Clifton proposes alternative to landfill

BY BARBARA CRUDEN

An alternative to the present unlicensed landfill operation in Boyne City was presented to the city commission at its meeting Tuesday, April 27.

City manager Tim Clifton suggested putting a transfer station on about 40 of the 120 acres owned by the city where the present landfill operates.

The transfer station would require a compactor, costing possibly $11,300, to collect, compact, and hold trash for twice-weekly emptying in the summer and possibly once a week in the winter.

The compacted trash could then be transported to one of three licensed landfills in a 50-mile radius.

In addition to the compactor, starting-up costs would include $3,000 for the hopper; a required concrete pad for $700; and installation—including wiring, ingress and egress, landscaping, and so on—for $20,000.

"In the end it would benefit the city," Clifton said. "The expense varies dramatically from prices I had a couple of months ago."

He said the operational expenses of such an arrangement would be slightly less than the $9,000 subsidy the city now pays yearly for landfill operation.

As Clifton sees it, rental of two "roll-offs" would come to $1,200 a year.

Transportation costs (gas, oil, etc.) would take another $1,200. Maintenance of the compactor would cost about $600, and fees to use the licensed dump would be $5,000—a total of $8,000 for operation for a year.

Thus, there would need to be no tax increase in the city for landfill expenses. But that could depend on what arrangements the state Department of Natural Resources would make regarding closure of the present operation.

Clifton is hopeful that the city's cooperation in new landfill procedures would produce some waivers in what the DNR has indicated in the past for closure precautions.

If the new transfer station were to be instituted, Clifton said, the North Boyne dump would be closed, and wood, branches, leaves, and such would be collected out of sight on the 40-acre transfer station site. There they would be burned.

Another feature would be the collection site for "white goods"—unwanted refrigerators, and so on—which would be removed yearly for recycling.

Clifton pointed out the transfer station would be a great improvement to the city operations. The city would continue to oversee it, but could contract out the operation.

To keep the present landfill operations, he said would involve expensive testing to fulfill DNR requirements for licensing. And even then, after the expense, the landfill could fail to pass the tests.

The DNR has been trying to get Boyne to close its landfill, which it says can not be licensed under a recent law. It has been the city's contention that since the landfill was licensed under a pre-1978 law it should still be usable and licensable.

"To my knowledge, no one from the DNR or the state health department has offered any evidence of any kind that the present Boyne City Disposal Site has or will impose contamination upon the area," city attorney William McTaggart told the commission last week in a report on the landfill operation.

A panel working on a solid waste disposal plan for the county (a requirement of the 1978 law) has targeted Boyne City as the site of a transfer station.

The only licensed landfill in the county, under the plan, would be the privately owned Charlevoix Garbage Service landfill near Ironton. Two municipally operated dumps, the Antrim-Kalkaska and the Otsego-Crawford, have also been designated as places county garbage could be taken.

The DNR also wants the East Jordan landfill closed. And the solid waste planning committee has designated a transfer station for that area, too.

City superintendent Mike Dionne wants to close the facility and place garbage compactor trucks at the site. When the trucks were filled with residents' garbage, they would be dumped at a licensed landfill.

The city council has not yet acted on his proposal.

EJ approves budget

Residents at last week's East Jordan budget hearing expressed concerns about the cost of operating the city's police department.

The handful of people at the hearing questioned the need for spending $152,000 for police protection for 2,185 people.

The $1,281,323 budget was approved by the council following the hearing.

In response to concerns about the police budget, councilman Russell Gee said, "We looked at it pretty closely, but (to save money) could only lay off a police officer."

Council members explained part of the increase over last year's $134,705 was due to union wage and benefits increases for the police officers.

They said 10 percent increase in the chief of police salary was to keep up with the employee wages, although even now, the men on the beat may earn more than the chief because of overtime. Department heads, like the chief, do not get paid for overtime.

The councilmen said overtime would be reined in as much as possible, although one remedy would be to hire another person if he or she could only be scheduled economically.

They also answered informal complaints of two occasions of lack of response to night time calls made to the policeman on duty.

"We want work for our money," one resident said.

Police committee member Cal Gotts said, "I'll guarantee you we're working on that."

Mayor Archie Nemecek added, "Now he (Chief Joseph Hammond) will have more authority with the new ordinance."

