

Millage request the same, police budget cut

The millage is not going up and taxes are not going up, Boyne City manager Tim Clifton said, for 90 percent of Boyne City because their State Equalized Valuation did not change.

The 90 percent, which constitutes the residential portion of the city tax base, was individually inspected and assessed this year as part of the county-wide schedule. The county gets around to each taxable unit once every three years.

The rest of the city did see a tax increase, particularly, of course, on new construction.

Clifton noted that about 200 of the 2000 parcels of land in the city did see a tax change.

City employees received a 5 percent wage increase, but not all of this will be a cash benefit. In an effort to stay within the city budget, commissioners agreed to propose a cutback in police work schedules while keeping police salaries the same, thus effecting a 5 percent per-hour increase for them.

The proposal takes two hours off each police department employee's schedule, reducing it from 44 to 42 hours.

With reference to city finances as a whole, Clifton said, "The administration is very aware of economic problems. We haven't increased city staff since I've been here. We're working to streamline, but keep up the services."

In other business the city commission heard Clifton will be requesting the city to authorize a 50-50 federal grant preapplication for the city beach. The proposal will be to pay for extending the two storm sewer pipes into the lake, building a beach house-concession, improving the parking area and the beach surface, and making a picnic area and tot-lot.

Clifton said blueprints and information would be ready the Tuesday, April 12 noon commission meeting.

The total cost could go to $200,000, but the engineering estimates aren't complete yet, Clifton said.

The open railroad car, standing in the vacant land where the railroad used to be, was donated by its former owner

Terry Toomey to the city. Clifton said, however, that the city could not put it to use. Without a roof, it wouldn't convert into a concession stand or historical display, Clifton said. He added that in itself it is not an antique, being constructed about 10 or 15 years ago on an old undercarriage.

Besides, Clifton concluded, the wood is beginning to rot.

The city will, consequently, accept a trade with C.H. Smith, contractor. Smith will remove it in exchange for services to the city.

Work was started last week on the new Front Street that was moved along the waterfront on the south side of town. The cost for the new road will be paid by The Harborage, the developer of condominiums between the road and the waterfront. The road will be two lane and will be on higher ground than the present road.

Teachers, Board accept new contract in East Jordan

A 4 percent raise was the best the board could do, Larry Gee reported, speaking for the East Jordan teachers. "We felt the board was being honest with us," he said, adding, "We would have hoped to have gotten a little bit higher rate."

Gee answered Press questions in the absence of union spokesman Bob Snyder, away on spring break vacation.

Gee said the teachers hope that "things will straighten out by the next year."

The board is working with the school curriculum committee, and the effort points towards possible addition to the staff. Gee said the feeling is that with improved curriculum measures and the possible lightened class loads, the rest of the staff could feel the benefits.

The two-year contract that is retroactive to September 1982 wound up negotiations between the East Jordan teachers' union and the school board. The contract was ratified by the board on March 30 at a special meeting.

It included three major language issues, according to board president Mary Jason, as well as a 4 percent raise for '82-'83 and a 4.75 percent salary increase for '83-'84.

In the first category, Jason said, the teacher evaluation form, used for some years, was changed. Jason said it hadn't been a good working tool, "and there's always been some question about when they should be completed."

The contract also expanded and defined the role of the professional study committee. Jason credited the staff for their curriculum work this year which went on even though they were working without a contract.

The committee will set priorities for school subjects with a view to their relationship from one grade level to the next.

The third improvement was the strengthening of the board's role in making appointment. "We will be able to get the best qualified person for the job in hiring and promotions," Jason said.

The negotiation teams were Snyder, Gee, and Rodger Ransom for the teachers; superintendent Tom Rossler and board members Jason and Bob Sherman for the district.

The 4 percent raise could best be illustrated with examples from the top and the bottom, Jason said. A bachelors degree minimum this year is set at $13,678 (526 increase). Next year the same step would receive $14,328. The maximum this year is now $24,210 (931 more) and $25,361 next year.

For a masters degree, the minimum of $15,046 for this year, will go to $15,761 next year. Maximums are $25,578 and $26,793.

