Townships object to East Jordan user fees

Townships around East Jordan differ on how to support city services. Township representatives met with city council on April 19 to try to draw up a policy, agreeable to all parties.

At present, South Arm wants a contract, but the others are willing to have user fees charged. No decision was reached.

At a city council meeting earlier in the month Joel Evans and Peggy Midener of South Arm Township had presented objections to the city's new plan to charge those from outside the city a fee that is double that charged to city residents for use of the landfill. They asked for a contract between city and township.

The council explained that the landfill was not entirely self-supporting this past year, and that to make up the difference from city tax funds wouldn't be fair to the city taxpayers.

The extra amount paid in by non-residents would provide their contribution, in lieu of taxes.

A similar plan is being proposed for recreation facilities.

Evans said the contract would make

South Arm, which surrounds the city, more a part of city activities. Midener said summer people would look for alternative facilities if they had to pay user fees.

The other townships extend farther out, and Wilson includes some of Boyne City. JoAnne Baker, Wilson Township treasurer, said she already pays a commercial hauler for garbage pickup. People like her, she said, would be paying double if the township had a contract.

A possible solution may be to have a contract between South Arm and the city, while non-residents in other townships may pay user fees.

The city already has contracts with townships to share the cost of fire protection and ambulance service.

Bernie Hammond said total ambulance expense was $50,565 minus $6,000 for ambulance replacement and $20,000 for fees. The $24,565 remainder is divided by two, he said. Half for city and half for township expenses. Each township's individual share is then figured by township SEV.

Fire chief Dick Barnett said fire protection contracts are figured the same way.

Busy egg hunters scurried around Veterans' Memorial Park in Boyne City Sunday where plenty of candy Easter eggs had been planted by the Boyne City Lions Club. Shown here are some of the lucky winners. Giant chocolate Easter Bunnies were awarded to the winners. In the pre-school age group the winner was Sally Gregware who found 53 eggs, 2nd place went to Karen Sorenson who found 33 eggs and 3rd place went to Ryan Hoquard who found 32 eggs. In the 5-6 age group the winner was Grant Weber with 44 eggs, 2nd place went to Nickey Roberts with 41 eggs, 3rd place went to Beth Handy who found 37 eggs. In the 7-8 age group the winner was Mike Pittiglio who found 48 eggs, 2nd place went to Carl Romaniak with 36 eggs, 3rd place went to Jacob Sorenson with 35 eggs. In the 9-10 age group the winner was Kelly Sheldon who found 74 eggs, 2nd place went to Mitchell Pittiglio who found 52 eggs and 3rd place went to Tim Jankowski who found 46 eggs.

Co-op education beginning among County schools

Sharing is a new way for advanced students or students with special skills to further their education. East Jordan and Boyne Falls schools began this year with two aspects of this type of program, and Boyne City is also involved in investigations of a third possibility, telecommunications.

Two students in East Jordan are going to Charlevoix for an advanced math class, said counselor Carl Rothenberger. The students were unable to have the class in East Jordan as a school cannot afford classes for so few.

Rothenberger pointed out that the need is to pool such students in the area in order to have enough to justify the expense of a teacher. Thus, the two are going to Charlevoix, paying for their own transportation.

Rothenberger said the schools expect to cooperate further with Charlevoix, with that school sending students to East Jordan for classes in welding or small engine repair.

The idea is in developmental stages, he said. Costs will have to be worked out between superintendents. Students will have to plan ahead.

Taking classes at North Central Michigan College is another solution to the need, Rothenberger said. In these circumstances, parents have accepted the tuition responsibility. Only one student is going to NCMC at present. On his own time, the student is taking a course in flight school.

NCMC is very much a part of their regular curriculum for two students at Boyne Falls this year. Principal Joel Donaldson said that Julie Ranstadler and Paul Tyson go to the college for computer courses.

Donaldson said he expects that more and more, students will plan toward the opportunity. The school board last summer approved strict guidelines for the process, he said.

Students need first to complete the line of courses that the school offers, which means they do not take at NCMC a course that is already being offered at Boyne Falls.

