City's Water Street renovation, but city manager Tim Clifton said, "We can safely say the entire project will be completed by next Friday's deadline (Oct. 31)."

Clifton reported to the commission that the decision of Lexalite International Corporation of Charlevoix on where it will locate its new branch, will be held off till next spring. The city has discussed the possibility of their building on a site in the new industrial park next to the airport.

Clifton said Lexalite has also received an invitation to come to Sault Ste. Marie, which offered them land for one

Boyne buys new fire truck for $81,517

After a lot of debate as to the merits of buying locally, the Boyne City commission on October 12 finally decided to go with the low bids and purchased a new fire engine for the community.

the purchase of a chassis, and the other for the purchase of the body and

The low bidder for the chassis was Fochtman Chevrolet-Buick in Charlevoix who bid $19,432, including delivery to the body equipment builder in Indiana. Others bidding on the chassis were Mather's Ford in Boyne City, and Fletch's in Petoskey.

Taking the low bid for the body and apparatus was the FMC Company of Indiana. Their bid was $62,085 including delivery back to Boyne City because of a mistake in not noting that in their bid. One other bid was received from the Emergency One Inc. company in Florida. They bid $63,784 for the body and apparatus. The new fire truck will replace a low volume pumper tanker that according to Butch Erber, will have a hard time passing the tests required to keep the city and the surrounding area at the present level for insurance rates. The pumper tanker truck was purchased new in 1967 and holds a 1,000 gallon water tank and a 350 gallon per minute

The new truck will have a 1,000 gallon per minute pump with a 1,250 gallon water tank. It will also have 1,000 feet of five inch fire hose so that the pump could move the water to places within the townships to one of the other 1,000 gallon per minute truck for dispersement to the fire line.

City commissioners are considering keeping the old truck as a standby unit when they learned that it would only bring about $7,000 tops on the used

The debate was started when commissioner Thelma Behling told the council she thought the chassis should be purchased locally as Mathers lives in the city and pays taxes for his operations here in town as well as on his home. Marty Paul, another city commissioner, told the council that they should consider all the taxpayers in the city, and not just one taxpayer. He suggested that the commission go for Fire chief and spokesman for the fire department Butch Erber told the commission that even though the Fochtman bid was the lowest, the fire department had built the specifications on a Chevrolet as all of the other trucks in the department were Chevrolets and he thought that there may be some problems with the hills that surround Boyne City. He said his department was happy with the Chevrolets and their ability to negotiate the hills and curves. He did not know if the Ford would be able to do the same.

This brought Mather's representative Roy Bruneel to the floor saying that it depended on how the truck was geared, and that some of the equipment like the transmission and the axles were the same in the Ford and the Chevrolet.

After the meeting, Bruneel said he was all through bidding on cars and trucks for the city, as he had put too much time in just preparing the bid. "I was trying to meet the specifications that were designed for a Chevrolet, with Chevrolet option numbers, finding comparable line for line items with the Ford just cost the city more. Needless to say. I am not too happy with losing the bid. Mather's Ford would have made only about $25 on the deal, but we thought that since we were local, we may have a chance." Bruneel added.

At this time, it is not known when the new truck will be delivered and put into service. According to Tim Clifton, the city manager, there are still lots of details to be completed. One of the big ones is how to finance the new truck. The city had budgeted only $10,000, and the down payment would be $12,300.

By Tuesday, Oct. 19, the city had checked the interest rates at local lending institutions. The city commission approved borrowing from First National Bank in Boyne City for five years (city charter limit) at 7.75 percent to pay for the fire truck.

The principle of $82,000 will cost the city $19,000 in interest, making a total of $101,000.

Clifton said the figures have to be adjusted to allow for a down payment of $16,400. Money will come from the city budget's contingency fund, because the original budget figure for the year for a new fire truck was in preparation for paving on Wednesday. The project is expected to be completed for a day before the street will be open for traffic.

The final grading took place Monday on the Water Street block under construction by the end of next week. After the paving is finished, the asphalt will have to cool

EJ hires aides to help additional class load

Large kindergarten classes in East Jordan have made it necessary for the school to hire aides. This was one of the concerns brought up at the school board meeting October 13.

Superintendent Tom Rossler said aides were preferable to taking children from present classes to make up an additional class. The aides are Mary Brennan and Sherry Gaunt.