Life insurance went from a $15,000 policy to $20,000. Next year will bring it to $25,000.

"We implemented a provision that if you have 10 years of service at retirement, you will receive $5 for every day of unused sick leave up to 45 days," Jason said. "In '83-'84 it will go up to $10."

"We have very few people who abuse those (sick days)," she said.

The contract also adds a $4,000 severance pay for a teacher, 50 years old, in the top step of the salary schedule, with 10 years in the district. At higher ages, the one-time payment goes down.

"The district saves on early retirement," Jason explained. "It also makes room for newcomers now that in these times there is less turnover."

These rates go up $500 next year.

Jason said, "The board and administrators really appreciated the spirit of cooperation that has gone on. Everybody did their homework and came prepared, and there were good, productive discussions."

Austere budget approved in East Jordan

East Jordan's 1983-'84 budget of $807,410, down from last year's $953,823, was approved March 29 at a special meeting of the council, following a well-attended hearing.

Many of the 51 people that came had been at the first hearing, held March 22, and they again voiced their concerns, one of which was opposition to the proposed sale of Elm Pointe as a means of an accumulating a fund from which future city expenses could be met.

Betty Boswell, Elm Pointe commissioner, pointed out that the Elm Pointe bequest to the city prohibits its being used (sold) for private purposes. She said the commission will hold open meetings to garner ideas on saving the Pointe, the first to be on April 12.

Former councilman Dr. George Shank asked how long the city finances were going to be able to take care of services.

Keith Kenney, presently on council, said, "I think we're going to incur deficit spending next year." He added, "Technically we have been deficit spending for the last four years...We could have a $200,000 deficit next year."

Mayor Bill Merwin met questions on the city's financial circumstances, saying, "We did not realize the financial status of this city until two months ago when we started work on the budget. You can't solve in two months' time what the city has been doing in the last 10 years or so."

Kenney repeated what he had said at the previous hearing regarding the main causes of the predicament: sharp cuts in state revenue sharing, lower interest rates on the city's invested funds, and most of all, the inadequate tax base.

He said the city has grown only by about 100 people in the past 10 years.

Merwin added tax rollback and higher costs to the list.

From a long-term perspective city clerk-treasurer Fern Morris said, "When councils come in here, normally they don't know any more than you do. The typical thing is to promise cutting taxes and increasing services."

To this Shank added, "Everyone gets used to asking for more amenities—things like lights for the baseball field." And resident Larry Spence added, "Everyone is responsible."

A review of some of the city expenses followed. Dennis Jason questioned the cost of police service. The budget asks $141,125, down from last year's $152,712. Jason pointed out that the figure breaks down to about $65 for each person in the city.

Discussing with Jason the possibility of contracting with the sheriff's department, Kenney said they found the cost of having a county officer on patrol would be about the same as salary paid

County set to vote on FSS

It only makes it a possibility, but the April 7 vote on bonding is essential, promoters said, or Charlevoix County would not likely get consideration in the 14-county competition for the flight service station.

The election will be on the proposal to bond the county for $750,000 at probably one-half mill for five years if the Federal Aviation Administration awards the contract to Charlevoix County.

If it does not, the half-mill will not be collected from county residents.

The $750,000 would be to pay for the building that would house the sophisticated technology for collecting and disseminating weather information to private and commercial airline pilots. The federal government would rent the building (possibly for as low as a dollar a year, as an added incentive), and pay for everything else.

This would include the salaries of 50 to 80 people to start with. More staff is projected for later.

The chief value to the community, according to the promoters and others, favoring the station, would be the effect of the salaries paid to the station staff. A projected $1.5 million is theorized. Officials see it as beneficially spent and respend in the area.

Because most of the staff must be professionally qualified, employees would be mainly brought into the county from elsewhere, although there will be some jobs that would be filled locally.

The county Economic Development

Corporation considers the effort to have the station worthwhile, noting that it would be one of the clean, quiet industries the county has been looking for.

"Better it should be in Charlevoix County than in some other county," says EDC member Chuck Sherk.

