Wilson Twp. starts overhauling zoning ordinance

Wilson Township's zoning ordinance is being overhauled by the township planning commission. Commissioner Hilbert Hardy said the scrutiny of the ordinance is caused by "changes in the proceedings of the township and in population and environmental changes."

Much of what was agricultural land, he said, is not farmed now as it used to be.

He noted also that with more residents, there is a need to protect water and other natural resources. "It's not merely to restrict people," he said, "but to help them."

The basic concern of the commission at their November 29 meeting was the wise use of agricultural and forest lands.

People don't think northern Michigan is the place for farming, zoning administrator Greg Argetsinger said. But any place needs its agriculture, even if it's not the best in the state, he concluded.

Terry DeBruyn, from the Soil Conservation Service said much the same thing. DeBruyn was there at the request of the planners who want the township's better agricultural areas designated on a map, as a step towards protecting them. "To prevent irreversible use of land," DeBruyn said, referring to putting up shopping malls or other heavy development on prime agricultural land.

In answer to questioning from planner Roy Russell, DeBruyn said loss of agricultural land nationwide through development or through erosion is so severe that every effort should be made to "keep what we can."

Also present by request was Dennis Nezych of the Prime Forest Lands Identification Project, who reviewed the county's areas for forestry. He said 30 percent of the county's hardwoods were being harvested, and pointed out that more could be done, to the economic betterment of the county and individuals.

He noted also that tree harvesting and tree farming can be done in a variety of ways. It isn't impossible to harvest the trees, he said, and still keep the woods in a condition suitable for recreation or wildlife.

Nezych described some of the tax plans already enacted or in the state legislative hoppers, which can help not only owners of large commercial forests, but also private owners of small acreages, to have tax relief.

The chief problem, he said, is "land fractionalization is happening at an alarming rate." Small parcels of 10 acres or less make it uneconomical to harvest trees, he said.

Commission chairman Bob Harmon stressed the necessity of "finding out what was valuable to save." The commission's chore is to be a planning board first and then to perform the zoning chores, he said.

The commission has retained an attorney for questions "on the enforcement of the present ordinance, and also for help with creating a document that will be enforceable in the future," Harmon said.

They have also been reviewing the possible allowance of duplex dwellings in certain situations, the control of landfills and sand and mineral mining, home occupations, and similar questions that relate to recent changes in the township.

The 1972 ordinance was last revised in 1978.

Next meeting date for the commission was not set.

This year's United Way Chairman, Dave Gravelin looks over the shoulder of the funds' treasurer Jean Talboys, as past chairman Jim White looks on approvingly. The drive started Wednesday in the Boyne City area and has a goal of $19,000. Presently, there is about $6,000 in the fund. The fund held their kick-off breakfast Wednesday morning at the Country Star Restaurant. A group of 21 volunteers will be out contacting businesses to reach the goal. The program funds worthy projects in Boyne City like the Boyne City Nurse program, Swim School, Camp Daggett, Big Brothers, Big Sisters, CHIP Counseling Center, Bergmann Center, Charlevoix County Hospice, Girl and Boy Scouts, Salvation Army, Red Cross, Boyne City Nursery School, Northern Michigan Mental Health Center, and Michigan Children's Aid and Family Service.

City contracts plowing

This year for the first time Boyne City has contracted out the airport snowplowing. C.H. Smith of Charlevoix won the low bid at $175 "per storm event." Smith's bill for the season was guaranteed for not more than $3,500, an amount within the limitations already set by the city budget.

According to city manager Tim Clifton, the city, prior to his administration, did the plowing on an overtime basis. Clifton had the airport plowing done only after the streets were cleared, with the result that the airport was rather often snowed in.

Clifton reported that he checked with other cities on methods and costs. He said further that the union agreed the bid was lower than what they could do the job for. So the way was open to contract the job out.

One other bid came in—for $400 per storm.

This contract will be for one year, Clifton said. He added that if it works out, the city would contract for two or three years at a time to allow the contractor to plan ahead.

He said inspections will follow up on the plowing. In normal circumstances the plowing would be done by 10 a.m.

