Biggest Great Lakes development announced

Perhaps the biggest real estate resort project to be seen in the great lakes area was revealed today to the Emmet County Planning commission in Petoskey.

The project, which involves all of the former Dundee-Penn Dixie Cement company, includes six miles of beach frontage, a 2400 boat slip marina, protected from Lake Michigan, over 2400 condominium sites, 200 single family home sites, three championship style golf courses and a 150 unit hotel-convention site.

The proposed site plan was unveiled by members of the Flagler Venture, Inc., a development corporation which has an office here in Boyne City and West Palm Beach, Fla. Heading up the presentation was Don MacNaughton, a local realtor and developer, along with Richard Hickory, a longtime Horton Bay resident.

The development will require many approvals from various conservation and environmental organizations, according to the firm's attorneys, William McTaggart and Stu Fenner, of Fenner, Bonner and Hoffman. Plans call for the tearing down of the present cement factory, and the reclaiming of the several thousand acres that the proposed development will utilize.

The project is to be called Petoskey Harbor. It has been said that it will parallel, in development, Hilton head, which is in North Carolina.

The scope of the project is immense in that it will take several years for the project in Resort Township to be completed. When completed, the project will add millions to the tax base of the township.

In essence, the developers are proposing the building of a city-sized resort complex just outside of Petoskey.

The developers will not be doing the actual construction, according to MacNaughton, but will be offering for sale sections of the project to those companies who wish to build the condos, the townhouses and the homes.

While the cement plant has been looked at for several years by developers, the Flagler group is the only one who has been able to put the project together in a form that makes it appealing to the Dundee Cement Company, which owns the land.

Specific areas for the project include the marina, which will be built in the present quarry that is already 85 feet below the level of Lake Michigan. A channel will be dug to the lake which will be large enough to accommodate boats of 100 feet and more.

The hotel site will be located in the center of the project on land on the shoreline of the lake. Several nationally known firms have already inquired as to when it would be ready.

In the planning, three golf courses are indicated on the site plans, and three of the biggest names in course building are being considered for the development.

Some of the present structures will be retained according to the plans. One area idea is that the present cement silos would be come condominium buildings, according to Jack Begrow, the developers local architect.

Most of the cement plant would be salvaged and the steel in the buildings would be recycled.

The kiln dust mounds would be removed and the land where the cement company was working would be smoothed over and replanted, said Hickory.

The plant last made cement in 1980 and has been idle since it was closed down because it wasn't an up-to-date plant. It was purchased from Penn-Dixie by the Dundee Corp. as a place to store cement on Lake Michigan.

If everything goes as planned, construction and reclamation could start next spring, according to Mary Feindt of Charlevoix Abstract and Engineering, the developers firm of record.

This newspaper has known of the project since its inception, and because of the scope of it, has withheld the information until it was formally announced. The newspaper has agreed to become the publisher of a newspaper for the proposed resort area, to be called the Petoskey Harbor Observer.

While the impact on the entire Charlevoix-Emmet County community is not totally known at this time, the aspect of many jobs for the reclamation and construction of the project for many years is welcome, according to some of the officials who are involved.

As MacNaughton said to a reporter's question, "this will become the biggest and the best resort complex on the entire great lakes. This will put our area 'on the map' for large resorts."

DNR schedules another hearing for marina

An informational meeting to allow citizens to express their views and to allow the developers of Hemingway Pointe Club to answer those questions has been scheduled by the Department of Natural Resources next Wednesday, June 13, at the Charlevoix High School gymnasium at 7 p.m.

While the meeting is informational in scope, it is the second meeting the DNR is having concerning a proposed marina that the developers of the project want included in their site plan for the use of those who will be living in the homes.

The meeting is the result of groups sending petitions to the DNR requesting that they reject the approval of the proposed marina because the shore along the site is supposed to be good breeding grounds for fish.

The shore, where the marina is proposed, is mostly composed of shale. The lake bottom in the area requires that a person walk out several hundred feet to get to water over six feet in depth.

The concerned sportsmen who object to the site have said that the area of the lake is some of the best fishing area available.

When the first hearing on the proposed site was heard by the DNR back in February, there were few objections to the marina, which at that time was supposed to go out into the lake with a breakwall for the protection of the boats that condominium owners would be docking there. In all, five acres of the lake bottom would have been taken up by the proposed marina.

In March, one of the two bodies that govern lake use, the Army Corps of Engineers, granted their approval for the marina.

The DNR, because of the ice on the lake and the need for testing and netting of game fish from the area, asked that the approval be held up until the tests could be performed after the ice left and the water warmed up to 55 degrees so the gamefish would start their spawning process.

It was during this delay that the sportsfishermen learned of the proposed marina and started a petition drive to object to the intrusion into the lake.

After the DNR started to receive the petitions, they asked for a meeting with the developers, Birchwood Farms Construction Co. The purpose of the meeting is to try to determine a better plan.