He said another overload exists in the special education class. Vocational money and funds from Char-Em will Rossler said he had asked Char-Em for a review of the whole program of special services.

Boyne Falls adds novel ideas to education

Boyne Falls School has been up to some novel ideas lately. First, it was using the county transit to haul students to school.

"Mornings only," said principal Joel Donaldson. Afternoons the regular busload is lightened because of students staying for extra-curricular activities and can carry the 10 to 13 students, who ride in on the transit bus. It takes less than one-half hour to make the run, according to Donaldson. And it will cost extra, but the figures aren't ready yet, he said. The bussing change concerns only those out by LaLone Road, he said, adding that it was felt necessary because the regular bus was "more crowded than we were comfortable

The other novel idea was the brainchild of Winona Howard, head cook, Celebrating National School Lunch Week on Wednesday, Oct. 13, Howard, with the help of assistant Marge Kauffman and Lily Donaldson, prepared an oriental lunch for the students.

"What a fantastic day!" the principal commented.

Dressed in Japanese kimonas, with fans on their heads and eyes made up to look slanted, the three served chop suey and kerivaki chicken to the students.

The cafeteria, too, was dressed up. Donaldson said, with oriental posters and dragons on the walls.

"It went over big," said Donaldson. "The kids really appreciated all the work they went to.'

Donaldson noted two other events: about 100 students attended the Dayton Ballet presentation in East Jordan this week, and on Friday, Oct. 22, 50

Big Sister, big heart for volunteering give Cheryl Sothard big smiles

Honored recently as Big Sister of the Year, Cheryl Sothard of East Jordan reminisced about the seven years she has been in the role. "It's such a different relationship," she said. "You can be objective."

It requires being able to listen, Sothard continued. Not as an advisor, but more as a friend. Talking about their troubles to someone helps little sisters (and brothers) sort out their own values, she said.

"No way would I tell her what to do. It's her life, her values," she said speaking of her own "little sister." So many of the children listed as needing Big Brothers or Big Sisters don't seem have a very good opinion of themselves, Sothard said, and she explained that part of the role of sisterhood is to give the youngster a feeling of worth.

"And my 'little sister' has been a good friend to me," Sothard said. "I never had a little sister." The two, Sothard and her little sister, began their experience when the latter was a little girl. Now she is in high school. "I was asked at the beginning to make a commitment for at least a month," Sothard said. "When we were first together. I saw her maybe two or three times a month." Now they see each other about once a month, but little sister phones occasionally between

At the time of this interview, Sothard was a little rushed because she and her little sister were going to camp out overnight.

Later she was able to talk about her other activities. Before she and her husband Tom had their young son, Sothard spent three years as side in the special education classroom in the East Jordan middle school.

Now, in addition to being a Big Sister, she works two days and every other weekend at a Safe Home, a refuge for battered wives operated by Women's Resource Center (WRC) in Petoskey.

At first she was a volunteer, but this summer there was funding for therapeutic child care—the children of battered wives are frightened and often abused, too, Sothard said. She sees these children on the two days. "Funding is iffy, however," she said.

The weekend task is being night staff at Safe Home. Sothard didn't want to talk about all this to a newspaper reporter. She was persuaded only when told the idea was to show how volunteering can be made part of a person's life, and how much it means in the community when people do volunteer.

What if you don't know you'd be any good at the job you're volunteering for? Sothard answered right back, "Well, I wasn't sure, myself." You go find out, she said, people help you. She said the staff at WRC are very supportive. And they need one or two more people, she added.

Besides "it's been a real-growing experience," Sothard said, speaking now of the child care. She has become interested in the problems of battered wives and of child abuse. She said, "Domestic violence is happening everywhere to all sorts of people. And children who grow up in a violent atmosphere tend to choose violent ways of relating." Thus it passes along to the next generation.

She said she never spanks the children. "Spanking a child may make us feel better, but we're not teaching the children how to handle anger," she said. Not that spanking is necessarily child abuse, but too often it is part of the pattern of beating a child in anger. The line is fine, she said.

Safe Home has been a WRC project for about four years. Sothard said. The number of women who come there to escape mistreatment varies. Sometimes, she said, there are as few as two or three. And the length of time they stay varies also. Various services are available-counseling, and so on. "WRC is a wonderful resource," said Sothard. "People go there for a chat, or for WRC classes. It concerns itself about all of the needs of women. That's the reason behind the Sothard Wherein the Devil and Halloween have a go at it.

