City hears of deficits for fiscal year at noon meeting

Boyne City ended up their fiscal year operating in the red on only two of the funding areas that make up the total city budget, according to a revue that was discussed at the noon meeting of the City Commission.

The two funds and the amount that they are short include the General Fund which was over budget by $15,401.26 and the Water/Wastewater Fund which topped the list with a deficit balance of $293,500.15.

Given as reasons for the deficits in those two funds were the fact that the state, which returns to the city taxes and revenue sharing funds, has had their own budget problems due to the economy and has not returned to the city the amount of monies that were planned on when the budget was approved last year.

The shortfall in the general fund was caused by the city receiving at least $30,000 less in state monies, according to Edith Beck, the City Treasurer.

The real disaster in the budget, which was projected for the fiscal year of 82-83, was in the water/wastewater department. The reasons given for those paper losses were the fact that the city now takes depreciation on all the sewer and water lines that are buried throughout the city. The figure totaled about one third of the cost of the system and has been accumulated for about thirty years, she added.

Commissioner Steve Moody, in looking at the figure, also suggested that because the water/wastewater fund had shown a deficit in the prior years, the city took $100,000 out of the general fund to help reduce the deficit. The fund has not yet been able to repay the general fund.

The water and sewer rate increase that was approved by the commissioners earlier this year, will help reduce the deficit in the next few years, but it probably won't take care of the entire amount because of the ever increasing depreciation that the fund has built in.

When the city replaces water and sewer lines as they wear out, more money is able to be depreciated giving the bottom line a bigger deficit.

"The only problem with the deficit in the Water/Wastewater fund," said Beck after the meeting, "is that we should be accumulating the depreciation so that we will have money ahead to be able to replace those lines when they need it. We aren't able to do that right now."

The good side of the budget was that the major street fund, which last year showed a $6,500 loss, was in the black this year almost $2,000. That fund had unspent money because of less snowplowing and brining of the roads.

The local street fund also showed a balance of $10,569.72 for the year end. The Motor Pool Fund had the largest balance which amounted to $63,631.88.

A balance in the fund generally means that the city spent less money than they anticipated and had budgeted for the departments being funded.

The Commissioners also agreed to go ahead with the ongoing grant process to repair the river sides along the Old City Park. The local U.S. Soil Conservation office has completed the paperwork and grant funding for the project should be available as early as next summer, according to Terry DeBryn and City Manager Tim Clifton. If the project is authorized, the cost of the repair to the river banks would be approximately $80,000 with the city picking up about $22,000 of the cost.

The Commissioners accepted the low bid of the Trumco, Inc. builders to replace the roof of the floating digester in the city's waste water treatment plant.

The repair had been budgeted for last year but was put off as the city did not have the funds to spend on the project. The cost will be $2,832.

County transit considers expanding bus system

"We want to expand its use," said county commissioner Don Smith of the county transit system. Smith is the commission member of the ad hoc committee, reporting on a study of the bus system.

Expanding the use of the seven-bus system would be one way to make the system "as cost-effective as possible," Smith said, adding, "If they can generate one-third of the support for bus service through fares, that would be an accomplishment."

The other two-thirds could come from state and federal funding, but the amount is uncertain.

County voters approved a one-fourth mill tax last fall towards support of the transit system, but the committee hopes that the system might not have to collect the full amount (a possible $90,000 per year) if the state and federal funding comes through.

Another recommendation by the committee is to put the system under a three-member committee "of somewhat knowledgeable people," Smith said, referring to the fact that there would have to be new advertising and other matters to work out.

The bus service has been under the supervision of the Commission on Aging. One of the ad hoc transit committee members is Marvin Loding, also a member of the commission. Other members are Vincent Olach, Charlevoix Schools business manager; Ralph Richardson, former county commissioner; and Fred Welch, engineer/director of the county road commission.

One handicap the transit system has labored under, Smith said, was the complicated bookkeeping caused by three different budget years: that of the county, the state, and of the transit system itself. The committee spent a considerable portion of its time, since being appointed in January, in resolving the implications of these overlapping figures.

Their recommendation is to operate on one budget year, that of the county.

Smith said the state has promised two new busses by November. He pointed out, however, that all seven of the busses are over the 100,000-mile mark. "In another 12 months, they will be over 175,000 miles."