He was referring to the just-adopted city ordinance which gives department heads authority over hiring, disciplining, and firing of department employees, an authority formerly assigned to city council committees.

Residents at the hearing pointed out the police headquarters is open only 40 hours a week. Give the $152,000 to the sheriff department and let it police the city, some suggested. The sheriff's department handles all off-hours police work for the East Jordan police.

Other aspects of the budget received compliments, particularly the city water and sewer budgeting and clerk-treasurer Fern Morris' funds management. "She is making twice what another city nearby is making on interest on funds," a resident said.

BC budget OK'd

Boyne City has approved a budget that for the third straight year is based on a lower millage rate than the previous year.

The $1,762,185 spending plan is also $106,544 lower than the 1981-82 budget. This is the first time the city's expenditures have been lower than the year before, according to manager Tim Clifton.

The budget was approved by the city commission last week.

The millage rate for 1982-83 is 17.93, lower even than the rate proposed when Clifton originally presented the budget to the commission in March.

And it includes for the first time 1.18 mills for retirement of a bond to finance purchase of the new city hall. In the past three years money from the sale of the old hall was used to make bond payments.

This means the tax rate to operate the government was actually reduced by 1.3 mills in order to put the total millage at its current level, which is .12 mills lower than 1981-82's. In 1978-79 the total tax was 22.2 mills.

Included in the approved budget at seven percent pay increases for most non-unionized employees.

Clifton had included 10 percent increases, which he said would match union raises — including anticipated ones when their new contract is negotiated. After the union complained raises in its current contract, which expires March 3 while the budget runs until May 1, were 5-6½ percent, department heads volunteered to take smaller raises.

Clifton budgeted himself no increase in his $30,000 salary.

Projections for the current year, which ends April 30, indicate the city is likely to spend about $50,000 less than budgeted and take in about $150,000 less than anticipated.

Total spending for the current fiscal year should be about $1.8 million, the projection indicates.

Shields dismissal decision reaffirmed

Principal Doug Shields will finish out his term as middle school principal but the East Jordan school board has made final the elimination of his position at the end of school in June.

The board confirmed that the middle school will be absorbed by the elementary school, probably in a K-8, 9-12 pattern, thus reducing the number of principals in the school system to two and requiring Shields' dismissal.

Outside the school doors during the meeting, a dozen students quietly demonstrated with protesting banners. Inside a citizens' committee presented its second petition with 198 signatures.

The protesters were asking that Shields be put on as high school principal in place of Harry (Bud)

