Salmon weir on Jordan hits county snag

An 1851 law is the basis of a county commission ruling to prohibit any dams or weirs across the Jordan River without the commission's written consent. Passed unanimously, the resolution throws another deadfall in the way of a Department of Natural Resources salmon weir.

Also slowing down action was the county planning commission decision to withhold approval until DNR engineers and re-examine possible sites for the weir. Then, on May 24, the Jordan River zoning board decided a public hearing was necessary before it resolved one way or another on the grant of a variance to construct a weir. The date of the hearing has not yet been set.

A variance would be necessary because the Jordan River, above Rogers Bridge was designated "wild-scenic river" by the state in 1972, and the designation requires that the river be free-flowing.

Objections raised to having a weir at the DNR site choice, 1 1/2 miles upriver, spring from the desire to protect the river in terms of the wild-scenic designation. Property owners, as well as the state, are under restrictions under those terms.

Property owners are concerned about possible flooding. Also considerable "garbage" produced by snaggers who throw fish carcasses along the banks or leave broken fish lines to web the river sides. Neither the county nor the DNR have personnel enough to police river banks intensively during the salmon season.

South Arm Township objected to not being consulted by East Jordan officials. Antrim County officials joined in the complaint. East Jordan groups have pushed for the DNR to put in the salmon and the weir because of hoped-for economic benefits from salmon fishing.

Still another objection is that the DNR began planting the fingerling salmon before wrapping up settlements on land acquisition, grant approval, and most of all, the variance.

On the other side of the question is the fact that the DNR was trapped by a short time table. The requested 300,000 fish were ready to go.

The department's surveys, they said, showed that the site they chose was the most economic.

The DNR effort to eliminate the destructive lamprey eel is also part of the story. And so is the fact that every agency involved has agreed that the salmon weir, to be attached to the lamprey dam, would be the key to having a tourist boom in the area.

County commissioner Tom Breakey put it this way: "We're not opposed to the weir per se—just want to have a say on where it is put."

The two alternatives to the DNR's site choice are to place a weir just below Rogers Bridge or near the mouth of the river. Expensive diking and an "unstable" river bottom were the reasons against choosing one of these

Powwow at Tourist Park

The sound of drums throbbed across the lake and up East Jordan's streets as Indians gathered over the weekend for the second annual "The Day of the Eagle."

Under a cedar-roofed pavilion, erected at the Tourist Park, six, seven, or eight men gathered around each drum, and their chanting rose and fell in traditional patterns, while dancers of all ages circled the pavilion, following the signals of the drum.

Organizer Gigi Antoine said the gathering was "primarily a Title IV powwow to show our cultures what we've done."

Antoine teaches Indian culture to children of East Jordan Indians under Title IV auspices. Their preparations for the powwow included constructing a birch bark teepee and two lodges, whose rounded roofs were held up by green sapling posts, arched to form rafters.

The ceremonies need interpretation to be appreciated. Because all ages participate, the dancing varies from the bright, rabbit-hopping renditions of the children, through the light, intricate patterns stepped by the young women, and the swirling feathers of the young men, to the sedate rhythmic steps of senior Indians.

Dances were for honoring certain people, for sociable pleasure, or for religious purposes. The chants are largely wordless, to allow Indians of different languages to participate.

It is clear, as one watches, that the whole activity binds people together in a kind of active meditation, a savoring of meaning.

Drums at the powwow were the Bear River singers from Petoskey, Anishin-abe Singers from Cape Croker, Red Eagle, and Four Winds from Grand Rapids.

Following a banquet of buffalo meat, corn, and potatoes, cooked over the fire outdoors, Butch Elliott of Cape Coker, Ontario, and veteran of Wounded Knee II, spoke of Indian progress since then.

He said in the 1960s Indian people began asking themselves about their goals. Elliott said social ills among the Indians were higher than in any other group. He named such things as suicide and infant mortality.

