No millage increase for proposed Boyne City Budget

The Boyne City budget presented by city manager Randy Frykberg at Tuesday night's city commission meeting will make the sixth year that the millage has not been increased. In fact, it will go down from 17.93 to 17.80, a decrease of 0.13. Frykberg said in his transmittal letter to the commission that thus "the financial integrity and stability of the city is once again evidenced."

While the millage was not increased, the increased value of property in the city will allow for higher tax revenues. The total budget for the coming year is $2,377,915, which is an increase of $226,007 or 12.6 percent over last year's proposed budget.

Frykberg said the increase is primarily due to the $290,225 One Water Street Community Development Block Grant which the city is matching with $80,000. The city is also committed to $47,000 in grants for airport improvements.

Progress is being made toward reducing the water/wastewater deficit, Frykberg said. The fund will be in the black for the first time in seven years. A projected operating surplus of $8,000 will probably apply to payment of $10,000 bond principal. Frykberg underlined that a water rate increase is not proposed for this year.

Budgeted for the year, besides the airport and One Water Street projects, are the extension of Front Street between Water and Main, a new production well, paving 0.3 miles of Anderson Road, curb-installation on North Lake Street, and development of Peninsula Beach, contingent upon receipt of pending grant funds.

Anderson Road and North Lake will each have expenses shared.

Frykberg said the city's $1,168,415 operating expenses should be noted as separate from the $363,225 of total grant monies, which are not from local taxes. The grant funds are listed under "Capital Project Funds."

Besides the $610,240 from property taxes, for general fund expenses, the city expects $209,700 from state-shared revenues; $77,800 from federal revenue sharing; $103,900 from municipal functions; $32,000 from interest; $21,140 from rentals; $54,000 from housing commission reimbursements; and $59,000 from other sources.

Other fund revenues total $1,209,500. These include the grant funds, water/wastewater, streets, debt retirement, and motor pool funds.

Frykberg's budget follows a simplified, condensed form, in conformity "with recommendations of the city's C.P.A. and state guidelines."

He noted further that "no funding will be proposed for new personnel and raises will be held to a minimum, with the Union Personnel receiving a previously negotiated 4.9 percent raise, and Exempt Personnel receiving an average raise of 3.1 percent."

"Capital outlay," the report continues, "will remain minimal and reflects either required replacement or cost-saving measures."

"Capital improvements," he said, "which are predominantly funded through grants and loans will be a major activity" to increase the city's viability.

The city commission begins budget review sessions on March 20 at 11:30 a.m.

Succeeding sessions are dated March 27 and possibly April 10, with April 10 at 7 p.m. the date of the public hearing and Truth-in-Taxation Hearing.

Avid readers await RIF at East Jordan

Students in Margaret Borowski's East Jordan third grade show what it is like to have their own books to pick out, take home, and keep, thanks to the school and the RIF program.

"Are we going to have RIF again this year?" Reading consultant Pam Allen said this is about the first thing the children say to her in September when school starts.

RIF stands for Reading Is Fun. The program's purpose is to encourage children's reading, by giving each child a book to own and to read just for pleasure.

Allen says this happens three times a year; the first time for this year comes up Wednesday, March 14, and excitement is running high.

Books are ordered from approved publishers with funds from a federal grant of $800, with the school's share being $200. This sum buys books for grades five through seven.

The school entered the program in 1978. Recently it used P.T.A. money with district money to extend the program locally to grades three and four.

It will take more than one day to distribute all the books, even with volunteering parents on hand to help. Picking the right book is important to each child. Students write reviews of books they chose in former years to help others with this week's choices.

Bookplates are ready to go into each of the books. The artist designing this year's bookplate was student Adrian Maule. The owners' names are necessary because the children share their books with each other.

Allen said that the bookplate contest and the posters in the classrooms are part of the preparations for RIF day. Business people coming into school to tell how they use reading, is another preparatory feature.

