

Vroman named to 4 all-state teams

All-state honors are rolling in for Brian Vroman. The Boyne City High senior has garnered these post-season honors:
— First team all-state by the Associated Press news service.
— First team all-state by the United Press International news service.
— First team all-state by the Detroit Free Press.
— Second team all-state by the Detroit News.
Vroman, a 6-foot-4 senior who plays center and forward, also was named to several all-state teams when he was a junior.

He scored over 1,800 points and hauled in 1,200 rebounds in his four-year high school career, which was split between Wolverine and Boyne City. Vroman transferred to Boyne following his sophomore year at the urging of his uncle, Tim Hartwick, who played at Boyne. Vroman averaged 22.1 points, 17 rebounds and six assists a game this year as the Ramblers went 19-4. Boyne was 37-10 in the two years Vroman and coach Bob Taylor were here.
Four other Charlevoix County players also received recognition in all-state selections:
— Tim Smith of Boyne Falls received honorable mention in the Class D selections made by the Detroit Free Press. Smith is a junior.

— John Tompkins of Boyne City received special mention from United Press International and honorable mention from the Detroit Free Press. Tompkins is a senior.
— Gary Drury of Charlevoix received honorable mention in Class C from United Press International and the Detroit Free Press. Drury is a senior.
— Craig Klooster of Charlevoix received honorable mention from United Press International and the Detroit News. Klooster is a junior.

County OKs bus funding, may seek tax increase

In a room packed with senior citizens and other bus patrons, Charlevoix County commissioners voted to tell the state they intend to keep Dial-A-Ride running until at least August 1983.

At the same time, commissioners said future funding may have to come from a special county-wide tax.

The action came during the commissioners' Wednesday, March 24, meeting. The portion of the session dealing with the Charlevoix County Transit buses was moved to the county courtroom when the crowd became too large for the commissioners' room.

Five Transit buses brought senior citizens and handicapped persons to the meeting. Transit director Art Saworski said the people paid for the rides and drivers donated their time.

Saworski said he did not organize the show-of-numbers — people wanted to attend to demonstrate their support for the bus system.

There were about 150 people at the meeting. About six spoke in their behalf, citing the need for continued bus runs and their satisfaction with service.

Commissioner Keith Annear of East

Bus fare going up Thursday

It will cost 10 cents more to ride Charlevoix County Transit buses starting Thursday, April 1.

All one-way fares will be increased by a dime. Multi-ride discount tickets will cost more, too. Green tickets will now cost $3 and red tickets $11.

The fare hikes were approved March 8 by the county Commission on Aging which oversees the bus system.

Jordan told the audience the commission was not considering halting service but needed to find a way — most likely through a special tax just for the service — to finance it.

The county has to inform the state department of transportation by the end of April whether it is going to support the system next year. The resolution approved Wednesday accomplishes that.

The bus service was 100 percent state funded in the first year and shared 75-25 by the state and county in the second year. The county share includes fares paid by riders.

In the third year, funding is 50-50. Since the Transit contract year ends in August and the county's year ends in December, the county had to pledge about $8,500 for the five-month period.

The resolution runs through August 1983 — which most likely will cost the county another $13,000.

Fares have brought in about $38,800 from about 80,000 rides. Fares are being increased April 1.

The transit system's current year budget is $260,000 and will rise about $15,000 in 1982-83.

A millage request could go on either the August or November election ballot. Saworski and commissioners estimated that a 4-10ths of a mill tax would be needed.

Based on the county's current property valuation, the tax would generate about $135,000.

No action was taken on putting the millage request on the ballot. The matter will be brought before the board at a later date.

Charlevoix County Transit director Art Saworski, front left, listens as county commissioner Lee Moerland, standing at rear left, goes over statistics on the county bus service during discussion of funding for the program. Because of the large crowd which attended to voice support for the bus service, the meeting was moved from the commissioners' chambers into the courtroom.

Good News Fake emergency Tuesday at Big Rock

Two area photographers were honored during the 41st annual convention of Professional Photographers of Michigan Inc. held last week. For the second consecutive year Terry Salmonson of Aartvark Studio in Charlevoix was named as one of the top 10 photographers in the state. He received awards for all four photos he displayed at the convention, including an award of excellence for "Partly Cloudy" which is shown above with Salmonson inset. Ray Valentine of Boyne City's Valentine Studios received a blue ribbon for his "Ice Sculpture" shown below with Valentine inset. He also received a Certified Photographer Award.

The Big Rock Point warning sirens will sound sometime on Tuesday, April 6, as part of an exercise testing emergency plans for the nuclear power plant.

This will be the fourth annual exercise to make sure Big Rock, Charlevoix County, Emmet County and state emergency plans work. But it will be the first exercise since the warning sirens were installed earlier this year.

So, unlike past tests, the public will be more aware that something is going on.

