EJ reinstates previously cut school programs

Even though East Jordan school enrollment may have slumped by possibly 50 students, causing a possible loss of $50,000 of state aid, superintendent Tom Rossler said that the school's finances are in good shape.

He explained it was the result of a policy of zero reliance on state aid funds, because these have come in on an irregular basis.

East Jordan continues to qualify for the state aid formula. Final enrollment count will be made on the fourth Friday of September, and the exact amount of aid subsequently determined.

Rossler said projections were for $180,000—lower than last year's $200,000 plus.

The school aid is a formula supplementing local property tax revenues, which last year amounted to $2,442,000, with expenditures of $2,287,000.

The school auditors were Hill, Woodcock, and Schroderus of Petoskey.

Solid financial footing, Rossler said at the school board's regular meeting on September 13, makes possible the return to fuller school curriculum. The junior primary class has been reinstated. "I'm glad that's back," said principal Don Peters.

Also reinstated is physical education for grades 1-7. Sixth and seventh grades have enrichment classes of seven weeks each of band, art, music, and other subjects, depending on grade level.

Class sizes, except for fifth grade, average 24 students.

Increased use of facilities, Rossler said, means four more hours of custodial service per payment period. He obtained board approval for hiring a substitute, if necessary.

Ken Lemon, who has driven a school bus for 13 years, received his requested retirement with appreciation expressed for his service in extra school events. Dave Graham was moved from substitute status to fill Lemon's vacated position. Taking over as substitute will be Tom Wiltjer, who was also low, and only, bidder for the snow removal contract. His duties are not expected to be in conflict.

Athletics secretary Dennis Snarey will take on 8th grade health and science classes and 8th grade physical education for the fall semester.

Appointed to coach grades 7-8 basketball was Randy Miller, and Buck Cihak, grades 7-8 football.

Bids on the school's tax-anticipation borrowing will be opened on September 27 at 7 p.m.

Ann Johnston, assistant to the community education director, presented the list of courses for enrichment for the fall season, and the courses for adult education. She pointed out there were a few non-credit, basic courses to bring students to the level where credit courses would be suitable. Johnston also presented copies of building use regulations.

Two new features in the school program this year will be "shared programs" and a pilot program in elementary school called "Mathematics Their Way."

The latter is under the direction of teacher Betty Walker, who studied the approach for more than a year, and this past summer took a course in it. She explained it as being what has been more or less tried for years, but now presented in an expanded, organized method. The approach is to ground the children well in math understanding by many experiences first with actual objects, before moving on to written symbols.

"Shared programs" is for high school students needing a course not offered at their high school, but available at another district. Four students in East Jordan will go to Charlevoix for advanced math.

Eventually Charlevoix may trade back for something available at East Jordan. Meantime, Rossler said, a class in eighth grade is moving ahead in math and will eventually supply a class large enough in high school for scheduling the course.

Boyerne needs donations to get $25,000 grant for airport terminal

In order to take advantage of a $25,000 grant for an airport terminal, Boyne City is soliciting donations from airport users and beneficiaries. The grant from Michigan Aeronautics Commission stipulates a matching $25,000 from the city, which the city plans to meet by borrowing $22,500 from the MAC for 10 years and finding $2,500 from private sources.

The $2,500 is for engineering costs and must be raised immediately, according to acting city manager Tom Garlock, in order that construction may begin in the spring. He held out encouragement that if sufficient funds are forthcoming, the city would then make plans to extend the paved runway another 800 feet and thus allow for use of the airport by jet planes.

At the September 27 noon meeting the commissioners will decide on authorizing the loan application for $22,500.

At the September 20 meeting the commission agreed to purchase a police car from the state. Chief John Talboys said that although the city would prefer to purchase from a local dealer, the state cars are both lower in price by $750 to $1000 and stronger in construction.

The state contracts with car manufacturers on the basis of state tests, thus Talboys said the last new car purchased did not have to be replaced in one year. "This is the first time that has happened," he said, noting that the car was purchased from the state. Police cars, he pointed out, run up 100,000 miles in a year or so.

The Harborage brought in four proposed changes in plans for construction, which had already been reviewed by the city planning commission. Saying they were not substantive changes requiring a public hearing, the commission accepted them subject to qualification on two points. One concerned changing the location of a berm so that it concealed a garage from view. The commission felt the four-foot height would be satisfactory, but, if not they would ask for modification. The other, placing water/sewer mains underground in front of the buildings instead of under the drives for protection against freezing, will still need final approval by Grainger Engineering.