After meeting with the DNR, the developers offered a solution to the original plan by moving the proposed marina inland 120 feet, keeping the same size marina but only utilizing 3 1/2 acres of the lake bottom.

This was accepted by the DNR as a better way, according to letters that the DNR sent out to those objectors a couple of weeks ago.

The proposed marina is going to be located approximately 1000 feet west of where Sanderson Road comes down to the lake. Some of the people objecting to the project had thought that the marina was just a few feet off the Sanderson Road easement.

The site is actually in a small cove between a creek and pond at the westerly end of where the present homes are located, and the point itself.

To show where the proposed marina is going to be installed, the developers are marking out on land and in the water, the boundary of the marina.

They are also asking that those who want to see where it will be, come to an open house on the site this coming Sunday afternoon.

Experts hired by the developer will be on hand to answer questions about the proposed marina.

The marina, with 72 slips, is for the convenience of the owners of the condominiums that are being built on the site. The developers thought that having one boat storage area instead of several placed along the shoreline would be more aesthetically sound planning when they applied for the construction permit last November.

The informational hearing at the Charlevoix High School is to answer any objections before the DNR approves or disapproves the granting of the permit.

Boyne 4th of July plans finalized

Plans were finalized for the Fourth of July celebration to be held in Boyne City on July fourth, according to a meeting of the committee last Tuesday night.

Unlike some of the other communities in the area which will be holding their celebrations either before or after the Fourth, Boyne City will be celebrating on the traditional day which is Wednesday this year.

"This will give us and the other communities a chance for all those who want to participate to do so," said Tom Clemens, the committee chairperson.

He said that this year he expects to see floats and other marching units that, because most of the area celebrates the Fourth on the same day, come to Boyne for the parade. The other communities will holding most of their activities on other days than the actual Fourth of July.

The parade in Boyne will start at 10:30 a.m. after the annual Independence Day run which will start at 8:30 a.m.

Barbeques will start with the Rotary Club chicken dinners at about 11 a.m. according to those in charge. The club will have more dinners this year to satisfy the eager demand.

Also having a barbeque will be the Boyne City Volunteer Fire Dept. It will also start at 11 a.m. The Boyne Valley Garden Club will be having a pie sale at the same time, in the pavilion.

The annual raft race will get underway at 2 p.m., while the second annual International Frog Race is scheduled for 4 p.m. in front of the Tannery. Weigh in for the frogs is set for 2 p.m.

During the afternoon bands will be playing in the Veterans Park, headlined by the Jelly Roll Band as well as others to appeal to a mixed crowd of music lovers.

A boat parade is scheduled to start in the early evening, with boats lit up and decorated. The boats will gather near the Harborage for the parade and then pass in front of the crowds at the park.

The fireworks are set to go off at 10:30 p.m. by the firemen.

Many other activities are still in the planning stages for the day and haven't been finalized according to the officials at the meeting, but the final list of activities will be completed well in time so that everyone who wants to participate can plan their activities.

Commissioners approve Front Street upgrade

With the C.R. Smith Company, Inc. bid coming in well under estimates for the cost of Front Street extension, Boyne City commissioners voted Tuesday to apply some of the difference to the most worthwhile of possible improvements. In the project a total of $12,450 will go to upgrading 120 feet of water main to ductile iron for $3,240; upgrading of concrete with dolomite for $1,636; of pavement installation specifications for smoother surface for $5,174; and addition of 130 feet of stormsewer extension to accommodate roof drainage at $2,400.

Commissioners also approved purchase of a Caterpillar 920 Wheel Loader for $48,650. The trade-in of the 1976 Caterpillar came to $22,500, making the purchase price $26,150. It will be financed by a loan with 8 percent interest, financed by the company.

Although the bid request was advertised, Caterpillar's was the only bid received. However, the package included a guaranteed repurchase price of $34,000 at the end of five years or 5,000 hours, as well as other advantages in guaranteed repairs.

Treasurer Edith Beck also commented on the low-interest financing.

"Pretty attractive," she said, adding that the loan will allow the present cash flow arrangements to continue.

City manager Randy Frykberg announced a public hearing, scheduled for Tuesday, June 12 at 7 p.m. pertaining to an application by the local housing commission for funds to loan out at a maximum of 3 per cent interest for home improvement in the city.

The funds would come from federal block grant to the state of $7,900,000. The local grant request would total $207,000 and would, if accepted, be used to provide assistance to low-income property owners, up to the amount of $8000, depending on the kind of improvement.

George Brown, the new manager of the Glen's Market which will be opening soon in Boyne City, explains to a rapt audience the features of the chain's Save Share Program, where a percentage of money from the grocery slips can be returned to the community. The meeting was held last Tuesday. If you want any information on the plan, the firm will be happy to provide it.