As a consequence, he said, the American Indian Movement formed. Elliott blamed the media for representing Indians as radicals, but said that in the case of the Indian occupation at Wounded Knee, the Indians were vindicated.

Now, he said, 10 years later, Indians have new, self-governing rights, more Indians are going to college, and more have positions in the Indian Bureau of Affairs.

Following Elliott's speech Antoine gave "coup" awards to 47 Indian students. Before doing so, she spoke of Indian early times. In an account similar to the Bible story of Noah, she said Indians began to fill the earth with conflict and evil. The Creator concluded he had to destroy the earth. To save the earth for the sake of the innocent unborn and for those few who lived rightly, the eagle flew to the gate of the Creator and screamed four times to gain the Creator's attention, and then he pleaded for the lives of the people.

"Your coup award is an eagle feather," Antoine concluded. "Wear it with pride. Honor it. Honor our brother, the eagle."

County, cities get more gas revenues

Although gas consumption is down, partly because of the growth of smaller, more fuel efficient cars and trucks, the revenues that are sent out to the counties in the state for maintenance and improvement of Michigan's highways, roads, streets and other transportation systems rose during the first quarter of 1983 according to Michigan Department of Transportation reports.

The additional income is reflected in the amount of monies that are sent out to area cities and to Charlevoix County.

The county will receive, for the first quarter of 1983, $268,040.78 compared with 1982 when they got $240,031.96.

Boyer City will be getting a check from the state for $27,438.96, up from $25,324.23 while Boyne Falls will see a $200 plus increase in the amount that they will get from the state. They are expecting $3,258.33 for their roads and streets.

East Jordan will be getting $16,263.33 as their share of the highway revenues compared to last years' $15,170.40 for the first quarter.

The money comes from license fees as well as the amount of gas that is purchased within the cities, townships and counties. The new figures show about a 8.8 percent increase over the same period of 1982, and does reflect the increase in gas and weight taxes that were passed upon beginning in 1983.

For the state as a whole, the figures are still short by about several hundred thousand dollars from the first quarter of 1981 which reflects that fewer people are driving as much.

Workmen install underground wiring for East Jordan Airport lights. The lights will go on by pilot's remote control to aid in night landings.

Barnikow rites held at Beach House

MR. & MRS. MARK T. BARNIKOW

In a ceremony at the Boyne Mountain Beach House on May 21, Tina Marie Toton of Gaylord became the bride of Mark Thomas Barnikow of Bay City.

Given in marriage by her parents in a ceremony performed by the Rev. Forest Crum of the United Methodist Church of Boyne City, Tina wore a white floor length gown of polyester knit, trimmed in Venetian lace. It featured a draping neckline both front and back, bow trim at the shoulders and a pleated skirt. Completing her costume was a Juliet cap trimmed in Venetian lace and a finger-tip veil. She carried a colonial bouquet of white daisies and pink mini-carnations with baby's breath and complimented by white streamers.

Karen Bartlett of Gaylord served as matron of honor for her friend. Mark's brother-in-law, Jack Marshall of Detroit, acted as his best man.

Following a reception at the Boyne Mountain Beach House and a wedding trip in Michigan's upper peninsula and Canada, the couple will make their home in Traverse City.

Mark has earned a master's degree in architecture from the University of Michigan and Tina is a medical assistant.

JANET K. BOGEMA

Bogema stars in OU's 'The Robber's Bridegroom'

"The Robber Bridegroom," a light-hearted hoodown musical, will complete the 21st successful season at Oakland University's Barn Theatre. "The Robber Bridegroom" is a lively rustic fairy tale, complete with a robust bandit-of-the-woods, a rich planter with his beautiful daughter, and a wicked stepmother.

Janet K. Bogema, the daughter of Andrew and Elizabeth Bogema of Boyne City, is portraying the Raven in "The Robber Bridegroom." Janet earned her bachelor's degree in Theatre Arts at Oakland University in 1981. She recently appeared in St. John Fisher Chapel's production of "Godspell." She also appeared in several Oakland University productions including: "The Gingham Dog," "The Mandrake," "The Importance of Being Earnest," "Equus" and "She Stoops to Conquer."