While the station location is proposed for Charlevoix airport, proponents say spending and housing will be spread through the whole county.

The station will be one of a whole new network, set up state by state to replace smaller, less technically advanced stations. At present there are eight of these in Michigan. They will go out of operation when the new one is ready.

School boards looking for candidates

Candidates for school boards need to get their petitions in by Monday, April 11 for the June 13 election.

Superintendent Rich Kelly at Boyne City recommended that 25 or 30 signatures be obtained so that the required 20 will be assured to be on the registration roles.

Petitions may be obtained at school superintendent offices and returned there at 4 p.m. of the last day.

In Boyne City, one petition has been returned. Dick Wulff is running again. Ray Towne, whose term is also up, hasn't indicated his intentions yet, and is out of town for a few days.

In East Jordan where spring break is on, Ed Drenth has a stack of forms at the bank ready for any petitioner to pick up.

The terms of Bob Sherman and Herb Griffin run out this year.

Boyne Falls has four seats to fill: two for four years and two for three-year terms.

Ruth Matelski is retiring for personal reasons so hers is one of the three. Bill Cousineau's term is up. He was appointed last year to fill a vacancy.

The four-year terms of Don Wilson and Bob Winhusen are also up. The petitions of Wilson and of John Hausler make those two candidates for the next four year terms.

Pat Griffith has returned a petition for a three-year term. Three other petitions are still out, and superintendent Carl Moser pointed out there was still time for the roster of candidates to grow.

East Jordan hears complaint on kids

"I wouldn't want to see some ordinance saying no more than three people should stand on the corner," Bud Barnes said in a recent interview with The Press.

Barnes had spoken up at the March 22 East Jordan city council meeting about the numbers of young people meeting on downtown sidewalks. He noted then that besides hindering shoppers on occasion, some were also drawn into illegal purchases from parked cars.

He said that he realized how difficult it would be to do anything about it.

People have right to the sidewalks, health hazard and agreed to the burn. The fire department used the house to provide some needed "on the job" training for some of the newer men on the department who would have not had the opportunity if the house was not burned. [Additional pictures on Page 5]

Engaged?

The Charlevoix County Press publishes engagement and wedding announcements without charge.

Pictures are welcomed, but we do suggest a few guidelines. Good quality black and white photographs, either of the couple or bride-elect, are preferred. All photographs are kept on file in the Press office and may be picked up at any time following publication; those pictures not picked up after six months will be discarded.

Wedding and engagement announcement forms are available at our office or will be mailed upon request and the receipt of a self-addressed stamped envelope.

While we try to publish each announcement the week that we receive it (and in the case of weddings, the first publication date following the ceremony), space constraints sometimes force us to delay the printing of the announcement for one or two weeks. Therefore, we ask that information be received at least two weeks before the intended publication so that we might better plan for its publication.

We will not accept wedding announcements received more than four weeks after the wedding.

Opinions

The real question is....

If you consider that the County may be able to make back the $750,000 that it may cost them, and if you consider that the figures that the county economic development people put together are real figures, and if you think that the employees that are going to be hired are going to be moving into the county, then, we guess, it would be all right to vote yes in this week's bonding proposal that is before the electors of the county.

The vote, as we understand it, is almost an advisory type of vote. By that, the promoters are saying that if we win the bid for the Federal Aviation Administration's Flight Service Station, we have authorized that the county may send us a bill along with our tax notices to help pay for it.

But if the bid fails, then we will not have to worry about the county selling bonds.

The proposal to build a flight service station on a bid basis came to the county from the Federal Government. They are trying a new way to build government buildings not using government money (otherwise known as your tax dollars), but using local tax monies (otherwise known as your tax dollars).

This is part of the emphasis of the Reagan administration to "cut down the cost of government."

While we applaud the cutting costs of government, we totally disagree with the plan that just transfers governmental costs to another department. It will still come out of the same pocket, though, yours and mine.

But, the proposal that is before us in this election does ask us to okay the spending of money if.

The only problem is the if. And, at this stage it is a big if. There are a lot of counties that are still in the bidding to get the Flight Service Station. Some are downstate, but most of those who wish to have the facility are located in the north.