"It's one of my favorite programs," said Allen. She rates help from a parent volunteer on making orders, and children stopping her in the hall to tell her about their books as important parts of the pleasure.

EJ holds line on fee waivers

Councilman Cal Gotts walked out of the March 6 city council meeting in East Jordan after the council denied a waiver on Little League fees. He explained later in a phone interview that he left rather than say "something I might be sorry for."

He said he also thought it might make a point. His return to city council, he said, after being off one term, was to plug for a change in the council's policy of fee charges for use of public facilities like the parks and the Civic Center. He said his stand reflects the view of the people in the city.

At the council meeting, he called the policy counterproductive, saying that while the city, in collecting fees from service organizations, would realize some revenue, it would also likely lose a considerable amount as volunteer effort and club donations fell off.

At a recent parks and recreation committee meeting, a drop of donations for the Civic was noted.

The Little League field was designed to serve the youngsters, Gotts said, and was put in by volunteers.

Mike Burr, present at the council meeting, pointed out that Little League volunteers put up the chain link fence, cleaned up litter, and made repairs following vandalism.

The council, last year, in a search for more revenue, set up the policy of charging fees, even of service organizations. Council members said further that when a group reserves a public facility, it is removing it from use by the rest of the public at that time, and so should be charged for that use.

Gotts position is that these groups are using the facilities for the purpose of benefitting the community. He cited the Lioness' Club as an example. The city asked them to pay for use of the Civic Center to give the children of the community a Christmas Party.

A compromise was reached for this particular occasion by the city's paying the fee for the club.

City council has stipulated a $25 fee for each team using the Little League Field. The fee covers the season. Gotts was the only council member supporting the waiver request.

In other business, council heard a presentation by Lake Charlevoix Cable TV, requesting a rate increase of $1.25 to cover the cost of adding new stations to the service.

In an advisory vote city council sustained the city ordinance on cable TV rate increase procedures, requiring a 60-day wait, before calling a public hearing on the request. The hearing will be held on May 27 at 7 p.m.

John W. Richter received permission for a special use permit for a veterinary hospital at 800 Water Street with the stipulation that no animals be housed or penned outside.

A request by the Anishinabe Education Intertribal Council for use of city land on M-32 for this year's Day of the Eagle powwow will go back for discussion with the group. To prepare for the annual powwow, the group had asked if the city would mow the grass, put in an electrical dropline, and spread gravel at the entrance for the undeveloped 12-acre parcel.

The Anishinabe don't want a conflict with the baseball schedule at the Tourist Park and have looked for another powwow location.

Mayor Bill Merwin said, "I feel East Jordan residents benefit from the powwow," and asked that the city get together over arrangements to reduce the cost to the city. City superintendent said the preparations would cost about $500.

Accepting the low bid by Tobin, Florie, and Holly of Traverse City, the council appointed the firm to be city auditors for a three-year contract of $4,000 a year, "which is a considerable savings over previous audits," said Dionne.

Council convened for a closed session with fire chief Dick Barnett over a personal matter. He said "action has been filed for possible litigation." The council agreed to call in former city attorney Roy C. Hayes in place of Tom Anderson, vacationing out of town.

BF meeting set for park

A meeting to review a proposed recreational facility is planned for Wednesday, March 14 at 7 p.m. at the Boyne Falls Village Hall. The site for the proposed park is on a 23 acre site already owned by the village.

A recreation advisory committee representing school, county planning, citizen, student, senior citizen and village council interests, is holding the meeting.

Among the uses suggested for the land are installation of tennis and basketball courts, sliding hill, scenic overlook, picnic area, hiking and cross-country ski trails and restrooms.

The property, located on the southeast side of the village, was purchased last summer by the village council as the site for installation of a new municipal well for the village. Work to hook up the new well with the village water system has not yet been completed.

April 30th is set as the date for a special millage election by the Boyne City Board of Education Monday night. The board is planning to ask the voters to approve 21.3 mills of extra voted millage for the operation of the schools.