Q-What dirty, nasty tricks do you have in mind for Boyne City on Halloween?

A-Which Halloween?

Q-What do you mean, which one? Haloween is on Sunday, only 10 days away.

A-No it ain't. Halloween involves the Devil's horseplay upon your neighbors. Some men of the cloth want this Halloween to be held a day earlier, on Saturday, so the Devil will not disrupt Q-Do you accept everything that is handed down?

A-If it's money handed down by a deceased relative, the answer is whoopee!

Q-Hey, bartender, give me another glass of lemonade. Now, tell me, are you going to take off your mask and scare people on Halloween Saturday rather than Halloween Sunday?

A-Yes. I've worn it for years without hardly any objections at all.

Q-You lie. That face of yours is

A-This lemonade has given me a sudden need to change the subject.

A-Let's go back to Halloween. Q-Ok, then. Tell me again how you went out one Halloween night when you were a kid and tipped over an outhouse. What was it your grandmother said when she crawled out?

A-Maybe we'd better go. I think this lemonade has had enough of us.

Strange as it seems, there is a road through a magical neighborhood not far from the every day world of Boyne City. One must be ready to be enchanted for it one is not, the old everydayness will cast its contrary spell and one will not see the magic.

I discovered the enchantment myself one day with a wonderful jolt.

It was one of those dark green and gray rainy days, and I was equally dark gray and rainy when suddenly the road curved to reveal five snow white question marks. Only they weren't punctuation after all—it was just my long day at news writing that made them appear so.

They were really the long necks of five geese, standing in overlapping array, white statues by the dark green woods.

They fixed on me the gaze of five unblinking eyes and I was falling under their spell when I was saved by a white rabbit, no less. He came hopping casually by as though he were perfectly commonplace.

I finally wrenched myself away from these bewitching creatures that roamed around in the rain, only to discover farther up the hill a tiny house with steeply climbing roof and wall painted in storybook colors.

Past it ran a blue brook-yes, blue-with real water that curved and wandered as it flowed down the hill. And all along the brook little Munchkinlike figures stood, immobilized by the presence, no doubt, of a so-called real person.

Now I go home each day up enchantment hill. Bravely ready for any further unusual occurrences. I've found trees that are polka-dotted, for one thing. (These are really truly trees, actually.) But they don't turn yellow all at once. Only here a leaf and there a

I know there is magic elsewhere, as well. Like when one sees the lake disappear on a summer evening, leaving only a cup of pale green light.

It may sound crazy—all this. But it's not my fault, after all. I come up enchantment hill every week now. I am perhaps under a spell

Remembrances

If you were standing on top of the old clock tower, looking south along Park Street, this is the view you would have had in the year 1900 or so. Today, the Co-op is on the site that was occupied by the City Livery and Feed Barn. In the middle of the picture is the school. The middle school now sits on that site. And the church is the old Latter Day Saints church. Services are still held, but not in this building. The empty church is still available. If you have any old pictures of Boyne or of East Jordan, we would be happy to let you share them with our readers, just bring them in, let us copy them and you'll get them back.

I was having coffee the other day with a good friend of mine when the subject of scandalmongering came up along with the people who busy themselves at it. He said he was having a problem with some of the people in that nefarious profession. I won't go into specifics, but he remarked that he was never consulted when the selection of his enemies was made but he could damn sure choose his friends.

He reflected for a moment and added that as careful as he had been, he had still made some bad choices and that a false friend was much more treacherous than a real up-front fully declared enemy. "But, even Caesar had that problem," he chuckled.

This got me to thinking about just how vicious this practice really is. Most people do a bit of back fence gossiping from time to time with no great amount of damage being done. Some doctors even consider it to be healthy. But when it becomes an obsession and is practiced not only on the living but on the deceased as well, then these practitioners have just got to be sick. The same doctors seem to think that these "sickies" get their jollies that way. Could be.

There isn't much protection against a professional scandalmonger except ex-posure. We might take a tip from President Reagan and tell them to shut up, but I doubt if that would be helpful.

If you or your readers are wondering what's bugging me now or why I consider this diatribe to be pertinent, the answer is quite simple. As you well know I believe in speaking out and by doing so on this issue, it just might cause some of them to expose themselves for what they really are and, hopefully, retire from the profession, so

That would not only make my friend happy, but scores of others too, who have no means of retaliation.