Work is progressing slowly on the Front Street extension as the workers from the C.R. Smith Company finish up the laying of the storm sewer along the roadway. The workers will be laying the water mains and doing the construction for the sanitary sewer before adding fill gravel and building the curbing. Work is expected to be finished prior to the Fourth of July.

Marshall Sayles

Before I write this week's column, I have something to say.

Have you put any money into those canisters at stores to help Boyne City construct its Historical Museum?

I asked a number of people this question and some said they had while others, who were honest about it, said they hadn't.

When our museum is built you will be able to walk in and see how your grandparents had to live—their books, their tools, where and how they worked. There will be a complete display of Boyne City's development through the years. Can't you just see your grandparents sitting up there in Heaven wringing their hands, hoping you will build a historical museum in their memory?

Well, that's what they are doing. No, they ain't, a man said to me. I never had any grandparents, so why should I put ten cents into a coffee can?

Now, enough of this hogwash. Let me make it perfectly clear, as President Nixon said just before his aides were hauled off to jail—the Historical committee needs several thousand dollars to construct the museum in Veteran's Park. Not nearly enough people have jumped upon the bandwagon with hard, cold cash. Someone said this week that our merchants don't seem to know that we need this money. Not ten cents, but twenty-five dollars, or fifty, or one hundred or more, from each of the nearly one hundred people doing business in the community. Once the building has been constructed, merchants will benefit from it whether or not they saw fit to contribute to its existence.

Without the financial and enthusiastic support of our merchants, Boyne City will remain northern Michigan's only community without a historical museum.

So please send your contribution to the Northwestern State Bank or to the City Hall. It will make our sour stomachs sweet again.

Just one more thing. A man, who is not in business, told me that later on he would make a nice contribution to our new museum. I know this fellow. He isn't going to do anything of the kind. He's about as dependable as a plate of jello.

Now, for the column I was going to write this week:

Memorial Day has come and gone. June is bursting out all over, and the Fourth of July is about to flag us down. Talk about stuff flying!

You may recall the South American psychiatrist who, a while ago, said that kissing is good for your health. It will, he said, make you live longer. He said that kissing stimulates the heart, which gives more oxygen to the body's cells, keeping the cells young and energized. That's what the doctor said whether you remember it or not. Now, I would like to tell you about a recent experience with his theory, and how it left me as weak as a rained on chicken, but suddenly I seem to be losing my nerve.

I think the secret to any success this column may have lies in the fact that whenever I write something that seems to make sense I strike it out.

Remembrances

If you were going into east Jordan back in 1883, you would have to cross this old wooden bridge to get into the downtown area. If you look closely, you will notice that boats were on both sides of the bridge. You can't see it from this angle, but there was a swinging section that opened for the boats. The bridge was replaced many years ago with a dirt highway, we think, that now crosses the Jordan River. East Jordan was a bustling town back then, according to the looks of the lumber industry and the number of houses that can be seen in the photo.

Errata

Seems the building column looked like the one we described last week in the Remembrances wasn't, according to some of the phone calls we received. The building should be at the Masonic Temple Building, which is located next to Ben Franklin today. We were describing the Odd Fellows Hall back in the old days.

Jottings

BY JIM SILBAR

Islkour,xnvkjhfaoidisoa. Fooled ya, didn't I.

You may think that this is being typed by a computer, but you're wrong. Just a good ol' typewriter.

Seems that when you attend a concentrated course on the things, they tell you everything but where to put the thing in the office.

And that is a problem. If I put it on my desk now, then I would have to spend about a day or two cleaning out and cleaning off the top.

And if I put it where I want it to go eventually, I am going to need a new desk. You just can't stick a new item on an old desk, ya know.

But more important than the desk, or where it goes in the room, is just the fact that I would have to clear off a space for it.

My question of the week is why does almost every publisher-editor end up with a desk that is so cluttered, so disorganized looking. When my wife looks at it, she screams.

My father was also an editor. His desk was bigger than mine so that meant that he had twice the amount of clutter and junk to contend with during his days.

It is almost like that good old junk drawer that we all have somewhere in the kitchen. You know, the place where there is only one shoe string, three curtain hangers, two screws, a couple of dozen nails or assorted sizes, (never the size you want, though), and some Christmas greeting cards left over from who knows when.

We all have them...don't we. Come on and admit it. Somewhere in that house you live in is such a drawer.

Oh, it may not be in the kitchen, it may be out in the garage, or down in the basement, but...somewhere, we allow ourselves to have some clutter. I think the reason we allow ourselves such a luxury is that most of us live a very structured life.

We have to get up at such a time, we work so many hours, we have lunch at such and such time, and so on. Everything by the clock.

We even go to bed by the clock, not only because we get so darn tired.

Since we live that structured life, in order to relax we just have to have a cluttered drawer somewhere.

It may even be in our mind, hidden away for the time that permits some luxury.

