EJ panel to start work to develop master plan

Efforts to draw up a city master plan are getting underway in East Jordan. The planning and zoning commission will undertake the project with aid from other community groups.

"We're in the process of getting representatives from various groups to sit in on the planning," commission chairman Tom Sheridan said this week.

The city council directed the commission to begin work on the plan after the council was approached in August by East Jordan Chamber of Commerce president John Kempton, who told of the chamber's interest in developing the document.

A master plan — sometimes called a comprehensive or land use plan — is a view of how the community's planners would like it to grow. The master plan addresses such things as commercial, industrial and residential growth but in broader terms than a zoning ordinance, which deals with specific pieces of property.

Sheridan said the planning commission would elicit representation from South Arm Township, the city council, industrial and developmental organizations.

The chamber of commerce will be represented by Chris Shea, administrator of the East Jordan Health Center who has a master's degree in urban planning.

Sheridan said city superintendent Mike Dionne would also serve as an advisor.

The city had a master plan drawn up in the late 1960s, according to Dennis Jason, then chairman of the planning and zoning commission.

He said it was prompted by encouragement from Bill Mercer, county planner at that time.

East Jordan was going to update its zoning ordinance and, according to Mercer, master planning gives credence to a zoning ordinance.

The ordinance was completed in 1976, but the master plan, although presented to city council, was never officially accepted. No particular reason for not adopting it has ever been given.

"It was a good plan," Jason said, adding it had some innovative ideas, but was dictated by present conditions as well as indications for future development.

"The city needs a plan," he said. "Most small towns need a thriving downtown development."

"We in East Jordan," he continued, "have the natural resources available to us for development that no other community has."

There probably are as many reasons as there are people that more development has not taken place, he said, naming one big one—"It takes money."

Kempton's reason for asking for new attention to master planning is, "We ought to know where we are going."

The chamber's executive director, Judy Shea, said the chamber had reviewed the original master plan. "It's a good beginning... it's technically sound," she said. She said further that problems are arising in connection with zoning.

"An updated master plan," Shea said, "should encourage businesses to come into the area."

Sheridan said the planning and zoning commission expects to work on the plan this winter.

Public gets turn to talk about solid waste

County residents with comments about the proposed county-wide solid waste disposal plan have their chance to speak Thursday night.

A public hearing on the document—which took almost two years to put together—will begin at 7:30 p.m. in the circuit court room at the county building in Charlevoix. (Entrance will be from the parking lot behind the building.)

The plan was devised because of the state solid waste law passed in 1978. Every county must put one together.

Following the hearing, the committee must submit the plan to all 18 municipalities in the county. At least 13 of them must approve before the plan goes to the county board of commissioners for its perusal.

Once the county board has given its OK, the plan goes to the state Department of Natural Resources—which administers landfill operations—for its approval.

The plan incorporates DNR mandates that Boyne City and East Jordan shut their landfills, which the state agency says are not licensable under the law. Boyne City is still fighting to keep its dump open, while East Jordan has started a transfer operation.

The 13-member committee is made up mostly of county residents who do not hold public office. It does contain a couple county commissioners, a city manager and a couple township officials.

Here is the plan:

—Three licensed landfills will be available to dump garbage. These are the Charlevoix Garbage Service privately owned facility in Ironton, the Antrim-Kalkaska municipal landfill in Kalkaska County and the Crawford-Otsego municipal dump in Crawford County. Charlevoix Garbage Service would be the only licensed garbage dump in the county.

—Six specialized landfills would be maintained for disposal of such things as fly ash, demolition materials, trees and stumps. These are at the East Jordan Iron Works, C. H. Smith and Co., the Advance power plant, the Boyne City landfill, the East Jordan landfill and the Charlevoix city landfill. Garbage dumping would not be allowed at the city landfills.

—Six "transfer stations" (like giant dumpsters) would be placed around the county so garbage could be dumped and held there until being carted off to a licensed landfill. Transfer stations already exist in Melrose and Boyne Valley townships. Others would be in Boyne City and East Jordan (which has a packer-truck instead of a "green box"). Placement of the remaining two would depend on how fast the Charlevoix Garbage Service operation filled up. If a major transfer station to replace or augment the landfill were placed nearer to East Jordan, an additional station would be placed near Charlevoix.

—An incinerator is projected for use by Beaver Island's 350 or so permanent residents.

Boyne City and Charlevoix officials have voiced concerns about the plan.

Boyne city manager Tim Clifton, who is on the solid waste committee, objects to the site pinpointed for the Boyne transfer station. The site would be somewhere along South M-75, which Clifton says would be unattractive in an area of growth.

The panel members selected the area because of its accessibility by transfer trucks.

Clifton and city commission members are still holding out for continued use of the city landfill on Charlevoix Avenue in Evangeline Township.

