Country Star to move store, eatery to M-75

The Country Star market and restaurant in Boyne City will be moved from their present North Lake Street location to one of two spots on South M-75.

The company's board of directors has committed itself to starting construction on August 1, 1983, Willard Gahn told city planning commissioners Monday, August 16.

Two sites are under consideration, he said. The company favors one inside the city limits — between Top O' Michigan electric company and St. Matthews Catholic Church — because it has city water lines.

The other site, he said, is outside the city limits in Wilson Township and the company would have to drill a water well.

A rezoning would be necessary, planning commissioners decided, in order for the market and restaurant to be built on the 10-acre site inside the city limits.

Several commissioners suggested they didn't foresee any problem, and Gahn said he had spoken with a couple city commissioners who also indicated such a rezoning would meet with their approval.

The planning commission will hold a public hearing on a rezoning — from industrial use to general commercial-industrial — at its September 20 meeting. The meeting will be held at 5 p.m. in the city hall auditorium.

The planners make recommendations on rezoning requests to the city commission, which has the final say.

General commercial-industrial is considered a "higher" — or more attractive to neighbors — use for property than industrial. In this context, residential is the "highest" use, followed by commercial, then industrial.

Gahn said the move is necessitated by lack of space for expansion.

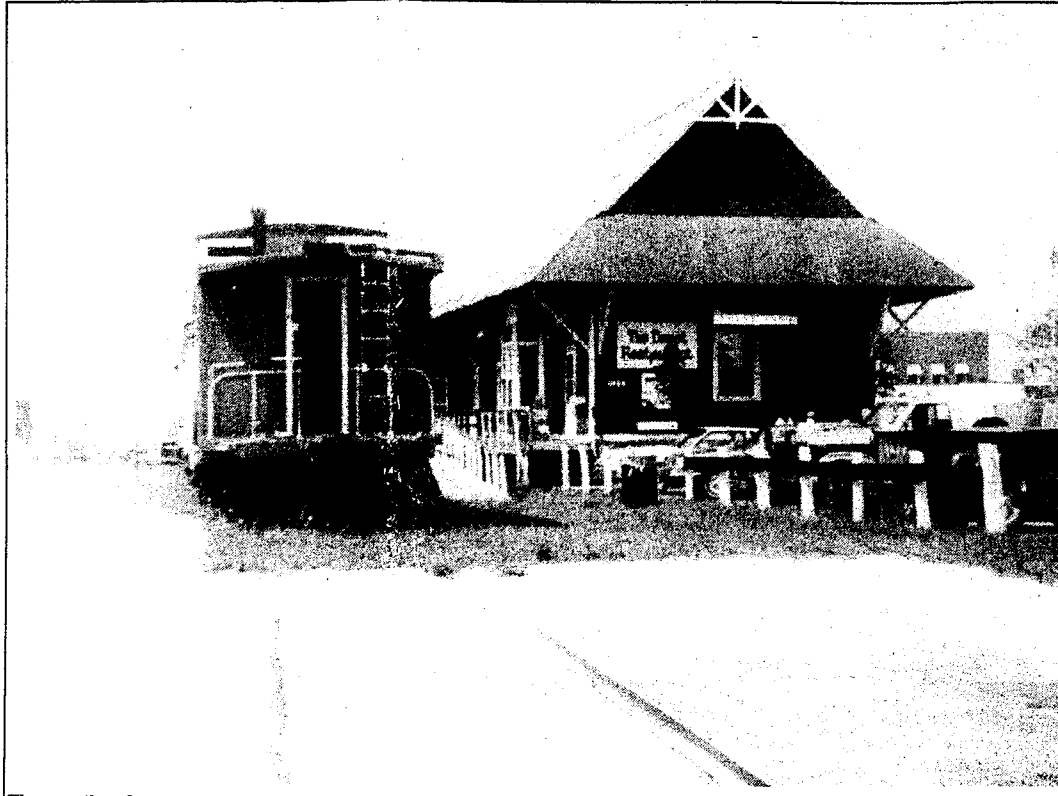

There is no space at the North Lake Street site for expansion of the parking lot, of the bakery operation in the store or other sections of the store that need to be enlarged, he said. Gahn said the produce department "is one of the smallest in the state."

"We're going to move, regardless" of whether it's to the city site or the township one, he said. "If we don't, someone else will."

He said, however, he did not want that to sound like a threat to force a positive vote on a rezoning. With the unspecified 14-acre Wilson Township site also available, he said, and the need for expansion already determined, the company was committed to moving the operation somewhere.

The main attraction of the city site, he said, was the availability of water.

Gahn said the new store would be similar to the Gaylord Country Star, with a separate restaurant building and the store sitting back on the lot.