The time of the siren warning is not set. It will come when the mock emergency which tests the effectiveness of the plans reaches the point where public notification is necessary.

In previous tests of the 11 warning speakers, there has been some difficulty understanding voice broadcasts. If people cannot understand what is being broadcast through the speakers, county emergency services director Earl Muma says, they should tune to an area radio station.

Stations WVOY, WKHQ, WCLX, WMBN and others are being asked to participate in the exercise by alerting people to what the siren messages are saying.

The sirens will also sound at noon on Saturday, April 3, as part of their regular testing. They are tested on the first Saturday of each month.

The siren system was put in under orders from the Nuclear Regulatory Commission as part of notification changes mandated following the Three Mile Island nuclear plant accident.

The system was installed by Consumers Power, owner and operator of the Big Rock plant four miles north of Charlevoix on Lake Michigan. The speakers are designed to cover a five-mile radius around the facility.

Decision on Shields' fate due April 13

BY BARBARA CRUDEN
A decision is likely April 13 on whether East Jordan Middle School principal Doug Shields will be out of a job.

About 70 students and parents attended a special school board meeting March 23 when a citizens' committee presented a petition protesting Shields' removal.

Representing to committee, Gigi Antoine read the petition which asked to have Shields made high school principal because of his seniority and ability to keep the respect of students and parents.

The petition carried 636 signatures. Explaining the financial situation, Superintendent Tom Rossier said the board of education is looking at a declining enrollment that may put the district at 984 students—a drop of 55.

Rossier said they are also anticipating a $95,000 decline in state aid.

Shields was laid off as an economic move, which means the middle school would be divided between the high school and the elementary, though just where the division would come is still in the study stage.

"It's a sorry position we're in," one parent said. "Mr. Ashton (high school principal Harry Ashton) has done a good job. But I feel Mr. Shields should have the position."

Seniority does not affect administrators' contracts which run for one year, but the feeling was reiterated that laying off Shields, who has the longest term of service, was "not fair."

It was pointed out that Ashton was hired to provide more discipline in the high school, but a couple of speakers said they would take their children out of school if Ashton stayed while Shields was removed.

A previous report that student body president Matt Koontz had been suspended one day for posting a petition notice was corrected. Koontz said he had been suspended, not for posting the notice, but for failing to go to Ashton's office afterward when Ashton called him in.

Koontz said he was afraid Ashton would lose his temper.

After the meeting some other high school students said they had had no run-ins with their principal and felt no particular animosity toward him.

Shields presented his case to the board at a closed session, following the open meeting.

The final decision on Shields' dismissal is expected at the April 13 school board meeting. Early notice had been given in accord with contract requirements.

The citizens' committee says it has additional measures planned if the petition does not lead to the desired result. No specifics were mentioned.

The savings to the school district, according to Rossier, would be first of Shields' duties would be absorbed by the other two principals.

Some additional savings would be provided in the closing of the middle school office, although, Rossler said, some secretarial time may still be needed.

He said the economic aspect was one reason for cutting down to two principals. The others were declining enrollment and "restructuring."

Most elementary school teachers are certified through eighth grade, Rossler said. And high school teachers' certification allows them to teach any subject at the seventh and eighth grade levels.

Other schools in Michigan are also restructuring because of financial conditions, he said, adding that he is anxious to get a strong financial base created and get on with developing curriculum.

Indian kids learn about heritage in EJ class

BY BARBARA CRUDEN

A neen we gin dahn Mishomis, it said on the blackboard. Translated, that means, "We will read Grandfather's book."

It was the second class in Indian language being taught in East Jordan. The teacher is Al Teeple, a full-blooded Indian from Bay Mills, and the class, part of a federal Title IV project, ranged from little elementary school children through to high school students.

Some of the children actually are blond, but all have Indian blood and all are learning Indian culture along with the language.

Teeple explained later that the language was shared by a number of northern woodland Indian tribes.

Lessons include use of a well-illustrated textbook on the language, and Nishnawabe, as the language is named, is written in a clear, phonetic manner.

The lesson Tuesday included charting the clans—the crane and loon clans, from which leadership is expected—the fish, the turtle, and the bear clans, which also have distinct characteristics, handed down the generations.

"I'm of the Muck-wa (bear) clan," Teeple said, smiling. "You see how bossy I am. That is typical of our clan."

Teeple is also a member of the Four-Winds Singers, a troupe of Indians performing traditional songs. He plans to start his master's degree program in business, but right now is interested in the work of "recovering the Indian way of life." He said the Title IV program is also set for next year.

Right now the main problem is busing. Buses leave after school while the Indian children stay on Tuesdays and Thursdays for their class. This means they must have their own transportation or miss the class.

