Railroad clean-up promised

Debris left as old tracks and rails are torn up from the Boyne Valley Railroad will be cleaned up by the company, a spokesman said Tuesday. Concern over the condition of torn up land has been voiced by city commission members, most recently at their Tuesday, September 7, meeting.

"It will be cleaned up. No question about it," said Art Rouse of the railroad board of directors when contacted by The Press.

Clean-up is the company's responsibility, not the contractor's, he said. The board of the defunct railroad contracted with Farrell Tie and Rail to remove tracks and ties from the 7.2-mile stretch between Boyne City and Boyne Falls.

Rouse did not make any commitment about restoring places where track lies embedded in city streets. City manager Tim Clifton says the removal work is making crossings rough as tracks loosen up from no longer being attached at either end as the rest of the track has been removed.

Rouse said he was not aware of another of the city's complaints — that tracks and ties were being stored on city property by the sewage lagoons.

Clifton complained that the storage was without city permission. Rouse said he believed Farrell must have done it and was planning, no doubt, to remove it soon.

"The railroad company wouldn't have anything to do with it," he explained.

Clifton was also concerned the railroad company might be trying to sell the land the railroad was on.

The land is not the railroad's to sell, Clifton said.

"Our attorney's opinion is that all the property was easement," he said. Asked about land sales, Rouse said the only right-of-way sold was to Dennis Caughey in June. Caughey, a railroad director, died a few days later in a tractor accident.

Rouse said the land which went from Lake Street to Front Street was tied up in Caughey's estate. "I don't know what will happen to that," he said.

Was it Caughey's idea to buy the land? "He put the money up, so I suppose it was," Rouse said.

Jobless rate down to 15½%

Charlevoix County's unemployment rate dropped by more than three percentage points from June to July.

The rate, down to 15.4 percent, stood just over a half-point higher than the statewide 14.7 percent level in July.

July was the first month in more than a year when the county and state rates were anywhere close. Charlevoix's jobless rate has been in the high teens and low 20's all year and reached 24.7 percent in January, while the state rate has been inching up in recent months.

The number of people working in Charlevoix County rose by 425 in the month's time, while the number of unemployed dropped by 275. The total workforce was up by 150, Michigan Employment Security Commission figures show.

BC's industrial park grant is OK'd by state

Boyne City will receive a federal grant of nearly $30,000 to do preliminary work in developing an industrial park at the airport.