Charlevoix city manager Robert Hunt has complained to his city council about the cost involved in closing the city's existing landfill, a concern shared by Boyne officials.

An appeals court ruling in a suit filed by Delta County against the DNR suggests the state would have to pay for changes in landfill operations forced upon communities by the law—Act 641 of 1978.

The court ruled the Headlee Amendment requires the state to cover expenses associated with imposition of new state regulations on local government. The state is appealing the decision to the supreme court.

"It is conceivable that the courts could find that the standards in Act 641 are enforceable, if they are adopted locally, under the auspices of the county solid waste management plan," Hunt said in an August memorandum to the city council.

State set to approve airport

The Michigan Aeronautics Commission is set to approve the Boyne City airport preliminary airport layout plan. It will follow the city commission's approval, given Tuesday, Sept. 28.

The layout plan was a necessary step in making the layout for the associated industrial park. It was performed by the city engineers, Granger Engineering Inc. of Gaylord, following very detailed prescriptions by the Aeronautics Commission.

"We're not committing any funds with this approval," city manager Tim Clifton said.

However, costs have been estimated for implementing such items on the plan as fencing, modification of the runways, addition of taxiways and apron area; and a rotating beacon. They are to show the needs and provide guidelines for future grant requests, Clifton said.

"The most significant finding of this study," says the Granger prospectus, "is that a considerable amount of improvement to the Boyne City Airport is justifiable based on today's use."

The soon-to-be platted industrial park is considered an important part of the plan, the airfield, enhancing the development of the park, and the park increasing the use of the airfield, Clifton said.

The park lies at one end of one of the two airfield runways. Its 40 acres include the property owned and already developed by Top O' Michigan Rural Electric Company.

The principal runway, which is asphalted, will be extended 61 feet, and widened 10. More length would be desirable, the Granger report says, but is not possible because of the land designated for the park.

The report notes, however, that the benefits of having the park and port adjacent, offset the lack of room for extending the runways.

The second runway is grassed and used when the winds come from other than the prevailing directions.

It will be extended 128 feet. The improvements to the airport, put in over the 20 years of the plan, will give the airport a Basic Utility Stage II rating, according to the Aeronautics Commission schedule.

The field is rated Stage I at present.

A workman puts in curbs along the second block of Water Street in Boyne City as work continues on completely renovating the block. The project is expected to be completed by the end of October, and includes installation of new sewer and water lines, reconstruction of the roadway and sidewalks, replacement of ornamental trees and installation of decorative street lights. The block, from Park to East, will resemble the block from Park to Lake reconstructed last autumn.

Walter Midener stands with one of his sculptures in what his wife calls their "sculpture garden." Twenty-five Midener sculptures will be on display at McCune.

Sculptor Midener: Working with space

By BARBARA CRUDEN
Sculptures by Walter Midener of East Jordan will be on display at the Virginia McCune Art Center in Petoskey beginning Saturday.

The exhibit will continue throughout October.

Midener, at 70, has had a lifelong career as a sculptor, beginning as a young student in Germany.

He came to this country during the rise of Hitler and enlisted in the United States Army, winning, among other honors, the Silver Star for singlehanded capture of 80 German soldiers.

In 1958 he became assistant head of what is now the College of Arts and Design in Detroit, becoming director in 1968.

Midener now lives and works in East Jordan with his wife Peggy, whose professional success is in painting.

His work will be represented by more than 25 figures in wood, metal, and terra cotta, and also by drawings and photographs.

"My sculpture is influenced by themes from the Old and New Testaments, classical mythology... I am mainly interested in organic form," he says, adding that the discovery of "new solutions in the material as the sculpture progresses" fascinates him.

The Mideners' home is filled with the quiet figures he has carved and modeled. Out under the trees there are more.

"Now at last we have a sculpture garden!" says Peggy.

None of those pieces are purchasable, but some in the show may be bought. The pieces vary from lifelike heads done of friends and family to massive but elongated figures, some hollowed out to provide another dimension for form.

"They don't show one moment in time," says Peggy, "but a synthesis."

The sculptor says he likes three-dimensional work better than painting. "I'm working with actual space," he says. "Whereas in painting I'm working with make-believe space."

He adds with a twinkle, "Besides one painter in the family is enough."

Pointing to a terra cotta head of a young woman, he says, "and that's my daughter Wendy (Wendy Midener Froud)."

Wendy is the designer of some of the Muppet characters.

Crooked Tree Art Council's exhibit will include the portrait of Wendy as well as other examples of Midener's work from pieces about 12 inches in size to larger-than-life.

Group organized to OK bus tax funds in Nov.

A bus millage committee was organized in East Jordan on Monday, Sept. 27, to register voters and to get out information on the November ballot millage request to maintain operation of the Charlevoix County Transit system.