Of special interest: Our June 12 performance will be signed for the hearing impaired.

Garden Club hears talk on lilies

Twenty-two members of Boyne Valley Garden Club met at Litzemberger Place on May 25 for their May meeting. There was the usual business with reports on plans for plantings and follow-up care. Under new business arrangements are being made for a club trip to visit the herb garden at Northport on June 8.

Guest speaker was Martha Cawthra on the subject of "Lilies, Queens of the Garden." The term lily can be a misnomer, as a true lily grows from a bulb, has basal roots with blooms that have six petals and six stamens. The speaker gave basic rules for successful growing, recommending that bulbs be purchased from dealers having similar weather. By selecting the right lilies, it is possible to have blooms throughout the summer. She left the group with the feeling that growing lilies can be an exciting experience. Refreshments were served by Dorothy Krause and Clara Tompkins.

More than tourists enjoy the clean-up

Summer is rapidly coming upon us, even if the weather we had this weekend wasn't exactly what the Chambers of Commerce would like us to believe we have everyday in the beautiful North.

Almost everyone is ready for the onslaught of tourists we hope to have visiting our shores and lakes. The cities have been out sprucing up the streets with lines being painted, flowers in the flower boxes and along our roads, and shop owners filling up their shelves with merchandise that they hope will sell to every tourist who comes to town.

We should also remember that we citizens who live here enjoy the clean-up too. Why else would a bunch of volunteers take time out on a busy Saturday to plant the flowers, clean up the alleyways and the places along the empty buildings that someone forgot to do.

Our community pride is showing and we township governments are happy to see it.

Not everything is done to attract more tourist business...but to make our towns something to make the town look better, we ourselves can feel better. Tourists come and then they go but we who live here, who work here, and who enjoy our area as much as the other people, can feel a lot better about the town we choose to live in. We can see the things that have been done by our neighbors, our businesses, and our city and

He: What did you do Monday?
 Me: I went all over town celebrating the fire and salutes of Memorial Day.
 He: What makes you say it like that?
 Me: My tongue. It's in charge of everything I say.
 He: What are you celebrating next Monday?
 Me: Jefferson Davis' birthday. It's in red letters on the bank calendar, just like Memorial Day.
 He: I think your boat is leaking at both ends.
 Me: Do you mean we don't have to celebrate red letter days on bank calendars?
 He: Only a daft, or perhaps a goofy person would think so.

 Me: Suddenly I'm neither a daft nor perhaps a goofy person...Oh, oh. Look here, June 19th is Father's Day. And it is in red letters.
 He: So what? People don't have to celebrate it if they don't want to.
 Me: I'm a father. I say the day should be celebrated until we can't stand it a minute longer. I am glad that they printed it in red letters. Banks sure know what they are doing.

 Me: I don't know what you are talking about, but I have this feeling that I don't want to be around when they figure it out.

Elm Pointe could be better used

Dear editor:
 Friends of Elm Point, a large body of citizens from East Jordan and surrounding areas, have voted to formalize their organization and expect to ratify a constitution which will give it the structure and power to carry out its objectives.
 The main objective is to preserve Elm Point as a recreational area for the East Jordan community. To implement this, the members of Friends of Elm Point have compiled a broad list of projected programs to be held on the premises. The organization is dedicated to the idea of greater participation and involvement by all East Jordan residents as well as those in the community at large who have long shown their interest and concern for the maintenance of Elm Point.