Recommendations for solving that problem may be among those offered in the ad hoc committee report to the county commission scheduled for Wednesday, June 8.

County planners OK weir site but wish it in better place

After a third review session, the Charlevoix County Planning Commission tacitly endorsed the concept of the proposed lamprey barrier and salmon harvest facility that is to be constructed in the Jordan River.

The commission reviewed the Michigan Department of Natural Resources request for the federal funding that will pay for the barrier on a portion of the river that is designated as a natural, wild, scenic river.

With the endorsement, the commissioners are recommending that the Great Lakes Fishery Commission, the agency that is to provide the funds for the barrier, agree to go ahead and fund the project.

The commissioners still aren't too happy with the location that the DNR has proposed for the site. The DNR wants to install the barrier about three-quarters of a mile upstream from Rogers Bridge. There are about three miles of river between the Rogers Bridge and the mouth of the river.

While they have endorsed building the barrier and the harvesting unit, if placed where proposed, is within a section of the river that is designated as a wild, scenic river, and that part is protected by restrictions aimed at protecting the natural river features. Those restrictions prohibit the construction of dams and the cement lamprey barrier could be considered as a dam because it would cause an 18 inch fall in the river.

The other reasons given include the problem of potential snagging and trespassing along the river banks as the fish try to pass upstream.

The planners said that if the site were put downstream from the proposed site, it would eliminate a lot of the problems. Ideally, if the proposed barrier were constructed at the river mouth, it could also become a tourist attraction that could bring more interest in the town.

Other sites were proposed by the commissioners, in the river where Deer Creek joins in, and where the river narrows into a single channel by Sportsman Park.

Larry Levegood questioned as to whether the planners can ask the DNR to research the other sites further. He also said that the DNR will need to get approvals from several other county agencies before it can obtain a permit to construct the barrier/harvesting unit.

Recently the county commissioners passed a resolution citing an 1851 law that says that they have to give written consent before a dam is placed in a river.

Jerry Manz, a biologist for the DNR fisheries division, presented engineering cost estimates for the three sites that the DNR had looked at before settling on the site above Rogers Bridge.

To put the barrier near the bridge in East Jordan would cost at least $1.25 million, he said, because it would entail building a dike 10 feet high for a mile and a quarter along the banks of the river. This is required because of the water that would be backed up because of the barrier. About 180 acres of ground would be covered with the impounded water.

Where Deer Creek flows into the Jordan, the estimated cost would be $770,000 which doesn't include any of the land acquisition costs that would be required to contain the backed up waters. It would also require a ten foot dike built up for about a quarter of a mile along the river. The river would have to be dredged to get to a firm bottom for the barrier which would cause approximately 80 acres of backed-up waters.

The cost for the proposed site up-river from the Rogers Bridge crossing would be about $640,000 for both the barrier and the harvesting facilities, Manz said.

He also agreed that from the standpoint of the salmon-sports fishery that the local groups are trying to re-establish in Lake Charlevoix, the site at the mouth of the river would be the best. "The problem is money," he said, "We don't have it now. If you could get us the money, we'll build it wherever you want," he added.

The DNR has completed the planting of 250,000 salmon fingerlings in the river last month and over the next two to three years, about 20 to 25 percent of them are expected to come back to the river to spawn.

Here are those running for school boards

School elections will take place June 13, and this year the school districts of Boyne Falls, East Jordan, and Boyne City have strong slates of candidates to choose from. Below, are their brief biographies:

BOYNE FALLS

William Cousineau—said he's running "to see, for one thing, that education the kids get now, keeps up." He said, "I hope to come up with new programs and better the school." Cousineau is deputy sheriff jail administrator, and has been in Boyne Falls for over six years, in the area for 13. He sees the smaller school as better for more time spent with students. The Cousineaus have three children in school. Cousineau is running for a three-year term.

Patricia Irene Griffith—running "because I want to get involved with the school. I've gone to all the doings." Griffiths have a daughter in high school and a son who graduated last year. She belongs to Hudson Township Women's Auxiliary, and is self-employed, doing some bookkeeping work from her home. Griffith grew up in the community and after living away, returned a few years ago. "I am basically very proud of our school... I think a small school has more benefits than a larger school, and I'd like to keep it that way." Griffith is running for a three-year term.