The group in East Jordan will be headed by Milton Veverka. Gen Varnum of Boyne City is committee chairwoman.

A meeting is scheduled at city hall in Boyne City on Tuesday, Oct. 5, at 7:30 p.m., and possibly another on October 12 in Charlevoix. Interested residents will be able to have questions answered at these meetings.

County residents will have a second chance to vote on millage support for the Dial-A-Ride bus system at the November 2 election.

County commissioners have voted to put before the public a request for ¼ mill (25 cents of tax per $1000 of assessed valuation of property) instead of the .29-mill request that was defeated in the August primary.

The ¼ mill is for funding for 1983, '84, and '85.

The amount would cover the county's share of the service, which cost a total of $267,109 in 1981. The service was 100 percent funded (minus fare box revenues) by the state and federal governments in 1980 and 1981.

Beginning August 1 of this year, the subsidy was cut to 75 percent as scheduled when the program was instituted.

Next year the county's responsibility is scheduled to be increased to 50 percent.

Leanna Hardy, a member of the bus millage committee, said the transit service is intended for use by all persons—even non-permanent residents.

She said it is, of course, very important to handicapped people and people without cars to have this service, as, for the most part, it would otherwise be very difficult for them to get transportation.

But, she said, students, factory workers and business people also depend on the transit.

Marshall Sayles

The thing that bothers me most is the fact that I brought nothing into this world and I've still got it.

All young lovers, wherever you are, take notice:

Last spring, old wives were saying that your fancy was turning to thoughts of love, or possibly to some sort of mischief you passed off as love.

But now that it's October and the birds are telling us that winter is on the wing, what are your thoughts turning to? Why do you blush and stammer? Let me tell you. Your thoughts aren't turning at all. Your fancy is the same as those old wives were talking about last spring. So, why do you hem and haw about it? All a person has to do is glance at the hem of your haw to tell that your fancy hasn't changed. You are just as fickle, dizzy and giddy in a raw wind as you were at lilac time.

I know, because when I was your age I, too, had goose pimples on my liver—even in a snow storm. Spring had nothing to do with it, old wives not withstanding.

As the years passed, I fell into the simple living and high type thinking, a condition over which I had no control. Heavens, how I envy the exciting foolishness bouncing around in your heads.

I said "All lovers take notice" and I meant it. Guard your fancy well; for one day it will drizzle off toward Horton Bay in a rain storm; and, like me, you will rise of a morning to look into the glass and shout: Damn the mirror and its honesty!

Now, I have given you some pertinent advice; and I warn you to take heed. If I had taken pertinent heed at your age my giddy, dizzy life would have lasted right up to when I was forced to collect unemployment. Oh, how I wish I had taken pertinent heed.

(Notice to the reader: You may think that somehow this article lacks sense. Perhaps you are right. But I've been making sense all my life and I'm getting tired of it.)

Here, however, are a few sage remarks I thought up in my very own head before logic began to bore me:

I read two daily newspapers every morning and I'm beginning not to like the way the 20th century has been put together. There is an important difference between a person whose mind is on getting a job to earn money and one whose mind is on working.

There is no such thing as the power of the American press. The press in itself has no power. The real power comes from those people who allow the press to influence them. If the people rejected the newspapers' attempt to influence them, the press would be impotent.

There is yet a great discovery to be made in Boyne City: How to support a wife and two children.

End of sage remarks thought up before I got sick of thinking them up.

Have you ever gotten out of bed in the morning feeling like a railroad train with no tracks in front or back? And with the city rushing to do you in? This column is the result of such feeling. In no way is it representative of the exciting hogwash that most readers look forward to ignoring each week. It was written after I had gone down town and got into the way of an accident that had started to happen to someone else.

Art is a secret thing. Some people seem to be simply born artists or art appreciators. Can art be taught to the rest of the people?

Positively yes. Art lies in everyone, but more or less submerged. That's the secret.

In some, the slightest encouragement may cause it to leap into a life-long flame.

An example is sculptor Walter Midener whose work is being shown in the Virginia McCune Art Center.

Midener says years ago, his school teacher, trying to divert him from clowning around, told him to go get some clay and model something out of it. And he never stopped modeling, carving, and sculpting.

For most others, art smolders far inside. What does it take to bring it out? Usually people have to be compelled to make their way down to the embers inside themselves. And if this doesn't happen in school, there seems to be little other occasion when one will allow oneself to be compelled.

Fortunately, many people have at least the appreciation for art, cooking along just below the everyday surface of their manner of life.

Maybe they start out by simply liking to look at things, hearing them, enjoying their drama.

Gradually they see why it is they like them. It can be in just the shape of driftwood, the texture of basketry, the planes of a barn and its coterie of sheds that they realize is pleasing.