Area Chorus to sing Messiah

The Charlevoix Community Chorus will sing "The Messiah" by George Friedrich Handel on Sunday, Dec. 6 at 7:30 in St. Mary's Catholic Church, Charlevoix. This will be the third year the group will have celebrated the Christmas season by singing the oratorio.

Ellen Addington will conduct the performance which has been in rehearsal by the group this fall on Tuesday nights.

Addington, of Ellsworth, is also music director at the First Presbyterian Church, Charlevoix.

Rehearsal accompanist Elizabeth Humphrey of East Jordan, who will also be playing in the orchestra Sunday, is the Presbyterian Church organist.

She said the chorus is looking for patrons.

A number of the singers come from East Jordan. Soloists, however, will be from downstate. Soprano Fredricka Herrick of Grand Haven, contralto Susan Matthews of Ann Arbor, and tenor Mark Puchala of Traverse City have sung in the previous Messiah performances in Charlevoix. This will be a first for Oral Moses, the bass. Moses is from Ann Arbor.

"Our soloists are excellent," said Humphrey. "They are professionals." She added that the chorus' work measures up to having such soloists.

One of the members of the orchestra will be only 10 years old, Humphrey noted. A student of music teacher Krista Knight, he will be playing first violin in several of the choruses.

Looking past the Christmas program, Humphrey said, "We're hoping to keep going, perhaps with something light." Then, for Good Friday, the chorus will sing "Prophecy," a cantata written by Humphrey and performed for the first time earlier this fall.

On the morning of the Messiah performance, Matthews, Moses, and Fran Tollis will be singing the Bach Cantata, "Unto us a child is born," as part of the service at the Presbyterian Church.

Hobbycraft Sale to be Saturday

This year's Holiday Hobbycraft Sale, sponsored by the Boyne City-East Jordan Community Education program, will be on Saturday, Dec. 4 from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m.

According to director Shelly Martin, the Hobbycraft Sale is not a fundraiser for the education program. The percentage taken on sales by Community Ed. covers only the costs of putting on the show, Martin said.

"The sale is put on as a service to the community," she said. Always successful, the sale is now in its fourth year.

The crafts people, who will be displaying their products at the Boyne City high school gymnasium and cafeteria, are mainly local people, Martin said. "Which is great," she added. Others will be coming from around the state.

For sale will be wooden toys, dough art, quilts, ceramics, baby clothes, molded candy, oil paintings, silk flowers, wreaths, furniture—the list goes on.

The Community Education program itself is supported through a group effort by three schools.

Martin explained, "St. Ignace is the fiscal agent. It is responsible for the whole picture of East Jordan-Boyne City Community Ed."

The fiscal agent pays teacher salaries, three-fourths of the director's salary, some of the cost of the office, all supplies, and advertising.

The total budget is $65,072.

The fall session has focussed on adult education with most of the 109 students studying for their high school diplomas. Of these, 20 students, already high school graduates, are taking the courses for enrichment. And 10 are students at the senior centers.

The average attendance scheduled for a student comes to about 2½ evenings per week, Martin said. Students have particularly enjoyed the course on Michigan history this year, she said. And they always seem to like the Criminal Justice class.

Next semester's course line-up will be in the mail early in January. Martin said, in addition to the high school credit courses, there will be a full line of enrichment classes.

Right now, she said, she is trying to work out much-requested classes in physical education and home economics.

And, she said, "We're trying to work out a curriculum and diagnostic testing so that we can do more about placing a student at the proper level."

EJ students plan projects

The community is important to East Jordan students, according to student council president Cheryl Postma. The high school student council has just completed plans for several projects that relate the school to the community.

One is, having adults from the school district over for lunch. Postma said each month the student council will send out about eight invitations to people, not necessarily parents, and each visitor will be met by two of the student council members who will be hosts, not only for lunch, but also for tours of the building and classroom visits.

The first invitations were held

November 23. Referring to the whole idea, Postma said, "We just wanted them to feel welcome."

Another project will be the Blood Drive in March.

"We're going to invite the community," Postma said. Students will be helping out.