In Boyne Falls, two three-year terms and two four-year terms will be voted on.

Kathryn G. Massey—works as reservationist at Boyne Mountain. She said, "Being a tax payer, I thought it was time to take an interest in doing my part." She added that she plans to be "open-minded." She noted, "We're able to maintain a high standard for a small school." The Masseys moved here from Benzonia in 1972, and have two children in school. Massey is running for a four-year term.

Bob Winhusen—has been on the school board for three years. "I think it's an important job." The Winhusens have three children in school. The strengths of the school, Winhusen said, are in the administration, the staff, and community involvement. What he would like to work towards is updating the high school curriculum. Winhusen owns Bob's Pharmacy in Boyne City, is a member of Volunteers in Probation for Charlevoix-Emmet counties, is president of Full Gospel Businessmen, Petoskey, and coaches senior league baseball. Winhusen is running for a four-year term.

John Hausler, Jr.—said he's running "because there are a lot of openings. About time they had a little competition!" Hausler has no children, but he's interested in the school, nonetheless. He likes its being small. "I think teachers have more contact with kids." A native of the area, Hausler holds a job in maintenance at Boyne Mountain. One thing he would work for is to have the board "more in contact with the community itself." Hausler is running for a four-year term.

Donald Wilson—has completed four years on the board. He said, "I feel I can do as good a job as I did the first time. I'm not sorry I ran... Have to help the kids get a good education." Wilson has three children in school. He said until McLaughlin Steel hires him back he is keeping busy with Scouts, the usher team at St. Augustine Church, and Knights of Columbus. The Wilsons moved to Boyne Falls from Grand Rapids in 1971. "I'd like to see the students getting as much as possible from their education while they're there," Wilson said. Wilson is running for a four-year term.

Carol Sevanski—just took on being treasurer for Hudson Township, but she said she is still interested, if people want her to have a place on the school board. "I'm willing to work," she said. "We have a good school system... I'm sure we can improve the high school curriculum. The Sevanskis have three children in school, one graduating. Sevanski herself is an officer at First National Bank of Gaylord. Sevanski is running for a four-year term.

EAST JORDAN

Alina Meade: After moving to East Jordan from Union Lake in 1976, Meade said she became a member of the Athletics Boosters' Club, and has been a Booster officer for the last two years, also a member of St. Joseph's church choir, and a full-time employee at Glen's Family Market. So, she says, "I know what people have to spend, and how much money counts." The Meades have three children. One is graduating from Davenport College; the second is graduating from high school; and the third is in high school.

"I'd like to see the quality of our education program to continue." Meade praised the efforts of the school board and staff to improve school programs.

Herb Griffin: Griffin has served on the school board for six years, coming on when the new high school was being built. A native of East Jordan, he served in the Army in 1951 and 1952.

"All my boys are out of high school," he said, although one is still in college.

Griffin is a rural mail carrier, also chairman of the city planning and zoning appeals board and of the county parks and recreation commission, and is active in the United Methodist Church.

He said he is running "because I have an interest in education... The curriculum is starting to straighten out... I think we produce a quality student."

Bernard Schmitt—said, "I'm a recent resident, but we've been coming up from Monroe over the last seven years." He said he decided running for the school board "would be a good way to get involved." The Schmitts have three children in school, with one graduating. Before coming north, Schmitt had a chain of restaurants, but "I'm not a downstate whizz-kid," he said. "I'm not coming in to change things." Schmitt belongs to Rotary, the Chamber of Commerce, and the Christ Lutheran Church.

BOYNE CITY

Phil L. Bowman—running "mainly because I thought I ought to take an interest in the school my children go to." The Bowmans have a son in second grade, and Bowman, himself, is a seventh grade teacher in Gaylord. He has lived in Boyne City all his life, and is a member of the Presbyterian Church. He said "I'm impressed with the school system. And I'm not running because I have a chip on my shoulder!"

Billy R. Reinhardt—is running "because working as a teacher's aide in East Jordan, I have a little look at both sides." The Reinhardts have two children, one still in school, and this is partly why she said, "I think they offer a good curriculum for the kids," and added, "I don't plan on turning everything around." Reinhardt is in the Boyne Sports Boosters and the Farm Bureau group.