While technically an increase, the one-year millage request is actually a renewal of what the school system has been collecting this past year. The current 21.3 mill levy expires this June.

The board set June 11 as the date for the annual school election, this year for two board members.

The school board also settled a grievance matter involving a school bus driver, agreeing that she was entitled to three weeks' sick leave pay.

The board also agreed to make a curriculum change to begin next year. Classes within the social studies curriculum were changed so that U.S.

History, which is now being offered in the 11th grade, will be taught in the 10th. Government classes will also be switched from the 12th grade to the 11th grade level.

The reasoning behind the switch was that students were not able to adequately answer questions on, for example, college entrance exams, which are taken between the junior and senior level when the students have not had the opportunity to gain the knowledge the classes offered.

The board also thanked the various coaches who volunteered for the winter sports programs in the high school and middle school.

They then appointed coaches for the spring sports of track and tennis.

Students from the middle school made their "Smeltania and smelt dipping" presentation before the board members, who commended the program for bringing local historical information to the community.

BF re-elects incumbents

Boyne Falls village council election produced six write-in candidates as well as reinstating its slate of unopposed incumbents.

Returned to office were Charles Myers, president; Debra Taylor, clerk; Gladys Upton, treasurer; and William Zimmerman, Joanna Foster, Gerald Bell, and Gerald Hawes.

Two seats on the six-person board of trustees were left open when the terms of Bill Carson and Tom Neidhamer expired. The write-ins with the highest number of votes were Carson and Ken Doty. Clerk Taylor said

Bonding for Glen's Market OK'd by commissioners

The former location of Country Star Market in Boyne City will be brought to life again with a $1.8 million renovation job by Glen's Market & Family Center. Opening date is targeted for June 22.

Glen A. Catt, attending the city commission meeting on March 13, said the renovation will cost as much as putting up a new building, but since the firm prizes the location, it will remodel the building.

In the process, the city and Glen's will get together over traffic control measures for the parking area.

Boyne City's Economic Development Corporation is issuing the tax-free municipal bonds. The commission approved the bonding decision at their Tuesday noon meeting.

The project district also will include Butler's drug store and the laundromat. Two directors were added to the EDC board for the duration of the bonding process, as required by EDC regulations. The new directors will be Francis Butler and Patrick Mitchell, owners of adjoining businesses.

"The test for EDC is employment," said commissioner Steve Moody. The new store will employ 60 full and part time people, according to Catt.

"We first looked at Boyne City quite a few years ago," said Catt. "And also tried to negotiate on the IGA building at one point, but things just didn't work out."

He said the firm had feasibility studies done before the decision, and he noted that many shoppers in the city are drawn to Petoskey. Having an operation the size of the new Glen's, he said, will act as an attraction to shopping in Boyne City.

The new store will require all new refrigerating equipment and display cases, Catt said. The produce department will be tripled. The restaurant will be torn out to make the whole area the Family Market.

"We'll have a coffee shop like the one in (Gaylord's) Glen's and an expanded bakery and deli," he said.

The clothing department will not be the usual supermarket variety. On the other hand, Catt said, the city already has stores with high quality clothes, so the Family Store range of clothing will supply need for middle-line quality.

Catt said the firm feels strongly about traffic control at the parking area and hopes something can be done both to increase safety and improve appearances. The parking area will be resurfaced, with proper drainage the focus. Shared costs on repairing the damaged storm sewer and putting in curbing for entrances and exits will be worked out. "We're quite open about it," Catt said. Input on the other businesses in the project will also be required.

East Jordan city council approved the appointment of Tom Hoffman to replace Dave Waldron who resigned in February. Hoffman is from ward two and has lived in East Jordan for 15 years, serving in the police department, and at Big Rock Nuclear Power Plant as guard. He began serving at the March 6 council meeting.