Students must also have an overall 3 point grade average, teacher recommendation, 17 credit hours completed, and ACT test taken.

This year was the first for such a program at Boyne Falls. Donaldson said other students now realize they can plan towards such an option.

Boyne Falls pays for the tuition, he said, and students pay for books and materials. Transportation is also their responsibility. The students earn college credit as well as credit toward their high school diploma.

According to Donaldson, this year's students enjoyed the class, but also found it challenging.

The county's three schools have been working together in the search for solutions, facing the fact that small schools can't provide a wide spectrum of studies with only a few students in each class.

Susan Van Wieren, assistant superintendent at Charlevoix-Emmet Intermediate School District, said that they are considering uses of telecommunication to avoid costs and time in travel for students or teachers. Just last week a speaker on the subject met with school officials, and a grant application has been made to the state for study of such a solution.

Van Wieren said the state is looking at using state aid for forwarding co-op education ventures.

Meantime, she said, the schools are notifying each other of available slots in their programs to allow exchange of students.

It's still an unfamiliar situation, she said. "They need to go slowly so as to be sure of doing it right."

Lot split, drainage resolved by Boyne

Lot splits and drainage problems for the proposed paving of an extension of Alice Street were resolved at the Tuesday, April 24 noon meeting of Boyne City commission. The commission approved the subdivision of the platted six lots into three, each with 110 feet of frontage and 126 feet deep.

The size change for lots, to be used by the high school for houses built by building trades classes, was the request of holders of neighboring property. The idea was to keep in harmony with other elements of the neighborhood.

Earlier the school had planned a four-lot split.

Plans for paving the Alice Street block to accommodate the housing presented the danger of drainage problems. The city commission approved the planning board's recommendation to have the street paved up to lot 27. Lot 26 would then be serviced by a driveway. The commission believes this engineer's suggestion would solve the problem.

City commissioners were advised that bid opening for city water Street projects would be Wednesday at 2 p.m.

Glen's Market will take formal possession of the former Country Star building. Construction will be done by Seals and Roberts.

Dealership loses, wins bid for trucks

Erber-McKeown Ford of Charlevoix lost its recent case against the Charlevoix County Road Commission, but won the bid last week for sale of three truck chassis to the road commission.

The Ford dealership was an average $1,000 below four other bidders on two sander trucks and one dump truck, according to Pat McKeown. The total sale came to $158,000.

McKeown said that Allied and Hyde, two equipment dealers in the area, were low bidders for the special equipment for the vehicles.

Objecting that the road commission had disregarded their low bid on the previous occasion, Erber-

McKeown had brought suit against the road commission, claiming a bid $150 lower than that of the successful Grand Rapids firm.

McKeown said, "The case was thrown out because they said we did not submit a proper bid." Not all blanks in the form were filled in, he said, but, he added, the guarantee of meeting all specifications in the second part was valid.

"This whole thing has brought out a lot of helpful communication with the road commission," McKeown concluded. No vendetta was intended, he said. "But we pay our taxes, and we think they should spend their money locally, when bids warrant it."

Anyone who doesn't believe that Boyne City had a strong lumbering past should see what the C. H. Smith Company is dredging out of the lake as they help prepare the land for the new Water Pointe Restaurant that is being built in the

One Water Street Project. The alab wood brought out the treasure hunters of driftwood as the lumber has been in the water since the late 1800's. Although waterlogged, the wood could make some beautiful articles, say the hunters.

Voters asked to approve millage next Monday

Residents of the Boyne City school district will go to vote at the polling place in Boyne City Middle School this Monday.

At issue is the millage renewal proposition for 1984-85 school operations. The request this year is for a total 21.3 mills for school operation, the same as last year's request.

The purpose of the early special election is to give time to townships who choose to make summer tax collections for the first time to organize and prepare necessary materials.

The regular school election, scheduled for June 11, will elect members of the school board.

The special election concerns only the Boyne City school district.

The polling place will be open from 7 a.m. to 8 p.m.