Richard Wulff—has been on the school board for two years, and is willing to continue. "I have the time for it. It's a contribution I can do in the community." Wulff also does insurance counseling. The Wulffs' two children are grown. They have been coming here for many years from Cincinnati, and have lived here for the past six years. Wulff said the strengths of the school are its staff and the community's support. For something to work on? He answered, "Curriculum."

Household hints: After spring cleaning the house, the lawn should be mowed and raked; then the garden should be put in just as soon as the ground and your wife can be worked.

There was a day in our lives when you could pull a little red wagon to the corner store and fill it up with five dollars worth of groceries.

Today there aren't hardly any corner groceries; and you can carry the five dollars worth of groceries home in one arm and the wagon in the other.

That's because your dollar has shrunk so much the government is thinking of printing a new sentence on it: "Pay thirty cents to bearer on demand." A dollar's worth of change gets you thirty cents.

Out of that thirty cents the government need a quarter to prevent it from going belly up. Which leaves you a five cent piece.

Now, you can't jingle a nickel in your pocket when you are walking down town. You can finger the nickel all you want, but it won't jingle. When I was a kid I used to put a small piece of metal in my pocket along with the nickel. The jingling made me feel important.

Today I can rattle a whole mass of change in my pocket and people will laugh to themselves. They know darn well the money is almost worthless. (That song, "When I was single my money did jingle," makes no sense today.)

Remember that little red wagon I was telling you about? My dad paid ten dollars for mine when I was a kid. In the hardware the other day I saw one exactly like it for sixty four dollars plus tax. That's about what it would cost to fill it with groceries today.

I dislike throwing up the past like this, but I think that people with a whole lot of money should know they ain't well off at all.

Now, let me straighten you out on something else. Money is the root of all fortune and has nothing to do with evil. It's just that with the way prices are going up it's a sin not to have any money.

And it's getting sinner and sinner every day.

A politician caught in the Washington Freedom mess says he is all for freedom of the press. It's the newspapers he can't stand.

To all students graduating from high school this spring: The world is now being turned over to you. Thank God!

All dressed up to show off their finery at a picnic in the Old City Park in Boyne City are some of the children of the Presbyterian Church back in 1913. The only child identified is Loton Wilson who is second from the left. The group is standing in front of the old city Gazebo which was used for many band concerts and other affairs. This picture is from a collection of Ruth Barter who has graciously lent us a group of pictures of the Presbyterian Aid Society picnic. If you have any old pictures you would like to share with our readers, bring them in so we can copy them.

Deadman's Hill, Deadman's Curve, Shipwreck Point—all names that make my mind wonder... who were they named for... and how did it happen.

At the top of Deadman's Hill is a plaque that tells how that particular piece of geography got its name, but I often wonder as I run across those names how or what happened to give that ghoulish name to a place.

We used to have a curve downstate that was just out of town. The road took a ninety degree turn as it headed south towards Ann Arbor. I guess that there were many accidents on that curve and probably, someone was killed when they failed to negotiate the corner. That was how that curve got the name of Deadman's Curve.

Now there are plenty of places that have names that are understandable; Big Rock Point, Nine Mile Point, Horton's Bay, Fisherman's Cove.

Those I can understand, although I also wonder, nine miles from where, what kind of fish are in the cove, how big is the big rock, and other images that happen in my mind.

Almost every part of the state has places that are given names that reflect something that happened, or a specific site. Like Boyne City, which probably got its name from the area of Boyne in Ireland. Or East Jordan, which to me sounds like it was decided that the place was just like the Jordan in the Bible, and someone thought it was heavenly, so they named their town after it.

Sometimes I think that it is funny that the human race has, just has to name everything so that it is classified into its own pecking order. Why can't there just be a beautiful flower called a flower, why does it have to be a "Dutchman's Breeches" or to really get to the point, some Latin name that no one knows or can't pronounce.

Why do we have to have Jordache jeans, or drive a Chevrolet? Why can't we just have jeans, or a car? We seem to get hung up about almost everything with a name, and if it doesn't we make it up so that it fits the situation.