Lately, I am thinking that my entire life is cluttered up so bad I will never get the time to straighten it out. I hope that you aren't having a day like mine.

The celebration that cherry trees put on each year is about over now, but not before I followed the advice of A.E. Houseman. Back in about 1900 he wrote a poem. I always liked it, because when I'm in the middle of being very busy, its little flute-call can change everything.

It begins:
Loveliest of trees, the cherry now
Is hung with bloom along the bough..

Houseman goes on to say that, being 20 years old, he may have only 50 springtimes more in which to see the cherry tree in bloom. He concludes:

And since to look at things in bloom
Fifty springs are little room,
About the woodland I will go
To see the cherry hung with snow.

The idea of celebrating cherry blossoms really applies to all flowers. It is only right to admire them again, again, as their moments come in sequence each year.

A few years ago, the love of flowers took a new turn in our neighborhood. It started when my grandson was about three, no taller than the daisies he saw face to face.

"Those are daisies," I told him. And as his face, like theirs, looked up at me, I said, "That's your flower, the daisy!"

Well then, he wanted to know, what was his friend Celeste's flower? "Oh, black-eyed Susan," I said, thinking of her dark-light coloring.

Then we had to go on with every-one we knew.

His friend Ethan-with-the-bright-smile has the periwinkle. Vivacious Sarah has bouncing-bet; blue-eyed Emily, the morning glory. And her brother, who has a certain in-charge way about him, has goldenrod.

As the game began, I had in mind that this was a way of teaching the children the names of wildflowers. With the names and faces known, they could then begin to acquire the lore of how the flowers grew and how they fitted the natural scene.

But something else followed, also. For some, the flowers became talismans and a form of honor. At the least, the names tied us together, for parents, too, had their flowers. For quiet Jana, the yellow violet; for Phil, the bee-keeper, beebalm, and so on.

And finally, now, when I see the trillium and the cinqufoil and all the others we have "given" to friends, I am reminded of these friends, and others. Twice rich, I celebrate the times of flowers.

Detour on northbound US-131 announced

Northbound traffic on U.S. 131 south of Petoskey will be detoured for six to eight weeks for safety improvement work, the Michigan Department of Transportation said today. The detour will take northbound traffic onto Bear Lake Road, up River Road to Clarion Street in Petoskey, to Sheridan Street and back to U.S. 131, for a distance of 7 1/2 miles. The detour will add a little over two miles to the normal highway travel distance. Work on the highway will include installation of guardrails, removal of trees and flattening of slopes. Work will be done daytime, week-days only.

Here's who's running for school boards

Voters in Boyne Falls, Boyne City, and East Jordan will choose school board members at the June 11 school election.

There will be two vacancies to fill on each of the three boards. Brief biographies of the candidates follow.

BOYNE CITY

Bill Chipman, running for re-election, has served eight years on the board. A native of Boyne City "46 out of 49 years," he will have a grandchild in school in another year. Chipman, who owns Chipman Plumbing and Heating feels that "all the programs that have been built up since we separated from East Jordan should continue. I'd like to see continuity," he said.

Paul Gerard said, "My daughter (in first grade) created a reason" to run for school board. Gerard, who is Quality Assurance Inspector for the U.S. government said he's been in the area for three years and has attended school board meetings for the past five months. Gerard has a college degree in biology and has, he said, "been interested in education for a long time."

John Mathers, Jr., is Parts Control

man at East Jordan Iron Works. The Mathers have four children in school. A native of Boyne City, he decided to run for school board "because we need a quality education." Mathers sees education improvement on his agenda.

Laurence Monshor, father of three school-aged children, said he's trying for one of the vacancies on the board, "because I'd like to be more involved in the community. I would like to help the board retain its responsiveness to the community." Monshor is Quality Assurance Superintendent at Big Rock power plant and has lived in the city for 8 1/2 years.

Ricky Pethers was appointed to fill out the term of Mark Behling and has served one year. He has lived about six years in the area and has a daughter in kindergarten. Pethers is a chiropractic physician in the city. His school board goal is "to get the best possible education for the tax dollar."

EAST JORDAN

Shirley Bauer, running for re-election has served four years on the school board. Her children are all grown, she said, but her interest in school continues, she said, "because there are so many good things happening that I want to be part of." Bauer has lived in the area for about 25 years.

Tom Galmore, Jr., served four years on the board, and hopes to return after an absence of two years. "I enjoyed it," he said. "I think I can contribute because of my experience." The Galmores have three children in school. He is part owner of a local business.

John George Pixley, Jr. Not available at press time.

BOYNE FALLS

Ron Barnardyn, who was treasurer of the school board, is running for re-election after having served four years. He has lived in the area most of his life, the last 10 years in the Boyne Falls school district. The Barnardyns have two daughters in school. Mrs. Barnardyn, answering the interviewer for her husband who was away, said, "I know he thinks it is important to get involved in the education of your children." She added, "He believes he has something he can contribute to the school system." Barnardyn is a building contractor.