A third change was in having one-car instead of two-car garages. The fourth was altering the promenade so that it curved in to go along the marina instead of continuing along Front Street. "More pleasant," said Harborage developer Rick Smith.

Pat Berlo, new president of Crooked Tree Arts Council.

Berlo to head Crooked Tree

The new president of Crooked Tree Arts Council is Pat Berlo of East Jordan. She will take over from past president Ima Williams of Harbor Springs.

With the Council's very active support of the two counties' art interests now in its twelfth year, and with the McCune Arts Center building in Petoskey being utilized daily for art-related activities, Crooked Tree has become an organization of stature.

Berlo will be busy, but, she explained, the center has a director, Sean Ley. The council also operates under an executive board. This, in turn, is responsible to a full board of 38 with representatives from every community.

"Everybody's a volunteer," said Berlo. "This is how the system works. It works well."

Berlo sees her job as an opportunity to point up directions for Council focus. "When you have that many people involved, you have to have it pretty explicit."

Williams' term was focussed on completion of the Council's new by-laws. Berlo will be involved in laying out their application, as well as in acting on Council projects.

As city recreation director in East Jordan, Berlo has participated with the Council in presenting such Council events as the Prince Street Players. She sees art as one form of recreation.

Letter to be presented to reinstate East Jordan City Clerk

A letter to the mayor of East Jordan was circulated to present at the city council's regular meeting Tuesday night, Sept. 20, requesting that the mayor and the council reconsider their decision to dismiss clerk-treasurer Fern Morris.

At the council's September 6 meeting, Russ Dietrich, representing a group of 123 citizens, presented a petition to the council that also requested reconsideration. The letter differs in that it is signed by business people, some of whom reside outside of city limits, but all paying city taxes.

Chamber of Commerce president John Kempton emphasized that it is not taking any action in the controversy. The Chamber is not political, he said. The 30-some signers are all acting as individuals. Included are signatures of industry executives.

Meantime the council, before advertising for replacement, has been studying the question of the role of clerk-treasurer, as to such things as whether it should be divided and/or put under another authority. City Hall is being served by three staff people, two of whom were serving during Morris' tenure.

Final four will be interviewed for C-M

Four candidates for the Boyne City manager's job will be interviewed next Monday afternoon and the city commission may make the final decision in a special meeting to be held Monday night to offer the job to one of the candidates.

The four, who all have the qualifications that the commission's special committee have deemed necessary for the job, include three from Michigan and one from Ohio.

The four will be interviewed in closed sessions starting at noon Monday.

After the interviews, the selection committee will present their final recommendations to the full city commission for their consideration and final interviews with the candidates at an open meeting at 7:00 p.m.

The commissioners may elect to offer the job to one of the candidates at that time.

The selection committee includes city commissioners Steve Moody and Marty Paul; William McTaggart, the city attorney; Richard May, President of the Chamber of Commerce; and Tom Garlock, the city clerk who is acting as the interim city manager.

The final interviews will be the last step in replacing the former city manager, Tim Clifton, who resigned in August for a position in Monroe, Michigan.

Food dealers met for fun, games at Boyne Mt.

Bob Rogers, one of the pilots flying a Stearman bi-plane for the Red Baron Pizza company says goodbye to one of the passengers who went for a ride around Boyne Mountain during the annual Michigan Food Dealers convention.

Contests in golf, tennis and fishing draw entries from the food dealers attending the convention. Here the fishers try their luck in attracting some of the specially planted trout that were placed in the Boyne pond.

Meanwhile, other food market owners sampled some of the new ice cream flavors of the McDonald Dairy Company at their outdoor booth.

Food store owners have to eat also, and they lined up for the buffet-style Bavarian dinner that was one of the features of the convention at Boyne Mountain.

Waldner lawsuit date set

The vote on reducing county millage from 15 to 13 mills, which never came off last spring, is not a dead issue. According to Charlevoix County attorney Steven Barney, a motion date for a lawsuit has been set for Wednesday, Sept. 28 at 9:20 a.m. in circuit court, Charlevoix.

The suit was filed by Karl Waldner of Wilson Township when county commissioners refused a petition by Waldner, head of Organized Voters of America, for an election on reduction of taxes. The election was denied by the commissioners, although the signatures on the petition were proper and sufficient, because it specified that .2 of a mill of taxes collected should be assigned to public libraries.