After a few phone calls to some of the more logical places downstate, we found out that they feel they cannot justify the facility and therefore, have dropped out of the bidding. They are saying that there is no guarantee that the employees will be moving into the town, or that the government will not change its mind as to how long it will commit to keeping the facility. They also wonder if the figures that the facility will produce the benefits that are being banted about are true.

We wonder the same thing. We don't worry about where the facility is located, whether or not it is in Charlevoix or someplace else in the county. We don't worry about the pettiness of intercity rivalry, as some people have mentioned.

We do wonder if the proposed facility is worth it to us as far as costs and return.

If the FAA is closing down eight other facilities, and if Charlevoix County is awarded the bid, then we happen to think that the employees who will be coming here from other locations will not move into the area.

If you were living in Pellston or Traverse City, for instance, you would be more likely to drive the hour or so to go to work than to move the family. In the big city, it sometimes takes an hour just to cross town. And we have a lot of people who live locally who work in those areas as well as some of the other areas that are bidding to get the facility.

That shoots the idea of the projected $1.5 million coming into the area down to about somewhere less than half, we could imagine.

We also happen to think that if the proposed employees are not going to move into the area, than some of the indirect dollar projections will not be accurate, too.

But costs are not the real question.

That question is whether or not you will want to give the county the power to tax you for some years at some rate not to exceed $750,000 if the county is awarded the bid to have the project based in the county.

And that is what you are going to have to decide when you go to the poll Thursday, April 7.

Marshall Sayles

My wife turned the heat up to get the early morning chill out of the living room. The furnace gave a couple of burps, shot some stinky oil fumes into the air and gave up. Apparently the fumes traveled along the ceiling to the open stairway, setting off the smoke alarm.

I jumped out of bed on all two, put my bathrobe on inside out, got my shoes into the wrong feet and stumbled down stairs. That's not the easiest thing to do when you're half asleep.

"Give me a paper or a towel," I said. "If you wave something in front of it, it will stop." She gave me a copy of the Charlevoix County Press rolled up like a club.

"No, no," I said. "Give me the Free Press or the News, one of those flat tires that isn't running my column." She gave me a kitchen towel.

Smoke alarms are never on the wall; they are screwed to the ceiling so you can't reach them. That's why I was jumping up and down waving that towel like I swat flies in the summer-time.

Having suffered through several heart attacks, my wife decided that it would be rather inconvenient if I were to have another at such a busy time. So she brought the climbing stool from the kitchen. I walked right up to that thing on the ceiling and waved the towel back and forth. I swear that it screamed louder than ever.

Finally I jerked it off the ceiling and threw it on the floor, where it laid yelling its head off. "It can't be," I said. "There's nothing making it work." Imagine something in Boyne City working when it isn't supposed to?

"Get it out of here," my wife said. "I can't stand that noise any longer." I picked it up, went to the patio and heaved it as far as I could. It landed in the middle of the lawn, still screaming like a meemie. I'm not a good heaver at eight-thirty in the morning.

Suddenly I'd had enough. Which wasn't too strange. Enough always comes upon me suddenly. So I went in, got the rifle and came out figuring to finish it off with a couple of good shots. "Don't do that!" my wife yelled from the window. "I read in the paper that shooting stuff is out of season right now."

Damn. I went to the woodpile in the backyard and got a stout maple; then I came back and clubbed that smoke alarm around the lawn, demanding that it shut up.

A young man with a white band around his head came jogging down the road. He stopped to watch "What's going on?" he asked.

"I'm trying to kill this damn smoke alarm," I said. "I know that," he said. "I mean how come you've got your bathrobe on inside out and your shoes on the wrong feet?"

I took him by the arm, pointed toward town and told him to git; then I stood looking down at what was left of the smoke alarm. Hand on my dictionary, that thing had screamed for an hour and a half before giving up.

Later, sitting on the sofa having my morning coffee, my wife said, "You know something? We never did check to see if the house is on fire."

I reached under the mat into my bag of rags and yanked one out. Whoosh! And the floor was littered with seeds!