Andrew Czerkies, not available at press time.

Jim Churchill, school board vice president, is running for re-election after serving for four years. Churchill is Materials Control Manager at Bendix-Courter Operation, and has lived in the area since 1946. "I don't feel I have the job done, basically," he said. "I see a couple of things coming up in the next few years that I'd like to see done." The Churchills have two children in school.

Boys' State scholarship winners

Scott Sutliff, Mike Mansfield and Chris Howard are the scholarship award winners invited to attend the 1984 American Legion Boys' State that will be held June 13 through June 19 at the Michigan State University.

All three were selected by the Ernest Peterson Post 228 of the American Legion here in Boyne City. They were selected by a committee of school administrative staff and members of the American Legion. Boys' State has been held since 1937 and nearly 1000 high school students have gathered at Michigan State to learn how city and state governments function.

The winners from Boyne City will join with other recipients and actually set up a government state with all of its bodies, problems and opportunities.

One of the criteria for the selection was the demonstrated leadership abilities and an awareness of government. Each award winner is expected to utilize the Boys' State experience in later life.

Loggers bumped out of predistrict

BY JERRY FROATS

The Boyne Falls Loggers baseball team was bumped out of the class D pre-districts by Gaylord St. Mary's last week 10-0 in a five inning game. The score ran 1-0 through four innings, when Gaylord rallied for nine additional runs to end the game.

Coach Bill Aten is looking forward to next year's season, as he will lose only two of his ball players to graduation. Norm Hausler, Ron Reynolds, James Crego, Tim Czerkies, Kelly Harmon, and Brian Walker will all return as seniors next year, to give the Loggers a very experienced pitching staff. Brian Bennett, David Gillespie, Ross Payton, Niel Wasylewski, and Scott Winhusen will all return as juniors to contribute their already proven prowess on the ball diamond.

The girls' softball team made it to the district finals tournament on Friday by stomping Vanderbilt 24-3 last Tuesday, but lost to Mancelona who went on to lose to Boyne Falls 10-2. The Boyne Falls girls had beaten the Central Lake team earlier in the season, but played poorly against Mancy. The team ends this season with a 15-5 win-loss record overall, 10-2 in league action.

The team will be hit hard on graduation, as they will lose four seniors, Kim Mikula, Karen Frankowiak, Robbi Cousineau, and Ronda Grubaugh. They are all fine pitchers and hitters.

The team fielded four freshmen, five sophomores, and three juniors this year, and look to the upcoming freshmen to fill out the talent.

Davis announces bid for fourth term

Northern Michigan Congressman Bob Davis announced today that he would seek a fourth term as United States Representative from the Eleventh Congressional District. The 11th District comprises 28 counties in Northern Michigan and is the largest in Michigan as well as one of the largest in the United States. Davis, a life-long resident of the 11th District, expressed enthusiasm for continuing to represent Northern Michigan and said there is a need to continue to have a strong, steady voice in our nation's capital.

"I realize there are many economic problems yet to be solved in our District, but I am very optimistic about our future when I look at our strong forest industry and tourist base. I am hopeful we are also seeing the beginnings of a resurgence in our mining and shipping industries," he said.

"I have been privileged to represent the people of the 11th District for the past six years, and look forward to continuing to work for the best interests of our people," said Davis.

A man is too apt to forget that in this world he cannot have everything. A choice is all that is left him.

Tigers, Yankees take LL action this week

BY JERRY FROATS

The Boyne City Little League played another doubleheader last Thursday, where the Tigers got by the Dodgers 9-8, and the Yankees rolled over the Orioles 33-7.

In first game action, the Dodgers scored three times in the first inning and once in the second, but the Tigers came right back, scoring twice in each inning to tie the game at four all. The Tigers ended the third inning, leading 8-5. The Dodgers tied the score again in the final inning, when Eric Richards doubled and Chris Christenson hit a long fly for a game winning RBI.

Richards was the victorious pitcher as he struck out 15 Dodgers and walked 19. He gave up just two hits to John Karkosak and Ed Kuzmick. Kuzmick took the loss, striking out 10 and walking just 5 Tigers. Kuzmick allowed 12 hits, most of them men on base for seven RBIs.

Getting hits for the Tigers were John Bush, Jim Bush, Steve Evans, and Stacy Ernst. Chris Downing, Richards, and Christenson had doubles and singles to lead the offense.

The second game was completely dominated by the Yankees, as the lights came on in the third inning and the game ran until after 10 that evening.

Todd Gasko had a very good night on the mound as he went the distance, giving up four hits, striking out 11, and walked only two Orioles.

The Yankees scored 22 times in the top of the fifth inning as many members of the team batted two or three times. Leading the attack were Matt West with a double, Wayne Avery with four singles and two RBIs, Rusty Cadlow with a two RBI double, and Gasko with two singles and a double. Dan Pollys also contributed, getting hit by two pitches and scoring three times from one single in the fifth inning.