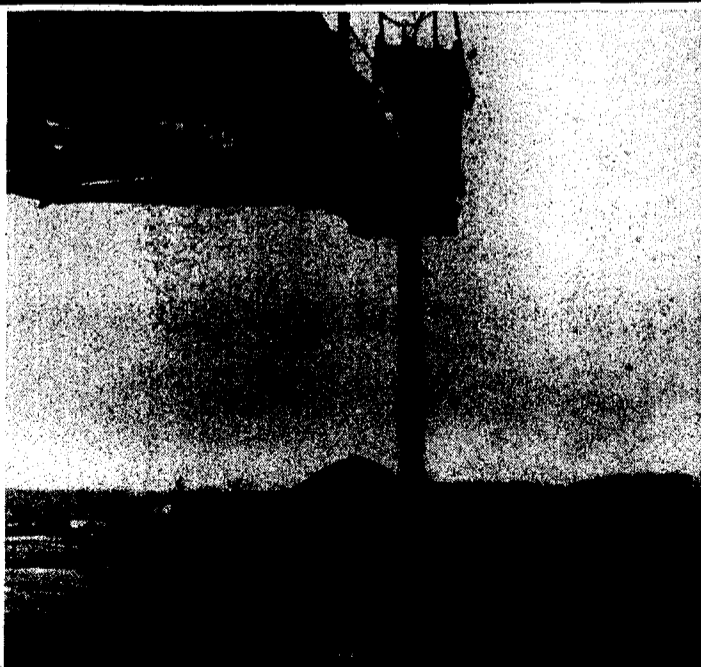

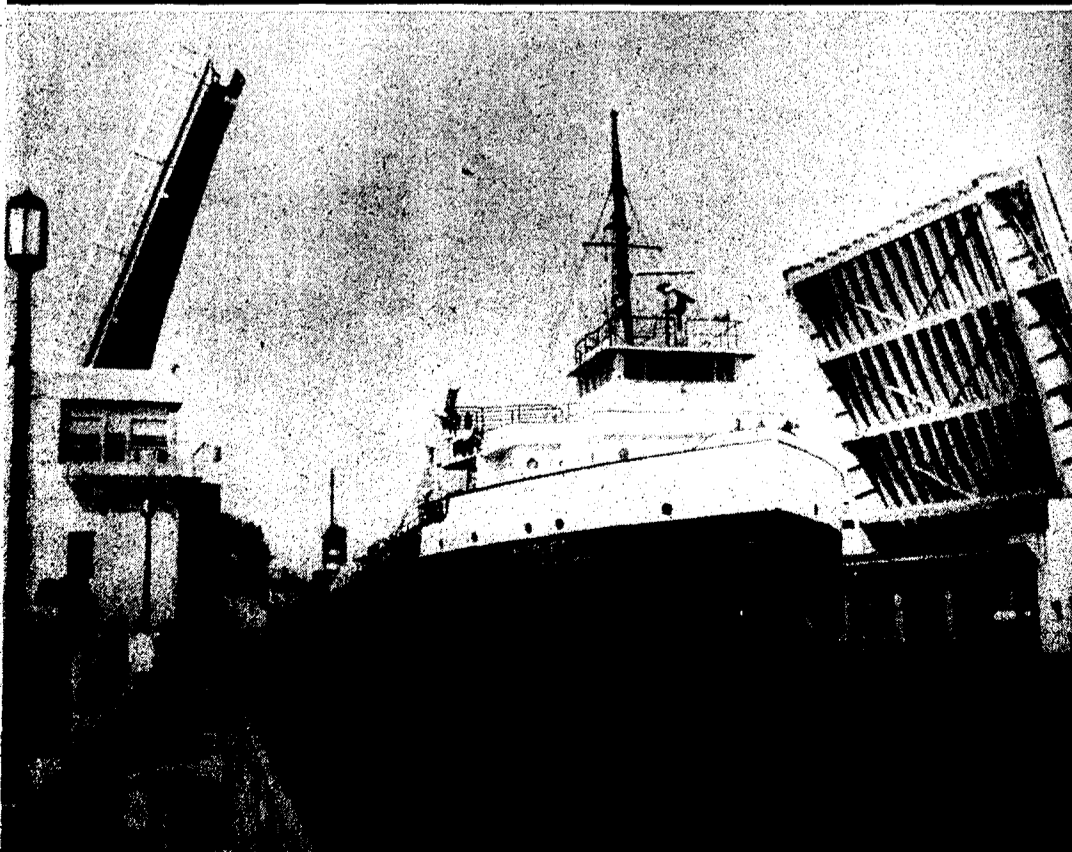

Ashton.

The board has publicly explained that Ashton's preparation, experience, and performance are necessary for the job.

The move has been discussed since last summer to cope with rising costs, dropping enrollment, and losses in teaching staff in previous economy measures.

Shields, responding to well-wishers, said, "I'm going to finish strong and discharge my responsibilities."

He said he "came from industry and may return there," but is most interested in finding an administrative position somewhere in this area as he does not wish to move away from family and friends.

The first ship of spring to cross Lake Charlevoix was the coal freighter Nicolet which took a load of coal to the Northern Michigan Electrical Co-op electricity-producing plant at Advance on Sunday. The freighter squeezed through the Pine River channel in Charlevoix about 11 a.m., photo at left, then pushed its way through the ice to Advance. As the coal was unloaded, a ship worker washed down emptied hatches, right. The Nicolet cleared the Charlevoix drawbridge about 8:15 Sunday night on its way into Lake Michigan.

Zoning law: Can'taloging the city

Have you read Boyne City's catalog of zoning restrictions? That book has so many "thou shall nots" you can't count them.

You can't build there, you can't build here, you can't put a business on that spot, you can't feed chickens in your back yard or raise a pumpkin fence between you and that ornery neighbor.

If a white horse kicks you in the head on Water Street, the city will let you lay there and go after the man who violated the white horse ordinance.

I'll bet a spool of thread at Fox's against one of F. O. Barden's eight by tens that you can't open a combination Chinese restaurant and hand laundry in north Boyne without the city throwing a well thought-out fit.

Actually the zoning ordinance is a wonderful thing. It prevents the community from becoming mish-mashy. After all, who wants a gas station up against a church, or a beer garden easily accessible to the cemetery? Stuff like that has to be mashed before it's mished.