Clearly my mouse had done it again. It had found a new place to store mouse groceries.

But look at this. Where did it find corn? The nearest corn was about 500 feet away, through the snow and past three cats. I looked down the hill at the cornfield, trying to picture the tiny creature, pursuing its purpose all that way. And not just once, but many times, because there were dozens of kernels.

I can't kill a creature with eyes that have looked up what the earth is. I used to catch mice in a Hav-a-heart trap and release them outdoors with a word of admonition.

But there were always more. My son then decided to mark them with paint before releasing them. Sure enough, we began catching little green-dotted mice in the trap.

Great! Just great they seemed to say. Isn't this fun!

So we hiked them to the other side of the field before releasing them.

Yes. Back again.

It took strategy. Figure out where to release them so they wouldn't go into our house or anybody else's.

It got so we often had mice passengers as we drove to town. When we passed to old quarry we'd let them out. I imagine they all got together again to face life anew.

They say that carnivores are smarter than herbivores, because animals that have to hunt other animals for food have to stay sharp, while animals that simply have to stretch their necks to graze don't have to be very smart.

And it always makes you think of people—the grazers and the hunters.

But as in all of life, there are more than just two alternatives. What about the seed/nut collectors.

They're smart, too. Putting it away for the future, working persistently with no fiddle-dee-dee time off. Makes you think of people, again.

I myself wouldn't want to be a wolf-type, obviously. Nor would I choose the life of the grazer, entirely. And in these times, one has to be a supermouse to save profitably and not have it all whoosh away someday.

Wolf, deer, mouse... Say, what about bird? Ahoy there, Jonathan Livingston Seagull.

Jottings

"Hey," I said jokingly to Henry Erber. "It looks to me like you guys on the fire department just saved another basement."

Erber looked back at me and smiled. "At least we saved something for you to write about," he answered.

The event was more than just joking, it was serious business as the fire department had an opportunity to burn down a house here in town. It was serious in that they used the structure for training.

Many of the new members of the department had just "paper" training on how to use some of the equipment. Figuring that this opportunity would give them the training that is necessary, the department agreed to the burn.

Most fire departments do not like to see houses burn down. It is their job to try to save them. But in this case, the fire was necessary, and because of it, a health problem in town was destroyed.

But not until after the department had their "fun" with it.

After working with the new guys on the department down at the fire hall, showing them how a "Scott-Pak" fits on the face, and then taping it up with black tape and making them walk through an obstacle course in the hall, did the older guys on the force let them into the smoke filled rooms of the burning building.

It was an important lesson. When a fire occurs, one of the first things that the department tries to find out is if anybody is still in the building.

To do that, they have to don a Scott-Pak, which allows them to breathe fresh air, while they go through the burning building, looking for people who may not have been able to get out of the building.

Now, the practice was set up with lots of smoke, and the windows were covered over so that light was almost impossible. The new members were directed through the building, under the guidance of a trained member, to see how they would react to the "real thing."

Everyone passed through the building, looking in the rooms for people, and then hit a room that was involved with fire that they had to knock down and put out.

For one, am glad that the Boyne City Fire Department got an opportunity to let the new guys have a trial so that they could see what they are getting into when they reach a building that they don't know anything about. And they may have to search out the building and, hopefully not find, someone still in it.

At the practice, with the building totally involved with fire, and the firemen standing by to make sure the fire did not get out of control, there were some funny moments, like after one of the teams manning the hose wet down the grass around the burning house, they took aim at one of the other teams and made threatening gestures.

I guess they were just trying to start some early practice for the many water ball contests the departments have during the summer.

But, not one got squirted, and the house was down to a pile of ashes before the department left for the firehall and the cleanup.

It is always interesting to watch a fire, see how it builds, and then see how it can destroy.

I went home and told the kids that they better keep their room clean and the bed made so that a chance spontaneous combustion fire would not start in that pile of dirty clothes that they leave around the room.