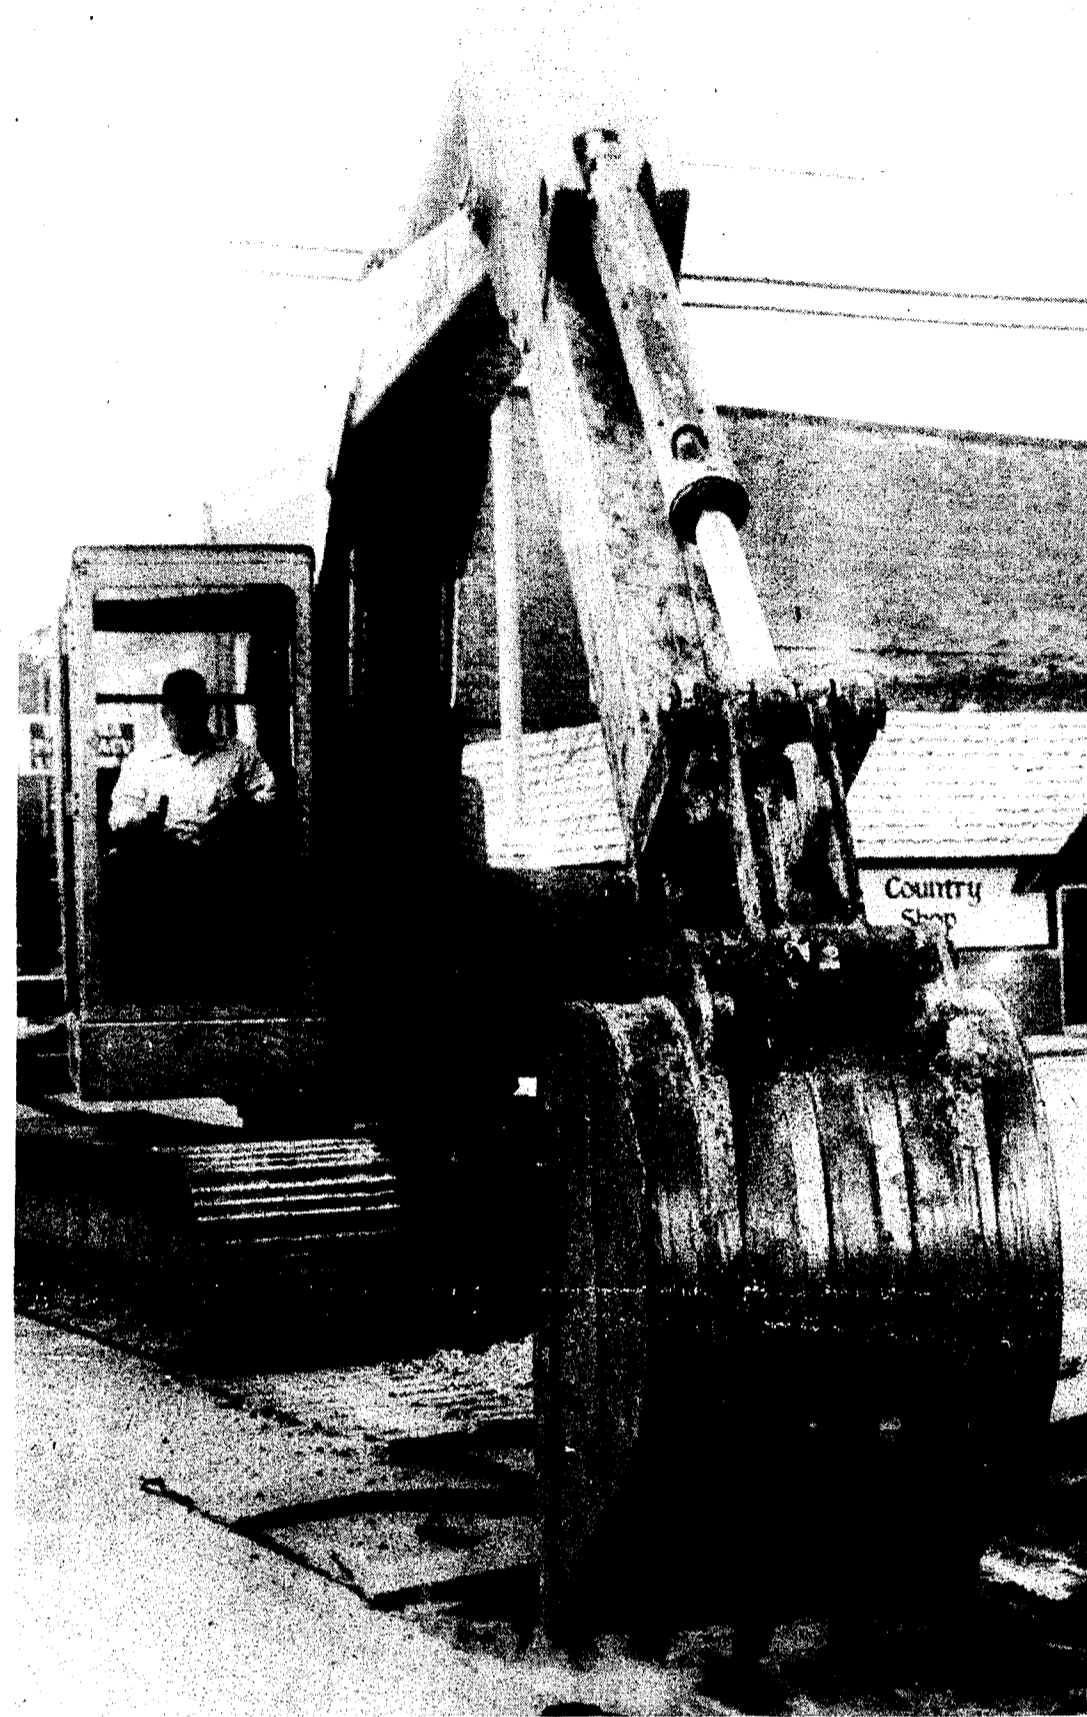

The Small Cities Community Development Block Grant has been approved by the state department of commerce.