She said this may be the first time a blood drive has been done in the school.

A third project is being planned for January—a talent show. And the talent, Postma said, will be drawn from everywhere—not just from the student body. "Senior citizens have a lot of talent," she noted as a starter. January was chosen by the student council because they felt the month needs a little brightening up.

There is another student council project going on right now. This one, however, is more of an "in house" project. It is the updating of the student handbook's discipline section.

A committee of five students is working with a panel of teachers and with principal Bud Ashton and superintendent Tom Rosler.

Postma said they want to set up definite categories so that "if you do this, this will happen," and students will know what they could be getting into. A point system might be developed, she said.

The winning window for the religious theme in the Christmas Window Contest sponsored by the Charlevoix County Press was the Wickerville Station Window. It featured a manger scene, complete with hay and framed in bamboo curtains that gave it depth. Second place in the religious theme section was the HarborSide Sports window which also had a manger scene.

Wickerville Station was also the winner of the commercial window section of the County Press' Christmas Window contest. According to the judges, the window showed great balance, using items from the store and was very different. Gocha's, where the soft white colors of winter impressed the judges. It seems it is. She's busy already.

Does doing it in homes limit the kinds of service?

"All facets of hair care," Shiotelis answers.

Opinions

Is it time for "future think"?

Is it time for the city to start thinking of the future and what needs to be done for the citizens of the community? We think so, and while the city planners may not want us to know what they are planning for our community, we feel that the people want to be informed so that they can be part of the things that are going to be changed sometime down the road.

We already know that the water supply system for the town of Boyne City is in dire need of total refurbishing, and that the next section of road to be replaced in town is that section of Lake Street from Water to Main, but what else is going to happen?

Is our town going to become a tourist center that a lot of residents want, or is the tourist element going to be constrained and come along after the local citizens are taken care of by the commission?

While we have had good stable growth in the past few years, especially in the business area, what is the city doing to upgrade the streets in the neighborhoods around town? Or since everyone knows that the marina could use more boat slips, has anyone on the council actively tried to get it past the talking point?

These are just some of the things the city commissioners are going to have to contend with in the near future, and hopefully they will be able to do quite a few of them without causing our taxes to skyrocket just to pay for them.

Our City Manager, Tim Clifton, has been rather astute in finding federal monies for the projects done so far, but perhaps it's time for the commissioners to give him some more direction to find more federal monies to do other projects.

We would like to see every street in town paved, with curb and gutter for instance.

And that is liable to come when and if the city can find money to start replacing the water system here in town, street by street.

There is so much that could be done, and with our ever increasing tax base, we would hope that the city can come up with some definite plans that it could present to the public so we could see what is going to happen next.

But the main thing that the commission should do is to provide the leadership and the direction to finding these public monies so that we can do the projects that will keep this fine city growing and becoming a better place to live.

Marshall Sayles

The Boyne River flows merrily through town, bringing thousands of gallons of water each day past home and store; then it empties into the big lake where there are millions of gallons just a stone's throw from everyone's mouth. This over abundance of water has little wiggles in it according to the health department. Those people who live off our tax money and tell us how to live long enough to collect social security, say that river and lake water ain't good for you. It should not be drunk nor drank least you fall sick and stay there.

They talk like that so both the educated and school drop out can understand. Instead of taking a tin cup and going down to the lake for a quick sip, we're supposed to use city water. City water has no little wiggles. It is clear, fresh, clean and will see you through life's dangerous trials until you can collect social security.

The only person who ever died drinking Boyne City water choked to death after receiving the bill. Michigan's brand new governor Jim Blanchard should sign something allowing Boyne citizens to pump drinking water from the lake at little cost. After all, no one knows who is going to die first, us or the social security system.

Baseball, basketball and football players are forever patting a fellow player on the butt whenever he makes an outstanding play.

I've watched a number of girls playing basketball and volleyball on television. Many of them have executed difficult plays, but not one of them ever received a pat on the butt for their good work.

At least I've never seen it happen. Come to think about it, I have never seen a woman patted on the butt for executing any difficult accomplishment. (Having been raised on pancakes and the gospel, I feel that I should not pursue this subject any further.)