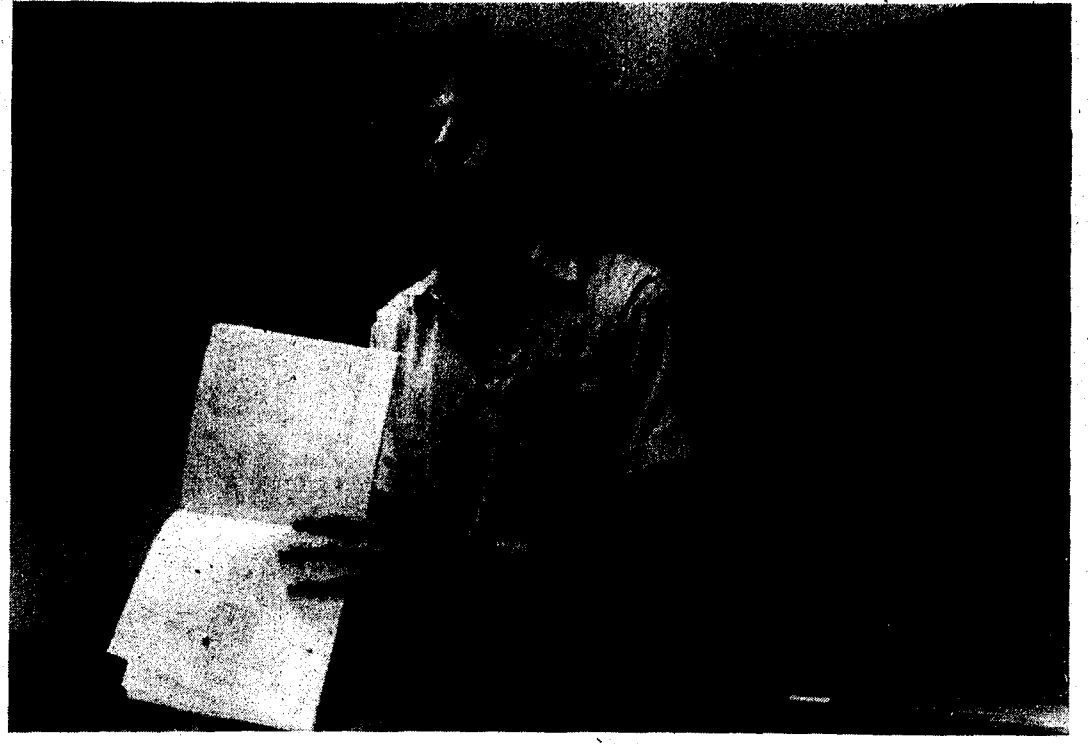

One way to cope with the problem, Teeple said, is to make the course a regular elective in the school curriculum as it is in some schools in Michigan.

Besides the classes, a genealogy workshop is planned. Also, students can have tutoring by Indian adults, which according to Indian parent Gigi Antoine, must not be in duplication of the "great job" of academic tutoring the school does.

Antoine noted that Teeple is project director, and his salary will be paid out of $15,000 or so coming from the Title IV grant, recently approved.

She pointed out that requiring students to prove they have at least one-fourth Indian blood is still at the debating stage in the United States Congress.

But if it came to that, she said, there would be little difficulty in obtaining the information, contrary to a previous report. She said agencies like Northern Michigan Ottawa Association have documentation.

Al Teeple describes the various clans to Indian students in a language class at East Jordan. The class is part of the Title IV program which offers tutoring and lessons in traditions and customs to Indian students in the district.

Lower raises for city chiefs

Boyer City commissioners, meeting on the budget for the last time this year, heard a voluntary proposal from the seven city department heads that they would reduce their salary increase request from 10 percent to seven percent.

Mayor Keith Fitzpatrick noted the drop "will not require the city to go to the union contract" although layoffs would still be possible.

"We decided not to ask the union for concessions," commissioner Martin Paul said later. "We will wait until the contract expires in March 1983."

He was speaking of the proposal to have wastewater plant workers scheduled to 40-hour weeks which included Saturday and Sunday time, instead of as at present, paying them overtime for weekends.

The proposed budget comes to $1,761,335, compared to last year's $1,868,729—a decrease of 5.7 percent.

Last year's millage was 18.05. The millage proposed for the coming fiscal year is 17.93, making a drop of .12 mills.

Clifton said that last fall, with the possibility of revenues dropping off, they began to work on how to lower the budget proposal.

For example, he said, "the majority of the expenditure for parks and recreation is for maintenance."

Budget approval is scheduled for the regular city commission meeting, Tuesday, April 12.

2 commissioners file in new districts

Martin Bieganowski of Wilson Township has announced his candidacy for county commissioner in the recently established District 2 of Charlevoix County.

Bieganowski was the first commissioner to file nominating petitions with the county clerk's office. Commissioner Marvin Loding of Boyne City has also filed. Loding is in District 3, which is the City of Boyne.