CHICKENS AND EGGS

Thinking about eggs—There is the old question, "Which came first the chicken or the egg?" My research has not given me that answer, however, they say that the eggs were probably used first and that the flesh was not eaten until later. In fact it is known that cocks were first tamed and trained to cock-fighting. This has been recorded back to ancient India and spread to all known countries. The Romans found cock-fighting when they conquered England. Almost every country developed its own species of fowls. Domestic fowls have been raised in Italy for at least 25 centuries and it is probable that the Romans were the first to recognize the value of the flesh for food. Big hatching ovens in Egypt have been in use for many centuries similar to the ones used in the time of Moses.

In our country, only in about the last 50 years has the egg business become a big production. Before that time almost everyone had their own chickens, even in the towns, in order to supply themselves with fresh eggs and an occasional roast. My mother raised her own chickens and sold her eggs. A woman's "egg money" was for real, the housewife's own pin money. It is necessary now to explain to our children where eggs really do come from as they all arrive from egg factories packed in plastic boxes for our supermarkets.

Anyway, how dull our meals would be without eggs or chickens. Since the beginning of time people have been preparing egg dishes so I suppose there is no such thing as a new egg recipe. However, here is a delicious way to fix poached eggs, not just a breakfast dish. This is elegant enough for a late supper or lunch.

ELEGANT POACHED EGGS

Grease a shallow glass baking dish and dust it with fine crumbs and Parmesan cheese. Poach your eggs, two to a customer. Carefully put them into the baking dish. Pour over the eggs cream of mushroom soup, thinned with half and half and heated. Sprinkle with more crumbs and cheese. Dot with butter and broil until the cheese melts.

There is no end to chicken recipes and this is a delicious one using our wonderful convenience foods and so easy to prepare in a short length of time. Great for the busy working mothers.

Engaged?

The Charlevoix County Press publishes engagement and wedding announcements without charge.

Pictures are welcomed, but we do suggest a few guidelines. Good quality black and white photographs, either of the couple or bride-elect, are preferred. All photographs are kept on file in the Press office and may be picked up at any time following publication; those pictures not picked up after six months will be discarded.

Wedding and engagement announcement forms are available at our office or will be mailed upon request and the receipt of a self-addressed stamped envelope.

While we try to publish each announcement the week that we receive it (and in the case of weddings, the first publication date following the ceremony), space constraints sometimes force us to delay the printing of the announcement for one or two weeks. Therefore, we ask that information be received at least two weeks before the intended publication so that we might better plan for its publication.

We will not accept wedding announcements received more than four weeks after the wedding.

"West Side Story" set for weekend performances by Boyne drama students

Boyne City High School's eleventh annual musical will hit the boards on Thursday, Friday, and Saturday evenings, April 26, 27, and 28.

Bob Wollenberg, who directs the musicals, stressed that this one starts at an early 7 p.m. at the elementary school auditorium.

And this one is a little different. "West Side Story" is a musical, yes, but not a light, frothy one. As one of the actors in the show said, it's a modern Romeo and Juliet.

Wendy Doyal, who will play the part of a Hispanic named Anita, said everyone is working harder than ever this year because they have to get into the part. It takes more acting than comedy does.

Wollenberg explained the difficulty, saying that high school students are naturally humorous. Comedy seems to come easily to them. "It's harder to do serious material," he said. "But they're doing a very fine job."

The story of "West Side Story" takes place in inner city New York. It shows how the pressures of poverty and city life intensify the frustrations young people face and offer them few of the opportunities.

"In order to get that fire on stage," Wendy said, "you need to have the character with you." She explained, "You carry it with you a lot. You're thinking about your part."

Even as she spoke, the rhythm of Hispanic speech came through, a small piece of evidence of how much the students "carry it" with them.

Wendy has played roles in previous musicals. She said this year, the students off-stage are paying closer attention as those on-stage practice their performances.

"The Wollenbergs are doing a wonderful job," she said. "We're learning about ourselves. This musical is going to keep the freshman (members of the cast) in drama for four years!"

Every year Wollenberg's wife Jackie helps out in innumerable ways with the production. About six years ago Jim and Joan Bogetto joined the troupe. Joan teaches English and choir in the middle school and Jim is band teacher for the middle and high school. "Tremendous professionals," Wollenberg calls them.