Waldner's petition is actually an amendment of his first suit, which called for a special election and which was refused by the commission. Barney said the suit was improperly presented. Waldner changed some of the wording, but otherwise did not modify the petition.

In his amended petition, dated August 23, Waldner said, the "Defendants are fraudulently and self-servingly ignoring selected portions of the involved statutes."

No weir on Jordan

No temporary salmon weir will be placed in the Jordan River this fall. Department of Natural Resources' efforts to halt spawning chinook salmon were stymied by the September 8 vote of the River Zoning Board.

The negative vote on allowing the DNR a variance on wild-scenic river regulations would have had to be appealed to the Natural Resources Commission.

DNR biologist Steve Swan, speaking of the DNR cancellation on September 15, said the appeal process, even if successful, would have put them too late in the spawning season.

Instead, the project will be postponed until next year, with possible revisions worked out.

Swan predicted a strain on the river environment with hundreds of "snaggers" scrambling for the big fish going upstream. He said they would arrest as many snaggers as possible, but around-the-clock control would be difficult. "It's like an insurrection," he said. The DNR site choice 1/4 of a mile above Rogers Bridge was the chief cause for the objections, according to most observers. But Swan reiterated that they had tried a weir at the bridge a year ago, and found it "not a good site."

Swan explained that the 9,000 chinook expected in the Jordan this fall were not planted in the Jordan by the DNR. These fish are descendants of salmon originally planted elsewhere some years ago, he said, and about 10% of that planting strayed into the Jordan at spawning time.

Subsequently their offspring, of course, returned and rapidly increased the population of chinook through their own spawning.

The DNR says the 300,000 fingerlings, planted in the Jordan last spring in anticipation of a successful weir project, will not be returning to the Jordan for another three or four years when they will be mature.

This group of volunteers was honored last Wednesday noon at a luncheon at the Country Star for the efforts with the Department of Social Services. All told, the volunteers put in 6,130 hours for the year. The volunteers who attended the luncheon included, left to right, Marsha Smith, Raymond Ecker, Roland Putman, Irene Branson, Genetta Cole, Ivy Woodcock, Jane Baker, Sally Koerber, Opal Barrett, Venetta Ecker, Trudy Clark, Evelyn Thies, Warren Bonnet, Virginia Daniels, Constance Fraley, John Daniels, Lesella Barnes, Leon Bolhuls, Emerald T. Bolhuls.

Winter is just like morning. They both come too early.

I put twenty cents into the corner newspaper box, but the glass door would not open. I hit the change return button. Nothing happened; then I hit the side, using words unprintable here. My twenty cents fell into the return slot along with an additional thirty cents. I tried again with my twenty cents but it was returned without allowing the door to open. I looked around to see if anyone was watching. Then I thought: If I were to put the extra thirty cents back into the box, it would foul up the next guy who came along to buy a paper. So I put the thirty cents into my pocket. It gave me a good feeling to know that I had saved someone a lot of trouble.

Since the city is renovating Lake Street, we now are driving down the sandy extension of Front Street behind all the buildings facing Lake Street. I've always wanted to see how those buildings looked from behind. Most of them need a little fixing up; and they probably will be when the city turns the "alley" into a regular city street next spring. When I was a kid the Princess Theater operated where Sportsmans Bar is now. The only time I was in that alley was when we kids would sneak into the back door of the theatre, not having the ten cents to see Hoot Gibson ride a horse.

Wife: Why are you getting more to eat? Didn't I give you enough supper?

Me: My food ran out before I got through being hungry.

If I could properly express the highly intellectual thoughts that surge up and down my system, I believe I could sell them and set a record for obtaining fame and fortune. I've always wanted fortune—even though I might amass so much of it I'd be embarrassed. When you walk down the street, people don't give a hoot if you are following in fame; they are more interested in the terribly embarrassing fortune hanging out of your every pocket. I believe that if I were embarrassed with a huge fortune, I would work things out so I could enjoy life anyway.

Last week it was mentioned here that the City might pay me to stay out here in the boondocks and not move into town. After a disgusting mess of nays and yeas, they haven't done a thing about it. Now I'm thinking of taking a million from the city and hiding it in a California bank. That'll fix 'em.