The sculptor Alexander Calder discovered mobiles, but Nature invented them: the branch of an apple tree, suspended tantalizingly overhead; the spray of Queen Anne's lace, balanced in the air through interplay of fragile stress are nature's mobiles.

Like Calder, beginning art lovers can also see the aspects of sculpture in nature.

Like the sculptor, too, they can even begin to use what they see. They may start by copying. It multiplies pleasure to see and then reproduce the exact shape of a certain face or a starfish or a gallant horse, especially done in such a way as to emphasize certain qualities.

The next stage is for this emphasis to be so important that what is seen and touched may not all be reproduced. Some things may be omitted. Other things may be stretched or belittled.

The horse may become so sleek, so without physical detail, that he may look like a creature of wind—just what the sculptor saw. But not, perhaps, what others saw, till they saw the sculptor's horse.

Another stage of the art is in treating form directly. Perhaps using a circle of metal as one might use the circle of a lens to pick up a scene. Attach the circle to an irregular curve of axis. Position the two elements on a block of stone.

Is it art? Or would you rather have the more explicit expression—say a carving of a child with tentative gaze, perched on a rock.

There's value in both. The two generally different approaches benefit each other in our experiences of them.

The more people really look at art (or read or hear it) and notice the interplay of shape or other elements, the more those embers of art-understanding will glow. And these people will come to see what is meant when art lovers say, "You don't know what you've been missing."

Volunteer displays Christian compassion

Editor:
I met Virginia Daniels, humanitarian, who lives out of East Jordan, at the East Jordan Senior Citizen Center on August 23, 1982.

I was a volunteer transporter for Charlevoix County Social Services for elderly and handicapped patients needing a ride to the doctor and for foster home residents attending monthly recreation programs where I assisted with other volunteers.

What I found most remarkable about the kind of Christian compassion that Virginia Daniels was projecting was that she did not ask for money. How strange in these times when you cannot turn the dial on your TV without an organized mendicant holding out his or her hand into your living room, while other professionals lie in wait in your mail box!

Instead of doing her fellow man or woman, she does for them and for no pay. If you don't believe this just ask Doug McCombs at Charlevoix County Social Services. He will vouch for her.

Since April 1977 Virginia has worked as a volunteer (no pay) in the following capacities: Assists workers in the Charlevoix County Social Services' Office with clerical duties, assists people with their very long complicated applications in the office or in the home, transports state wards (youth Social Services is responsible for by court order) to foster homes, counseling, home visits, etc., transports elderly and handicapped patients to the doctor, assists with monthly recreation programs for adult foster home residents, schedules health screening appointments for children, updates the community resource directory, and makes monthly phone calls to people who require household help to be able to remain in their homes, and checks with them as to the adequacy of the home help for their particular condition.

For this year Virginia's volunteer time has totaled 640 hours (7 months).

Last year her time totaled almost 1000 hours. Her total volunteer time since April 1977 is 3,962 hours. She has traveled 8,793 miles for the seven months of this year. What is her paycheck? Nineteen cents per mile with an occasional lunch thrown in.

This is the story that never makes the headlines when the state is busy with Social Services surgery, or when the local, national or world-wide charity programs are being sponsored.

No, the state does not furnish Virginia a car. Virginia's husband and Virginia furnish the car, the payments, the insurance, the repairs and upkeep. Look around and find someone else who is willing to do that much for the "least of these" that our Lord mentioned, and for that kind of money.

What I can't understand is why Virginia Daniels and comparable volunteers have not been thanked personally and given recognition by our governor and our president as long as they are walking the floor nights looking for a solution to our economy. Our Democratic heads are no greater than the individual parts that constitute it.

Personally, I am more than honored to meet so great a humanitarian in the person of Virginia Daniels. I wonder if our churches know about her.

Nancy and Paul Tomlinson of Saratoga, Iowa, became parents to their first child, a son, Christopher Russell, on September 14. He weighed 9 pounds, 9 ounces, at birth.

Poaching hurts everyone

Editor,
Poaching has become so widespread it's done every day of the year. Somebody, somewhere, today or tonight will poach a fish, game animal or bird, and we'll all have lost a very valuable resource.

Invariably a friend, neighbor or relative will see the act or hear about it, then do nothing. I've learned that fish and game violators usually are known to the witness, but the onlookers seldom become involved, even anonymously, in a messy situation.

It is important for sportsmen and citizens alike to realize that poaching is not just a crime against wildlife, but also a crime against every person in the state. The only way we'll ever be able to curtail this problem is through citizen involvement. We need to realize that poachers must be apprehended, and that only can be accomplished when you become involved, and your actions against poachers can turn the tide in curbing the barbaric practice of poaching.