Wollenberg said many of the rich musical effects required by "West Side Story" will be supplied by electronics as well as by the chorus and a small instrumental group.

He went on to say, "If we didn't have the enthusiasm of the town it would be impossible to put this musical on." The business community support in advertising in the programs and the town in the purchase of tickets finance the show almost entirely, he said.

Rotary Club will host a ham dinner at the high school cafeteria on the 26th and 27th from 5 to 7 p.m., immediately preceding the show.

John McGeorge, Nelson, and Irv Moyer are involved with staging, make-up, and dance.

Mark Bogetto and Brenda Breidenstein as the star-crossed Tony and Maria sing "Somewhere there's a place for us" in "West Side Story," Boyne City high school's musical this week.

Classes for people with lung and breathing problems at Charlevoix Hospital

People suffering from lung diseases, such as asthma, emphysema, chronic bronchitis and other conditions which create breathing problems, may find help in a free series of classes scheduled from May 10 through June 4, at Charlevoix Area Hospital.

Charlevoix Area Hospital and the American Lung Association are co-sponsoring the series of 7 classes, to be held each Monday and Thursday night, beginning Thursday, May 10, to help people learn about lung disease, the medications for its treatment and how to better cope with daily living.

People with chronic lung disease and their families are encouraged to take advantage of this useful series of classes. Along with workshops, demonstrations and lectures there will be considerable time for questions and discussion.

Lost refund checks can be traced by IRS

A taxpayer who suspects his or her federal tax refund check has been lost or stolen may contact the IRS to have a replacement check issued or find out the reason for the delay, the Internal Revenue Service says. A refund check is considered overdue only after 10 weeks have passed.

After that, the taxpayer should contact the IRS to inquire about the refund. The taxpayer will be asked several questions regarding the

"Cinderella" to be presented at Mc Cune

"Cinderella", the newly staged, live musical performed by the award-winning Prince Street Players, national touring company of the Detroit Institute of Arts Youththeatre, will be presented to the public by Crooked Tree Arts Council on Tuesday, May 8. Showtime will be 7 p.m. at the Petoskey Middle School Auditorium, across from the Post Office on Howard Street in Petoskey. The performance will delight all ages, from preschool on up.

For one magical hour, two silly step-sisters, a handsome Prince Charming, a loving fairy godmother and the pretty heroine Cinderella will spring to life in an original adaptation of this story book classic. Fantasy sets and costumes, and LIVE music showcase the 12 member professional company.

This Prince Street production follows last season's rave review national tours of "Mother Goose Jamboree" and "Sleeping Beauty". Foremost among producers of family theatre in America, Prince Street holds a special Emmy award for outstanding children's programming in television, and are heralded throughout the return and should be prepared to supply specific information.

If it is discovered that a check was in fact issued but not received, the taxpayer will be instructed to complete a Form 3911, Taxpayer's Statement Regarding Refund, and send it to the IRS. This form allows IRS to trace the check to determine if it was cashed by another person, or to stop payment. The IRS will also research the taxpayer's account. Sometimes it's found that the refund was redirected as an offset against previous taxes owed, applied to delinquent child support payments or mistakenly applied to estimated tax payments.

If the check is indeed lost or stolen, arrangements can be made to replace the check. Tracking a lost or stolen check usually takes several weeks.

Press writer publishes cookbook

Everyone that reads this paper or the Traverse City Record-Eagle knows Bea Smith. Her memories of old ways in Michigan, which accompany her recipes, appearing weekly in the paper, have drawn the interest of even the people who don't like to cook.

Now she has the recipes in a book called "My Heritage Cookbook," and it's being bought up like the hot cakes she describes inside.

The book is divided into four seasons, and this makes sense, because many of the recollections are of farm life, a very seasonal subject in itself. Tastes for foods, being also seasonal, the book just fell into place.

The author's granddaughter, Barbara Courtwright, made the pen-and-ink drawings.

Mrs. Smith said she always liked to write. She started even before going to school, on a yellow tablet her father brought home for her one day. And she always liked to cook, she said.