These railroad cars sitting next to the Depot Restaurant in Boyne City have presented the city planning commission with some perplexing questions. Although cars have been parked there for years and the restaurant owners have purchased three, the railroad has been sold for scrap and the tracks are being torn up.

Train cars pose legal problem

Now that the railroad is gone, should train cars remain in downtown Boyne City?

If rail cars are allowed to sit permanently next to the Depot Restaurant, will other businesses be able to move vehicles of some sort onto their lots?

Even though the railroad easement is on a city right-of-way, could the owners of the cars in the future claim that land as theirs?

These are questions the Boyne City planning commission may have to grapple with.

The owners of the restaurant have reportedly purchased three cars from the defunct Boyne Valley Railroad. The cars sit next to the restaurant, where train cars have sat for years.

The building was once the railroad's depot.

But workers from a scrap iron firm are pulling up tracks on the 7-mile stretch from Boyne City to Boyne Falls, and other assets of the former-tourist line have been sold by the board of directors.

That would leave the three cars stranded on what city manager Tim Clifton says is city right-of-way. Original plat maps show Ray Street, which runs beside the depot, as having a 66-foot right-of-way even though the road is only about 20 feet wide.

The city has no present plans to do anything with the road, Clifton said, but needs to be protected in case future growth necessitates widening the street.

The city needs some assurance the owners of the cars know they are parked on city right-of-way and will give it up without a hassle should that time come, city attorney William McTaggart said.

There is a legal precedent called "adverse possession" which they could use down the road if no agreement is reached now, McTaggart said.

Another precedent McTaggart reminded planning commissioners about Monday, August 16, is allowing the train cars, no longer connected to a railroad, to remain on private property in the central business district.

Other businesses might have cause to park vehicles or other non-buildings on their property, using the rail cars as their justification, McTaggart said.

"Do people in the neighborhood want the cars there?" asked planning commissioner Marvin Lodging.

The commission will invite the Depot owners to its September 20 meeting to discuss their intended uses for the train cars.

Power co-op members OK merger

About 350 members of Top O' Michigan Rural Electric Cooperative turned out Monday, Aug. 16 at their 45th annual meeting to vote on whether their company should accept a merger of Northern Michigan, its power supplier, with Wolverine.

The vote was purely advisory and the tally was 882 yes; 293, no.

The merger of the two electric cooperatives would also unite seven adjacent power distributors. Top O' Michigan is one of three distributors served by Northern. The other four are served by Wolverine.

Officials of both Top O' Michigan and Northern Michigan addressed the members to explain the purposes of the merger.

High on the list was economy. The two companies hope to save by personnel reduction and in the labyrinths of paper work and financing.

Another saving would be on the spread of peak loads available by having such a varied area involved.

In the questions before the vote, the chief objection raised by members was that the changing economy made it impossible for the companies to say how much savings would be realized.

The official statement is that member rates will not go down, but that they will be kept the same for at least two years.

The six other distributors involved in the proposed merger will also be voting in the next few weeks.

Other questions from the floor were prompted by the election of three board members.

The three members presently serving on the board were re-elected: Arthur Biehl of Mancelona (801), Howard M. Carson of Boyne City (826), and Edwin A. Estelle of Elmira (765).

Tom Stewart of Harbor Springs was defeated with a vote of 613.

Dominating the questions to the candidates was concern over Northern's involvement in the Fermi II nuclear power plant, which, added to Wolverine's 8.78 percent, brings the merged contribution to 20 percent. The rest is held by Detroit Edison.

Candidate Tom Stewart had made a declaration against nuclear power in general and Fermi II in particular.

Fermi II is 90 percent complete, and according to a floor interview with board member Martha Drake, the nuclear plant has already cost 10 times more than its original funding called for.

EJ Schools OK lower tax rate

Final approval of East Jordan's school millage was given by the school board on Tuesday, Aug. 10.

Operating millage is 31.3 and debt retirement is 2.75, one-half mill less than last year's.

The millage rate was set after the board held a Truth In Taxation hearing in accordance with a recent state law. This gave residents a chance to speak about the proposed tax rate.

Secretary Ed Drenth reported the half-mill voted this spring to finance this coming year's roofs repair may be helped by a little from the general fund in order to get most of the job done in one year.

Don Lungaro, the school's architectural consultant, reviewed plans for the roof work. The board tabled the plans for more study.

Moonlight sale Thursday in BC

Boyne City will hold a Moonlight Madness sale Thursday, August 19, from 7 to 10 p.m.

There will be a kids' pet show with ribbons and prizes in five categories: most unusual pet, largest pet, smallest pet, best-behaved pet, and youngest owner.

There will be live music featuring Tom and the Boys from 7 to 10 p.m.