Years ago, before the day of zoning ordinances, the people of Boyne City did as they pleased. One man opened a junk shop next to a fine restaurant, selling old iron; another let his butcher shop smell down the price of the house next door.

Boyne City was founded by people who did as they pleased, refusing to behave themselves. But our zoning ordinance changed all that. Ever since the city council became adept in the field of looking down its legal nose, the residents have straightened up and flown right. Nobody does as he pleases and everyone behaves themselves.

When I started this, I had no idea I would wind up lying about the whole thing.

This has been the worst spring on record. The sun shines and gets you all excited; then it snows and there's a wide-spread drooping of jaws. After that the temperature hits sixty, only to slip to thirty with rain in the air and the lake still frozen. Our flowers began to grow and the weather came along saying, enough of that.

So we've had the blahs for a month straight. A month of blahs, mind you.

What to do in a small town during the blah season? I've taken to going down to the river at night and listening to the toads frogging. What else can you do in a town with no theater and the public library closed at night?

I suppose I could step into a beer hall and get all liquored up. I did that once but quit for fear I'd get the hang of it.

Scientists are saying that your intelligence is measured by two things: The kind of humor you enjoy; and your evaluation of the fool who wrote it.

The annual Easter egg hunt was held a little late this year because of the winter-like weather on the holiday weekend. Winners at the Sunday event were: Preschool, Derek Turnbull first, Tammy Speigh second, Margaret Gregware third; 5-6 year old, Amber Alton first, Mike Pettiglio second.

Aura Convinou third; 7-8, Tony Shaler first, Julie Kenyon second, Cristy Tolbert third; 9-10 Dawn Archambault first, Jerry Matelski second, Brandy Gallup third; 11-12, Rex Atmesbury first, Heather Silbar second, Cindy Sadowski third.

Our tree relations

Everyone should have a friendly tree outside his or her kitchen window, a tree that catches light in different ways all through the day, especially just after sunset when light makes things very clear.

That's the time when the tree, leafless as it is now, is like a piece of sculpture, branches divying up the spaces among them, where space flows through and the light makes the space there as important as the tree.

But a tree is more than art. Once on a long trip, we discovered trees were symbols.

"They're like people," Doris said looking at the green maple woods going on for miles. "So many of the same kind. Homo sapiens—homo saplings." "Terrible pun," said Jack who likes maple trees.

But that began it. We listed the trees and identified each with a particular human quality, starting with spruce because it so clearly represents aspiration in its heaven-pointing conformation.

"Oak is for strength, don't forget," said Doris. "And I think ash trees symbolize honesty; the trunks are so straight. The bark, too."

Sarah added the beech tree for elegance, because of its smooth gray bark and un-cluttered growth.

"The white pine for gentleness," voted Jack.

"The poplar (popple) for popularity!" That from Doris, of course, but it held when we thought how you never see just one poplar tree. There's always a bunch.

"And the apple tree is domesticity," Sarah's idea. Hmmm.

Shadbush for innocence, its white blossoms, the first in the spring. Birch tree for beauty. Hemlock for solemnity. Willow—flexibility.

They were coming fast.

"What about cedar?" I asked.

"Forgiveness," said Sarah promptly. "You cut it down but it still gives off that good smell."

"Good odor," amended Jack. "Whatever," said Sarah.

Sarah thought black cherry had a very pleasing growth pattern.

"Black cherry is an artist," she said. "The angles of the branches..."

"Hornbeam stands for modesty," Jack said. "It grows in the shade of the others."

"And basswood?" I asked.

They thought it was for friendliness, remembering the swing and the tree house in the basswood back home.

"And the most royal of trees is still the elm," I said.

"But the cypress is most enduring," said Doris. "I wish I were a cypress. Where're we ever going to stop and eat?"

Board secretary Nellie Flodquist has submitted her resignation. Acceptance was tabled at the board's April 19 meeting and is expected at the May 17 meeting. Interested persons may contact city manager Tim Clifton, planning commission chairwoman Kate Schafer or any commission member.

Drug sentences still concern board

Charlevoix County commissioners are still concerned about sentences handed out to more than 60 people arrested in last August's drug raids. The commissioners are worried the people sentenced to from 40 to 200 hours of community service work will not be able to get the work done before their year runs out.