What can be done when a poacher is violating fish and game laws? Observe and remember who, what, when, where, why and sometimes how about the violation and the person(s) involved. Don't trust descriptions to memory. Write it down.

A few things to look for include a visual description of the violator. Note his approximate size, color of hair and eyes, color of clothing including hat, and look for a gun or bow during hunting violations. Back-tag license numbers are helpful and are easily seen.

If a car or truck is used, determine the vehicle make, color and year; the license plate number and state; and direction of travel. Note the violator's activity, but don't try to be a hero. Relay the information to your local conservation officer or call the DNR hotline at 1-800-292-7800 day or night. Conservation officers in Emmet, Charlevoix and Antrim Counties are as follows: Emmet County — Edgar Hall 347-7514 or John Rigg 436-5295; Charlevoix County — Sgt. James Genc 582-2134 or Thomas Sweet 582-6878; Antrim County — John Crane 377-7590.

Poaching is big business, and it costs state taxpayers millions of dollars every year. Budget cuts and departmental layoffs have robbed the law enforcement division of 17 conservation officers in recent months, and that loss affects the way the poaching war is fought.

Poachers escape with their crimes because citizens fail to act promptly. If you would like to help resolve this problem, now is the time to act.

Fish and wildlife need your involvement—whether you fish and hunt or not—if you prefer viewing wildlife or just want to know it's there for your children to enjoy.

Mickey Hamerski, Kaaren Bennett and Marietta Walden, representing East Jordan Public Library, accept a check for $500 from Gene Plite from the Bowling Proprietors of Michigan Charities Tournament. The check will pay for a new video disc player which will play full-length movies on the television screen. Also receiving a donation was the elementary school learning center. Fourth grader Dave Prevo and his brother Floyd accepted the check for $300 in a ceremony at the library.

Gifts help East Jordan library provide services

On his way back to his winter home in Kentucky, a summer resident dropped by the East Jordan library to leave a $20 check as a gift of appreciation.

Some other grateful patrons, who live in the area, donated a television set to the library.

And just this past week, Gene Plite of Gemini Lanes brought over a check of $500 from participants in the Bowling Proprietors of Michigan Charities Tournament. It is for the purchase of a video disc player.

The library's staff and its reading public are delighted with this kind of attention, according to librarian Mickey Hamerski.

The library itself is sponsoring a used book sale and tag day on Friday, Oct. 15, to collect money for ceiling insulation and roof repair, Hamerski said.

The two events will go on from 9 a.m. to 4 p.m., with the book sale taking place outdoors in front of the library.

Donations of used or new books, paperbacks, or magazines can be brought in from now till sale day, she said.

And speaking of magazines, Hamerski said, there's one man who reads his magazine right after it comes in the mail and donates it that afternoon to the library.

The library reserves the right to dispose of the books given for the sale, she said. Some of the books in previous sales have gone onto the library shelves, replacing library books in a more used condition.

The paperback section of the library has grown, she said, because of considerable public interest in recirculating the books.

On Thursday, Oct. 21, the library will be closed for the annual meeting of the Northland Library Co-operative, which is located in Alpena.

The Northland Library is pressing to have all books catalogued by its 17 member libraries in order to provide an inter library exchange service for readers in the different communities.

This would vastly augment the number and variety of books available to East Jordan readers, Hamerski said. They would be able to obtain books through the service from any of the member libraries.

Ann Hite is trustee from East Jordan. She is an advisory member of the East Jordan Public Library board.

Board members are Kaaren Bennett, Elaine Savory, Sue Wodzinski, Martha Annear and Dave Pray. Other advisory members are Doris Hucke and Brice Vance.

The library staff, headed by Hamerski, includes assistant Marietta Walden and children's librarian Barbara Alger.

On Monday, Oct. 11, a school holiday, the library will show the 2 1/2-hour film "Mary Poppins" at 1 p.m., using the new video player.

The library has a small collection of full-length films for children and for adults—part of the gift to the library.

One—"On Golden Pond"—was shown just last week. Hamerski said, "If a group of 10 or 20 wants to have a showing, we will show it to them, preferably after hours."

26 earn Lee scholarships

Twenty six Boyne City High graduates have been selected as recipients of scholarships from the Henry Lee and Elizabeth C. Lee Foundation.

The foundation was set up about five years ago, school superintendent Rich Kelly said, with a quarter-million dollars bequeathed for that purpose in the estate of Mrs. Lee.

This group of scholarships totals $7,644.38. Another set of scholarship recipients will be selected in the second semester, Kelly said.

Under the terms of the bequest, the minister of the Presbyterian church, the school superintendent and the manager of the Northwestern State Bank comprise the board of directors which selects the scholarship winners.