Merchants will wear crazy costumes, and special bargains will be available all over town. Water Street will be closed from Lake to East to accommodate shoppers.

There will be a free blood pressure clinic from 7 to 10 p.m. at the Chamber of Commerce, provided by Health Department No. 3.

Tourist Park trailer ouster reaffirmed

The East Jordan city council has decided to complete the process of moving mobile homes out of the city's Tourist Park.

The council's vote at a special meeting Monday, August 16 upheld the October 17, 1977, decision to give mobile home owners five years to make the move.

Of the original 41, 12 remain. They have, according to the 1977 provisions, until December 12, 1982 to relocate.

The overriding reason for the decision was to make possible funding from the state to make park improvements. But in addition city property owners have criticized the city for allowing prime lakefront property to be rented with utilities included for $117 in the summer and $75 in the winter.

In the past, councilman Cal Gotts said, efforts were made to relocate the homes to another part of the park, but nothing came of this.

At the meeting, which included city attorney Tom Anderson and the mobile home owners' lawyer, Gregory Justis, the council was questioned as to what the penalty would be if the city did not require the renters to leave.

City superintendent Mike Dionne pointed out that the first funding had been spent and that the second phase $25,000 was still to come. He said it would not be possible to avoid the commitment.

City clerk Fern Morris read the revenue figures for park use since 1977. They showed that the biggest month was this past July. With the majority of homes out and with the improvements, the city had more revenue in July from the park than in any previous months over the years.

Will the mobile homes move to a mobile home park in the area?

Gotts said he didn't know. "I'm afraid we'll probably lose those citizens. They are nice people."

A record number of visitors attended this year's Waterfront Art Fair held Saturday in Charlevoix's East Park. Here, a number of people rummage through the prints of one of the nearly 165 artists who took part in the 24th anniversary show. It has been estimated that more than 10,000 people visited the art fair during its one-day run.

BC questions order to close its landfill

Why close our landfill? That was the question the Boyne City city commissioners wrestled with as they heard county planner Larry Sullivan's report on the county-wide landfill proposal Tuesday, August 17.

If you put a can of left-over paint thinner into your trash collection, that's waste. But, by definition, if a business puts in five pounds of it, that's hazardous waste, Sullivan said, indicating the day-to-day dangers this and other landfills face.

Sullivan said the 13-member solid waste planning committee that has worked for two years on the proposal will be ready for a county wide hearing on September 30 at the Charlevoix County courthouse.

The plan calls for the closing of the East Jordan and Boyne City landfills, and conversion of the service to transfer stations in order to protect county groundwater from possible contamination.

East Jordan has made the switch, but Boyne City is reluctant to give up using its large site in exchange for a transfer station located on M-75 or in its industrial park.

That would be a mess right in the public view, commissioners protested. Sullivan reported the transfer station in Petoskey is scarcely identifiable.

"It looks like a building with a driveway going through it," he said.

The committee's main reasons for wanting to relocate the service, Sullivan said, were to make it more convenient and to get it where the heavy load will not chop up the road bed.

The committee has concluded that the safest, most convenient, and most economical way to deal with county trash is to ship it either to the Charlevoix Garbage Service near Ironton or to one of two public landfills, either the Kalkaska-Antrim landfill or the Crawford-Otsego location.

Commissioner Thelma Behling objected that Boyne City, in the center of the county, was being asked to transport its waste the farthest, not only in the proposal's look at the next five years, but also for the long-range proposal which allows for a possible county transfer station on M-66.

Sullivan noted that if municipalities do not want to have the problems of dealing with collecting waste, private companies will step in.

He said the plan does not require the city to have a transfer station, but uses the term "should," if the city wishes to participate.

The same solution may be offered by the state, Sullivan said, if a city should request, based on the Headlee Amendment, state aid in bringing a landfill up to licensing standards required by Public Act 641.

The state will say, if you can't afford it, let a private hauler solve your problem, Sullivan explained.

The transfer stations, which are the solid waste committee's recommendation, take up little room. The 35 to 70 cubic yard containers accept bagged trash, compress it to one-third the volume, and then are hauled to a licensed landfill where the trash is dumped.

From Boyne City, a trip once or twice a week would take care of the need, Sullivan said.

Energy-producing trash burners would not be feasible in the area, because there is insufficient waste available.

Recycling is still subject to transportation costs.

Sullivan said the committee studied these and other alternatives before coming up with its proposal.

After the hearing, the proposal will go back to the committee for any adjustments. Then it will go to the county planning commission for approval. Next each municipality will have to vote on it. According to Department of Natural Resources requirements, 67 percent of the municipalities will have to approve before it goes to the DNR for final review.