Ray Valentine, owner of Valentine Studio in Boyne City, has returned from this year's convention of the Professional Photographers of Michigan, which was held at Stouffer's Hotel in Battle Creek, March 19-22. The four day convention featured outstanding programs on Portrait and Wedding photography, as well as programs for Photographers and Receptionists. The speakers were from throughout the country and are nationally and internationally known and recognized.
 A feature of the convention was the photo exhibition. Photographs accepted for the exhibit were judged for technical excellence, composition, posing and lighting, and thus represent the finest in contemporary work of Michigan Photographers, Artists and Retouchers.

 In this exhibition, Ray Valentine had all four of his entries in the general competition accepted for exhibition. A Red Ribbon was awarded to his scenic "Autumn Falls". Yellow Ribbons were awarded to his portrait of 5 year old Erin Vogel, and his scenic "Bittersweet" and "Mountain Mist". These same four photographs were also selected for exhibition a week previously at the Regional Photographic competition in Ohio involving the states of Michigan, Ohio, Indiana, Pennsylvania, West Virginia and Kentucky.

 Ray was also awarded—in Battle Creek—a Red Ribbon for a Wedding Story sequence photographed at Boyne Highlands in October, of the wedding of Christine "Tiki" Moll and Frank Carleton. He was also runner-up in a new competition of Innovative/Experimental photography.
 A highlight of the Awards Banquet was the guest appearance of Robert M. Opfer, President of the Professional Photographers of America.

Charles L. Myers of Boyne Falls has been appointed to the State 4-H Council as the representative of a four county area consisting of Charlevoix, Emmet, Cheboygan, and Presque Isle counties. Myers is shown at the recent Leadership for Michigan 4-H volunteers held at Kellogg Center, MSU, in East Lansing to which he was a delegate. The Charlevoix County 4-H leader is currently president of the local 4-H Council and has served as its vice president. He will begin his three year term on the State 4-H Council in September. Myers' children, Mary and James are currently enrolled in 4-H horse projects. Mary has raised 4-H goats, and James has been in 4-H basketball for two years.

Gardeners hear former florist

On March 23 eighteen members and two guests of the Boyne Valley Garden Club met at Litzinger Burger Place with vice president Winifred Shields presiding.

After the usual business session, the meeting was adjourned.
 Helen Baumgarten introduced John Marriage, former florist and an authority on the flora of Michigan. His subject was: Looking ahead—fall foliage. He came well-prepared having made collections of yarrow, tansy, goldenrod (of which there are many kinds) and other interesting weeds common to our area. The giant reed which he used comes from the upper peninsula while the steeple bush comes from southern Michigan. He had tinted some weeds to use as accents. He made four arrangements, establishing the line with the same weed—a basic principle for flower arrangements—continuing with spikes of varying lengths until he had symmetrical bouquets. Each arrangement was special and entirely different. These were used for drawings for four lucky ladies.

We are indebted to John for sharing his skill and knowledge.
 Hostesses were Stella Kuhs and Dorothy Krause. They served delicious refreshments from an attractively decorated table in keeping with the Easter season.

After all the practice, and the home finally totally in flames, the firemen watched carefully to see that nothing else would catch on fire. Here, one of the men took off his helmet to shield himself from the hot flames as he watches the ground in front of the home.

In the later stages of the fire, the men pushed the walls into the ashes to make sure that the entire structure was burned up. They worked with a push pole behind a protective water shield that another man put up. The shield acts as a heat barrier, allowing the men to get up close to the flames.

POTLUCK SUPPERS

Potluck suppers are traditional. I revel in the memories of those in the past and delight in the present. No matter what church or clubs we belong to there are always those wonderful dinners where friends, good food and love abound. Reminiscing about those of the past I can almost smell the appetizing aroma of meat loaves, scalloped corn and potatoes and other casseroles that are warming in the ovens as we enter the dining room where the long tables are set with white paper tablecloths and colorful paper napkins.

Everyone prepares his or her favorite dishes and I always hope that someone brings a cherry pie, or apple pie would do, though I always have the feeling that I should make a more substantial casserole. This is one time when the children are included and they can choose anything they want and they love it.