Getting hits for the Orioles were Chris Johnson and Lee Woodbury with doubles, Jim Holibuck and Gunther Fineout got singles, and Bob Towne hit a long fly in the final inning, where West lost the ball in the lights, got hit, and Towne scored. West was not seriously injured and finished the game.

Hulett finishes in 7th

BY JERRY FROATS

Boyer City High School has turned out many fine long distance runners, and Mike Hulett has proven himself one by placing seventh in state wide competition in the one mile run. Hulett is also a very good two mile runner, as he has won many of these events throughout the season.

Hulett has worked very hard on his improvement as a runner, and some of his success can be attributed to the help and coaching of local business owner and BCHS graduate, Andy Place. Hulett and Place have been running together three times weekly in the morning before school. Place has finished in three Boston Marathons and ran well in a Detroit Free Press Marathon.

Hulett is expected to run in Boyne's Fourth of July long distance race, and finish well along with other local graduates Steve Parbbs and John Brabbs. Brabbs is attending Oakland University. For further information about the big holiday race, contact Andy Place at Harborside Sports in Boyne City.

Walloon Lake has book on its history published

BY NANCY JARVIS

Walloon Lake - A book tracing the history of Walloon Lake has been the dream of many and a long time in coming. This summer, Legends of Walloon, will be published.

Researched and written by Dorothy Munson Krenrich, with assistance from Tom Hunter, Bill Heisel and Sunny Hemingway Miller, the 100-page hardbound book covers every aspect of Walloon life.

Discussed in the 24 chapters are the Indians, homesteads, resorts and hotels, boats, camps, real estate and many other topics.

Collecting facts on Walloon's history began in 1976 when Krenrich's late husband, Albe Munson, was asked to write a series of articles on the history of Walloon Lake to be published in future issues of the Walloon Lake Association's newsletter.

"From that time until shortly before his death in the summer of 1977, Albe spent countless hours at both the Petoskey Public Library and Little Traverse Historical Museum gleaning information from old newspapers that dated from the early 1800s to 1930," Krenrich wrote in the book's introduction.

"Further information was secured through interviews with such old-timers as John McConnell, Mrs. John W. Carpenter, Mrs. Paul Taylor, Sr., Magdalena Taylor and Lillian Trixler. In addition, Albe set up a darkroom and printed pictures from old glass plates borrowed from Ross Renwich and Alfred J. Hass."

Krenrich, the daughter of Jacob and Martha Rehkopf, was raised at the family's Lake Grove Hotel.

"You might say that Legends of Walloon is a labor of love," Krenrich wrote. "I have always enjoyed a strong sense of intimacy with the area, and during the course of writing this book I was touched by a strong sense of nostalgia. Now when I look across the lake from our place near Lake Grove, I vision Eagle Island and Hoffman Point as they were many years ago.

"This is true of other places around the lake, especially the Village of Walloon. It is almost haunting. But I welcome it."

Heisel, of the Walloon Lake Association asked Krenrich to take on the job of finishing the book. Wanting to see the work of her late husband completed, and with ample encouragement from her present husband's family, Krenrich got up her nerve to start writing. Her only writing experience came from helping her late husband with a textbook, and writing a church newsletter in Roseville for a year.

"I just didn't know whether I was capable of doing it or not," she says now. "I thought if I could get across the feelings I had when I was a kid, that's what I had to do. So I bought pencils and cheap notebook paper and I'd write and throw it away and write some more. That was two years ago."

The author is quite relieved the writing is over.

"Sometimes when people say, 'I told you you could do it,' I think, 'I'll get you!' I'll be so glad when I see it all finished."

The book contains a number of interesting, humorous, and sometimes almost unbelievable tidbits of information.

In the chapter on Real Estate, it is noted that lake front lots on Walloon Lake currently sell for $350 to $600 a front foot, when available.

Quoting from the book: "It is hard to believe that in 1895 John Hines bought 300 feet of desirable wooded lake frontage a short distance north of Lake Grove Hotel on the West Arm for $90. He kept one 50 foot lot for himself and sold the remaining five lots for $15 each."

And a bit of humorous correspondence from a property owner:

"Regarding the $5 I owe this month on the lot I bought at auction last August. I cannot send it until St. Patrick's Day. My auto got foolish and ran into the corner of my home and knocked the chimney down. Total damage, $172. Also, my mother-in-law fell head first into a barrel of soft asphalt. She is well but don't look natural yet."

The response: "Dear Sir, Don't worry. I'll hold the lot until you get straightened out. Attended to your mother-in-law."

In those days, taxes on six acres of property on the lake were $7.74 and it took only four cents to mail the money.

There are many interesting stories on how Walloon Lake got its name. "A search for the reason this lake was named Walloon creates many questions and few answers," the book states. One can decide for himself which tales have the most credibility.