Village election

if either of these does not accept, the election will apply to those next on the list. Two write-ins were also voted in the assessor slot. Top vote-gatherer was Janet Kondrat. Taylor said if she accepts, she will be the village assessor. Results are unofficial, Taylor added. They require the board of canvassers' endorsement on Friday to make them final. A total of 40 village residents came in to vote. Taylor said it was probably because the officials ran unopposed.

Jottings

BY JIM SILBAR

How cold was it? Well, it was cold enough for me to find out that the water lines freeze in the place that I am living inside of, even though the living area is quite cozy.

And like those who normally depend on a layer of snow around the base of the house to insulate it, I found out what can happen when we have a thaw that melts all that insulation.

So, Sunday was spent trying to find a warming device that could go under the crawl space to thaw out the pipes. And in the meantime, a few trips were made to the office to get enough water to see us through the day.

If the average family uses 39 gallons a day per person, I beat the average. We managed with just under 25 gallons. Most of the daily usage, by the way, is for flushing the toilet.

We Americans flush quite a bit, according to some of the information that passes over my desk. Quite a lot of that information gets flushed right into that round circular file that is under the desk. But, it gets looked at before it is carefully placed.

Anyway, after making a few calls, and finding no one with what I needed, I installed a couple of electric heaters and bided my time waiting for the thaw to take place.

It did, after a wait of several hours. The water began to flow, just like it should. This summer, I have to get some dirt and really bank up the sides around the old place so it doesn't happen again.

One of the interesting aspects of this business is when someone comes into the office with a whole lot of oldtime pictures. This happened last week, and boy, I sure do like looking at some of the old pictures.

This whole area must have had a few photographers who did nothing but go out into the woods and take pictures of the lumber camps. Or take pictures of all the buildings in the area.

I guess when business got a little slow back then, the photographers would hitch up the horse and buggy, go out and snap a few pictures of the workers working, in the hopes of getting some sales of pictures.

And if they didn't find any buyers, then they made the pictures into post-cards.

Just shows you that some of the tried and true ways of the past, are still with us today....You still have to hustle and work your head off to make a living here in the north country.

This is the week that in every town, township, and community, you can find at least five people who are tired of hearing people complain about their taxes.

I am speaking of some of the unsung volunteers of the community, those who sit on the board of review.

They are the ones that many folks visit every year to try to get their taxes lowered, especially after getting the reassessments that went out a few weeks ago.

Seems that everyone must live in a junkyard. Taxed too much for what they feel they should pay.

But, our intrepid reviewers, those who have to hear all these complaints, make many a decision that seems fair. And even in some cases, lowering the assessments on a particular piece of property back to where it was before the raise.

Now I figure that if I take my property in front of the board, they will ask what I am there for, and then just give me a senior citizen, low income status, underpaid professional journalist rebates and all that. Just so the taxes I pay are equitable to the rest of the community.

They've done it again!
Heavens, how it makes me mad when they do it again.

This time it's a law regarding bass in Lake Charlevoix; the last time, it was the taking of sturgeon under 50 inches long. If you take one forty nine inches the law will show up, thump

Located on the waterfront behind the stores along S. Lake Street and next to the old railroad roundhouse was the White & Co. Shingle Mill. The mill split cedar into shakes for many houses in Chicago and other parts of the nation that could be reached by water. All the carts with the railroad type wheels were used to take the lumber after it was cut out to the drying racks.

The carts were pushed along a 12 foot tramway where the workers sorted out the wood into stacks for the final drying. The shingles were left to dry over the summer before being packed for shipping. If you have any pictures of the old days, and you would like to share them with our readers, please bring them to our office and we'll copy them for the paper.

Marshall Sayles

What the department must realize is that these willy-nilly rules won't work in Boyne City as they might in other largemouth towns. That's because we're the most independent three inch mouthed people in the state.

Some might say that we are not noted so much for our three inch mouths as we are for what comes out of them.

I lack the bold folly to comment on that. I wouldn't touch it with a ten foot fishing pole.

Neither would anyone brave enough to write a column as intellectually powerful as this one.