Potlucks pose a problem to many who work outside of the home all day; time consuming preparations are not in the picture. All of the following recipes are the kind which either can be put together at the last minute or fixed in the morning or the night before to just pop into the oven to bake, while you are preparing for a family night out.

After reading a recipe for stuffed squash I came upon this idea for a casserole made the easy way using convenience foods. If your family loves squash as mine does they will relish this

SQUASH, POTATO AND SAUSAGE CASSEROLE

To serve 8 you will need:
 2 - 12 oz. pkgs. frozen squash
 8 servings of instant mashed potatoes
 1/2 cup chopped green onions, the regular onions are fine but the green ones give the dish color.
 1/4 cup melted butter or margarine, divided
 1/2 teaspoon nutmeg
 1 - 8 oz. pkg. brown and serve sausage bread crumbs

Thaw the squash. Mix the potatoes according to the directions on the box. Brown the sausages slightly. Mix the potatoes, squash, onions, 1/2 of the melted butter, nutmeg and cut up sausages. Cover with crumbs, pour remaining melted butter over all and bake at 350 degrees about 30 minutes until heated through, and crumbs are brown. For the bread crumbs I used some from cornbread, they were crunchy and delicious, very nice if you have some handy.

SPAGHETTI CASSEROLE

This is a quick and easy one that can be prepared the last minute. This recipe also uses the brown and serve sausage or you could use cut up weiners or Polish sausage. All you need is:

2 can of spaghetti in tomato sauce with cheese
 1 - 8 oz. pkg. sausages, slightly browned and sliced
 Italian bread crumbs. (comes in a can)
 1/4 cup melted butter

Just mix the spaghetti and meat, pour into a casserole, sprinkle generously with the Italian bread crumbs, pour melted butter over them and bake until bubbly. This is delicious and your friends will think that you have slaved most of the afternoon preparing it.

My sister always takes garlic bread to their potlucks; her friends expect it. She uses her garlic press and just adds the juice to presoftened margarine with some very fine chopped parsley. She slices a long loaf of French bread in slices about 1 inch thick, but not all the way through, then butters the cuts, wraps the bread in foil and warms it in an oven about 250 degrees for about 25 to 30 minutes.

Baked beans are a must for potluck suppers. I like this recipe from Ann Jenkins.

ANN'S NEW ORLEANS BAKED BEANS

6 slices bacon
 1 onion, chopped
 1 green pepper, chopped
 1 cup chopped left-over ham
 2 lbs. pork and beans
 1 can tomato soup or one 8 oz. can tomato sauce
 2 tablespoons brown sugar
 1 teaspoon Worcestershire sauce
 Salt and pepper

Fry bacon crisp, lift out bacon and fry onion and green pepper in the fat until almost tender. Break bacon into bits, put sauce or soup on beans, add sugar and seasonings. Mix everything together and pour into baking dish.
 Bake 40 minutes in a moderate oven.

EGG SALAD

1 envelope gelatine
 1/4 cup cold water
 1 cup mayonnaise (the low calorie kind is ok)
 4 hard cooked eggs sliced or diced
 1/2 cup celery, chopped
 3/4 teaspoon salt
 2 tablespoons green pepper, chopped
 2 tablespoons pickle relish or chopped pickle
 1 tablespoon pimiento, chopped
 1 tablespoon lemon juice
 2 tablespoons finely chopped onions (optional)

Soak gelatine in cold water about 5 minutes. Place bowl over boiling water and stir until gelatine is dissolved, cool and beat into the mayonnaise. Add other ingredients and mix thoroughly. Turn into a loaf pan that has been rinsed with cold water and chill. When firm unmold and slice very thin. Garnish with wedges of tomato and lettuce or parsley. Give the salad plenty of time to set; made the day before is best.

SPRING BLOSSOM PIE

Pastry for a one-crust 9 inch pie
 1/4 cup flaked coconut
 1 pkg. (3 ounces) lemon flavored gelatine
 3/4 cup boiling water
 2 cups canned apple sauce
 1/2 teaspoon grated lemon rind
 1 pint strawberry ice cream

Partially roll out pastry; then sprinkle with 1/4 cup coconut and continue rolling out to fit a 9 inch pie plate. Pour into crust. Chill until set. Serve with small scoops of strawberry ice cream and a sprinkling of toasted coconut. Prepare the toasted coconut by spreading on a cookie sheet and put under the broiler just a minute or two. Watch closely so as not to burn.