We received a letter from our thirteen year old granddaughter in Kalamazoo. The first line said: "Thank you for running way out to the mail box to get this letter." If she doesn't turn out to be a newspaper columnist, I'll eat every blackberry on our back forty, worms and all.

A friend asked if I still watched professional football on TV. I told him that some weeks I do and some weeks I don't. Generally, though, I do do more often than I don't do. But do more times when I do do, I usually... Oh, phooey, I've reached the point where I don't know what I'm talking about. That's a downright strange thing, if you ask me.

After a mini weekend vacation to the Soo last weekend, I think I have found out why the Soo locks are the busiest in the world.

All you have to do is look as you are driving up I-75 at all of the signs saying that you should take a boat ride through the locks. There must be a zillion of those signs as you go up the road.

Or else, because there is little else to look at besides trees, your mind becomes keenly aware of the signs as you look around while driving trying to stay alert.

Anyway, there is little to see and it is very difficult to look at the trees... (look, a box elder among the scrub pines)... when you are going 55 miles an hour.

I had thought that with the economy being down and the steel mills running at some low capacity, that we would not see too many boats lock through the Soo.

I was right, except that I had not realized that the boat trips through the locks are making up for all the freighters that aren't going through.

Seems like business was as usual with all the little boats. Little compared to one of the behemoths that are plying the lakes these days.

At least now I know why the locks are so busy.

While up there, we ate Sunday dinner at the Antlers. Now my wife and kids had never been to that place before, and while I told them of the reputation for great food, I hadn't had an opportunity either.

Well, the food was good, but the exciting thing is when they decide that the place is not noisy enough. They then cut loose with a series of whistles, bells, and even the ringing of an old frying pan that they hit with a large mallet. Wakes up the whole place real quick they say, and lordy it does.

When the sounds abounded, my wife just about jumped off the seat, the kids immediately thought that there was a raid, and I immediately started to wonder when it was going to stop.

But stop it did, and the whole place seemed so shocked by the event, that they didn't make a sound—except one baby who was so frightened that she started to cry while her mother tried to calm her down.

The other things that couldn't keep the kids in their seats were all the stuffed wildlife. I should say, former wildlife. I mean, where else could a kid hug a bear, even if it is stuffed? The owners have accumulated a lot of different varieties over the years, and they all seem to add to the ambience of the place.

If you go up there to eat, just be prepared for the noise of your life. And the good food.

Now, if we could just get Mac or Terry to do.....

It isn't only recently that people want to do something about all our pollutions. Back in England around 1860, when the Industrial Revolution was about 100 years underway, a famous writer named John Ruskin wrote bitterly about how it was a menace to the earth. He was bitter because he couldn't stop it.

The bad aspects of the Industrial Revolution, sadly enough, were propelled not only by greedy, powerful men, but also by the ignorant and unpowerful, who desperately took the jobs in the mills rather than starve.

So what's new? Well, add one more class of culprits. You and I, who would rather not insist on and pay for more laboratories to test production as well as products for their effect on the environment.

Ruskin found out you can only create a ruckus for a few years, and a general ho-hum sets in.

I can feel the ho-hum coming on, myself. It's gotten so I can hardly bear to read—or afford—one more plea to join the fight to keep the federal Clean Air Act.

And all those other fights to-enlist in, like the acid rain battle, the battle for clean groundwater, and so on.

You can't make me believe the industrialists were ignorant of all their harm-doing.

When I was little I wondered why the law could be called on my dog because it barked a little, but the huge chimney a mile away could drop choking gusts on us of whatever it was that went up in endless clouds, and no law was called. And, you guessed it, I couldn't keep the little dog.

Knowing now that law-making favors the mighty is what makes me a joiner. A whole bunch of poor people can equal one rich one.

Besides the ho-hums, there are the yah-buts. "Yah-but you like having paint that goes on so smoothly and lasts so long, don't you? Well, Toots, that's what industry does for you and it takes chemicals!"