In its new ruling, the DNR did not know that it would take four Boyne City people with three inch mouths standing close together in order for them to take a legal size bass out of the clear, blue waters of Lake Charlevoix.

It would also take a shotgun and a couple of hanging ropes to get four largemouth Boyne citizens to stand side by side for five minutes. Each one trying to out-mouth the other would throw everything into a cocked hat. Or into something about that size.

twelve inches, which ever comes first. Upon occasion you may hook a largemouth; he, too, must measure at least one whole foot from one end to the other.

Reading about a largemouth catching smallmouth bass that must scale a least a foot, I got to thinking. Never have I seen a twelve inch largemouth around Boyne City. I'm an average person. And I have an average mouth.

Just for the heck of it, I opened my mouth as wide as I could and then measured the width with one of those yardsticks that says F.O. Barden & Son on the side. My mouth is three

TARGET looking for help

Editor,
Immediately following the recalls of former state Senators Mastin and Serotkin, I was optimistic that Governor Blanchard and the remaining legislators in Lansing would get a message from the recalls. That message is: "The citizens of Michigan expect representative government and equitable taxation." However, Governor Blanchard's policies demonstrate that he is committed to his political party, special interest groups and furthering his own political career.

Governor Blanchard recently stated that the importance of rebuilding Michigan for the future transcends anyone's political career. If he truly believes this statement, then why doesn't he begin working with the majority of citizens he has been elected to represent? Why doesn't he bring to a vote of the people the Voter's Choice constitutional amendment and the Part-Time Legislature constitutional amendment?

Obviously, Governor Blanchard knows the majority of Michigan citizens support the above constitutional amendments. And, if they were passed, he would not be able to continue his flagrant high tax-and-spend policies. Thus, the citizens of Michigan can either stand aside and let the Blanchard team further increase the tax-and-spend policies of the Milliken era until November 1986, or they can exercise their constitutional rights and recall Governor Blanchard from office, just as an employer has the right to fire an employee for poor performance.

During the next few months, the Recall Blanchard Committee will be expanding throughout the entire state. Anyone interested in recalling Governor Blanchard and helping thousands of other taxpayers working for representative government and equitable taxation should contact me at the following address:

Fish hatchery not doing job?

Editor,
We are constantly being reminded of the government deficit. We have no statesmen and have learned we cannot rely on politicians, therefore, it is up to citizens to suggest and push for ways to reduce the national debt.

I feel we have a boondoggle in this area. We have a Federal fish hatchery in Elmira which was built for the express purpose of re-stocking the Great Lakes with lake trout. Twenty-five years have passed and the problems is not solved. All lake trout caught in Lake Michigan are hatchery fish.

I wonder how many other people feel this hatchery should be closed down?

'Team of the century' had few spectators

Editor,
This letter is long over-due since the season is now officially over for Girls' Varsity Volleyball.

East Jordan had a "team of the century", and hardly any spectators, and few parents for that matter, showed up for their top-notch performances. The Varsity Girls had a very impressive 9-1 conference record, taking a first place along with an undefeated first place in the Ski Valley Conference tournament. In the regionals, they defeated Traverse City St. Francis, but bowed to Kalkaska. Kalkaska and Rogers City played in the final round with Rogers City taking the first. What the EJ girls lacked in height, they made up for in determination and fine sportsmanship. I applaud this outstanding varsity team of 1984.

Annual Florida picnic attracts 46

Even though the temperature was in the fifties, and the folks in attendance had to bundle up in their "Northern" outerwear, 46 present and former Boyne area residents, braved the elements to share in the annual potluck dinner at the Boyne City-All Florida picnic that was held on February 29.

According to our "correspondents," Lena and Revo Gerrie, a good time was had by all, even with the weather. Two days after the picnic, the weather turned more Floridialike, with temperatures in the 80's. Mother Nature must have thought that all the snowbirds from Boyne needed a taste of weather like the northerners are used to getting in February.

