitment to continue to feed well into spring.

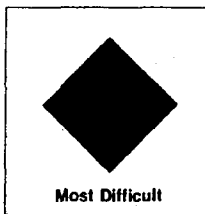

"If you think you won't be able to continue feeding the birds at least through March, and preferably through April, it's better for the birds if you don't start at all," said Glenn Dudderar, extension wildlife specialist at Michigan State University.

500 over 70

Nearly 500 skiers over the age of 70 are proud members of the 70-Plus Ski Club which makes its home base at Hunter Mountain, N.Y.

The club members earn free or greatly discounted skiing at scores of ski areas across the country.

"The neighborhood birds quickly become dependent on your feeder especially if you're the only household feeding birds. If you suddenly stop feeding in midwinter or early spring, before other food sources are readily available, many of the birds may freeze or starve to death."

A simple bird feeder can be made from a plastic milk or bleach bottle. Cut two U-shaped openings about two-thirds up the container and bend the cut-out parts upward into little awnings to help keep the food inside dry.

Punch a few small holes in the bottom so water that blows in can drain out.

What you feed will largely determine what kinds of birds you'll see at your feeder. If you want the most kinds of birds for the least amount of money, Dudderar recommends putting out a mixture of 50 percent small, black, oil-type sunflower seeds.

"In fact, some of the more unusual birds attracted to your feeder may be predators, like the rough-legged hawk and the Cooper's hawk," he notes.

"Like the seed eaters, they're there to take advantage of a concentrated food source. Some people get quite upset when 'their' birds are preyed on by a hawk. But they need to realize that predation is one of nature's ways to keep the bird population in line with the environment's ability to provide food, cover and nesting spots."

Another fact of life that people who feed birds may have to learn to live with is disease. Concentrating the bird population around a food source may make the birds more vulnerable to disease, as well as predators.

"So winter bird feeding isn't quite the 'save-the-birds' enterprise that it may seem at first," Dudderar says. "But watching the birds that come to the feeder can be good for hours of entertainment."

"You can get acquainted with the year-around feathered residents of your area as well as the migrating species that are just passing through, both in early winter and early spring. And you can learn a lot about bird calls and behavior. The returns can be well worth the effort and cost."