Being out of work and having no money can be a boon to some people. Like me, for instance. A while ago I wrote a little something in this column that raised the hackles of a group of men. They were gathered on a street corner one night when I happened along. "Let's hang him to that telephone pole right over there!" one man yelled. A roar of agreement went up. Being a coward, the fear of being hung was worse than the hanging. However, I was saved by the recession. The men reached into their pockets and not one among them could come up with enough money to buy the rope.

I always fix a little snack before going to bed. The other night I decided to have something different. So I took a large slice of rye bread and put it into the toaster; then I got out the peanut butter and maple syrup. When the toast was ready, I spread it with peanut butter, covering that with maple syrup. I took a sharp knife, cutting it into little bits. This was dumped into a glass of two percent white milk. Spooning and eating, I was quite surprised. The mess turned out to be a wonderful taste explosion. I don't think I could have gotten through the night without it.

"Let's go see if we can find the witch hazel."

"Yeah!" He's seven years old. It's "yeah" for action and exploration, always.

I opened the car door where we were to begin our search. It was exactly like when I released bees caught buzzing the inside of my window this past summer. Take them to the door, take the cardboard cover from the glass jar—and—bzzzzzz-z-z, away they would zoom! Just so, directly he was off, down the stony little road and out of sight beyond the cedars. But he would be right back. I gave him just over a minute. Sure enough.

"Hey, come lookit this," he shouted, all agog. It was a rock made in layers as thin as a piece of cardboard. After mutually shared speculations, he was off again.

And back again.

"Come on! I want you to watch." The scene was a 20 foot bank by the roadside. I watched him slide down. His pants didn't look toooo dirty afterwards.

"What is the name of these trees," I asked, after we had admired their gray trunks.

"Pine!"

"No. Pines have"

"Evergreen!" not waiting for what pines have.

"Right. Now what kind of evergreen." After he learned they were cedars, he was gone again. And back. And gone.

Like talking to a yo-yo. It was I who found the witch hazel, it turned out. Probably because it was above his usual eye focus. All smokey with spent blossoms, the bush leaning against a little maple.

We'd missed the yellow flowers, the last flowers to bloom in the North country, but it looked more witch-like than ever, wildly gray in the bleak, dark November woodland.

So I thought we'd go back.

Oh, no. "Look at the hill!" and he was gone again.

Well, it turned out there were a dozen or so more wonders, deer tracks, a river birch tree standing high on its roots, the log it had grown over now rotted away.

And the rusty car body in a field! Look at that!

And finally, we had to break off the cattails to hold them out the car window on the way home, just to see the fluff stream away.

Sometimes when they talk of improving tourism in Michigan, I think they should inquire into putting seven-year-olds on the list of attractions.

Jottings

BY JIM SILBAR

Everybody has dreams, or at least that is what somebody told me once. And I have them too. I sometimes have this recurring dream that some day, Boyne City will grow to be one of the finest towns here in the North. And along with it, will come all the people who will work in the new businesses that the new people are going to want to have.

New clothing shops, new shoe stores, new five and dimes, new drug stores, new grocery stores, new eating places, and of course, new buildings to house all those new businesses and new people.

Now, if I were a tried and true "local", like a lot of folks I have met in my year here, I probably wouldn't like my dream, it would probably be more like a nightmare.

Even Daniel Boone left an area because he needed elbow room.

But, on the horizon, I can see almost all these things happening to us here in the Boyne area. I can see Boyne becoming the center of the fun instead of being the best kept secret.

Others must have something like my dream—just look at all the new businesses that have started or changed hands in town this past year. These new owners must think that Boyne is on the edge of discovery or else they wouldn't have invested their money here.

Look at the developers of the Harborage...or the farsightedness of the developers of the Landings. Why on earth would they want to build up this town if they didn't think that it was going to become the jewel of the northwestern area we call the tip of the mitt.