Another ingredient to this career was a creative writing course she took. Anne Kelly was the teacher and encouraged her to follow up on the "Grandmother Stories" she wrote as an assignment.

The stories themselves had a history. Mrs. Smith had been trying to put down her recollections of what her family had passed along to her in order to make a family history. "I'm also interested in genealogy," she said.

She put it all together for a wedding gift when a daughter was married.

Someone that faithful to writing is bound to get into print. The day dawned when she thought, "I'll put my recipes into the stories," and the combination proved to be a natural. She started with the Charlevoix County Press almost five years ago. The column has appeared also in the Record-Eagle for four years now. The little tales about the peddlar and the picnics, the great-uncles and aunts, come across with quick, spontaneous charm, and give glimpses of days that go from the year 1822 to 1969.

Recipes came down through Mrs. Smith's family or from friends, and the circumstances always go with the recipe. "The stories are as much a part of the book as the recipes are,"

she said.

Authentic as they are, she has brought them up to date with present-day measurements and means of obtaining ingredients.

"They are not too complicated for the everyday cook," she noted, mentioning such inviting items as butter-milk pie, leek and potato soup, and Hungarian goulash.

It's a man's cookbook, too, she pointed out, with some recipes that apply especially to men.

Mrs. Smith grew up on a farm in Purocola County and went to high school in Flint.

Her husband, Walter Smith, came from the Traverse City area. They have two daughters, Gloria Taylor in California and Shirley Schink in Boyne City.

They've all been waiting in a state of excitement since January for the book to come out. On Thursday, May 3, Boyne City Public Library is throwing a book autographing party for her. That evening she will be speaking on the history of foods in colonial America.

Her book is published by Cookbook Publishing Company of Kansas, and Horizon Bookstore in Petoskey is selling it, as are five bookstores in Traverse City. Copies may also be purchased at the Charlevoix County Press office.

"Every recipe in the book is something I have either eaten or made myself," said Mrs. Smith, putting a final seal of authenticity on her book. And she's going to write another.

Bea Smith looks over the pages of her newly published cookbook after receiving them from the printers. Her book, which uses recipes that have appeared in the pages of the Charlevoix County Press and the Traverse City Record Eagle, is available at the County Press office and at Huff Pharmacy in Boyne City.

April, May bring out the animal songs in northern Michigan as birds, frogs mate

April and May are the months for songs in the night in Michigan. Many animals are singing at night as part of courtship or their regular nighttime activities. The evenings of these two months are probably among the noisiest of the year, surpassed only by midsummer evenings when fields full of crickets and trees full of katydids fill the air.

This month and next, the primary nighttime noisemakers in the natural world are the amphibians—frogs and toads—and the birds. The sound most familiar to most people is the peep-peep of the spring peeper. This small tree frog reproduces in puddles, drainage ditches and other short-lived bodies of water in the early spring, so you don't have to live near a marsh or pond to hear its courtship song. It's often audible in urban areas.

Other frogs and toads join the chorus later on. Toads, like spring peepers, can reproduce in temporary ponds and other bodies of water that go dry by June. Toads also live almost everywhere, in the city as well as the country, so almost everyone who listens on a spring evening has a chance to hear them. The trill of toads is easy to recognize: d-d-d-d-d-d-d-d.

Rural residents may hear the short bark of the wood frog or the rattly snore of the meadow frogs. If they live near a marsh or pond, they can enjoy a bit later the songs of the leopard and bull frogs and other frogs that live and reproduce in permanent bodies of water.

Other sounds that almost everyone in Michigan can hear at this time of year are the sounds of night migrating birds. You might not hear them every night as you go out to listen, but you may hear them on many nights in April and May.

Most distinctive of these is the honking of migrating geese and whistling swans. Though you may confuse the puppylike noises made by swans with the hoarse honking of Canada geese, you won't have trouble distinguishing the racket made by a high-flying V of geese or swans with any other night sounds.