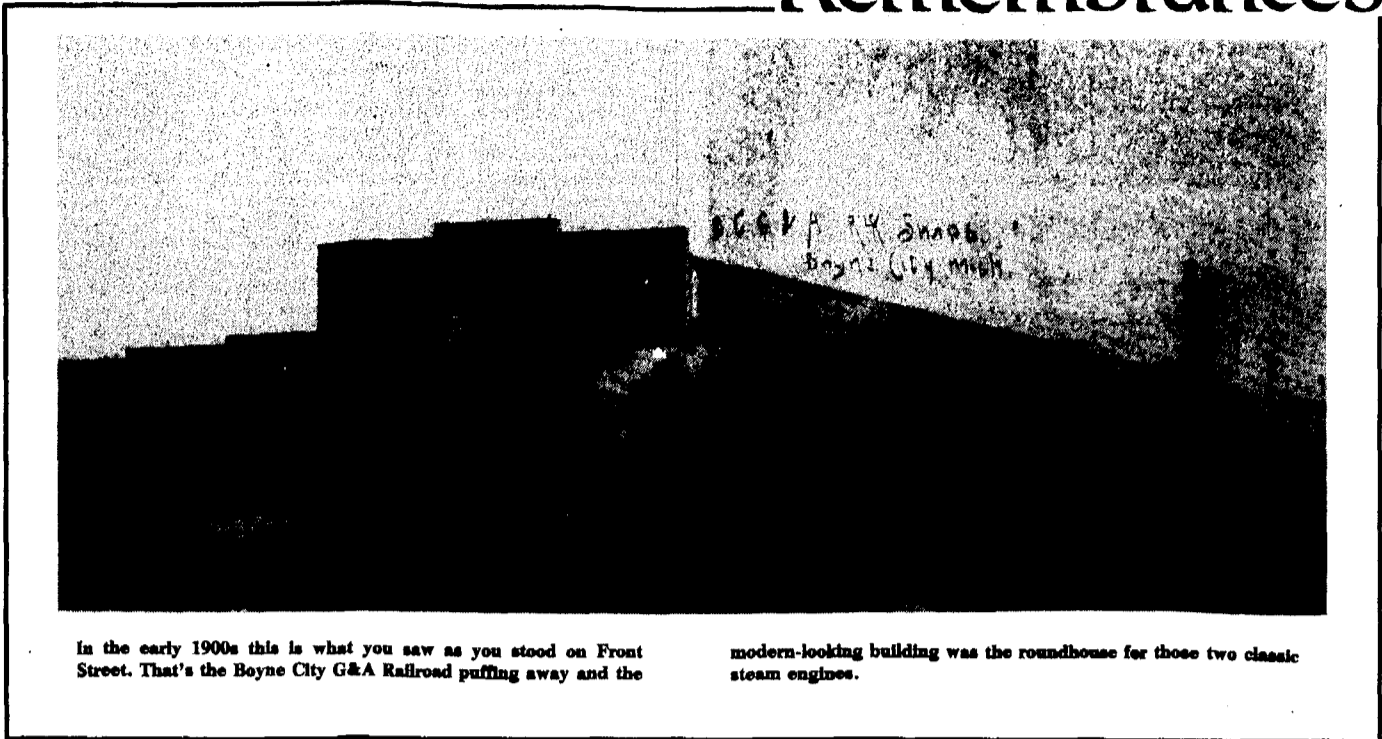

I am telling myself that while I hold a can of used paint thinner.

What do I do with it! If I pour it on the ground, it keeps the grass from growing. If I pour it on the driveway, it still will run off, seep down, and get into the groundwater.

If I sop up some newspaper with it and burn it, it will get into the air, and eventually settle down somewhere and get into the groundwater. Even if I send it to a licensed, clay-lined landfill, it will eventually get into the water, because no landfill (quoting the experts, here) can remain safe for more than 30 years.

And at this very moment there are probably 47,000 people holding cans of used paint thinner. Do you feel something go through you? That's the earth calling "Heh!"

Remembrances

In the early 1900s this is what you saw as you stood on Front Street. That's the Boyne City G&A Railroad puffing away and the modern-looking building was the roundhouse for those two classic steam engines.

Letters

Editor,
On our coffee break the other day we were discussing the problems of becoming an expert on something or other. It can be dangerous. You might become an expert on the wrong things. I have worked on it for nearly three-quarters of a century and never made it. I am grateful.

Let's take Ronald Reagan. He is a real expert. He can make more mistakes in one thirty minute news conference than his staff and the three networks can correct in a week. He is really good at it. Looks you right in the eye, too.

He sent a handful of marines to Lebanon—set them down in the middle of a war, told them not to fire their guns, just keep the peace. He got them killed. He sent two thousand more marines. He positioned warships with eight thousand sailors to do a little back-up bombing. He is going to keep the peace even if he has to kill everyone over there.