The grounds and the buildings are now open and ready for use. The picnic and beach area have new toilet facilities, adding to the many conveniences already on the property. The Historical Museum has resumed its summer hours and continues to attract visitors from around the country. Special tours for large groups may be arranged by appointment. Local school children have already benefited from their trips to the museum. Staff members, many of whose recollections reach back into the 1800's, provide fascinating explanations of the antique objects and their uses. Many larger communities have nothing to compare with our fine museum which is completely staffed and organized by volunteers and is filled with historical treasures donated or loaned by pioneer families from the area. It is a valuable component of the Elm Point property.

building to comply with the fire laws. However, when that is completed the dormitory space can again be rented for overnight groups or studio space for classes, providing additional revenues.
 All of the projected uses are exciting and are worth more discussing and planning. Therefore, the Friends of Elm Point invite everyone who is interested in keeping the city's greatest attribute for its intended use to join us at our open meeting on Thursday, June 2 at 7:30 p.m. in the American Legion Hall. School children, seniors, housewives, teachers, business people — all who have enjoyed Elm Point in the past — are encouraged to attend this meeting and share their ideas. Your help is important.

Veterans give thanks for Memorial services

To the editor:
 I would like to use this space to thank all the people that came out in the rain to participate with the Veterans at the several cemeteries we visited early Memorial Day. Your presence always helps to make each and every one of the veterans and auxiliaries proud to honor all who have gone ahead of us.
 To all the people who braved the cloudy skies to line the parade route and to honor us with your presence in the park for the ceremonies to honor our comrades, a very heartfelt thank-you. Without your presence our pride and love for our country would be lost and disappointing.
 A special thank-you I was requested to express to Rev. Nixon for a very sincere address that expresses the thoughts of Veterans all over this great nation. We would be lost without the participation of the youth in the Girl Scouts and Cub Scouts and also the participation of our marvelous high school band.

 I saved till last our gratitude to the two buglers, Janene Froats and Steve Kindy, who traveled to each stop with us and played Taps for all our comrades.
 It is wonderful to know that we have young people who are proud to participate in the ceremonies of Memorial Day with the Veterans. We ordinarily may seem to be serious and solid adult men, but when Taps are played many of those adult men seem to have a lump in their throat and trouble with their eyes. You buglers did it to us again this morning.

Jottings

BY JIM SILBAR
 Aahhh, the first weekend of the summer season. And it snowed just a few miles north of here last Thursday. I had hoped to get the garden in, spend some time fishing, and in general, goofing off like the normal workers do. But, as usual, with the short week, I was in the office, typing away on stories that have to get in the paper, doing the list of odd jobs that have been accumulating around the house, and trying to catch up on some sleep.

Speaking of fishing reminds me that this is the season for all of the newspapers in the nation to get on the list for all the fishing contests. Not that we don't mind getting the information, but, we would like to be able to go to the event and try our luck. With my luck finding morel mushrooms, I figure that I could maybe catch something besides a cold.
 Anyway, one such contest that sent me information was from the American Striped Bass Society who required all the participants to use the same gear, right down to their rods and reels including the line on the reels. They even had to be wearing the same kind of jackets and hats. The fish that they were going after are hiding in Lake Murray, South Carolina this past weekend, and I wonder if they are going to let me know who won.

 Locally, the bass tournament on Walloon Lake just got under way and will be held through the end of June. With some of the prizes they are offering, the folks at the Village General Store are going all out. See Cliff to see if you can still enter.

Barbara Cruden

Thinking how a rose by any other name could smell as sweet, I asked some seven-year-olds once if they would be the same people if they were given new names, and I tossed out a few whimsical choices for them.
 Much surprised was I to hear their almost fierce rejection of my silly suggestion.
 Of course, they would not be the same people if they had different names! I caught a whiff of the idea that they had gone to a lot of trouble to become those names.
 They had also gone to a lot of trouble to learn the names of many things—North America, president, petunia. What was the point of my changing things now!
 A word does develop a great deal of power for good or ill as we use it. Just think how beautiful a name Rowena could be if you just knew a beautiful person named Rowena.
 We can become quite transported if we listen long enough to someone using words that refer to splendid things like forests, far-away castles, lights gleaming like spears around the shores of a South American port in the late, blue-green of an evening.