Scholarship recipients are: Patrick Anzell, Michael Bieganowski, Rick Boyer, Mark Bullock, Melissa Casper, Alec Cosier, Mike Crawford, Julie Dunlop, Lisa Franchino, Doreen Janack, Kerry Kruzel, Kenneth Kruzel, Misuk LaCroix, Grace Moose, Todd

Newville, Joy Pettis, Marilyn Seelye, Susan Stolt, Sheri Sutliff, Leona Thayer, Russell Tison, Sarah Underhill, Judy Upton, Gregg Upton, Mark Zinck and Jean Stolt.

Kelly said selection is based on academic standing, character and other factors.

Field testing is key to starting Advance Tackle Company

"It scares you that this could be a howling success," said Chuck Hawley as he added a piece of prism tape to a "Stinger" lure he and Terry Weber manufacture at the Advance Tackle Company.

The lure, a spoon-shaped piece of stainless steel, is the first item in the line for the company and comes in many different colors, because the color helps attract the fish. "Light ones seem to do better during the day, while the darker ones work good at night," said Weber. The lure has had extenous field testing, according to the owners, and has been documented to catch brown trout, bass, catfish, coho, lake trout, pike, rainbows, and, Weber added, he "even caught a smelt on the thing."

"Probably the toughest job we have is field testing," Weber said. "If we could, we'd be out field testing our lures every day, because it's really a tough job." The implied meaning was that both men love to fish and would spend as much time on the boat as they could but both are holding down full-time jobs as well as making the tackle at night.

The lure starts with a spoon-shaped piece of stainless steel that the company has stamped out by Carl Seagraves in East Jordan.

From the bare stamping, it is then cleaned, rinsed and tumbled to deburr the edges, then etched and painted with zinc chromate primer and a special hard finish lacquer. The prism tape is applied on a diagonal, and the hook is put on last.

Finally the completed lures are put on display cards that are sent out to bait stores and fishing centers for sale. During the manufacturing process, the lures are constantly looked over for quality control by both men.

Over 2,000 of the Stingers have been sold by the company that was formed last March and, if expectations are true to form, they will sell over 20,000 by this time next year, according to Hawley.

"We really haven't gone all out and after the business," Weber added. "We prefer to go slow, developing the business side and getting the production organized."

Even with the programmed slow growth of the company, the lure is being sold through dealers in all the Great Lakes states and as far west as Lake Mead, Nevada. They even have salt water dealers in Maryland. Locally, The Sportfisherman and Moore's Hardware are dealers for the lure.

They recommend that people by one of each color because the fish are sometimes fickle, and different colors attract differently. Generally the light colors work for trout, and the darker colors work for salmon, — or, it works the other way around, they both added, laughing. "We decided a long time ago we would not get too serious about this business, but have fun while we're doing it. But, the bait is so good - we're serious now and we're still having fun," Weber added.

And to think that "when we started," Hawley said, "we thought it would be something to keep us busy during the wintertime."

In Service

Navy Boatswain's Mate Seaman Kimberly A. Helland, daughter of Nancy J. Helland of East Jordan, has been selected for the Navy's inter-service softball team.

After attending the five-week All-Navy Women's Softball Training Camp in Memphis, Tenn. Helland and her teammates will compete against other interservice champions from the Air Force, Army and Marine Corps.

Prior to her selection, she served aboard the destroyer tender USS Yellowstone.

Genealogy society to meet

The ACE Genealogy Society will meet Thursday, Oct. 7, at 7 p.m. in the Boyne City Public Library.

Chuck Hawley, left, and Terry Weber load up their boat so they can head out on a "field test" of their lures. "If we could, we'd be out field testing lures every day," Weber says.

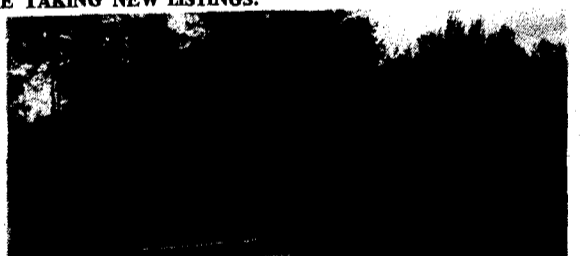

Chuck Hawley works on a "Stinger" lure that he and Terry Weber are manufacturing. Sales of the lures have gone well beyond the pair's expectations. More than 2,000 have been sold since March.

East Jordan beats Bellaire for first victory

Boyne City golfers win

BY MICHELLE BOS
A strong, rushing game gave the Red Devils an early lead. A strong defensive effort didn't allow the visitors to score until the fourth period.
East Jordan's Mike Graham led the Devils with 118 yards in eight carries, and Barry Murnich contributed 103 yards in 23 attempts.