The new enlarged district is one of six in the county following the reapportionment of the county based on the 1980 census figures. Effective Jan. 1, 1983, District 2 will include all of Chandler, Boyne Valley, Hudson and Wilson townships and that portion of Eveline Township located east of Peninsula Road. Bieganowski presently represents District 5, Eveline and Wilson Townships.

As the result of reapportionment, the size of the board of commissioners will be decreased from 15 to six members. Commissioners elected in the November general election will assume office on Jan. 1, 1983.

In announcing his candidacy Bieganowski said he wants to make his intentions known so when he visits the residents of the new district they will know who he is.

"I feel it will be easier to meet people if my name is familiar to them. In the next few months prior to the August primary election, I hope to be able to communicate in person with the residents of Chandler, Boyne Valley and Hudson townships on a personal basis. I regularly attend Eveline and Wilson Township meetings and therefore know many people in the townships that I now represent," he said.

Bar complaint hearing April 22

A hearing on a Dec. 29 violation report about East Jordan bar owner Charles Sherk will take place April 22 in Cheboygan.

Police officers Ron Malinowski and Paul Timmons reported to the Michigan Liquor Control Commission that on Dec. 29 the bar was operating after hours and selling liquor to an intoxicated person.

Sherk lodged a complaint against the officers with the city council for what he termed was a false report. On Jan. 5 he presented a complaint on the behavior of Malinowski at the time of the Dec. 29 incident at Chuck's place.

The Liquor Control Commission will send a hearing officer to the Cheboygan County Building for the 1 p.m. proceedings, which will be open to the public.

An assistant attorney general will present the police case. Sherk may have an attorney to represent him. There could be witnesses.

Sherk has no previous violation reports on his record. The city police committee has been investigating Sherk's two complaints but has made no statement on decisions.

Harbor options eyed

Progress toward an East Jordan harbor was the subject of the city harbor commission's first meeting, Tuesday, March 23.

According to city superintendent Mike Dionne who chairs the commission, the commission wants to look at alternatives to the construction plans as they were drawn up in 1972.

The purpose in making any changes, Dionne said, is to save on construction costs.

To this end, the commissioners will ask for an appraisal by Sea Grant in Traverse City. Such appraisals are generally available and at no cost, Dionne said.

"We will also get into contact with the Army Corps of Engineers to help evaluate conditions here," he said, adding, "We want to get the harbor commission heading in the right direction."

Dionne reported the city has been staying in contact with the Waterways Division of the Department of Natural Resources, but he said, as yet "no clarification of anything is forthcoming."

At a city council meeting last month, city clerk Fern Morris reported that about $3,900 was in the harbor fund with some being set aside each year.

Harbor commission member Vern Stark proposed at that meeting that the fund be added to on a regular basis.

Love helps kill the alcoholic

BY HOWARD DOYAL

Killing our alcoholics with love. The above statement sounds extreme on the surface, but it is my opinion that this is exactly what is happening. In society as a whole and most especially at the family level. Information on alcoholism comes at us almost on a daily basis and in many forms. Perhaps television is the most effective because it reaches so many. We are told alcoholism has reached epidemic proportions and now especially in teenagers. We're given signs of conduct to watch for, in ourselves and anyone close to us, who may be leaning too heavily on the afternoon cocktail or Saturday night parties. Counseling programs are widely promoted and made available in industry and in religion. They're available on the county level, supported by government funds. You'll find them in schools and hospitals. The list can go on. In the beginning we laugh at the problem drinker and tell them how funny they are; when the truth is, they aren't funny at all. When their drinking becomes worse and they start getting into trouble we make excuses for them. "He lost his job because he has been sick a lot lately." Hangovers and we know it. "His wife left him because he can't afford to buy food and clothing for the family." He spent all his money at the local pub. "He is embarrassed because he spent the weekend in jail," due to driving under the influence of alcohol. The fact is, drinking is the real problem and this is the problem we must address. Instead we play it down, try to rescue them and then reinforce the excuses they are making. No wonder they continue to drink, after all it isn't their fault. Chances are, before reaching what we call the chronic stages, they will be jailed many times, lose jobs, and families will breakup, not to mention the harm they may cause others. There will be a lot of time and money spent on doctors and hospitals. (And who will be picking up the tab on much of this?) They will receive a lot of sympathy and they should, but why won't we tell them that alcohol is the real problem? It has caused the job loss, the financial insecurity and the weekend in jail. And that it is going to kill them if they don't stop drinking it. If they are lucky they may eventually end up in some type of detox treatment. Here they can be dried out and go through withdrawal with a minimum of pain and receive some positive reinforcement for the days ahead. At this point, someone, perhaps even a physician may tell them they have been drinking too much and should slow down. Often we celebrate their release from the hospital by buying them a drink! I have seen this repeated many times before it is finally realized that this person cannot take even one drink." That is where recovery can begin. However, many die before they reach this point. They are killed in car wrecks, die from heart attacks, alcohol poisoning, cirrhosis of the liver, etc. Why do we make excuses for them? Do we have to wait until they are on the brink of insanity or death before we can suggest to them that the drinking is the real problem? It seems so. We excuse and cover. Justify and excuse and back and forth. And then at the cemetery we say, "If only he could have stopped drinking." I have seen people die as a direct result of alcoholism actually believing that alcohol had nothing to do with their illness. We are leaning more and more toward the theory that alcoholism is a disease. I prefer to call it an addiction. All people have problems and hang-ups in life to some degree, but manage to cope with them with or without the use of alcohol. Apparently the alcoholic cannot. I am suggesting that they drink to escape and we are helping them do so by making excuses for them. If the news media said, "Attention: the black plague is now a full fledged epidemic," we would show incredible strength and skill in bringing this killer to a halt. And yet we continue to love our alcoholics to their very death.