Cardiopulmonary resuscitation (CPR) seminars for area businesses and industry have been launched at Charlevoix Area Hospital. The 8-hour, one-day, seminars provide management and employees thorough training in the life-saving techniques of CPR and as well as how to help a choking victim. The seminars, which can be scheduled to fit the needs of businesses, began last Wednesday. Shown here, practicing their techniques are, left to right, Dick Kenney, Kit Carson Lumber Co.; Marcell Harrod and Kathy Bradley from The Grey Gables. They are being coached by Charlevoix Area Hospital Laboratory Chief Ralph Corwin. For further information about these classes contact: Kathy Boss, R.N. or Michele Bonneville, R.N., 547-4024.

Barbara Cruden

If Chinese writing is made of pictures, how can the Chinese write about things they can not see—things like happiness and kindness?

Right—by making symbols. I think of that controversial peace symbol we had back in the '70s, which has, ominously enough, all but disappeared from the public scene.

But, back to the Chinese. Their picture-writing is so highly stylized that all of it could almost be symbol writing. Their word for storehouse, for example, is a box within a box (for double walls) and two straight lines above for roof.

I learned all this from a children's book loaned to me: "The Chinese Word for Horse and Other Stores," by John Lewis. Children's books for many reasons are far better than adult books. One reason is, how else would I find a book on Chinese writing without getting stuck with a heavy textbook?

But back to the Chinese. The way that they put together their symbols not only tells the story of Chinese inventiveness, but also of Chinese artistry and Chinese life. For example, the Chinese character for horse resembles our number five with the bottom of the curve left off. The top is the horse's mane flowing back, with additional small mane lines underneath. The horizontal is the horse's back, and the down-swoop, the horse's tail. Four additional lines represent four legs.

I go into all this because I was so delighted with the Chinese word for nervousness.

What they did was take the word for horse and add to it their picture for ice. Thus, as you see, nervousness is written "horse on ice."

In this way they rewrite their ancient culture again and again, even if they have never seen a horse on ice. But even more delightful is the image itself.

I challenge you...How would you picture nervousness!

Another little revelation is the word for storehouse combined with two little upside-down v's, representing bundles of grain, to make the word for thrift.

Man is symbolized by two striding legs. That's all. For the man who is a farmer the upside-down V of man's legs is crossed by two bars, which I think suggest a yoke, or at least tools carried over the shoulder.

But, now, for gentleman...for gentleman there is an entirely different character. According to the Chinese, a gentleman is one tall line with a slender refined line crossing it, like a graceful t, but with another smaller line across the bottom of the t. It suggests to me that the long robe of the gentleman conceals the legs that never have to stride because the imperious arm beckons a servant to do the striding for him.

I discovered how each Chinese word tells a story about itself. Thus a double meaning in the title of the book, and a reason for the meditative look in Chinese eyes.

And I saw also how tradition in everyday language there must weigh on women's rights as it does here. The word for contentment (composed by male writers) is the symbol for woman drawn under the symbol for roof.

Olympics of the Mind starts local competition

Olympics of the Mind had its local competition on March 8. The event was to be an hour-long assembly in the high school, but as drama built up, and the program ran overtime, the audience was loathe to leave.

It was when the bell rang that a tiny structure of one-eighth-inch balsa wood sticks, eight inches high, held an accumulation of 275 pounds of weight.

Since they just had to see how much it could take, they went on adding weights after the bell rang. The little tower was finally crushed at 397 pounds, Anne Johnston said.

Johnston, who is one of the advisors for Unlimited Potential, the group of parents and teachers working on student creativity, said the four elementary school children that built the super-structure will go on to the regional Olympics to be held at Traverse City on March 31. They were Damon and Caul Bluhm, Ethan Spaulding and Brian Mickey.

Ken Bluhm, father of two of the boys said he had the kids each making one practice structure a week before coming up with their final model.

"That way they learned about stress and accuracy," he said.