Julie Ann Fall and Timothy Kenney of Boyne City have announced their engagement. The pair will be married August 28 at Walloon Lake Community Church. She is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Leon Fall of Boyne City, and he is the son of Mr. and Mrs. Blake Kenney of Boyne City. The groom-to-be is employed at Charlevoix Manufacturing.

Garden club show winners

People strolled into the East Jordan Civic Center to an encounter with flowers from noon to 4 p.m. Monday, August 16.

The Garden Club's annual flower show filled the center with the season's best in color, arrangement, size—there was a yellow dahlia bloom close to 10 inches across—and texture.

Specimen flower first prize winners were: for single rose, Marge Smith; white phlox, Deanna Hurwitz; and for the dahlia, Mary Malpass.

Arrangements of dried flowers and grasses drew a large number of entries with first prize going to Cygred Riley.

A new feature was tables set up for "kitchen dining"—informal place settings that harmonized place mats, china or earthenware, and flowers for an informal meal.

Winner in this category was Polly Sinclair.

Another category was miniatures—flower arrangements no more than six inches high or wide. Polly Sinclair won a first with a bouquet of violets and sweet alyssum.

Other arrangements, for the living room and for the dining table, varied from closely massed blooms in the manner of 18th century bouquets to tall, simple groupings in low, rectangular vases in Oriental style.

Winners here were Joanne Schenck's tiger lilies and Edith Gidley's gladiolus. Gidley's arrangement was also awarded "best of the show."

Others who took prizes were Thora Kotosich for her lace fern house plant and Gidley for her lantana.

The fleas did well at market

Remember when we elected Ronald Reagan president and everyone was singing, laughing and eating jelly beans? Since then, some 10 million people have been looking for jobs. Now they are singing that popular song: I've got those jelly bean blues.

We went to northern Michigan's largest flea market and auto show at the city park. No other flea market has attracted so many people this summer. I talked to a number of fleas who told me that it was the most profitable day they'd had this year. That old story you hear at auction sales, yard and rummage sales that goes "people will buy anything" seemed true. Even we, who are close to President Reagan's truly needy, bought articles. We could do it because we are not truly needy, but only nearly needy.

At the auto show I saw a striking young lady who looked as though she had just left a fashion show. She was the kind you give the once over three or four times. As she moved from auto to auto, I noticed several young men hovering in the background. I find it puzzling how one head of hair can attract so many wovels. If I were a young man, such hovering would probably make sense to me.

Sunday morning I got out of bed one hour sooner than I had wished to rise. "If you don't get out of bed right now," my wife was saying, "I shall go down, get the Sunday papers and eat breakfast alone." So I got up. But I didn't want to. I've been getting out of bed every day for more than half a century and I'm getting tired of it.

An unconfirmed rumor has the Country Star market and restaurant moving out into the boondocks, somewhere between the cemetery and that tall grass you see diving to Boyne Falls. Former publisher Gregg Smith once said in his paper several years ago that the day would come when a corridor of businesses would stretch from Boyne City to Boyne Falls. I now think he was right. And with all those stories lined up you won't know whether you are in Boyne City or Boyne Falls. That won't make much difference to me. At my age I already have days when I don't know where I'm at. Have you ever found yourself in the kitchen looking for a pair of socks? And asking yourself, what am I doing out here.

Speaking of Boyne Falls, I wrote a little something about the festival over there and it seemed to stick in one Polack's craw. He came a-running with his crew and threatened to pound on me. And, of course, I did what I always do when I am scared to death by a stuck craw. I ran downtown and hid myself among a group of women who were window shopping on Water Street. I was safe there because most people don't think that men window shop, just women.

Our Historical Society's baked goods sale at the antique auto show earned us one hundred dollars which was given to Loton Willson. We did it because he is the society's treasurer. I know of no other reason why anyone would say, "Hey Loton, here's one hundred dollars."

To pound on the toe of the giant

While admiring the beautifully gleaming old cars at the antique car show in Boyne City this weekend, and entertaining a few memories—well, some of the cars were less than 50 years old—I began thinking again about car manufacturers' present problems.

Back in the '50s and '60s, even before the Arabs got wise, a need for small, low-priced cars existed. Car makers apparently decided, however, that the needy would buy the used cars. A sort of double-dipping by the manufacturers of built in obsolescence.

Back then, the glory of the big car was at its brightest. And we of the meager finances could buy the imitators, spending more than we wanted to, even on the imitations.

Now, when "real Americans buy American cars," as the bumper stickers insist, I wonder what American manufacturers were doing for the real Americans a few decades back.

As far as I could see, they had forgotten that Henry Ford's success was originally made out of low, low priced cars for real Americans.