The city is still awaiting word on whether a $100,000 grant to dig a new well will be approved. City manager Tim Clifton said it could be 45 days before word is received.

The industrial park grant will allow the city to have the area platted and surveyed, to obtain a utility feasibility study and to have a brochure concerning the site made.

Clifton said the brochure would be designed to try to attract potential tenants for the industrial park.

The brochure would be done professionally, he said. Granger Engineering, the city's consulting engineer, would do the rest of the work, he said.

Road equipment from C. H. Smith Company gobbles up chunks of Water Street in preparation for putting in another section of new water mains and utility lines. When finished, the new block will match the block completed last fall.

Water St. work begins

Excavation work on Water Street in Boyne City began Tuesday, September 7, as scheduled.

Traffic may be permitted on the block from Park to East for some time, city manager Tim Clifton said, depending on various safety factors.

Clifton explained that the north side of the street will be torn up this week, leaving the south side for possible use until it too is torn up.

Then the whole block will be closed except for foot traffic. Eventually that will be closed wherever service connections will go in, Clifton said.

City crews are not tearing up the pavement this year, as they did last year, he said, because of the wear and tear on equipment.

The city contracted with C.H. Smith Company to renovate the block.

Clifton said the contract to landscape the block was awarded to John Huffman of Petoskey, who submitted the low bid of $2,800.

Huffman's crew will remove the eight trees now planted along the street — they have to come out anyway for the construction process. Six of the trees will be planted in Veteran's Park. They will replace the elms there which are now in an unsafe condition, Clifton said.

The other two will be planted in the old city park at River and Park.

When street reconstruction is complete, Huffman will put crimson maples in the planters along the street, Clifton said.

State mediator in BF talks

A state mediator has been called into contract talks between Boyne Falls School and its teacher union.

Meanwhile, contract talks continue in East Jordan as classes begin in all area school districts.

Boyne Falls superintendent Carl Moser said that although the mediator has been requested, "we are not at an impasse."

The board is ready to meet and discuss matters further, he said. Meetings are scheduled for Friday, Tuesday and Wednesday, September 10, 14 and 15.

"We met three times over the weekend," Moser said, "including all day Saturday."

Earlier this summer, he said, they "went through a series of expediting meetings with the teachers." When the two sides were not able to reach agreement on economics, he said, they went to formal negotiations with Leonard Staley of the Northern Michigan Education Association.

It was after five meetings with Staley that the union called for a state negotiator.

Moser said this is the first time negotiations weren't completed within school personnel.

The teacher negotiating committee working with Staley is composed of Mary Anne Ayres, Joyce Gibes and Glenn Hindbaugh.

Moser is spokesman for the school board committee which is chaired by James Churchill. Don Wilson and Don Griffith are on the committee.

East Jordan board spokeswoman Mary Jason said, "We're still in the early stages. No problems so far."

Representatives of the board and the union met Wednesday, September 1, and were scheduled to meet again Wednesday, September 8. They also held two meetings in August, she said.

70 county families in cancer study

Seventy Charlevoix County families will be part of a six-year nation-wide cancer study.

The families are taking part in Cancer Prevention Study II* a follow-up to a 1959 to 1972 study which the American Cancer Society says provided the link between smoking and cancer.

More than 1 million Americans — most over the age of 45 — are filling out questionnaires this month as the first step in the study.

In two, four and six years, said Chris Anderson of Charlevoix, researchers will be checking to see if the people in the survey are still alive, if they have gotten cancer and, if so, what they may have in common.