The accompanying three articles were written by members of Mary Ann Ayres' adult education English course at Boyne City High School.

Old people not valued in U.S.

BY KITTY NESSEN

Anything 70 years old is considered an antique and, of course, the older the more valuable and rare it gets. Unfortunately, that only applies to material things and not to people. To get to the point, the thing that grinds me the most is when a person gets old and we try to find ways to get rid of him. We no longer want to be bothered with his not hearing or seeing well, his forgetfulness and his sicknesses. The next step for most of them is to be placed in an old age home or medical care facility, and that is done by their own children or grandchildren. However, that is not quite enough, because now we are going to punish them even more, by visiting them whenever we see fit—if we see fit. "Out of sight, out of mind." How heartless have we become? The centers are filled with old people, and lots of them still able to teach us a thing or two, like their experiences or skills, but mostly of life, but we overlook that. Years back it was the last resort to send an older person to a home or to the poor farm. Then it was a natural part of life that a family would take care of their elders, but this has changed, now we put them away without blinking an eye. Our parents did everything for us for many years and we never paid them for it. Perhaps now, when they are old, we finally have our chance to pay them back by giving them love, understanding and a room under our roof—so when the time comes they can die there among their family and not with strangers.

America should rearm herself

BY HARLEY PARKS

I believe America should start to establish herself once again as a strong nation, with new weapons with such force that any country that would dare attack America or any of her NATO Allies would be destroyed and never have the ability to wage war again. I feel that America should start at once to build the MX missile to offset the Soviet SS 20, and let the world know that we mean business. I know that this build up will cost the American taxpayers large amounts of money. But what good is it to have a rich nation while our military and nation's defense is not able to keep America from being ruled by a Communist nation?

Some Americans think we can have peace just by not building up our defenses. They don't want to get the Russians upset. In the meantime, the Soviets add about one missile a week, intimidate countries, or just send troops in and take over. Now, knowing that the build up will cost the people of America large amounts of money, just what could we otherwise do with the money? We could build new schools, hospitals, homes for the poor and many other needed facilities. So think about it; we can't have our cake and eat it, too. We must give up things—things that mean a lot to each of us. I believe we have one of the best types of governments that exist. As you all know, it's called a democracy! In this democracy we are free to travel from state to state. We can have a business if we desire. We are able to have new homes and cars and many other material things. We have the freedom to worship as we wish. All these things did not come for free. Somebody had to give of their money, feeding a communist nation for very little or no pay. So think about it. A strong nation is like a lighthouse on a hill, for all to see and say, "We better not! America's might and skill is too great a risk for us." Just look at history—at the last world war. The American people should take a lesson from it. No one ever thought Hitler would invade Austria. No one thinks Russia will invade us. I believe America should rearm.

Letters

Students not like 'horror stories'

Editor,

In my capacity of clerk-treasurer of East Jordan, I had the opportunity to address Mr. Thomson's government class. They were studying local government and Mr. Thomson asked me to tell them what my job is.

Having been out of high school for 37 years and having heard all sorts of horror stories about "schools today," I didn't know what to expect and was rather apprehensive, but I had one of the better experiences of my life.

The students were quiet, polite, attentive and made me feel that they were interested in what I was saying. Their questions were relevant, direct and showed me that they are really interested in what is going on in the community.

I feel the world should know how proud I was of the group I was privileged to share 45 minutes with.

Thanks kids!

Marshall catches forte winks

It is not my forte to discuss politics... city, state, national or beauty parlor. However and but. My forte has gotten out of hand, forcing me to speak of political oddities in this good old red, white and blue. And the sooner I say it, the sooner my forte will get back to opening the northern Michigan bag to let the facts out. There's nothing so fresh and gossipy as facts escaping from a northern Michigan bag. So please bear with me while I tolerate a chest-beating forte that insists upon strutting down the street, scattering political musings in its wake. The time has arrived when we can no longer afford the luxury of those things higher taxes will bring to us. We now must fight higher taxes with the same frightening determination a bug-eyed farm girl uses when she is defending her virtue with a pitchfork. I'm at a loss at what to tell those people who are out of work; nor do I have any intelligent words for the poor.