So, the stage was set for the Volkswagen bug. The bug proved American car manufacturers were wrong, and we of the meager purse were right. It could be done. It would sell.

Of course, it wasn't until the oil shortage that the car giants really woke from their manufacturing obsessions. Partially.

Wizards that they are in mechanics, they at last are making neat, small cars. Only they haven't figured out how to make a cheap neat, small car.

Unions push for more; raw materials cost more. And people aren't buying. Still car makers build ever more costly vehicles.

Isn't it perplexing.

Giants always were handicapped when it came to flexibility.

It isn't that we don't appreciate the remarkable product they have given us. Truly, the last thing most of us would be without is a car.

But it's because of that we make our complaints. Don't tell us you can't make an inexpensive car.

So it's a little noisy inside. So it's a bumpy ride. So it has no hubcaps or chrome. Make one. I'll buy it—for $3,000.

And make the seats up straight, like real truck seats. Make the truck bed out of wood so I won't have to worry about scratches and rust.

And as I putt-putt down the road, hear me sing, yea, "Where did all the big cars go? Long time passing..."

BC renews lawyer, planning firm pacts

Boyne City has renewed its contracts with the city attorney and a planning consultant.

Attorney William McTaggart will receive an annual retainer of $6,891 and $50 per each hour of court time associated with city matters.

McTaggart became the city attorney a year ago when his law partner, Harvey Varnum, became a district judge. Varnum had been city attorney.

The city attorney attends commission meetings and advises officials, revises ordinances, represents the city in legal matters and prosecutes persons accused of violating ordinances.

The firm of Johnson, Johnson and Roy of Ann Arbor has been retained to act as planning consultant.

The rate of payment for the firm's services will be the same as in the past two years. Payment will be at 2.5 times the direct personnel expense for hours worked.

The city will also pay the actual cost of such things as maps, long-distance phone calls, travel and fees for special consultants.

Some of the services the company will provide include review of site plans and zoning requests, review of development proposals submitted to the city and performance of other planning related matters as directed by the planning commission with city approval

EJ clinic for 3-year-olds

There will be a developmental screening clinic for all children who will be entering East Jordan kindergarten in the fall of 1984.

The clinic is sponsored by the Charlevoix-Emmet Intermediate School District.

The purposes of this clinic are to provide parents information regarding normal child development, give parents an opportunity to interact with parents of other three-year-old children, and to have their children informally screened to identify any potential learning difficulties.

The clinic is a free service with appointments made on a first come, first served basis.

The clinic will be held September 15 at East Jordan Elementary.

Call Joan Smith at 547-9947 for an appointment or for further information.

Bay Queen crew is praised

Editor, The spirit, enthusiasm and dependability of the 60 members who work for the Bay Queen is the key to operational success.

Each and every employee is keenly aware and interested in all aspects of making the Bay Queen a Happy Michigan Experience. When you are aboard you are happy to be saying "Yes to Michigan."

These young people were chosen, not hired, from major universities in the state and elsewhere because of their personalities and sincere desire to serve Bay Queen passengers.

They individually know and care about each other. Whether it is a birthday, holiday, or family reunion they seem to want to share and celebrate together.

There is no question that in this operation each employee is recognized and treated almost as a family member. Everyone tends to like each other and strong lasting friendships have developed.

Ninety five percent of the employees from the '81 season are back this year. All but two are signed up to return for the '83 season. Many of the crew correspond all winter and plan vacation time together.

It is amazing how compatible these young people are who work, live, and socialize together. There have been no interpersonal problems that have been reported. They thrive on group activity.

Many of these young men and women are putting themselves through college with summer money earned. They live on their tips earned and bank the paychecks.

I was amused when one of our young passengers bought four of our postcards and a week later four thank you postcards arrived at our office complimenting different areas of service. This action reinstated in my mind the thought that the youth of today is a caring dependable bunch.

Earlier this year the Bay Queen was privileged to host the Boyne City High School prom. The experience of working with such a fine group of high school students will remain with me over the long winter months as one of our most successful charters.

So many times we adults do not look at the bright side. We complain too often about the economy, the weather, and personal problems.

We should sometimes sit back and reflect on our youth. Could we have spent a summer working hard long hours with the same 75 people for three full months? Could we have given a happy cheerful smile to 10,000 passengers? Could we have been on time and not missed a day of work? Could we have accepted each day the responsibility that the young managers on the boat so diligently carried out.

Not one angry message or letter has come across my desk about any of these young men and women. I'm happy to take my hat off to a new breed of proud, congenial, hard working and, I might add, beautiful people. It's a joy working with them. Today, instead of complaining, praise your young son and daughter. We can all jump on that positive optimistic bandwagon. The spirit is catching.