Sophomore fullback Gary Coolman added 58 yards.
The defensive unit was led by Bob Sherman and Jim Roberts, who had 13 and 10 tackles, respectively.

The first period ended in a scoreless tie. In the second quarter Murnich scored on a three-yard run, Dan Nachazel passed to Bob Sherman for the P.A.T.

Later in the same quarter, Murnich again scored, this time on a run of 22 yards. The conversion attempt failed. The half ended with EJ leading 14-0.

On the first play of the third quarter, Graham stormed 65 yards for a TD. Brad Mayhew kicked the P.A.T.
In the fourth quarter Bellaire scored on a short run which had been set up by a long pass-play, and passed successfully for a two-point conversion. This made the score 21-8.
The scoring for the evening was completed when junior quarterback Joe Buick passed 18 yards to the Red Devil's Todd Chanda. Mayhew again kicked successfully.

This Friday the Devils will play at Pellston.
Pellston athletic director Dave Purcival said all scheduled games—including Wednesday's junior varsity contest—will be played. Voters rejected sports millage last week but the sports boosters organization has said it will raise funds to keep the program going.

East Jordan's sports program is also partially funded by a boosters organization. The boosters funded the entire program for two years.

Boyne City's golf team beat St. Ignace 186-207 on Monday.
Joe Schlink was the medalist, shooting a 43. Jamie Lindsay shot a 46 for the victors, while Mike Anderson carded a 47 and Chris Kuhn shot a 50.
The match was played at Ne Nyne Olde Holles golf club.

St. Ignace runs past Boyne City

BY PAUL ZINCK
The Boyne City Ramblers were defeated 38-8 by the St. Ignace Saints on Friday.
Rain fell throughout the game, making the playing field very set and slippery.
Boyne City kicked off to St. Ignace to start the game and the Saints marched 64 yards in 2:26 to open the scoring.
Matt Oja ran seven yards for the touchdown. The Saints failed to make the two-point conversion. Marc Mentel returned the ensuing kickoff 22 yards to the Ramblers' 29 yard line. Brad Musser then completed passes of 12 and 15 yards to Kevin Fitzpatrick and a 20-yard pass to Tom Moody.

The 51 yard drive went for naught, however, as the Ramblers fumbled the ball away on the St.

Ignace 19 yard line.
St. Ignace running back Russell Franz scored the next touchdown on a 2-yard run. The touchdown, which scored with 9:04 left in the half, capped off a 44 yard drive.
Franz also ran the two-point conversion which made the score 14-0.
Before the first half ended St. Ignace scored once again on a 4-yard touchdown run by Oja with 4:48 left.

Quarterback Richard Frazier then threw to Brian Cahill for the conversion to make the score 22-0.
Boyne came out of half-time fired-up and scored on its first possession.
Musser threw passes of 17 and 11 yards to Fitzpatrick and a 15-yard pass to Moody before scoring on a 2-yard quarterback sneak.
The conversion attempt was good, and Boyne finally was on the scoreboard, trailing 22-8.

St. Ignace scored the last two touchdowns, the first coming on a one-yard run by Frazier. The score came with 3:16 left to go in the third quarter. Matt Oja set up the touchdown with a 47-yard run.
The Saints wrapped up the scoring on a touchdown run by Cahill. The extra point made it 38-8 in favor of the Saints with 6:53 left to play.

EJ, Bellaire JV's tie

East Jordan and Bellaire junior varsities tied 0-0 last Wednesday.
The Red Devils had a touchdown nullified by a penalty in the defensive battle.
The Red Devils' defense blocked a pair of Bellaire punts, had several quarterback sacks and other defensive gems.

Tom Ashton has eight tackles and three assists, while Dave Russell had made six tackles and had two assists. Scott Hart, Aaron Spence and Ashton each sacked the Bellaire signal-caller, while Hart blocked a punt. R. C. Smith recovered a fumble and Mark Snowden intercepted a pass.

Poor foul shooting trips up EJ girls

BY MICHELLE BOS
East Jordan was unable to overcome poor free throw shooting and lost to host Inland Lakes Thursday night 51-48.
Despite leading 7-6 in the first quarter, and 23-21 at half-time, East Jordan was unable to pull away from a determined Inland Lakes team.

Shooting only 10 for 29 from the free-throw line, East Jordan had fallen behind 39-34 by the end of the third quarter.
The Red Devils were led by Joelyn Ingalls' 17 points. DeEtte Looze had 12 points and 16 rebounds while Anne Crawford contributed 14 rebounds and three points.

Kim Etter aided the balanced scoring attack with 10 points.

Coach Mike Bos said after the game, "This is the second game we've lost because of poor free-throw shooting. The ball just wouldn't drop."

East Jordan junior varsity was overwhelmed by an aggressive Inland Lakes team 58-26.