Anderson is the county coordinator for the survey. She and six researchers are finding families to fill out the questionnaires. The entire county will be covered, Anderson said, as two of the researchers are from Charlevoix, three are from Boyne City and two are from East Jordan.

The researchers' goal, she said, is not to reach a cross-section of county population, but to find people over 45 who will probably still be county residents six years from now.

Questions will concern such things as general lifestyle, diet, medication, work environment and other factors, Anderson said.

The study will try to help determine the effects of environmental elements on residents — thus the need for people who have been here and plan to remain.

The researchers are calling on people they know and asking them to take part in the study, Anderson said.

While families must have at least one person over 45, others within the family who are over 30 may fill out questionnaires, she said.

The earlier study, according to the ACS* established the link between cigarette smoking and lung cancer, heart disease, other circulatory diseases and emphysema.

"Cancer Prevention Study II will have a broader scope than the first one," said Lawrence Garfinkel, ACS vice president for epidemiology and statistics, who is in charge of the study.

The survey will investigate a wider variety of factors, he said, including food items, exposure to low-level radiation, air and water pollution, drugs, occupational exposures and the possible interaction between various cancer-causing substances. It will also attempt to determine why certain racial, religious, geographic and genetic groups seem to have higher cancer risks.

The questionnaires will be filled out in private and will be sent in sealed envelopes to the ACS office in New York where the information will be put in a computer.

Garfinkel said some preliminary information would be available in a year and a half, but more useful information would not be forthcoming for four or more years.

Local researchers began distributing the questionnaires last week, and Anderson will send the responses to the cancer society by September 30.

Area Medicare rating upgraded

Senior citizens in Charlevoix County and much of northern Michigan will spend less of their own money for health care, starting October 1.

This is the result of a two-year effort by Congressman Bob Davis to get the federal Health Care Financing Administration and Michigan Blue Cross-Blue Shield to change the "zoning" system for Michigan.

Davis said the state is currently divided into three zones: the Detroit metropolitan area, other urban areas and rural areas.

With the exception of Emmet County and Grand Traverse County, northern Michigan was classified as rural.

Because of this ranking, Davis said, doctors in the area were not reim-

Shayne Mariage is heading for California and another rung in the ladder to a stage career.

California bound

Shayne Mariage will be off to Brea, California, in a few days to take part in The Young Americans' "New Kids' Show," performing for three months in the Brea Theater.

The son of John and Sharyn Mariage of Boyne City will also be attending high school there.

Shayne, at 16, has already had two summers with The Young Americans, a nationally known group of singers and dancers. The California-based group has spent its summers in Petoskey in recent years.

Shayne's opportunity for the California trip was the result of being selected with a few others from among 50 young people who tried out before Milton Anderson, owner of The Young Americans.

Shayne said, "Once you've made it in 'The New Kids' Show,' you're eligible to go on foreign tour — Japan, France. . ."

But he hasn't made any plans beyond the next three months in California where he will be quartered with other Young Americans in an apartment, and follow a heavy schedule of school, rehearsals and performances.

This summer was full also, with college credit courses in drama, musical theory and so on, along with performing in the cast of "Pirates of Penzance."

The show featured Tim Gillis who has played in notable Hollywood films, and it toured theaters in Michigan and Indiana.

Shayne was also with a contingent of Young Americans performing at Stafford's Bay View Inn, doing solo dancing and singing.

"I did 'Dream A Little Dream of Me,'" Shayne said with a laugh. "Guess I'm known for those old songs."

Shayne is aiming for a performing career. He said, "I think my family is great to believe in me."

BY JIM SILBAR

I keep hearing Boyne City being described as a "meat and potatoes" town. Now that in itself isn't real bad, in fact it is probably a compliment compared to what some of the local citizens will call our town after they see the street torn up again, but that is another story.

Meat and potatoes, to me, means that we have a bunch of ordinary citizens who go to work every day, who spend their money on common things, who enjoy a good night out whether it's a bingo game or a dinner, and who don't necessarily put on "airs" so they can be better than the other guy.