Ann Henriksen, Director Promotion and Marketing Bay Queen-Sea Hawk Cruises

Vote against bus funds was foolish

Editor, What has happened to the American people?

That they would vote down $2.50 per year to help keep the county buses running.

Buses that take people to work, take senior citizens shopping and to the doctor, give people without cars a chance to move around and be independent.

Most of us waste more than that on needless things.

Where on the other hand gas, electric, and telephone companies raise their rates whenever and how much they please which totals up to millions.

Nobody says a word. Why not stick together and demand we vote whether they can raise or not?

Really have something to vote for, not take it out on a small but important matter like busing.

Let us hope there is some loophole where the buses can be funded.

They are greatly needed in this county. How can we save energy any easier?

EJ sidewalks need repair

"We want input from property owners by September 1," city superintendent Mike Dionne said. "A good percentage could be updated."

He explained, "Most cities come in with a mandatory program (for sidewalk repair) and assess the owners."

Dionne said that here and in these times, he would rather ask who would like sidewalk repair in front of their homes, and work on that basis to improve the situation.

Property owners, by city regulation, pay 60 percent of the cost, with the city paying the 40 percent.

"Part of the owners' 60 percent could be labor or services," Dionne said. The specifications say sidewalks will be five feet wide and four inches thick, edged, and with a broom finish.

Dionne's notice said, "Any property owners wishing to participate, should contact city hall on or before September 1."

shot a 96 to win the 11-12 division.

Burris memorial dedicated

A memorial service and monument dedication was held Sunday to honor former conservation officer Harley Burris who died May 25 at age 66.

A memorial plaque will be put on a large field stone in Veteran's Memorial Park. The stone will be flanked by two blue spruce trees, which were Burris' favorites.

Money left in a memorial fund set up by his friends after his death will go for a horseshow court and to the Michigan Heart Association.

Memorial tributes were delivered by county sheriff George Lasater, Frank Dufon of the state Department of Natural Resources and Rev. Milton Walls of the Boyne City Presbyterian Church.

Burris was a state conservation department (later called natural resources department) employee for 32 years. He joined the department in 1946 and worked in Onaway for 11 years before being transferred to Boyne City.

In 1968 he was transferred to Kalkaska but citizen pressure convinced the DNR to return him to Boyne.

Burris then remained in the Boyne office until he retired in 1978 as supervisor for Charlevoix, Emmet and Antrim counties.

Planners eye Eagle's progress

Progress on a building being built by the Boyne City Eagles continues to be a concern of the city planning commission. The Eagles' 18-month permit and zoning variation expired in April with the building far from complete.

During the summer, while making periodic reports to the commission, the Eagles have made progress on the structure.

The commission is primarily interested in the Eagles finishing exterior work first. Both interior and exterior work are being done.

Money has been the main problem in getting the work completed, Eagles representatives have told the commission. The job has been much more costly than originally thought and getting additional financing has been difficult.

Eagles even sent out requests to other Eagles clubs around the country asking for donations, but that effort met with little response.

The building has cost over $70,000 so far — and that's with volunteer labor from members — and the end cost is not known.

Once the new structure at North Lake and River is ready for occupancy, the old building on River is to be demolished to provide adequate parking.

'Been in the wild most of my life'

The boys sat along the edge of the dock, "not a move out of them," Viola Rodgers said.

What was so absorbing was the advice on fishing mixed with fishing stories from an athletic-looking man with a shock of snow white hair.

The story teller is Ralph Rodgers.

He and his wife live out along the lake in East Jordan in a chalet-style house he built a few years ago.

The Rodgers are from Linden. Back in 1970 they started coming up, adding to Ralph Rodgers' early years in the area.

Those were the days when young Rodgers had to hunt to help feed his brothers and sisters during the Depression.

Each time his father would give Ralph two shells, Viola Rodgers said. No more. He had to bring back a rabbit or something for dinner. He couldn't miss.

Rodgers still hunts. One of his favorite stories concerns one of those hard-to-catch-sight-of bobcats.

It was in the Upper Peninsula when Rodgers said he was standing on top of a high stump—maybe seven feet up and about eight inches in diameter—when he heard a jack rabbit. Something had caught it.

Rodgers waited 20 minutes, thought he heard a deer, and Viola and Ralph Rodgers talk about the outdoors and their experiences in it. The Rodgers moved to the north country to be closer to nature.

suddenly there was a bobcat crouched and hissing at him.

"You make the first move," Rodgers thought as he stared back at the cat.

He shot it as it turned to go. He wanted the beautiful pelt. The animal was very big, Rodgers said. Weighed at least 30 pounds.

But he's brought back live pets, too.