The problems offenders have been finding in trying to volunteer their time are that the circuit court probation department has no guidelines on how to hand out the work and that municipalities are reluctant to hire them because of confusion over insurance and workers' compensation coverage.

Some commissioners said it was a court matter and none of their concern, while others said the county would end up paying if they ended up in court again because they couldn't fulfill their sentences. All of the defendants in the drug cases had court-appointed attorneys paid for by the county.

Court probation officer Ken Mulka told the commissioners he had tried to get a state attorney general's opinion on whether the municipalities were liable for the insurance, but was informed by the department of corrections that a

Some commissioners previously had been upset that the money was going into the library fund because they thought it was going to the state library and not to local ones.

Community garden wanted?

Boyne City will have a community garden this summer if there is enough interest.

The parks and recreation commission would like to set up garden lots at the Avalache Preserve off Division Street but needs to know if enough people would plant there to make it worthwhile to plow the area.

The lots would be 20 by 30 feet. There would be a $5 fee for each lot.

Interested gardeners should call city hall at 582-6597 by Tuesday, May 4. If there is enough interest shown, those who called will be contacted.

Kids think lever and pulley display wonder-pull

Anne Johnston demonstrates friction by sliding a board across the floor at the Unlimited Potential display at East Jordan Elementary. Johnston then attached wheels to the board to demonstrate the lack of friction involved in rolling.

The members of Unlimited Potential presented a show about simple machines last week at East Jordan Elementary School.

The presentation, which has been visited by children from private schools and the public school since it started explained the functions of the incline plane, lever, wedge, screw, wheel and pulley.

Anne Johnston, a member of the U.P. group, used a wide variety of props to demonstrate how mankind has adapted these aids to lighten labor.

Johnston quoted Archimedes to the children: "Give me a lever long enough and a place on which to stand and I will lift the world."

At one presentation last week, a little five-year-old visitor lifted his father, using a long board as a lever.

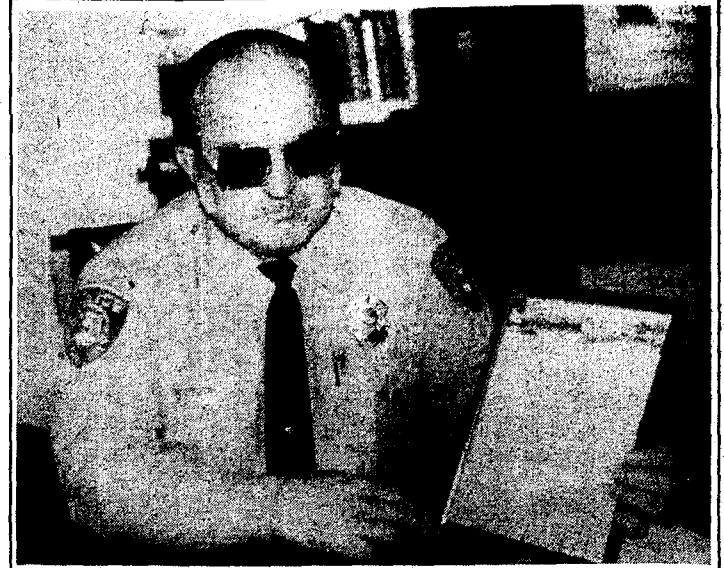

This week the U.P. group used the room in the elementary school to present a hands-on display of the basic machines so that the students, up through the middle school, could experiment for themselves.

The next week, April 26-30, will be inventors' week. School children may submit their own inventive uses of one or more of the machines for display at the week-long Inventors' Fair.

Good News

Boyne City police chief John Talboys was honored last week by the city commission for his 25 years on the police force. The chief was presented with a framed resolution saluting his dedication and professional expertise. Talboys became chief in 1966.

Jean Stolt of Boyne City represented Charlevoix County at a state-wide 4-H conference called Leadership. The session was for 4-H leaders and teen leaders as well as teachers, principals, pastors and other interested persons. This was the second time Stolt has been to the conference.

Hospice hopes to be ready by fall

The Charlevoix County Hospice is hoping to be able to accept its first clients by this fall.

The hospice will be showing a film three times before the end of the month in an effort to stimulate interest in its activities.

A hospice is an organization which provides care and aid to terminally ill people and their families.