In most cases, we all know the other guy too well to pull the wool over his eyes. He is our neighbor who really knows that we take out the garbage, shovel our own walks, mow our own lawns, and shop for our own groceries.

Perhaps a better word that works along with "meat and potatoes" might be "salt of the earth". Both are expressions that can aptly describe our town.

There is nothing wrong with those words either, they mean the same thing. I like the feeling that I can have a cup of coffee in the morning with a president of a bank, a garage mechanic, a shopkeeper, and a housewife, all at the same table, talking over a construction problem with an out of work carpenter.

First the moon is on the right — big, bright, and ballooning. Then suddenly I see it is on the left. Is it setting or rising? What's happening?

So down M-66 I go, winding through the hills toward East Jordan. And I can't seem to determine where the moon is supposed to be.

I am one of the people for whom the only direction there is, is the one I'm going in.

There are people, I know, who can relate where they are to where they were and who can retrace their routes simply by reversing their turns. They don't need to depend on remembering passing things like the tumble-down barn or the row of tamarack trees.

They know the road's twists and turns. But for the tamarack-tree people, the road is always due north or due-something. The direction they are going is always the only direction.

The tamarack-tree, or hopping-moon, syndrome characterizes a certain class of thinking processes also. It says, "The ideas I have are the ones I've always held."

Never mind that my grandfather's feaport that I always disliked has somewhere along the years become feally quite charming.

Never mind that I once insisted that children should not address their parents' friends by their first names.

Lifting mortgage curb good for state

By RALPH OSTLING

103rd District State Representative
There was good news for our state when the U.S. Treasury Department exempted still more of Michigan from federal regulations that limit Michigan State Housing Development Authority mortgages to first-time homebuyers.

The latest federal ruling went into effect on July 30. It means that residents in 68 of the state's 83 counties now can qualify for a MSHDA mortgage on a new house even though they have previously owned a home.

Included are all counties in northern Lower Michigan and the Upper Peninsula.

The restriction also will be lifted in 29 cities and 28 townships in the remaining 17 counties, although parts of these counties will stay under the old rule, according to Richard Helmbrecht, MSHDA executive secretary.

Approximately 52 percent of Michigan's population lives in the areas now covered by the ruling. Until recently, the Treasury Department allowed only 20 percent of a state's population to be included in exempt areas.

Exempt localities are those that meet certain economic criteria, including low per capita income, high

There is no pretense that anyone is better than anyone else.

Then I can have lunch with an entirely different group of people discussing all most the same types of things. Only this time, it will be with a realtor, businessman, stockbroker, and bookkeeper.

You see, we really have a varied citizenry, all working for the same thing, making our town more complete and better.

Even a lot of the senior citizens, the one who realistically resent changes, if only because they have done something for many years and are in a habit of doing the same things, are working to make this a better community. In fact, I have heard Boyne City being called a very progressive town more and more these days because we are still developing, still building, and still planning for the future.

Historically, every town has to change or it will end up as a ghost town. It may take some time, but those who do not change for the future might go the way of a past hot spot called Podunk.

I am glad that we have a lot of concerned citizens wanting our town to grow in the right way, to get our schools with the right educators, so our children will have a chance, and are "the salt of the earth" living in a "meat and potatoes" town.

First, people say it conflicts with the Bible. Next, they say it has been discovered before. Lastly they say they have always believed it.

And that's the unnerving thing — not recalling when the change came, when the turn was made from the old attitude to the new one.

How could I be so convinced today that cats are wonderful, that old people are smart, that Charles Ives is a great composer, and that little old-blue sneakers are indispensable footwear, when I know I used to think dogs were the only pets and the only people worth talking to were my contemporaries and who is Charles Ives and I wouldn't be caught anywhere in blue sneakers.

Yet I remember quite well a few occasions when I had to change my point of view.

There was Vietnam.

There was Nixon.

There was that business of letting children go, as one by one they became adults.

There was eating tofu.

These changes and other such are usually made with some struggle.

It's easier not to change, at least not wittingly.

But it is always nice to see someone else make the effort! Yes, yes. Let's cheer them on! How else is the world going to get any better.