 That, as we all know, is how they lure us into buying airplane tickets, not to mention real estate, political candidates, or a new car.
 But numbers have no such power. Except when a number is used in relation to other numbers, it simply lacks meaning. Just compare the effectiveness of "5" with "five." What is 5? Does it suffer because of being compared to a 6? Have there been great 5s and pitiable 5s?
 Five fingers or five-year-olds or five-year-plans are not candidates for this discussion—just the plain digit 5. An obscure little creature. (How does it happen to have such a fat middle.)
 So I understand when a little student looks at an arithmetic problem and seems not to know what to do with it. Clearly a bunch of numbers are saying nothing. Even their arrangements on the page are singularly unimaginative. Boring little columns, over and over.
 If the teacher tries to interest such children with little numerical puzzles and stunts, the children writhe inwardly with confusion. They didn't catch on to the regular stuff, and now this!
 I watch them draw wild doodles on half-finished school work. Escape, escape this lack of meaning, the pictures seem to say.
 Come now, I say. Let's make the numbers get in line. Turn that 3 around. Betsy. It's facing the wrong way. Now then, what's 4 plus 7? Sing out now; it rhymes. That's it! 4-and-7 makes 11. And what's 3 plus 6? Curly number plus curly number makes a curly 9. Oh ho, the nine will shine if it gets in line.

 Not a math-atmosphere, I fear.
 But it's even harder to get mathematic types started with poetry. One discusses relationships with math students in English class. One remembers that mathematicians are often excellent pianists. There's poetry in everyone.
 And one remembers it was through mathematics that someone long ago, or so I was told—someone decided that stars, moon, sun, and planets all were mounted on transparent spheres, one within another. As the spheres rolled, the celestial luminants changed places in mathematical relation to each other, and the sound of each sphere harmonized with that of the others, until they filled heaven with the sound of the music of the spheres!

 The county planning commission may approve the proposal for funding only, county planner Larry Sullivan said. The commission's approval is asked along with that of the Northwest Regional Planning Board, and the state, for a grant of $160,000 from the federal government to build the lamprey weir, which would be the base for a salmon weir.
 County planners meet Thursday, June 2, and may ask for a 30-day extension.

Par-T-Pac to remodel outside

The long familiar Behling market on Park Street, Boyne City, will have a face-lifting this June if the city planning commission recommends approval of a tax exemption certificate.
New owner Mike Gabos wants to put on brick and aluminum siding to update the store, now called Par-T-Pac. He has already renovated the interior, since purchasing the store last October. The interior work, he said, was done "on my own, and will not be in the application."
The city has had a moratorium on tax exemption certificates because the tax freeze was placed on the whole building for up to 12 years, rather than simply on the improvements.
Gabos' application will be the second one since the moratorium was lifted. Boyne Auto Supply has an application pending. Prior to the moratorium, Barden's Lumber, Ace Hardware, Rainy Day Lady, E and M Standard Service, Schafer's, and Real Estate One were granted tax exemption certificates.

NMH sets visitor policy

A revised visitor policy will go into effect at Northern Michigan Hospitals on Wednesday, June 1. Visiting hours will be expanded from 11 a.m. to 8:30 p.m. under the new guidelines but more stringent efforts will be made to control the number of visitors seeing an individual patient at any one time.

Only two visitors will be allowed to visit an individual patient at any one time and all visitors will still be required to be 13 years of age or older.

The expansion of visiting hours (previously 1:00 p.m. to 4:00 p.m. and 6:30 p.m. to 8:30 p.m.), while at the same time tightening the rules governing numbers of visitors at a time, is hoped to make the hospital's visiting policy more flexible, but at the same time more enforceable.

Visiting patients at NMH may or may not be therapeutic for individual patients and therefore is governed by guidelines with the care of the patient as the overriding concern.

As before, several specialty units such as Obstetrics (maternity), Mental Health and Pediatrics will have differing guidelines. Parents may stay 24-hours a day with their child in pediatrics if they choose, for example.