The Charlevoix County hospice planning group was formed last fall. It has received incorporation approval from the state and is seeking a tax-exempt status in order to receive United Way and foundation funds.

The originator of the idea of forming a local hospice was Boyne city commissioner Catherine Jessup, a cancer patient who died in October before seeing it get started, said planning board member Carol McTaggart.

The film will be shown during Michigan Hospice Week. There are about 60 hospices operating in the state, said McTaggart. The Michigan hospice organization began only three years ago, she said.

Hospices are also being formed in Petoskey and Gaylord, she said.

Showings of the movie will be April 28 in the Boyne City city hall auditorium, April 29 in the Charlevoix Area Hospital conference room and April 30 in the East Jordan civic center. All showings are at 7:30 p.m.

Members of the planning board will be present to answer questions.

Hospice members are also being sought. They may sign-up for a $3 donation.

The hospice's administrator is Rev. Kathleen Smith. Board members are McTaggart, Renate Smith, Elinor Stackus, Michael Engel, Richard May and Nancy Bombly.

County 'buys up' taxes

Local governments won't have to worry about coming up short because property taxes haven't been paid, thanks to action by the county board of commissioners.

The county annually "buys up" unpaid taxes from the cities, townships and school systems so the local units will have funds to operate with.

The county then receives delinquent taxes from individuals as they are paid or gets the money when properties are sold for taxes after three years of nonpayment.

Big Rock running again

The Big Rock Point nuclear power plant is back in operation. The plant was shut down for refueling on Feb. 6. Operations resumed April 15.

Refueling takes place about once a year. There is only enough storage space for spent fuel rods left at the plant to refuel twice more.

A request made by the utility to the Nuclear Regulatory Commission to increase storage capacity of an underwater pool will be the subject of a hearing in June.

The request has been challenged by four people who have been allowed by the NRC to intervene in the request proceedings.

This year the county has agreed to pay out up to $2,418,407 to three cities, 15 townships, eight school districts and two intermediate school districts to cover delinquent 1981 taxes.

The amounts to be paid to communities range from $871 in Chandler Township to $80,655 in Boyne City. The Boyne City Schools and Charlevoix Schools will each receive more than a half-million dollars.

The amounts may be less if more taxes are paid before the county sends out checks.

The county will get the money to pay off the local units partly from a "tax revolving fund" set up several years ago to collect funds for that purpose. That fund presently has just under $1 million in it.

The rest of the money will have to come from the general fund and from borrowing, commissioners said.

The county is still trying to collect more than $1 million in property taxes delinquent from past years. Over $900,000 of that is from 1980. Eleven dollars are still due from 1973.

County asks alien flow halt

A resolution seeking federal action to limit the influx of illegal aliens into the U.S. has been approved by the Charlevoix County board of commissioners. The resolution was introduced by commissioners Oscar Ward from Charlevoix. It received unanimous support of the board and was sent to state, federal and other county governments. The commissioners expressed concerns that illegal aliens do not have skills needed to find jobs and are putting a burden on welfare and other governmental services. The resolution also states that unless the government takes strong action to stem the tide of illegal aliens - coming mostly from Latin America and the Caribbean - more people will be encouraged to try to enter this country. The resolution calls for support of two bills pending in Congress - Senate bill 776 and House Resolution 2782.

Participation is open to ping-pong enthusiasts in the neighboring townships, and paddles and balls will be supplied by the recreation department.

“All the table tennis equipment was donated new to the Civic Center by the Lionesses,” Berlo said. The money was collected from their bikeathon.

EJ sports boosters seek school aid

East Jordan athletics director Bill Chase spoke for the Athletics Boosters Club at the school board meeting, April 13, saying that the Boosters don't expect to be able to maintain the same level of support next year. This year the Boosters supported the entire athletics program, through gate receipts, donations and fund-raising efforts.

They also provided the coaching and administration, and with the help of students did the clean-up and maintenance necessary before and after games.

With the new school budget being drawn up, the Boosters said they hope the school will be able to offer some support.

This year's budget will be close to $34,000.

Economical Operation
TETCO Ground-water Heat Extractor units provide high-performance, economical heating and cooling in practically all parts of the country. The only electricity needed is that which operates the system. The percentage increase in the cost of electricity has traditionally been less than that of other energy sources. However, many utility companies are discouraging heavy consumption (such as whole-house electric resistance heating) and recommending geothermal heating and cooling because it uses much less electricity.