And as for me, well, it's quite plain I'm on the right road at last.

It's the moon that's hopping around.

I cannot eat very many wild blackberries. They go to my stomach and set up an argument about which one has the greater number of seeds. While they are doing this, I get sick.

But I love them. Especially in a pie. If the seeds would shut up, I believe I could eat the whole pie.

That's why it looks strange to some people whenever I get this urge to go into our back forty to pick those wild blackberries. We've got lots of them.

To some, picking blackberries is a dull, tiresome job. To me, it's exciting. I get a kick out of filling my pail before the others have barely started.

We can reach our blackberry area by driving downhill and taking the lower road through the woods, right up to the patch; or we can walk through the field to a steep hill overlooking the tall prickly canes.

Today I decided to take the shorter route through the field. The dropoff is steep, one hundred feet or so straight down. Using a stick as a cane and descending carefully sideways, like a ridge runner, one can reach the berries with little trouble. I've done it before.

But not today.

I looked down that sheer drop and goose pimples rose up on my arms. I couldn't understand it. Just the other day someone referred to me as an old goat. Now, I'm not dumb. I know that neither a goat nor a goose has pimples.

So what were these things rising on my arms as I looked down that steep-hill? Just as I was deciding they were pimples caused by fear, my foot slipped and I went hind-end over coffee pot down the hill.

Rolling through a growth of poison ivy, I managed somehow to get some in my mouth. That's the trouble with most people, they don't know enough to keep their mouth shut when falling down a hill.

As I turned and tumbled, I managed to spit out that poison ivy, replacing it with a mouthful of sand. It's impossible to call for help with your mouth full. Even if I could, the people I know who would come to help, would stand there asking, "Why is he showing off like that?" And if you are dead when you hit the bottom of the hill, calling for help is a waste of time.

To make a long story miserable, I landed amid the blackberries with all those sharp needles and canes tearing at me. I had lost my shoes, my pail and my dignity.

Question: When wild blackberries make an old goat sick, why would he go hind-end over coffee pot to get them?

Answer: Shut your damn mouth.

New attitude needed

Dear Editor:

As a frequent traveler through your town, and as a avowed "fudgie", I notice that the streets are going to be torn up again. I hope that the contractors who are doing the job this year are going to make short work of it as it took me several weekends of coming through your town to find the shortcut. It was very confusing to us on our way through. I hope that this year, your city officials or the contractors, put up decent signs for us tourists.

Even though your town is small, and I would never stop to shop because of several instances I have had in the past with several of your merchants - who made me feel as if I was intruding on their time, I hope your city uses the new streets as a stepping stone for developing a new attitude among your townspeople.

Perhaps then, your businesses won't have to go broke and can last through the winter like the businesses in Harbor Springs and Charlevoix.

Doctor to speak on emergencies

Home emergencies, visits to the emergency room and first aid will be covered during the first in a series of Community Health Education Meetings at Charlevoix Area Hospital.

The meeting will be conducted by Dr. Mitchel Carey at 7:30 p.m. on Tuesday, September 14. The meeting, free to the public, will be held in a lower level classroom in the wing along Lake Michigan.

Carey's talk is part of the hospital's observance of National Emergency Medical Services Week. Carey will cover such basic first aid topics as home emergency treatment of poisoning, injuries, broken bones, splinting, burns, heart attacks, abdominal pains and fevers.

"Parents are particularly concerned about when to call the doctor or come to the emergency room," Carey said. "We will discuss when a child's fever does require medical attention."

The question of when to call the emergency room or when to wait to see a physician in his office will also be discussed.

Most insurance companies will not cover non-emergency use of the emergency room. Medicare, Medicaid and Blue Cross, in particular, have strict guidelines about what is covered and what is not covered in emergency rooms.

Carey will explain what sorts of problems require emergency room attention.

The hospital staff encourages people in doubt about whether to go to the emergency room to call their family doctor first. A call to the emergency room ahead of arrival can also help determine whether the situation is an emergency.