The book contains much valuable information on the fishing population and how counts have been taken over the years.

And imagine, up until 1884 spear fishing was legal, although, "...public sentiment practically abolished this practice as it was reducing the number of fish too rapidly."

When the survey of the townships surrounding the lake was taken in 1841, notes from the surveyor Chas. Cathcart stated: "At the outlet of the lake in this township (Melrose) fish are very abundant and with this exception we can see but little to recommend in it."

Comments Krenrich in the book, "One cannot agree with Mr.

Mrs. Dorothy Munson Krenrich looks over some of the information that is slated to go in her book about the history of Walloon Lake. The book is going to be sold with the Walloon Lake Association Trust benefiting from the sales.

Cathcart's entire statement, but he certainly was correct about there being an abundance of fish in the lake."

The chapter on Boarding Houses, Hotels and Cabin Resorts details the lifestyle of Walloon's early days as well as tracing the large number of resorts that sprang up over the years.

"For those desiring more than a sponge bath, a dip in the lake with a bar of soap served the need," Krenrich wrote.

Refrigeration was quite a nice convenience. Writes Krenrich, "Putting up ice for the summer months was another winter chore for the innkeeper. When the ice in the lake was 24 to 30 inches in depth, cakes, each weighing around 100 pounds, were cut and stored in an icehouse. Sawdust, readily available from the local sawmills, was used to insulate a space at least one foot wide between the building walls and the ice.

"Twenty-five and fifty pound chunks were cut and delivered by wheelbarrow daily to any who ordered it."

The first frame house on the lake built from dressed lumber was laboriously constructed by the McConnell family when they migrated from Grand Rapids.

"The lumber was all shipped from Grand Rapids, each piece cut and marked for fitting. It was probably the first pre-cut house in northern Michigan at that time.

"McConnell's son, Henry, floated the lumber up the Bear River from the railroad, a few pieces at a time. This part of the task took a week. The lumber was then transported up the lake to its destination on a raft that was towed by a rowboat.

"Pioneer Cottage became the center of social life on the lake during the summer months and a place where natives and Indians were welcome year around. Its hospitality was famed near and far and hundreds of prominent people were entertained there."

An interesting legend told to John McConnell by his Indian friends adds a touch of mystique: "...there lived in the woods near the Indian camp a small person who apparently was some sort of wood spirit. The name John used for him was Be-Kug-a-Nina, meaning wild man. It was believed that if this

Korthase building new type solar home

"You can't use solar heat in a place like northern Michigan." That's what you hear said. But you can—if the chemistry is right.

Dave and Betty Korthase are in the last stages of setting up a solar heating system for their house. But it involves more than letting the sun shine in. The added touch is salt. Not table salt, however.

The system is based on Dow Chemical Company's Enerphase which uses hydrated calcium chloride, stored in 60 boxes in the Korthase attic.

"We're kind of building the house around the system," said Korthase, who has a well-drilling business and lives near Boyne City.

The system takes up an area of about 5 x 12 feet, three feet high. Korthase succinctly explained the principle behind the operation. With the salts in the water, the freezing temperature is 80°F, a much more usable temperature than the 32°F. where plain water freezes.

But the purpose of the salt is twofold. It also absorbs the heat as the salt-laden water goes from frozen to liquid state, from 80° to 81°.

When water goes from frozen to liquid or liquid to steam, much more heat is consumed than when it simply climbs a degree, say from 88° to 89° F. while remaining in a liquid state.

This additional temperature is saved up in the storage boxes. When the house needs heat, a fan automatically goes on and blows the hot air on down into the house. When the house is warm enough, the system simply recycles on itself.

The fan, Korthase noted, takes only as much electric current as a 120-watt light bulb uses.

The question is, of course, how did the heat get into the storage boxes inside the attic.

Outdoors, on the roof, sun heat is collected by hot air solar collectors. A fan forces this air through the storage boxes.

"It's working," said Korthase. "I'm a little surprised it's doing as well as it is."

If it were not for the storage boxes, the heat would soon fade, as the sun set or went behind clouds, but with chemistry, it will function 24 hours a day, Korthase said.

At the time of the interview, Korthase was in the midst of trying hot water coils in with the storage box system, so that there will be heated water as well as warm house.

He said theirs is the first place to adopt the new system, called Thermal-Energy Storage Panels. Korthase explained he's been looking for a means of solar heat, and pounced on this when it became available.

Other systems have tried using heated water or rocks for storage systems, but these do not give up their heat readily enough to the air passing over them, if air is used to heat the house.

And the rocks also would get damp and breed bacteria and such, Korthase added.

It looks as though there will be a couple of people who can't wait until next winter!

The house of Betty and David Korthase is almost as marvelous for its views as for its solar heating. Korthase backs it with a wood stove and, for while they are away, with electric heat.