I think that is why we have a Deadman's Hill, or a Fisherman's Cove. We have the feeling that everything has to be organized or else we would live in Chaos. And that is with a capital C.

I have been looning it lately. Or at least hearing a loon as it makes its special cry that I think you can hear about three miles away from where the bird is in the water.

The loon is, to me, one of those special birds. Special because it brings back memories of sitting in a nature class at Cranbrook Institute of Science when I was a young lad, and watching a movie that was made giving an Indian explanation as to how the loon ended up wearing a necklace.

I can't remember too much about that movie and the storyline, but I do remember that some forsaken Indian maiden threw a lover's necklace out into the water and a diving loon came up for air with the necklace around its neck. Somehow, the legend and memory goes, the necklace was turned by magic into something that the loon had to wear from then on.

But the big thing I remember is the piercing call of the loon. And when I heard it again the other day, I thought about the Indian legend and the movie, and the times when I was a kid growing up learning about nature, and liking what I learned.

It is a good thing to hear a loon call, it means that the water around here has risen in quality enough to attract them. I hope we get a lot of those wierd calls that come in through the gentle beating of the waves as we sit along the lake contemplating nature and trying to clear out our brain so we can appreciate the next day.

MY WEEK FOR LASAGNA

Did you ever hear of an easy lasagna recipe? Well, here is one. My daughter made this last Sunday and invited me over to sample it. Shirley said that if it was good she would give me the recipe as she was sure that all my friends would want it. What is easy about this delicious lasagna is the fact that you do not need to precook the noodles or make the sauce. Our family gave this their A-1 approval.

EASY LASAGNA

For it you will need:
9-lasagna noodles
1 lb. ricotta or small curd cottage cheese
10 oz. shredded Monterey Jack cheese
Parmesan cheese
1 lb. hamburger
1 small onion
1 - 48 oz. jar spaghetti sauce

Cook hamburger and onion and drain off the grease; add spaghetti sauce and bring to a boil.

Put 1 cup sauce in the bottom of a 9x13 pan. Press into sauce 3 uncooked noodles. Top noodles with more sauce, ricotta, Monterey Jack; continue layering. Sprinkle generously with Parmesan last. Cover tightly with foil and bake 1 hour and 15 minutes at 350 degrees. Let stand 15 minutes before serving.

I guess this was lasagna week for me as I attended a cooking demonstration given in our town by the Adventist Church whose members are mainly vegetarian. They prepared Mexican Lasagna; a very nutritive, delicious entree made without meat and tomatoes.

MEXICAN LASAGNA

Ingredients:
1 1/2 tablespoons minced onion
3 tablespoons water
2 tablespoons butter or margarine
1 can (4 oz.) diced green chilies (mild), drained
3 eggs
1 cup small curd cottage cheese
1/2 teaspoon salt
1/4 teaspoon oregano
1/4 teaspoon ground cumin
4 cups broken tortilla chips, divided
2 cups shredded Monterey Jack cheese, divided
1 tablespoon dehydrated green peppers

1 cup sour cream
Serves 4 to 8
Directions for regular oven:

Combine onion, green pepper, water and butter in a sauce pan and simmer 4 or 5 minutes. Stir in green chilies and set aside. Mix together eggs, cottage cheese and seasonings and set aside.

Sprinkle 1 1/2 cups chips over bottom of an 12x8 dish. Spoon half of the cottage cheese mixture over chips. Spread half of the onion mixture over the cheese. Sprinkle with 1 1/2 cups of the Monterey Jack. Repeat chips, cottage cheese and onion layers.

Bake in regular oven at 350 degrees 45 minutes to 1 hour, shake slightly to see if center is set.

Combine remaining cheese and sour cream. Spread over casserole, sprinkle with remaining chips and return to oven until sour cream is heated. Let stand 3 minutes before serving.

servings.

For microwave? Instead of baking, microwave high 5 minutes. Reduce power 50 percent (medium). Microwave 9-14 minutes, or until center is almost set, rotating dish after half the cooking time. Then combine remaining cheese and sour cream. Spread over casserole. Sprinkle with remaining chips. Microwave high 3-5 minutes, or until sour cream is heated, rotating dish after half of the cooking time. Let stand 3 minutes and serve.