Back in the Depression days he worked for a sawmill (before chain saws, that was). Sometimes a felled tree would have a raccoon den in it. The baby coons would go home with him or another lumberjack.

"They follow you all over," Rodgers said. They were good at getting their little "hands" into his pockets.

And they would just stay with you all summer by their own choice, he said. "But in the fall they'd turn ugly, and run off."

He had a red squirrel for a pet, too.

"He'd run around the lampshade so fast," Rodgers said, "he'd be just a blur."

The squirrel would run up to your shoulder and tuck nuts into your collar, he said.

Of course, like all squirrels he'd hide nuts out in the yard, too.

"You'd think you'd know just where they put them," Rodgers said. You'd watch them, then go out afterwards, but you could never find the nuts.

"The squirrels pull the grass over where they've dug," he said. They bury them as deep as the nut is thick, he explained. Just as Nature requires, in order for a nut to sprout—if the squirrel fails to reclaim it.

"If I were rich," Viola Rodgers said, "I would bring city kids up here to learn what it is to see wild life with their own eyes—see wild creatures walking around."

Rodgers reminisced about a doe with two fawns, just babies, though it was fall, he said. The mother stood within the edge of the woods but the babies just pranced around out in the open, not 40 feet away from where he stood.

He and his wife see deer swim across the lake from the west side of South Arm.

In winter they have seen a fox and also a porcupine make the crossing on the snow.

And they watch the birds. "Watch their patterns of life," Viola said. Watch the mother flicker go down on the ground and stir up a nest of ants with her long beak for a baby flicker's education—and dinner.

There's more. Always more for someone who can say, like Rodgers, "I've been in the wild most of my life."

Swimming classes have come to an end in East Jordan and Boyne City. East Jordan held classes for 158 students ranging in age from two years old through adult. Instructors were Mary Beth Timms, Kim Barnett and Brad Rullman. The instruction in the Tourist Park included everything from basic swimming to water safety instructor certification. There were 250 students at the Boyne City swim classes held at Whiting Park. Boyne instructors were Steph Moody and Becky Almesbury. Full-time lifeguard was Shawn Almesbury.

Curtis and Barbara McLeod and daughter of Jacksonville, Texas, have returned to their home after visiting her parents, Lloyd and Audrey Meadows. Now visiting his parents are Carl and DeAnn Meadows and family from Brigham, Utah. They will be here for two weeks.

The Bob Lawrence family, son Terry and wife, Laurie; sons Ted and Tom of Moline, Illinois and the Jacobits and their family Fred and wife, Maurie and daughter Babs of Hazel Crest, Illinois, were in Chicago recently for the wedding of Mrs. Lawrence's and Mrs. Jacobits' niece, Libby Henderson. Barbara Anderson was honored at a shower recently at the home of her sister, Judy Planck. Hostesses were Barbara's aunts. Those attending were: Sophia Towne of Boyne City; Eva Ostrum of Charlevoix; Rose Cruse of Aurora, Illinois; Julie Babb of Dayton, Ohio; Georgia Bruh of Falls Church, Virginia; and Dorothy Krchak of Crystal Lake, Illinois.

held in the Walloon Lake Community Church basement. Natalie Yaich, Audrey Meadows and Joyce Fortune were hostesses. Barb will marry Wesley E. Laughbaum of Pellston on Saturday, August 28. Rev. Rodney Ward will officiate at the wedding.

Also attending were Glenda Planck, Norma Cramer, Pat and Diane Elzinga, Lisa Krchak and Michelle Towne. Sending gifts but unable to attend were Geneva, Debbie and Sandy Towne, Dawn Mulaney, Cathy Leist, Mary Lou Krchak, Carol and Laurie Kruse, Leandra Tylene Bruhl and Remada and Kim Fall.

Mr. and Mrs. John T. Jackson and son Richard of Plymouth, Michigan, visited their daughter and son-in-law, Dick and Carol White and granddaughter, Kim, to be with Kim on her 18th birthday.

New books at the Melrose Township Crooked Tree Library are: "Celebrity," by Thompson; "America in Search of Itself," by White; "Eden Burning," by Belva Plaines; and "Cherokee Trail," by L'Amour.

Walloon residents enjoyed a band concert August 6, in Melrose Township Park. About 100 students from St. Johns School marching band played five selections.

Safety rules for canoeists

Northwestern Michigan is rich with navigable streams and rivers affording canoeists splendid scenery and exhilarating exercise.

To ensure that your canoe trip is both enjoyable and safe, the Michigan State Medical Society suggests you follow some basic safety guides.

Many canoeing accidents are caused by unfamiliar water.

Canoeists who do not take the time to familiarize themselves with the speed of the current and the various hazardous obstacles—such as dams and downed trees—which may confront them, are courting danger.