He has used 269 tragedies to get the money for his MX missiles, nerve gas, neutron bombs, etc. Peace-Peace he screams. He is a real expert. The only problem is, his expertise could very well get us all killed. I wouldn't like that.

He thinks he still has blanks in his guns. Someone should tell him that he is playing with live ammunition. He has changed the very meaning of peace into something obscene. He is another Idi Amin with Hollywood trappings. God help us.

Bill Kadrovach mixes another batch of dough to be made into raised donuts. Kadrovach is the owner of the newest business in town, The Bread Box Bakery.

Bread Box opens with wonderful aroma

On deans list

While most of us are sleeping in bed, there is now one man in Boyne City who shows up to work about midnight to start his day for his new business.

The business, The Bread Box, opened last week amid the traumas, the start up problems and everything else, but, it was an instant success according to the dozen or so donut eaters and unofficial bread tasters who have tasted the merchandise.

But that is not unexpected as Bill Kadrovach starts to mix up the ingredients for the day's baking.

Kadrovach, who for the past 17 years was the chief baker at the Country Star Supermarket, has worked all those years perfecting his recipes and the baking talent needed to come up with 10 different varieties of breads, 10 varieties of rolls, raised donuts and fried cakes.

He said that the shop will also be making cookies and cakes. Wedding cakes will be made to order, he added, and that he hopes to start baking as soon as possible to cover that end of the baked goods business.

Kadrovach is not alone, though, it is a family business. He is assisted by his wife, Sandy, who starts her day as early as five a.m. She, in turn, is helped by the children in the family, Natalie, Jennifer, and even Kristine at times.

All the fresh baked goods are made from scratch according to Kadrovach, unlike some other places that use frozen dough that is prepared ahead and then just baked.

One look around the store and you can see the many containers of different kinds of flour used in the baking process. And all the equipment that is necessary to make the breads and the other goods the store features.

The store is tastefully decorated and features a porcelain stove as a center piece that attracts the eye.

The shop, which until last year was used as a print shop, was just about torn down and rebuilt to the specifications that are necessary for the baking business.

While the original front of the building was left intact on Lake Street, the entire rear of the store was torn down and rebuilt. A new floor was poured to hold the heavy equipment and the oven that Kadrovach uses.

The bakery has a changed look from the normal store as the walls in the customer area are papered, with the exception of two areas where the original brick is exposed. That area is sealed with paint to comply with the health codes.

While it is necessary to enter the building from the Front Street entrance, because of the construction on Lake Street, both entrances will be utilized after the completion of both streets.

When asked what they intend to do with the leftover and unsold merchandise, Kadrovach said that he will be freezing the day-old baked goods until Sunday morning when he will sell them at one-half off.

Their opening days for the shop was not without problems, though, as the entire day's worth of baked goods had to be thrown away because of a malfunction in the new oven. The temperature would not get hot enough to bake. After a small adjustment, the shop was off and running and baking goods like mad to make up for the unplanned loss.

If you visit the shop, you will find out that one of the hardest things to do is to control your buying habit as the fresh baked items are displayed in quantity, and it is hard to have "just one donut".

Daniel V. Spence, son of Mrs. Patricia Spence of East Jordan, has been named to the Presidential Honor Society at the DeVry Institute of Technology in Columbus, OH.

To be eligible for the prestigious honor, students must have a cumulative grade point average of at least 3.5 (out of a possible 4.0) after two terms of study.

Kadrovach's wife, Sandy, waits on the customers and decorates the cakes. Here she is waiting on an unseen customer who is hidden behind all of the fresh baked breads the store features.

EJ gets dumped by Charlevoix

By MICHAEL BURR
The evening held high hopes for the Devils of East Jordan, but before the night was over the roof had caved in. Final score, Charlevoix 35, East Jordan 14. It was just an awesome display of football by the Raiders of Charlevoix.

Coach Joe Etienne couldn't have said it better. "They totally bottled us up for the whole game." For three quarters Charlevoix ran and passed the ball as they saw fit, and on defense they didn't give East Jordan enough yardage to plant a tree in. Finally in the fourth quarter the Devils started to come alive, and for fifteen minutes they played well enough to score two touchdowns. There were some bright spots for the evening. Darrell Spence galloped 67 yards on one play, and Chris Anderson almost matched it with a 45 yarder. Those two plays and the fact East Jordan didn't sustain any major injuries were about the only bright points for the evening.