They also served corn bread with this.

ORANGE HONEY BUTTER

Beat together thoroughly 4 tablespoons margarine, 4 tablespoons honey, and 1 teaspoon grated orange rind. Use electric mixer, if possible. More orange rind if desired.

The hat. Usually you think of the hat as feminine. Like in the old saying, "I felt terrible, so I went out and bought a hat." Only for the last 30 years or so, women haven't been wearing hats.

That's hats. Not protective gear for wearing in cold weather, but hats, whose shape and texture have stylish meaning.

Meantime there's always the concept of men's hats.

Men's head gear burgeon with meaning from the Indian's feathers to the miner's lamp, even when they are basically for practical purposes. Look at the cowboy hat. Built to stay on while both hands are busy, yet wide-brimmed for shade in a land where no shade is.

The crown of the cowboy hat is high, to provide a little air chamber above the head. And serviceable enough to carry water in it to a thirsty horse. Practical, yes. But did you ever see anything more dashing, more flattering to the human profile? Or more adventurous looking?

So of course we've had everyone wanting to wear a cowboy hat.

Always it's the hat that tells the story, signifies the rank, or sets off uniqueness.

For uniqueness, there's Winston Churchill's bowler, or Lincoln's stovepipe hat. Others wore them, but never really quite owned them.

For rank, remember General McArthur's gold-wreathed cap. General George Marshall was rarely pictured in a hat. This suggests why Marshall is not very famous, though his contribution to the world was very great.

And what is a king without a crown. A crown, in fact, is the very peak of impracticality. It is worn solely for its meaning. Except for the crowns worn by Assyrian kings. These short men wore tall, swirling, cone-shaped crowns to set them apart. After all, you can't always be standing in a chariot.

Also from ancient times is the most glamorous of all headpieces, the helmet of the Greek warrior. I never have heard what the meaning was for that brush of (was it horsehair?), curving up the back and standing high above the metal visor, but for artistic flair and gallantry, I think it unsurpassed.

All the headpieces men wear have a look of importance, if not splendor. Consider the hard hat, the riveter's visor, the leather flyer's helmet Lindberg wore.

The police officer would lack dignity without the official hat. The football player must at least be holding his helmet when they take his picture. That's what's keeping golfers back—no distinctive headpiece. And teachers. They should wear their mortarboards as they did back in the Middle Ages.

I remember when our son was small and discovered hats.

That's when it really shows! Try to get a boy to take off his new (a) baseball cap, (b) snowmobile helmet, (c) beanie, or (d) Mickey Mouse ears!

New businesses started in area

"KW Construction builds houses," Ken West said. The business is new, although West said he's been building for 15 years and had a four year apprenticeship. He also took the state test.

"Sometimes people have plans already drawn; sometimes they tell me what they want and I draw them up," West said. He likes building all kinds of houses, "especially new ones," he smiled. Remodeling is more of a challenge, though.

Married and living on Jaquay Road, West looks forward to a building boom in the area.

Dave Bolin is "getting organized," he said. His machine shop, called Depot Production, is on South 4th Street, East Jordan.
What does he make?
"What the customer wants," he said. Right now he supplies the labor for large orders in aluminum or steel.

Prior to coming to East Jordan, Bolin worked for the University of California in the Lawrence Radiation Laboratory. Physicists made drawings of devices they wanted and the shop made them.

But a friend said he should come to Michigan. "Much better than California," said Bolin.

Ed's Sanitation is new, but Ed was part of a partnership, G. and M. Sanitation. Now Stanley E. Gay, the "G" in the partnership, is continuing the business on his own.

Ed said he hauls away large items on request. His regular routes cover Horton Bay, Ironton, and Deer Lake areas as well as Boyne City where he's headquartered. His new phone, not listed yet, is 582-2466.

EJ Family Health Center gets grant

The East Jordan Family Health Center has recently received a grant award from the Michigan Department of Public Health for a diabetic patient education program (in the amount of $4,958). The money will be used primarily to offer classes to diabetics and their families in the self-care and management of this complex disease. Also in the planning stages are an ongoing diabetic support group and a gestational diabetic screening.