Boyne JV beaten by St. Ignace

The Boyne City junior varsity dropped a 50-6 football decision to St. Ignace last week.

Coach Dave Bricker said the Ramblers "held in there and stopped them until they found our weak spots," which St. Ignace then repeatedly used to its advantage.

Boyne's lone touchdown came on a 65-yard pass play from quarterback Chris Howard to Mike Gabos in the second quarter.

The Ramblers were down 28-6 at half-time.
Bricker credited Howard and Ramie Leist with strong defensive efforts. Howard plays strong safety and Leist is a line-backer.

The Ramblers had a tough time getting their offense going, Bricker said. "St. Ignace has a tough bunch of kids."
Thursday's game at Charlevoix will be played at 4 p.m. The time of that game has been changed since the schedule came out.

BC defeated by Petoskey

Boyne City kept up with Petoskey for three quarters before being defeated 61-42 in girls' basketball.

Big Rock Point Nuclear Plant
"A good friend and neighbor"
Since the years when Indians inhabited the wilds of northern Michigan the Big Rock—they called it Kitchi-ossining—has been an important landmark.
Then, it was the gathering place for spring and fall meetings of Chippewa Indians from all over northern Michigan. Several hundred years later, near the rock—Kitchi-ossining is still there—sits the electric generating plant that pioneered Michigan's nuclear era.
Big Rock Point Nuclear Plant, owned and operated by Consumers Power Company, is celebrating its 20th anniversary this month.
Built on the threshold of a new technology, Big Rock Point was Michigan's first, and the nation's fifth, commercial nuclear power plant. Construction started in 1960, and finished 2½ years later at a cost of nearly $27 million—a bargain by today's standards for any type of generating plant.
In the 20 years that have followed, scientists have watched the nuclear plant with interest. So, too, have the local residents in nearby Charlevoix and Petoskey, many of whom call it a "good friend and neighbor." The plant generates enough electricity to serve 100,000 people annually.
"We like Big Rock," says Josh Barnes, president of Lexalite Corporation, which is located 1,200 yards from the nuclear plant. "If Big Rock were not to operate, we would not be competitive in our marketplace."
The plant has become valuable to local residents in other ways, too. It provides a big boost to the local economy—at least $5 million in 1981 alone through things like payroll, purchases, taxes and lodging. The plant employs about 160 people; many of them are involved in area religious, civic and governmental activities.

The plant also has been important scientifically. As only the nation's fifth commercial nuclear plant, its operations have been studied closely. In fact, Consumers Power, General Electric and the former Atomic Energy Commission conducted a research and development program at the plant. The successful program was designed to achieve increased fuel economy and greater electric generating capacity from nuclear power.
In 1977, the nuclear plant set a world record for boiling water reactors by operating 343 consecutive days. Last year, the plant fell five days short of breaking its own record. It generated electricity 91 percent of the time in 1981.
Although 20 years old, Big Rock Point is only halfway through its design lifetime.

Fund-raising drive aids 4-H program here in county

A special fund-raising campaign aimed at generating support to underwrite the costs of local and statewide 4-H livestock project opportunities will begin Oct. 1, says Leah Green, of the Charlevoix County 4-H staff.

The campaign will be conducted in cooperation with the Michigan Pork Producers Association, the Michigan 4-H Foundation and 13 Michigan livestock auctions and daily hog markets including those at Clare and St. Johns.

"Though the 4-H program receives appropriations from county, state and federal levels, budget cutbacks make it difficult to continue to teach and train 4-H members to assume leadership roles in livestock-related industries," Green explains.

"Our young people are one of our most important resources, and we want to insure that they will continue to have the opportunity to develop the skills and interests necessary to prepare them for careers in the livestock industry."

According to Green, the idea behind the fund-raising project is a simple one. Area pork producers are encouraged to donate the value of a market hog, cull sow or boar during October to the fund-raising project.

Producers can donate as many animals as they wish. Participating marketing agencies will help promote the project and forward producer's donations to the Michigan 4-H Foundation.

Fifty percent of the gifts made by local producers will go to the Charlevoix County 4-H program to bolster local livestock projects and activities.

The remaining 50 percent will be used to support statewide 4-H livestock programs and activities including Kettunen Center 4-H livestock leadership training workshops, 1983 4-H Livestock Expo swine scholarships, regional 4-H animal science workshops and grants to county 4-H programs to develop innovative 4-H livestock education programs.

Donors will be recognized locally and as Michigan 4-H Foundation supporters. Since the foundation is a non-profit, charitable organization, donors are eligible for federal tax deductions and Michigan income tax credits.

For more information about the 4-H Pork Producers Fund-Raising Project, contact Green at the Charlevoix County Cooperative Extension Service office.