When I worked in Charlevoix many years ago, you could feel the same thing was going to happen there, and for better or worse, it did. The boat house where I used to watch the "Able Love" move slowly in for mooring is now a condo...The hotel where I used to spend a few hard earned dollars for a beer is now a condo. And the junky gift shop that had all the cheap imitation Indian craftsmanship that was made in Japan, is now an office for real estate. But the town grew like Topsy and now is the town people seem to want to come to, at least in the summer.

But Boyne isn't like that. Our movers and shakers have a little more sense in that they have seen the wrong way for a town to develop and they are suggesting that Boyne City move slowly...but surely, into the mainstream.

Sure, we have a lot more to offer. We can truly say that we are closer to a four season resort area than most. Seeing it as unique, our city fathers will be sure that their town isn't going to be another suburb.

We have a lot of heritage here in Boyne. All we have to do is enjoy, and at the same time, help the future come a little quicker so all those people with a dream won't have a nightmare.

Music boosters thank city

Editor,
The Boyne City Music Boosters recently wrapped up sales for the Boyne City Community Birthday Calendar. The response of the community has helped us to be able to report another successful year. The proceeds from the calendar is used to help support the music programs of the Boyne City Middle and High Schools.

We would like to take this opportunity to give recognition to this year's top salespersons. Prizes of $15, $10 and $5 are given to the students in middle school. The students in the high school who participate in the annual calendar drive are treated to a pizza party.

Prizes were recently awarded to seventh grade students, Bill Gipperich—38 calendars; Julie Lingle—27 calendars; and Micki Bennett—15 calendars. The top salespersons in high school were Rachel DeRoos and Cindy Kenney.

We would like to thank the students of both schools for their time and effort. Taking orders for calendars is a difficult and time consuming job and we have super, hard working, dedicated students. We would also like to thank the parents of our band students, for we could not succeed without their support and encouragement.

Last, but certainly not least, we would like to thank the area businesses for their advertisements and the various organizations for their listings. We also thank Valentine Studios for taking the picture. Without all of you we would not have a calendar.

Thank you all again for your support.

If anyone was missed and would like to purchase a community calendar, please contact one of the officers of the Music Boosters.

Over 700 skiers enjoyed the opening weekend of skiing at Boyne Mountain last Saturday. The Mountain opened up with the Victor and Hemlock runs covered with snow. Our weather didn't help the season too much as Sunday a rain storm helped keep the skiers away, and a warming trend caused some of the snow cover to be lost. But the weather is expected to get cold enough before the weekend so the snowmaking system at the Mountain will offer lots of snow for the arrival of hundreds of ski instructors coming in for their annual workshop. The instructors will be learning the newest ways of teaching as well as getting their own ski legs in shape for the season.

EJ program "a little different"

This year's elementary school Christmas program "will be a little different," according to Margaret Thomson, East Jordan school music teacher.

Scheduled for Monday, Dec. 6 at 7 p.m. in the high school gym, the program will be in the form of a musical, called "The Small One."

Thomson said it is a Mexican folk tale about a boy who must sell his beloved donkey to bring silver coins home to his family. It seems no one will buy his donkey, but at the last it turns out to be just what is needed by a man named Joseph. All grades will be involved, Thomson said. The kindergarten will sing their songs before the play begins. A choir made up of students from grades five through seven will be part of the musical. Accompanying the action will be a soundtrack—another different feature.

"And Mr. Healey will be in it!" Thomson said. Bruce Healey is the fourth grade teacher.

Thomson said the students had already put in considerable effort, practicing. "It's our gift to the community," she said, "because it put music back into the school."

Kids' Crafts Day in Boyne Falls

Pre-school Round-up scheduled

The Pre-school Round-up for Boyne Falls and Boyne City school districts will be at Boyne Falls this year. Any parents with a three-year-old child, who are interested in having their child's skills checked, may come in on Wednesday, Dec. 8. The round-up will be open at 8:30 a.m.

Principal Joel Donaldson said parents can find out through the round-up if there are any weak spots in their child's readiness for school. The early check allows time for correcting difficulties.

The round-up is offered yearly by the Charlevoix-Emmet Intermediate Schools District, and parents desiring more information may call Char-Em at 547-9947.