Chart your course beforehand to learn where obstructions are located.

Paddlers should be aware of the water temperature and the effects cold water has on the body. Water below 60 degrees is perilously cold and 40 degree water so numbs you that within moments you are unable to help yourself.

A common sense rule to follow is to add the water and air temperatures together. If their sum is less than 100 degrees, wear a wet suit.

Capsizing or falling overboard are real dangers. Keep that in mind as a possibility and dress accordingly. In cold water, no matter how clear-headed you think you'll be, your energy will be sapped in moments. Life jackets should always be worn to keep your body above water in any circumstances.

Additional precautions include wearing protective helmets and, for those dependent on eyeglasses, safety straps.

Though canoes may be outfitted with seats, always kneel in rough water. This concentrates the bulk of your weight in the bottom of the canoe.

Important too is the even distribution of the canoe load—paddlers and equipment.

Other safety features to keep in mind:

-Always travel in groups of at least three canoes. Keep the boat behind you in sight.

-Avoid snags (downed trees, low branches, broken fences) and rocks.

-Portage around dams, waterfalls and rapids.

-Be certain everyone in the canoe can swim fully clothes.

-If capsized stay with the canoe, at the upstream end.

-Never attempt to stand up in fast water unless it is too shallow for swimming.

These guidelines may appear cumbersome, but the society says they are essential for proper, safe canoeing.

Air Show — whoops and whooshes

The air show held Sunday at Charlevoix Airport attracted pilots, miniature aircraft devotees and a large number of spectators. The show corresponded with the completion of the extension of the airstrip's longest runway.

The Charlevoix Flying Club's Air Show, put on jointly with the Soaring Club, had Sunday afternoon a-buzz with events.

In the morning before the wind was up, the RE/MAX hot-air balloon floated about overhead.

Brian Amato, who owns the balloon with Art Seaborne of Petoskey, said the balloon, made of over 1000 yards of nylon, was about seven stories tall when inflated.

"The burner is supported above my head. It shoots a flame eight to 10 feet long up into the envelope—most people call it a balloon."

Amato is a certified commercial balloon pilot, which means he can give rides for hire, instruct others, or sell balloons.

How does he get the thing to come down?

"You either reduce the heat or open a parachute top to allow the heat to escape."

Escape is the name of the game. "Something ballooning brings out the kid in people," says Amato, smiling.

Sunday afternoon crowds collected as Skip Heinbecker of Charlevoix flew his wasp-like Ulterlight around the airport, swooping low at 40 m.p.h. and showing the responsiveness of the long-winged chair he rode through the skies.

Heinbecker also flies a Motorglider, built in Germany, which has a motor to lift it off, but which then can float silently on the wind or thermals. "No limit to how far it can go," he said.

Two stunt flyers in little biplanes threw their crafts into dizzy rolls, loops, and swoops.

Vincent Chew, president of the flying club, introduced Lieutenant Gary Hiatt and his crew from the Traverse City Coast Guard Station. They flew their helicopter through mock-rescue exercises, the rotor-blades whipping up a staggering blast of air across the grass.

Focus of the event, which drew flyers from a number of states around the midwest, was the dedication of the 1000-foot extension of the runway.

Mayor Ken Staley noted that funding arrangements had begun in May 1981. The airport, originally out on Ellsworth Road, had been moved closer to Charlevoix during World War II.

Winding up the afternoon were plane rides and flights of radio-controlled model airplanes.

A shout went up when spectators saw a gull sail down to inspect one of the model planes—built on approximately the dimensions of the gull itself.

Chamber series at Interlochen

Part of Interlochen's 32nd Annual Chamber Music Conference, the Chamber Music Concert Series, will offer some of the finest small ensemble music ever written by such composers as Bartok, Copland, Dvorak, Haydn, and Schumann.

The series will run from August 24-30 with a performance scheduled for 8:15 p.m. each night in Corson Auditorium.

Featured in the series are three performances by the Manhattan String Quartet, quartet-in-residence at Music Mountain, the chamber music center at Falls Village, Connecticut.

Their performances, scheduled for 8:15 p.m. will include Ginastera's "Quartet No. 1, Op. 20," Schumann's "Quartet No. 3 in A, Op. 41, No. 3" (on August 25), Bartok's "Quartet No. 6," Beethoven's "Quartet in A Minor, Op. 132" (on August 28), Haydn's "Quartet in G, Op. 74, No. 3," and Brahms' "Quartet in G for Piano and Strings, Op. 25" (on August 30).

Other concerts in the series will feature performances by Alcestis Perry, violin; Evelyn Elsing, cello; Kent Perry, violin; George Andrex, viola; Cary Lewis, piano; Mildred Snyder, piano.