It didn't look good to start with. East Jordan had three starters on the bench, with Joe Buick quarterback lost for the season, fullback Mike Graham out with a sprained ankle, and tackle Mitch Olstrom down with the flu. As it turned out those odds were unsurmountable. Well, that's life. This Friday East Jordan travels to Bellaire and it appears Bellaire is small and few in numbers, and East Jordan hopefully will get back on track heading for a ski Valley Championship season.

At Thursday's JV game East Jordan beat Charlevoix 22-16. No statistics were available at press time.

Boyne takes 3rd, EJ 4th in CC

The Boyne City Cross Country team settled for third place team score in a four way meet hosted by Boyne last week.

Charlevoix swept the first three individual spots, with Bill Taylor leading the way with a time of 14:40, to take the match.

The Ramblers top two, Mike Hulett and Steve Parsons, took fourth and fifth with both of their personal best times. Hulett turned in a time of 15:31 while Parsons had a three mile clocking of 16:02. Parsons is a junior while Hulett is running in his senior year.

Top finishers for the other two teams were Andrew Stonehouse for Gaylord with a time of 16:22 and seventh place, and Rick Ernst for East Jordan with an 18:55 clocking.

Katie Vickers finished sixth out of a field of 14.

The point totals ended up in favor of Charlevoix as they had only 20 points. Gaylord took second with 51 total points, Boyne third with 62 points and East Jordan had a disappointing score of 114.

Freshman quarterback for East Jordan, Ted Snowden, tries to run around the end at the game last week with Charlevoix. Snowden was stopped shortly after the picture was taken with a no-gain down. The team lost to Charlevoix by the score of 35-14.

A strong defensive effort on the part of the Ramblers was met last Friday by a stronger effort on the part of the Gaylord team. Gaylord came out on top by a score of 14-6. The loss puts the Boyne record at 1-1 for the season.

Boyne fights rain, defense in loss

Defensive effort and rain were the deciding factors in last Friday's 14-6 loss to the Gaylord Blue Devils for the Ramblers of Boyne City. The Ramblers seemed to have a hard time fighting both as it rained for the first half, leaving the field slippery and wet after the rest stop.

Boyne did get on the point board with a nice 40 yard pass from Rob Musser to Mike Gabos set up a two yard run in by Marc Mentel late in the game.

The Blue Devils went one better though, and scored two touchdowns with two yard plunges in the second and third quarters. Their place kicker added the two easy points making the final score 14-6.

Boyne City had a hard time against the defense that the Blue Devils put up, as time after time when they had the ball they could move it down the field to score.

The loss, which was the opening game of the season in the Michigan Huron Shores Conference made the team record so far this young

This Friday, the Ramblers will meet St.

Ignace at their home field and the fan support should help urge the team back into the winning pattern. Game time is 7:30 p.m.

Falls B-ball into action

By PAUL THEISEN
The Boyne Falls Loggers got off to a rather "fair" start this season. At the girls' pre-season Basketball Tournaments, held in Alba, on September 6 and 8, the Loggers grabbed a Runner-up trophy for their efforts.

The Loggers girls played on home-court last Wednesday and took a stiff win over Central Lake.

Coming out of the first period, the Loggers already grabbed an early lead, leaving the quarter 12-2.

As half-time arrived the score was pushed up to 22-8, the Loggers remaining in the lead.

Third quarter led to a score of 31-14, again Boyne Falls holding the lead.

As the Loggers wrapped up the fourth quarter, they also wrapped up another win. Final score being 42-24.

For the Loggers Kim Mikula received the top scoring honors, pulling in 14 points. Behind Mikula, Kim McKnew grabbed 8 points for Boyne Falls.

Top scoring honors for Central Lake went to Carrie Carlton, with 8 points, and Cindy Guntzville with 7.

Thursday night action at the Falls arena didn't prove to be as easy as the Loggers had hoped. The Inland Lakes Bulldogs took the game 69-47.

At the end of first quarter action the Bulldogs grabbed an early lead, 17-10, and remained in the lead throughout the game.

For Boyne Falls, Monique Churchill and Kris Bell both scored 16 points in the losing effort. Churchill was also the top rebounder of the evening, having 13, as Kris Bell had 11.

For the Bulldogs, Joni Doyle scored 20 points, receiving top scoring honors. Also, Karen Beaver scored 15 points in the Bulldog victory.