In general, all patients in the medical/surgical and orthopedic units will be subject to the new policy.

In all cases visitors must enter the hospital through the main entrance. At the Little Traverse Division, an information desk is staffed by volunteers from 8 a.m. to 8:30 p.m. to give instructions on how to get to patient rooms. Waiting areas are available on each medical/surgical unit and in the lower level lobby for any family members needing to wait their turn for visiting privileges. Nursing staff on the floors will be enforcing the new guidelines by requiring that only two visitors be in a patient's room at a time and, if necessary by checking the visitor's age.

East Jordan starts distribution center

East Jordan became a cheese distribution center May 24, when women from the city's churches gathered at the United Methodist Church education building to distribute cheese from federal surplus and bags of food from local merchants.

Rev. Phil Simmons said the Boyne City Commu-ity Center, which has already participated in a distribution last month, helped East Jordan's volunteers to set up. Volunteers came also from the Family Health Center.

Simmons reported that several cases of frankfurters were donated for the distribution, one package going with each of the 360 five-pound blocks of cheese.

In the 50 bags of groceries were staples—flour, baby food, and so on, Simmons said.

People were lined up for food by 8 a.m., he said, although it was not scheduled to begin until 10 a.m. Those receiving food donations had to qualify under financial limitation regulations.

Around the last Wednesday in June, Simmons said, another distribution is scheduled, possibly, he said, set up according to school district.

Weatherization program offered by NMHSA

As a result of the recent enactment of the Federal Jobs Bill, Northwest Michigan Human Services Agency's Executive Director, Robert N. Smith, has announced that the agency's weatherization program will be able to double the number of homes to be weatherized between now and Sept. 30, 1983. The program is designed to permanently lower home heating costs for low-income families who meet annual household income guidelines of $6,075 or less for one person, plus $2,100 for each additional family member.

The program, for which there is no charge, consists of insulation, eliminating drafts, storm windows and where applicable, mobile home skirting. Three hundred and fifty homes will be scheduled for weatherization in the counties of Antrim, Benzie, Charlevoix, Emmet, Grand Traverse, Kalkaska, Leelanau, Missaukee, Roscommon and Wexford. With only a small backlog of applications, most of those who apply soon and are found eligible for the program, should realize home heating savings this next winter. To check on eligibility, persons may call the agency's offices in Traverse City, 947-3780; Cadillac, 775-9781; Petoskey, 347-9070; or their local County Department of Social Services.

"The agency will be able to handle the increased workload," Smith said, "by subcontracting with qualified private weatherization contractors." Should there be any additional contractors interested, they may contact the NMHSA Energy Department, 947-3780 for a specifications list.

4-H looking for pheasant families

Leah Green, 4-H coordinator for Charlevoix County, reports that a large number of pheasant chicks to be used for a statewide raise and release program will be available soon. The Michigan State University Departments of Animal Science and Fisheries and Wildlife are cooperating with the Michigan Department of Natural Resources in providing the birds to youth.

Any area youth interested in this useful conservation project are asked to contact the Charlevoix County Cooperative Extension Service to reserve chicks before June 15. Participants will receive complete information about how to raise and care for their birds.

The release date can be any time after the chicks are eight weeks of age, but definitely before fall.

Ms. Green says that the pheasant chicks are to be picked up at the cooperative extension office the evening of June 24. They will be brought from Lansing that day. The eggs will have been provided by the wildlife division of the DNR and incubated and hatched by the poultry laboratory at MSU. Chicks will be priced at 3/1.00 with the proceeds going to the Poultry Youth Activity Fund, Michigan 4-H Youth Foundation.

You do not have to be a current 4-H member to participate in this pheasant project as 4-H youth programs are open to all. Green notes that fair time coincides with the close of the eight week raising period making this summer's work a natural for fair exhibits.

To receive pheasant chicks for raising and release in 1983 just place your order through the Charlevoix County CES office (582-6232) by June 15. Then prepare your place and equipment and pick your birds up on June 24.