Five farms honored for being 100 years old in the same family Five centennial farms were renresented at the East Jordan Portside Art and Historical Society's last meeting of the year, Oct. 14. The speakers gave personal histories of the farms before a gathering of society members and visitors in the museum at Elm Pointe.

I Surrounded by examples of early 19th century furniture-some of it made by the pioneers they spoke of-Ralph Losifek, Archie Murphy, Jean Korthase, Margarite Rogers Stokes, and Wilma Zoulak, who read Estella Looze's History in her absence, made up the made 2000 years ago. program.

Josifek brought actual documents concerning the homesteading of his farm at the corner of M-32 and Bergman Road, southeast of East Jordan. The log cabin built by his grandfather in 1870 is still standing, as is the more recent frame farmhouse in which Ralph Josifek himself was born.

Josifek's, like all the centennial farms, qualifies for distinction by being farmed by the same family for 100 years. The award program originates with Consumers Power Company.

Josifek said the community of farms in the area now called the Bohemian Settlement was once named Praga. Most of the settlers, like his grandfather, came from what is now known as Gzechoslavakia in Europe.

In those days, Josifek said, it was a two-day walk to get to Traverse City. And walking is how you got there.

Stokes said her grandfather also took the two-day hike to Traverse. He went there in order to vote.

Stokes, whose centennial farm is on Rogers Road between M-66 and the Jordan River, said her great grandfather. Benjamin Rogers, came from Canada to homestead in the 1860s but it was her grandfather, Samuel Rogers, to whom the land was certified in 1876.

In those days they cut the trees down and planted around the stumps, she said. There was no lumbering then.

The crop they planted was turnips. They fed both humans and farm azimals," she said, "and stored well through the winter."

The first house was built where her kitchen now is. Stokes recollected some

"My grandfather never owned a she said, adding that her grandmother wished he had. She would love used it the day the bear showed up rift far from the baby out in the yard. Grandmother dashed out and snatched up the child.

Another time grandmother was out in the field when the cows began to run-a sign a bear was near. Grandmother grabbed a cow's tail to help her run faster as they all rushed for home.

Stokes said a low place in the back 40 where the lake was thought to have come long ago was a mine for arrow-

She said her family sent two to the Smithsonian Institute in Washington. D.C. and learned from the institute that one was 1000 years old and the other,

Stokes said, "We kick ourselves for not asking our parents more questions about the old days."

Still she remembers her father's account of going on an all-day wagon trip as a boy to Ellsworth to see the first

"The most eventful day of his young life," he said.

The new invention with all its brass fittings and red plush seats was so fearsome, the horses had to be tied far enough away so that they would not see it and run off.

Archie Murphy, whose farm is high on hills west of M-66, had equally vivid stories to tell. His father, Mike Murphy, filed for homesteading in 1867, after years with logging crews.

The first Murphy came from Canada, eventually reached Pittsburg, then the gateway to the West. Hired to drive a vagon to Illinois, Mike Murphy found he didn't like Illinois clay.

The Michigan farm was the Murphy choice, and 12 children were born there. Archie Murphy said you have to like farming to stay with it 100 years.

The founder of the Looze farm was John Baptist Looze who emigrated from Belgium in 1853. After fighting in the Civil War, he homesteaded 40 acres in Eveline Township. It became his in

In 1900 the second son, William, took over the farm and paid each of the brothers $10 apiece for their shares. Subsequently he added to the acre-

Estella Looze said she was born there, but the old farmhouse burned down in 1945.

The farm belonging to Bill and Jean Korthase is the most recent one awarded the centennial plaque. The award came two weeks ago. Pive generations have farmed the

The original barn, built in 1896, was struck by lightning in 1961 and burned. Jean Korthase recalled meeting her grandmother-in-law, Louise Korthase, daughter of Frederick Korthase. It was about 30 years ago and grandmother was 85, "picking corn right along with everybody else.'

Bill Korthase recollects the ringing of their farm bell, which in the old days was used as a signal for neighborhood emergencies.

"There wasn't as much noise in those days," he said. "You could hear it a long ways, and people flocked over when they heard it."

The Korthases now live on Korthase Road and the land which Bill farms with his son is now 440 acres, grown in 100 yards from the original 80.