Other birds pass through our state in the spring, and you're likely to hear them in the evening. Often large mixed flocks of various songbirds will spend a day or two resting and feeding in an area, then take off after sundown. Before they get settled down to feed in the morning and as they're getting ready to depart as darkness falls, you may hear bits and snatches of familiar songs or characteristic songs of certain species sung at a whisper level rather than in full voice.

Often a flock will produce just a jumble of peeps and chirps and rustling noises as the birds move around in trees, lawns or fields.

The birds that are commonly active at night tend to be very noisy in the spring. Though the adult great horned owls are not hooting as much now as they were in the winter, when they were courting, the young owls screech all night for food.

The barred owl and the screech owl, on the other hand, fill the woods with their hoots. The barred owl is more often heard near swamps, while the screech owl prefers areas such as the MSU campus and large city parks that have lots of big trees and expanses of lawn. Screech owls are not uncommon even in urban areas. Many people may not recognize their wailing whistle as an owl sound, however—the screech owl doesn't hoot like its cousins.

Some of the unusual sounding noises come from animals that we don't usually think of as making much noise. The animals make these strange and sometimes alarming noises during courtship in winter or now during territorial disputes in the process of raising young.

People who live in the country or on the edge of the suburbs may hear the doglike but higher-pitched yapping of foxes in the spring. More alarming to new residents of northern Michigan is the caterwauling of the bobcat. Generally a quiet animal, the bobcat can give voice to a screechy wailing that leads some people to call the local police and report a noisy murder in progress.

Michigan families coping well with stress, researchers say

In spite of financial problems and other stressful events, most Michigan families are coping well and are satisfied with their family life.

A Michigan State University report shows that 69 percent of family members polled in the City of Flint as well as the rural areas of Dickinson, Alpena, Charlevoix and Hillsdale counties were satisfied with their lives.

About 74 percent said they were satisfied with their family life.

The study—conducted by researchers in MSU's Department of Family and Child Ecology—was designed to find out how Michigan families cope with various stresses, especially during the family's so-called middle years.

People in the middle years, ages 35 to 65, have to cope with stresses generated by social conditions as well as their responsibilities to the younger and older generations, the report says.

Some 300 Michigan families participated in the MSU study. Families represented all income levels. The average was 45 for women and 49 for men. Most families questioned had two or three children.

Some other findings included:

- Women generally reported more stressful events than men, and the events caused a greater degree of stress.
- To help fend off stressful situations, the majority of men and women watched television weekly, with women watching more frequently than men.
- Only a few people used community agencies, ministers or physicians frequently when faced with stressful events. Women were more likely than men to share concerns with relatives, neighbors and others.
- Over two-thirds of the families coped with economic problems by increasing their use of coupons; over half the families took advantage of buying at sales and using self-service gas pumps more often.

—Other frequently mentioned activities to cope with stress were: making long-distance calls, growing a garden, servicing and repairing their car, and spending savings.

Nearly all husbands and wives reported that they relied on each other as a resource in time of stress, especially to help with personal problems, illness or financial difficulties.

The study also showed that men and women were in agreement about family strengths and coping patterns. For example, in the majority of families:

- Family members are almost always supportive of each other during difficult times.
- They feel closer to each other than to people outside the family.
- Families generally share responsibility among all the members.

The general findings in the MSU report have been shared with Cooperative Extension Service specialists and county Extension agents to assist them in program planning for Michigan families.

To date, more than 700 man-made chemicals have been identified in drinking water, says the National Wildlife Federation.

Last one down wins bragging rights

Wanting to be the last one off the hill on the last day of skiing kept this bunch of diehard skiers out on the slope at Boyne Mountain. Boyne has always had a tradition of being the last slope to close for skiing in lower Michigan, and with this Easter weekend being late on the calendar, the work crews had to fill in some of the bare spots in order to have the area open for skiing. One advantage to this kind of skiing though, it was half price.

With the ice off the lake and the sun hitting it for a few days to warm up the water, it was time to get out the sailboard and see if all the skills learned a year ago are still there. This sailboarder pulls up the sail as he gets ready to glide with the wind on Walloon Lake over the Easter weekend. We don't think we should tell the reader that the water temperature was still in the 30's.