Other exciting projects for competition, stipulated by the National Olympics of the Mind, were "Camelot" in which "knights and ladies" had to be directed blindfolded through a maze of evils. The trick here was that the guiding teams could not use verbal communication. Drums, clapping, bells, etc., were used for directives.

Tiny vehicles, powered by mouse traps, were made for racing by high school teams in both East Jordan and Boyne City.

Elementary and high school students in both schools teamed up to make "Chariots of Rescue" which had to be driven by some part of the body, but not hands or feet. One was propelled by a seat that bumped up and down.

Each team, said Johnston, also had to complete in solving a "Spontaneous problem"—a kind of brain storming. There was also an opportunity for artistic expression in dramatizing an additional chapter for the famous novel "Moby Dick."

Both schools will send their best teams to Traverse City for this further opportunity "to develop a creative style of thinking," Johnston said. The Olympics are open to all children.

Ramblers drop district match to TC St. Francis to end season

The last hopes of Boyne City's Ramblers pulling it all together in the district tournament were dashed at the tone of the final buzzer as the Ramblers fell to powerful Traverse City St. Francis, 69 to 56.

Even with the rally in the later stages of the game, the Rambler crew tried to pull the game out of the loss area, but the effort failed as the Gladiators kept control of the boards.

Senior Jeff Gabos was the high scorer for the Ramblers, putting in five baskets and making six-of-seven free throws for 16 points. He was followed by Merle Carson who added 13, and younger brother Mike Gabos with 11 points.

The loss left the Ramblers 6-15 for the season, but five losses were by two points or less.

In the game, the Gladiators took an early lead, jumping out to a 10-0 score in the first period before the Ramblers started connecting. The quarter ended with Boyne getting 12 points on the board while the Glads had 24.

The second quarter saw the action stalemated as the Ramblers couldn't seem to gain any ground. The first half ended with the score showing the Glads still up on top.

In the fourth quarter, the Ramblers went into a full-court press and seemed to confound St. Francis. But the team from Traverse City held on to their lead to finish 13 points up over the Ramblers.

Democrats to caucus in BC, EJ, and Charlevoix

Area Democrats will be meeting in various places this Saturday in caucuses throughout the county to decide the presidential preference of Michigan's delegation to the National Convention.

In Boyne City, the Democrats will be meeting at the U.A.W. Hall, which is located on Main Street, next to Jake's Shoe Store.

In East Jordan, they will gather at the city hall, while those in the Charlevoix area will be meeting at the Charlevoix City Hall.

All caucuses will be starting at 10 a.m. and will continue through the day until 4 p.m.

Those who wish to attend the caucus sessions will be asked to fill out a form to confirm three things: 1) That they are Democrats; 2) That they are qualified to participate; and 3) Their presidential choice.

This year, any registered voter is eligible to participate.

The results from the county caucuses will be forwarded to the state and will be used to allocate all of the Michigan delegates and alternates who will be pledged to presidential candidates.

The caucus takes the place of the state presidential primary election that was stopped because of the cost to the state.

Springtime in Charlevoix County brings out the buckets. The buckets for the collecting of the maple sap that in turn ends up after a lot of boiling, as the topping for some great pancakes.

Many farmers in the area set out the buckets early so that they are in place when the nice warm sunny days, and the cold nights make the sap flow. These buckets are on some old maples in Bay Township.

SKI YOU CAN DO IT

USE GRAVITY, REGAIN THE GROOVE

Sometimes it's possible to ski so far around a turn that your skis begin pointing back uphill and you start losing momentum (A). When this happens, loss of speed and ski-snow friction buildup make the next turn difficult.

What to do? Cheat a little—use gravity to your advantage. Just relax that knee pressure you put into the hill slightly so that your ski edges flatten. Move your weight forward and let gravity take over, pulling the tips down into the fall line (B). Wait a second or two and pick up a little speed. When your skis' tips are pointed back downhill and you are moving faster (C), the next turn will come easy.