For example, it is not always necessary to rush to the hospital for a tetanus shot after stepping on a nail, hospital staff members point out. Often the foot can be soaked until the patient can see a doctor in his office.

This will save the patient the expense of paying for an emergency room visit, because most insurance policies do not cover such minor puncture wounds.

Kathy Boss, manager of patient services, also said patients should understand when they go to the emergency room they will be seen as quickly as possible on a priority basis.

On the last day of study, the children will go to the city airport and release helium-filled balloons containing individual students' names and addresses. They hope to receive responses, thus learning a little about air currents.

The children will also make air sculptures - balloons and banners secured in designs and release them along with poems written by the younger children. Carey said UP has scheduled a talk in early

Intentional Retake

As the last sunset of summer fell over Lake Michigan on Labor Day evening, a family played on the swings at the Lake Michigan beach in Charlevoix. The poor weather of the early part of the holiday weekend left for final hours of the traditional end to summer.

Labor Day—a rare sunny one—brought vacationers out for their last goodbyes to summer. In Charlevoix the Ken Baron family from Holland slipped out of their loaded car for a look at the Coast Guard cutter, while Mrs. Baron went to look at the shops. Hand holders and fudge nibblers could also be seen strolling in the sun.

Mary Ruhlman of East Jordan was among 540 Ferris State College students named to the academic honors list for the summer quarter at Ferris State University in Big Rapids.

To be eligible a student must have compiled at least a 3.25 grade point average (out of a possible 4.0) in at least 14 quarter hours of graded work.

Concluded from Page 1 bursed as much for medical care as were physicians in other zones.

By law, Medicare reimbursements must reflect local health care costs. Originally, Davis said, these three zones were created because of the diversity of costs for medical care throughout the state.

"It has become clear," he said, "that health care costs in rural areas are no longer lower than in urban areas, but our seniors are not getting reimbursed for those costs at the same level because we are in zone three (rural area)."

Starting October 1, all zone three counties will be moved into the zone two bracket.

Because of the three-zone system, Davis said, Medicare reimbursements in northern Michigan were often less than 50 percent of the actual medical bills. By law, Medicare should be reimbursing 80 percent of the reasonable medical charge for covered services.

Some doctors have taken Medicare and Blue Cross payments as full payments, while others pass the difference on to patients.

One area doctor said he was receiving $12 from Medicaid for an office call, but $18 from other patients, even though there is so much Medicaid paperwork to be done it requires hiring another office worker.

Dionne, state aide meet

Keith Wilson, chief of the state Waterways Commission, met with East Jordan's city superintendent Mike Dionne on Friday, September 3, to study ways of stabilizing the city dock.

Dionne said the plan is to continue with the proposal to splice and drive pilings along the side where the dock level has dropped. Twenty-one of the pilings will be involved, he said.

He added the city will also have to reconstruct the third finger dock.

Dionne said the hope is that the Waterways Commission can provide some funding, but it wouldn't be more than 50 percent of the $20,000 to $23,000 that the job could cost.

The commission will be meeting in October. Eventually, Dionne said, a portion of the existing dock will be incorporated into the marina the city has long desired. "But possible funding for that may be two or three years down the road," he said. This winter the city's Department of Public Works will dismantle the dock, Dionne said, in order to put in new stringers, cross-members and decking. This will be done after the water is frozen and the ice can hold the work crew. It will be in addition to the work to be done on the pilings.

Trail widening session set

Skiers and snowmobilers are being asked to help widen trails on Barn Mountain near Boyne City.

Clark Rouse, vice chairman of the city parks and recreation commission, said volunteers will widen the trails both skiers and snowmobilers use in the winter. Woodsmen and others interested in working outdoors are also welcome, said Edith Beck, who is a skier as well as city treasurer.

Volunteers should take a sack lunch and a chain saw and meet at 10 a.m. where the old loft barn used to be.

Bob McCullough explains how he wants his defensive unit of the BC Ramblers to react for their up-coming game this Friday against Johannesburg-Lewiston. He and the other coaches are working the players quite hard this week making the final preparation for this season.