Sexual assault topic at courthouse meeting

The issue of sexual assault will be presented on Thursday, April 7 at 7 p.m. in the main courtroom of the County Building in Charlevoix. The meeting is open to the public. Panel discussions will be led by Cheryl Wilde, Rape Sexual Assault Counselor at the Womens' Resource Center, Jack Moll, Charlevoix Chief of Police, George Lasater, Charlevoix County sheriff, Rev. David Yingling, of the Charlevoix Ministerial Association, Dr. William Mohser of the Charlevoix Area Hospital and Georgia Jones, a Rape-Sexual Assault Advocate.

According to the Federal Bureau of Investigation statistics, 90 percent of sexual assaults go unreported. Of the 10 percent that are reported, only one half lead to an arrest and only 60 percent of those are prosecuted.

Using those statistics, approximately 140 sexual assaults occurred in Charlevoix County this past year, according to Wilde. Of the 14 cases reported in the county, seven persons were arrested and 4 cases were prosecuted.

WILSON TOWNSHIP

Wilson Township Annual Meeting will be held Saturday, April 9, 1983 at 10 a.m. at the Wilson Township Hall. The Proposed Budget and Township Hall Addition will be presented.

was county prosecutor Scott Beatty's response to the question.

City attorney Tom Anderson said some communities have a statute on blocking access, but the feeling among officials and residents like Barnes has been that more laws isn't a desirable solution.

Other communities have registered complaints, also. The young peoples' use of city parks, young people sitting on city benches all seem to stir up public opinion. "It's all right for senior citizens to sit on the benches," said one Charlevoix official, "but not the kids."

Barnes said he hadn't heard any reports of shoppers' actually being pushed, but some hesitate to go through the gatherings of young people to get to a doorway.

The manager of one of the East Jordan stores, Dave Waldron, said that he has gone out and talked with them. They say there's nothing to do, he went on. Summertime there is more to do, but right now they haven't enough to the city's own police officers, including weekly overtime. Salaries for the chief, three officers, and secretary total $89,800 in the '83-'84 budget.

The clerk's salary was scheduled to go up $3,000, but Morris chose to stay with the 8 percent given other city employees, whose salaries are kept on a par with those in union contracts.

Another official, ambulance chief, Bernie Hammond, asked to have his proposed salary increase applied instead to the pared-down ambulance budget.

Streets budgeting went down from $134,600 in 1982 to $102,325 for the coming fiscal year. Recreation was brought from $17,420 to $13,850. Elm Pointe went from $13,455 to $4,530.

Students attend Government Day

Two juniors and two seniors were chosen from her school, Ann Crawford said, adding she was surprised to hear she was one of those going to the High School Government Seminar Day in Gaylord.

Crawford is from East Jordan High School, one of the 94 high schools in the 11th Congressional District. The seminar was planned by Congressman Bob Davis, and held March 29.

"I thought it was really interesting," Crawford said. She explained she learned about how different levels of government were arranged and interacted.

Crawford went with students John Walters, Andy Richards, and Karen Alger. Her United States history teacher Al Anderson accompanied the group.

The students separated for 45-minute workshops, which were followed by question periods. Addressing the workshops were, besides Davis, Petoskey's mayor Joe Kilborn, Cheboygan councilwoman Carol Sherwood, Otsego County commissioner Richard Yuill, Rudyard Township clerk Kathy Gaylor, state racing commissioner Bill Ballinger, and Consumers Power Company lobbyist John Howes.

"A lobbyist—that's a kind of person I'd never really heard about," Crawford said.

Afterwards there was time for students to get together. Crawford said she was surprised how politically-minded some were. They all seemed to feel it was a worthwhile day, she said.

As for herself, she thought "you notice things much more after you've heard about them." And she said her teacher picked up a few things of interest that he hadn't known about before.