But if someone would appoint me to a $50,000 yearly position, I'm sure that I could sit in my office and advise them just fine. End of politics and a cranky forte. I find it more comfortable touching on the affairs at Clarion, Boyne Falls, East Jordan, Finkton, Boyne City, Horton Bay and that city with a million dollar sunset and four restaurants to every hardware. Such touches seem to be hailed. Muffled titters to jelly-belly hiccups have been heard all the way from the Beavers to the swamp-bound shores of Deer Lake. Which means that I have been putting my forte to good use. (Sometimes I get a side-winder when I mention what a left-handed woman does on Monday morning, but I don't want to talk about that and mess up this sudden burst of self-praise.) Anyway, that's why, for me, politics are out and a touching forte is in.

Suddenly I find it necessary to explain what is meant by forte. Your forte is your strong point. If you are an excellent pickpocket, that's your forte. If a man spends his time chasing red-haired and green-eyed women, that's his forte. If a woman's life is spent trying to straighten out her husband, that's her forte. So, whatever you pursue over a long period of time, that's your forte—your strong point. Sometimes a woman's strong point meets up with a man's strong point; in such cases the word forte is often dropped in favor of language more quickly understood by those rushing to the scene. As I said, the political scene is not my forte. I discovered that when Bill Underhill named me drain commissioner of Smeltania. Unlike many people, my forte has two strong points. One is thinking up stuff for this column. The other is hiding after the paper comes out.

Cancer crusades in East Jordan and Boyne City kicked off last week with proclamation signings in both cities. East Jordan mayor Archie Nemecek (photo at left) signs a proclamation declaring Cancer Control Month as crusade board members and captains look on. Standing are captains Anne Ostrom, Marilyn Goebel, Nancy Sherman and Charita Miller. Seated are board member Jane Russell and chairman Ginny Carey. Boyne City mayor Keith Fitzpatrick signs a similar proclamation for Boyne City, accompanied by chairman Pat Upton, who is a cancer patient. Boyne area captains are Jean Korthase, Mary Hausler, Gerri Williams, Chris Skornia, Sharon Olliffe, Marge Fitzpatrick, Penny Hardy, Rosemary Karkosak and Lynda Christensen.

BC Schools sells house students built

The sale of last year's building trades house was approved by the Boyne City school board at a special meeting Thursday, March 25.

The sale price of $40,000 will be covered by the Farm and Home Administration which will make the loan to the purchaser.

But the amount the board will receive will be closer to $36,000 after FHA required additional insulation (totalling 12 inches) and other costs are covered.

Board representatives have met with representatives of the Boyne City Education Association.

The latter—Leon Jarma and Fred Rice—want full seniority benefits for part-time people. Without making a decision Thursday night, the board, nevertheless agreed that such a situation would be unfair to full-time teachers.

Board members felt that a teacher working a full day, putting in more time than a person working three or four hours, should not be treated the same when it came to figuring seniority.

In other words, superintendent Rich Kelly said, seniority should be figured in hours instead of days. Otherwise the part-time person with fewer hours could actually be preferred over a full-time person in cases of staff cuts, where seniority is the guideline.

Kelly pointed out that increment steps on the salary scale are based on time. A further problem would be where to place part-time people in the salary scale.

Board member Bill Chipman said the board might be doing a better job in looking out for the regular teaching staff than the union is.

Teachers had not yet been polled on the question.

The long-standing problem of ice build-up on the roof overhang at the elementary school may be partially solved by additional ventilation. Not totally, because even the perforations projected for the mansard roof design won't alter some weather-created conditions.

The board voted to try the ventilation experiment.

It also approved allowing the rent-free use of the portable building for the Boyne City Nursery Center, which will, as before, pay for operating costs.

The center reported it enrolls between 50 and 70 children with about 10 of them using the nursery school's scholarship fund.

About 300 children enroll in the Boyne City Summer Swim School, and the board agreed to support that program again through the use of a school bus.

The swim school will pay for the driver and the public school will pay for the gas as in previous summers.

Dennis Starkey, one of two applicants for coaching girls' track, was appointed to the position on the basis of his already being a teacher substitute. Staffers have preference, Kelly noted.

Charter law change asked On dean's list

At the request of the city of Charlevoix and Charlevoix Township, State Sen. Mitch Irwin (Sault Ste. Marie) and State Rep. Ralph Ostling (Roscommon) have introduced companion legislation designed to permit equal representation of affected governmental units on consolidated charter commissions.

"As the law currently stands, the township would be unfairly represented in the consolidation effort in the Charlevoix area," said Irwin and Ostling.