Snow fun marks the rites of spring

A warm February may have had folks thinking about spring, but March has brought winter back to Michigan—at least for the time being.

"It looks like we'll all be given tickets on the Siberian Express for the next 10 days," says meteorologist John Mc Murray, of Commercial Weather Service. Mc Murray, whose service provides weather forecasting information to broadcasters and resorts statewide, foresees a prolonged cold spell followed by a "moderating trend" in temperatures the last week of March.

The March chill is good news for skiers, who annually celebrate the rites of spring with Spring Carnivals held at ski resorts throughout Michigan. At Crystal Mountain Resort in Thompsonville, a wacky weekend of fun and frolic on the slopes is set for March 17-18. Silly slaloms, a treasure hunt, bump contest, polka pajama party, and a slush cup are on the agenda for the weekend, which features prizes and awards in all events along with mid-week lift rates.

Spring Carnivals are a skier's traditional salute to the waning winter and welcome mat for spring. At Crystal, skiers will be able to ski through March—and spring promises to arrive soon after, with Mc Murray calling for mild April temperatures in Michigan.

Dorie remembers early days of skiing

"We didn't even like snow!" was Dorie Sarns' first unlikely comment on her long love affair with downhill skiing.

The Sarns, Dorie and Nub, had both been avid ice-boat racers who traveled to international level competitions hoping for clear weather and clean ice conditions. Fluffy, white snow meant only one thing to them—no racing.

Snowbound during a competition in 1955, a friend invited Dorie and Nub to come along to the Otsego Ski Club and try a thrilling snow sport that was fairly new to Northern Michigan.

By the very next year, the Sarns noticed a hill near their Cross Village cottage, "Pago Ga Shag", that was just begging to become a ski run.

"We hewed that hill out with a tractor, rigged up a Model A to drive the two and then invited friends to come ski around stumps!", she recalls. Their neighborly project turned into a sizable amount of work. In addition, the Sarns determined that strong lake wind was too hard on their open ski hill.

Skiing one day at Harbor Highlands, they noticed an interesting group of high hills just across the Pleasantview Valley. Friend Ray Swadling told of a walking trail to the summit and soon they climbed for the first time the ridge of hills that would become known as Nubs Nob.

Dorie and Nub began the complicated paperwork to secure the state-owned land for their ski hill and by the spring of 1958 they cleared the first trees with a tractor and chain.

A small business loan meant the ordering of the red chair lift. Friend Herb Irish surveyed the contour of the land and the ambitious project was launched. Through ingenuity, human strength and monumental determination, the small crew poured concrete, skidded the towers up "East Mile" behind a bulldozer and finally lowered them to their bases by cable.

By this time the Sarns had sold everything in St. Clair and moved north. Now that the "Nob" had grown, they knew constant hard work and continuous overseeing would be necessary. And true to their enthusiastic natures, they already had big plans for their next season.

Longtime sailing friend Warren Ward from Chicago became their invaluable financial advisor; Tom Richard from Sun Valley was the first ski instructor; Joe "planked whitefish" Juilleret handled food production; Marvel Bonter (still employed at Nubs Nob) was baking expert; Wanda Davert (in the main office today) became office manager; and the four outdoor crew members were comprised of Ray Swadling (now a lift operator), Otto Washburn (with Nubs Nob for 23 years), Amos Washburn and Bill Washburn.

The cafeteria had been no more than a straw-covered basement during the first ski season. Dorie laughs, "Everyone called it the Goat's Nest, especially in the spring when moisture got into the hay."

Often joining the outdoor crew to help clear hills, Dorie—with the help of Otto Washburn—supervised construction of a new, intermediate run while Nub was on a Trans-Atlantic sailboat race.

"I was pretty nervous about it. Warren Ward said if Nub liked the hill, we'd call it 'Dorie's Bowl' and I said if Nub didn't like it, we'd call it 'Otto's Folly'!", she said.