Critical 2 point conversion dooms EJ Homecoming game

BY MICHELLE BOS

With 2:28 left in the game, a two point conversion put the Mancelona Ironmen ahead and dashed the hopes of the East Jordan Red Devils winning their own Homecoming game last Friday night.

Before the clock ran out, the Devils made a desperate attempt to score but were foiled by quarterback sacks by the Ironmen, who ended the game with a much to the delight of the Home-16-14 point victory. East Jordan is now 2-2 in the Ski Valley Conference.

The Devils were off to a strong start.

After the half, the third period started with Mancelona scoring on its first possession Don Derrer went the last 11/2 vards through the middle to score. Tom Sias made the two point conversion bringing the score for the game

ter, the Devils recovered a fumble at the coming crowd, but the Ironmen picked up steam and kept rolling. On the initial play of the second quarter, East Jordan scored first, following a 11 play drive down the field. Gary Coolman carried the ball six times helping to move it down to the two yard line so that Dan Nachazel could sneak over for the TD. A two point conversion was added by an off tackle run by Barry Mumich.

For the next few series of downs the ball went back and forth as neither team could mount an offense and make it work so the first half ended with the Devils leading 8-0.

This past week was a tough one for the lady Loggers. Two games and two losses was the outfrome of their striving refforts.

Tuesday at Alba, the Logger girls led all the ter, while the crowd was froaring as the scores grew closer and closer together. During the last few seconds Alba tipped one in, and defeated Boyne Falls by two points. Final score being 8 to 46.

First quarter action osted a 16 to 11 deciion, while halftime endd up 28 to 23, Boyne alls still leading. At the nd of the third quarter, the score was a 36 to 31, and the final score at

For Alba, Janael Chippa had 15 points and Anita Hoogerhyde ended the game with 14 points.

During Thursday night's excitement at the Logger arena, the girls "slam dunked" the first quarter, with a 10-6 lead over the Paradise Rockets.

Unfortunately the luck didn't hold, and the halftime score posted a 21 to 14 lead over Boyne Falls. Third quarter was very dramatic as the Loggers fell back with a score of 35 to 18. As fourth quarter action got underway, the girls started to come back, but there weren't enough minutes in the period. Final score was 38 to 44. A difficult win for Paradise.

High pointer Sharon Franckowiak had 12 and 14 rebounds, as Kim Mikula ended up with eight points. Ronda Grubaugh had 20 rebounds.

Mancelona 24 vard line, and then moved the ball in for their second score. At least four times on the drive, Mumich ran the ball including the final five yards for the touchdown.

A fake kick attempt failed to fool the Ironmen, and Scott Meade's pass was intercepted nullifying the extra points.

A tough defense forced the Ironmen into a punting situation with six minutes left in the game after a seesaw battle of offenses failed to get a drive going.

The Devils started from the Ironmen's 45 and got to their 22 yard line before things went wrong. A personal foul called on the Devils, set them back to the 39 yard line, and an attempt to pass went incomplete.

Mancelona then took over after a fourth down fumble by the East Jordan quarterback Nachazel, on the EJ 49.

Following a 60 yard run by Sun Hines, Don Devver scored from four yards out to tie the score.

Tom Sias then scored the critical two point conversion on an end run, giving the Mancelona eleven two points up on the Blue Devils.

East Jordan advanced the kickoff to their own 43, but the drive lost momentum when an illegal procedure penalty dropped them back to their 36. Barry Mumich picked up five yards on the next play, but Nachazel was dropped back on it and had to be replaced by Joe Buick. On East Jordan's final play of the night, Mancelons sacked Buick, and then ran out the clock.

Mumich was the leading gainer for East Jordan with 92 yards in 17 carries. Coolman had 65 yards in 13 attempts while Mike Graham got 39 yards in 13

Mike Boyer led the defense with 10 tackles, Nachazel had 9, Sherman 7, and Coolman added six.

For Mancelona, Hines was the leading rusher with 83 yards, Sias contributed 54.

Halftime activities included a parade of floats with the theme being cartoons. The senior class float placed first with their float featuring a Pac-Man chomping up a ghost. After the floats came the Homecoming court with Joelyn Ingalls, Scott Meade, Michelle Bos, Dan Nachazel, Karen Stanek, Brad Mayhew, Beth Hriblian, Todd Chanda, DeEtte Looze, Bob Sherman, Cynthia Richards and Mike Ciszewski.