The city and township have been approved for consolidation by the State Boundary Commission, and a charter commission now must be elected to draft a proposed charter.

Present law mandates that charter commission representation be based on population which would give the city a majority. The proposal would allow the city and township to have equal representation.

Scott Nicloy of East Jordan was named to the dean's list for the first semester at Spring Arbor College in Spring Arbor. He is the son of Mr. and Mrs. James Nicloy.

Child sex abuse seminar set

A workshop on detecting and stopping sexual abuse of children will be held Monday, April 19, at Boyne Mountain.

The conference is being held by Sexual Abuse Family Education, a group of area social work professionals who are trying to make the community more aware of the extent to which sexual abuse of children exists.

The title of the program is "One out of Five Children is Sexually Abused," which *SAFE members say is a national estimate.

The workshop is open not just to professionals who deal with children but to parents and other interested persons. Pre-registration fee is $6; registration on the day of the workshop is $10.

The morning session will be a talk by two workers from Assault Recovery Associates of St. Joseph who will explain how to recognize the signs of a sexually abused child.

In the afternoon, representatives from area police, school, mental health, legal, medical and protective services agencies will take part in a panel discussion on how they respond to the misused child and the child's family.

Last year there were 15 cases of substantiated sexual abuse in Charlevoix County, according to Lenore Landon, children's protective services worker. In some cases, she said, the child had to be removed from the home.

Social workers attempt to keep families together, juvenile probation officer Brad Campbell said. The emphasis, he said, is on helping the family. Members of SAFE say that children who are victims of abuse should talk to their teacher, counselor, doctor or school nurse to receive help.

Adults may contact the department of social services for information on helping themselves or others who are abusing children sexually.

EJ child screening

A developmental screening clinic for children entering kindergarten in the fall of 1983 will be held April 14 at East Jordan Elementary School.

The clinic, sponsored by the Char-Em Intermediate School District, is free and on a first-come, first-served basis.

Purposes of the clinic are to provide parents with information on normal child development, to allow parents to meet with parents of other three-year-olds and to informally screen children to identify potential learning difficulties.

A caboose from the Boyne Valley Railroad sits along the Lake Charlevoix waterfront on Front Street in Boyne City. The future of the railroad is still uncertain.

BVRR owners play waiting game

Stockholders in Boyne City's scenic railroad company are waiting just a little longer before making the final decision on the future of the Boyne Valley Railroad.

Stockholder and board member Dennis Coy said, "We would like to sell it. If the interested buyers don't buy it, then the railroad is going to proceed to dismantle."

Coy said there are prospective buyers, but the company will have to set a deadline sometime this spring.

Last year, he said, stockholders voted to accept $8 a share plus debts. The company was formed in 1976.

The railroad is the last remaining remnant of a logging line that was established in 1893. By the early 1900's the tracks extended from Boyne City to Alpena.

The railroad was run as a tourist attraction in the early 1970s by Hollis Baker. Baker ceased operations after the gas shortage of 1973-74 slowed tourism.

He sold the railroad at an auction in Boyne City in 1976. A group of local businessmen raised enough money to purchase 7.2 miles or right-of-way and enough equipment to run the tourist train again.

After three summers, the train again was halted by insufficient funds.

A local development group considered buying the railroad in 1981, but ended negotiations last summer.

The ties and rails have a scrap value of about $80,000, according to one dealer who made an offer in mid-1981.

The old roundhouse building on Front Street near Water was torn down last summer in anticipation of construction of a hotel-restaurant complex on the waterfront.

Parking woes at post office

Parking in front of the post office in East Jordan, according to at least one resident, needs looking into. People park at every possible angle.

Councilman Russ Dietrich noted to city council that someone called him to complain about the problem, especially when people pull out from some unpredictable angle position.

The council turned the problem over to city superintendent Mike Dionne.

Russell said, "I wish more people would call about their concerns."

Sheriff's awards go to 8

Departmental awards were given to county sheriff's officers last week — many of the honors stemming from the Aug. 20 drug raid where more than 60 people were arrested.

The awards were presented to the sheriff, undersheriff, six deputies and the communications security officer by county commissioner Tom Breakley, a member of the commission's sheriff committee.

Deputy Garry Taylor received the department's Honor Award for his part in the undercover operation that resulted in the arrest of more than 60 alleged drug dealers around the county.

Other awards arising out of the drug raid were given to:

—Four team leaders who coordinated the efforts of officers from various area departments in carrying out the raids. Team leaders undersheriff Dale Boehm Jr., deputy William Cousineau, deputy Michael Wheat and deputy David Burris each received the Merit Award.

—Communications

security officer Corrine Russell, who coordinated all activities in the jail on the day of the raid. She received an Outstanding Commendation Award.