Utilizing an innovative "team approach," physicians, nurses, dietitian and other health center staff will be serving on a task force along with District #3 Health Department and Charlevoix Area Hospital personnel to design and implement this important patient education program.

The first diabetic patient education class is scheduled to be held at the East Jordan Family Health Center on June 13, 16, 20 and 23 from 4 to 5:30 p.m. The classes will be offered free of charge as a community service.

Anyone interested in attending is asked to call the clinic's health educator and program coordinator, Debra Rozek at 536-2249 for further details.

Deficits

The digester is part of the sewage treatment plant that holds the sludge until it can be put through the system. By putting the new roof on the digester, the city will add about seven more feet of storage that they can use in the winter when they store up the sewage until the weather gets warmer and it can be worked.
Then the Commissioners authorized the purchase to two new riding lawn mowers from the local Sears store. The mowers will replace the ones that are breaking down constantly, according to Clifton. The city will use the parts from the three broken mowers to make up one that works and then they will get rid of the parts that they cannot use. The local Sears store was the low bidder for the mowers among the bids received.

MENTAL HEALTH
The next regular meeting of the Northern Michigan Community Mental Health Services Board will be held on Thursday, June 16 at 8 p.m. in the administrative offices, located at 8746 Moeller Dr., Harbor Springs. The public is invited to attend.
BANKS TOWNSHIP

Pork will be served beginning at noon. Games and competitions for young and old fill the afternoon. The day ends with a gospel concert at 6:30. Come and join our community festival!

Historical Society

The Portside Arts and Historical Society will be sponsoring a special program at 7:30 p.m. Thursday, June 9 at the Elm Pointe Museum.
A presentation will be given by Carleton Bowen, William Zoulek, William Porter and Alice Malpass Neaman on descendants of early East Jordan.
A talk, "Humor with Homer" will be given by the sixth grade students involved in "Olympics of the Mind."
The public is invited to attend.

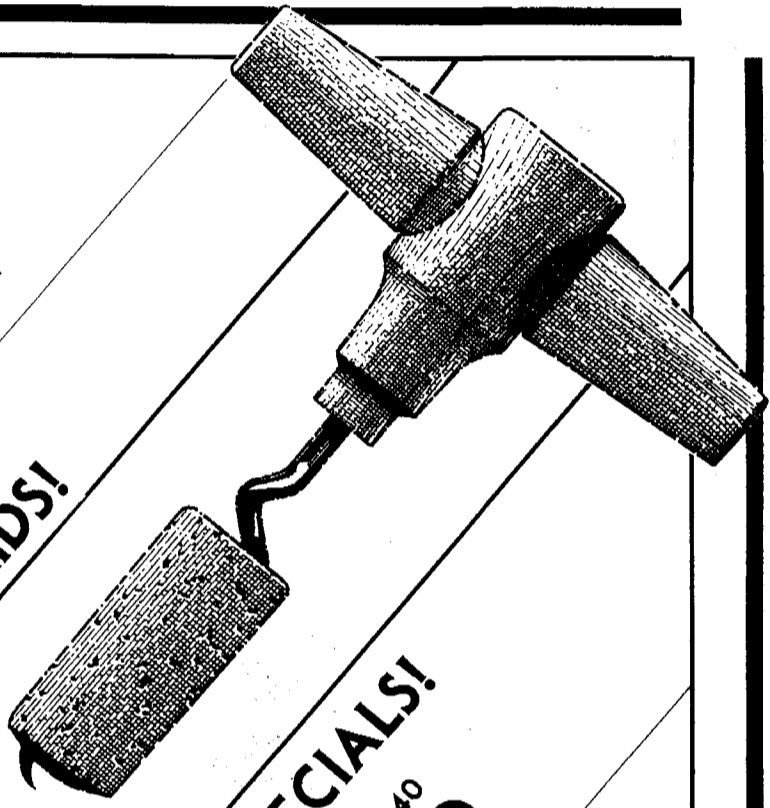

Almost every night during the summer you can see and hear a Little League baseball game being played on the major league field that is part of Veterans Memorial Park. At this game, held Monday night between the Dodgers and the Orioles, this player decided to jump up in the air prior to making the touch at home plate. It looks like the catcher was trying for the out, but he missed according to the umpire.