—Sheriff George Lasater, for "investigating, coordinating and providing the leadership necessary to accomplish the investigation" which led to the arrests. Lasater received an Honor Award.

Two other awards were for activities not included in the drug raid.

Wheat received the Exceptional Service Award for "numerous investigations that have resulted in the apprehension of suspects."

Deputy Roger Moses received an annual marksmanship award. He had the highest certification score with a revolver — 485 of a possible 500 points.

Girl Scouts need 'homes'

Temporary homes are being sought for Girl Scouts who will be visiting from throughout the U.S. as part of a project hosted by the Crooked Tree Girl Scout Council.

The girls will be coming to the area as part of "Where the Glaciers Roamed," a Girl Scout National Wider Opportunity.

Homes will be needed June 14-16 and/or June 28-30. Call the council at 947-7354.

Once again, there was pressure at the last East Jordan city council meeting for a police committee decision on a Jan. 5 complaint.

The complaint, registered by bar owner Chuck Sherk, was on the "irresponsible behavior" of an East Jordan police officer.

Sherk, at the March 16 council meeting, asked the council to consider invoking Section 4 of Chapter 10 of the city charter which says the council has the right to discipline its members.

Councilman Al Joseph responded, "I do understand his reasoning." He added only that the committee has not reached a decision yet.

City attorney Roy Hayes reassured Sherk and the council, "We have to wait till the investigation is completed...I see nothing out of line." He added, "The matter will be public knowledge."

Later, police committee member Russ Dietrich said "certain questions were holding them up and it was impossible to move any faster."

Hayes also said to the council he was delayed on revising the proposed ordinance outlining duties of department heads and council committees.

Discussion on the ordinance was tabled.

New BC well to be dug

Boyne City will dig a new city well, probably in 1983.

The well, to be put in the south Boyne area, is expected to provide an adequate water supply to the city.

The current well in south Boyne will remain in service and a booster pump station will be installed to insure adequate water pressure to the north Boyne section, city manager Tim Clifton said.

North Boyne experiences pressure problems most summers, Clifton said. The water level in the reservoir serving that section of the city becomes very low in hot weather, Clifton said.

Water pressure is not so low that fire fighting capabilities are hindered, Clifton said.

Installation of the new well is being ordered by the state health department, which administers the federal Clean Water Act. The city is required to have a back-up well.

Another thing that is improving water supply is the renovation work being done on Water Street and new mains put in on Front Street, Clifton said.

The main reason for the Water Street work, Clifton said, was to replace antiquated water and sewer lines in the downtown area.

The state health department and the city had identified that area as being the location where hundreds of thousands of gallons of water seeped from the water system each year.

Last summer new water and sewer lines, new sidewalks and new pavement were installed along Water Street from Lake Street to Park. Work is scheduled to continue on the block between Park and East streets this year.

Slated for 1984 is similar work on Lake between Water and Main.

Delinquent tax rolls up

The amount of delinquent tax payments in Charlevoix County is higher this year than last. City treasurers say the increases reflect the local financial hard times.

Charlevoix has the highest jump in uncollected taxes—up $106,000 over last year. Delinquent taxes for 1981 amount to $423,337 compared to $317,237 in 1980.

The amount of delinquent taxes is up almost $25,000 in East Jordan, where $166,770 is delinquent from 1981 property tax billings compared to $141,965 in 1980.

Boyne City's delinquency has climbed to $279,974 in 1981 compared to $235,512 a year ago.

RV sales climbed 30 percent in 1981

More than 24 million Americans plan their leisure and vacation time around the use of a recreation vehicle, according to the Michigan Association of Recreational Vehicles and Campgrounds.

In 1981, RV sales nationwide rebounded considerably from the setbacks of the previous two years, up more than 30 percent from 1980.

That turnaround came despite the fact interest rates, which had caused most of the sales problems the year before, remained high in 1981.

Evidence of the devotion RV owners have to the lifestyle comes from the University of Michigan Survey Research Center, which did a study on the RV consumer in 1980.

The study found that more than 60 percent of all RV owners said they would replace their RV with another when their current one wears out.

The survey also discovered that 40 percent of the population would like to own a recreational vehicle.

Many enthusiasts who planned to replace their units with new ones in 1979 and 1980, however, postponed those plans because of the concern over gasoline availability and the shock of the cost of financing. But the demand remained strong, and in 1981 that pent-up demand started to translate into sales.

As David S. Pickering, Director of the Michigan Recreational Vehicles and Campgrounds (MAR-VAC), said, "Many RVers just decided they were not willing to wait any longer. They paid the high interest rates rather than give up the lifestyle."

Oddly, another reason for the 1981 industry upturn is inflation, according to Pickering.

"While inflation hurts every business and every individual, it has helped increase RV sales. People need to find less expensive ways to take a vacation and enjoy recreation. RVs have become an increasingly popular answer," continued Pickering.