David Korthase's hand is on the controls in the solar house he designed and built. He stands behind the series of storage boxes containing, at the moment, 132 degrees of solar heat. The controls turn the fan on and off, keeping the house in the pleasant low 70s.

Camping

Camping seems to be in America's blood. Always a favorite outdoor activity, it will be enjoyed by upwards of 60 million people this year, according to a recent study by the A.C. Nielsen Company. Nielsen predicts the number of campers will increase to 61.6 million by 1985 and will swell to 64.4 million by 1990. The study also shows that about 40% use recreational vehicles (RVs) for camping.

Lake ass'n. takes steps on water quality

"It's a unique lake," said Leon Fish, president of Walloon Lake Association. Fish explained why the lake's uniqueness prompted a major project of water study, Phase I of which is already complete.

"Walloon is 100 feet higher than Lake Michigan," he said. The waters that feed Walloon all come from within the 34 1/2 square mile area around the 7.3 square miles of lake. This gives the neighboring property owners more than the usual degree of responsibility for the water quality, according to Phase I conclusions.

"It's a little, self-contained water system," said Fish, "and you can't mess that up."

The study of the lake began a year ago in May and was completed in February. Project Vigilant, as it is called, applied to Williams and Works of Grand Rapids, who sent their subcontractor Bidstrup and Young.

With limnologist Dr. Robert King from University of Michigan and the subcontractor's Ed Burt, a geologist, the study of what makes Walloon what it is began.

"There have been tests and studies before," said Fish, "but nothing like this." He noted that the study had cost $29,000 and that a second phase was also needed.

The second phase, he said, would monitor the lake from month to month, to provide a year of data "so that we know what we're comparing with," Fish explained. No date for Phase II has been set.

Phase I determined the geology, climatology, soils, ground and surface watersheds. Data included the fact that Walloon has a bottom of limestone bedrock, a protection against acid rain as lime is an "antidote" for acid.

The springs that supply the majority of the water come from aquifers that are about at water level around the lake. Streams flowing into the lake provide only about 10 to 25 percent of the water.

The total amount of inflow is relatively small, so that Walloon's regenerating cycle is much longer than that of most lakes. This means it takes between seven and nine years for all the "old" water to be replaced by "new" water.

It also means, says the Association Directory, that Walloon "is a very fragile lake."

"To keep Walloon the gem that it is," continues the Directory, "the purity of the water entering the lake..

must be doggedly monitored and protected."

Asked how Project Vigilant regards its goal, Fish answered, "To keep the lake in a natural state for the use of people." Admitting the conflict between the two, people and the natural state, he added, "to keep an equilibrium between lake and man."

Fish said that while Health District III sanitary codes cover most needs in the county, a special, tougher section should be written to apply to land use around bodies of water. "We have written to them about that," he said.

The different townships, too, have differing regulations, though they are adjacent to the same lake.

The one unregulated benefit to the lake is its particular location in relation to Lake Michigan. Walloon would be next to nothing, said Fish, without the lake-effect rains and snows which ultimately supply Walloon.

Ottawa Indian beadwork to be displayed

BY NANCY JARVIS
Harbor Springs - The scarce, the rare and the unusual in Ottawa Indian beadwork and textiles will be on exhibit this summer at the Andrew J. Blackbird Museum in Harbor Springs from June 26 through September 30.

Exhibition pieces include historically significant items dating from the 1820s to the present.

Of special significance are the Ottawa Indian wampum belts, of which there are only four remaining in the world. The belts, made from shell beads, were rarely made and used by woodlands Indians, according to Steve Graham of the historical commission.

"The assemblage of wampum belts is really exotic," Graham said. "The use of shell beads makes them very significant."

Collected in 1902, the four belts are permanently located in East Germany, Berlin, Munich and the Field Museum in Chicago, but two or three of these belts will be loaned to the Harbor Springs exhibit this summer.

Other work is being hand carried from Austria by Christian F. Feest from the Ethnology Division of the Austrian National Historical Museum in Vienna. Still other exhibition pieces come on loan from the Detroit Institute of Arts, the Logan Museum of Anthropology in Wisconsin, and many private collections.

All of the items on display were made by Ottawa Indians in the Cross Village and Harbor Springs areas.

"Missionaries and military people in Europe considered these items collectible," Graham explains, "and they took them back to Europe where they eventually ended up in European museums. In the late 1800s and early 1900s, American people began to value these items and they started to be collected here."

"There is more exhibit material from the 1900s to the present because more people saw its importance and collected it."

Another unusual item in the exhibit is the L'Arbre Croche sketchbook of Indian hell drawings used in 1830s religious instruction at Holy Childhood School in Harbor Springs. The cover of the sketchbook was made from moosehair on deerskin, and is exquisitely done, Graham said.

Moccasin leggings, textile mats, bags and trading cloth of all types and sizes will also be displayed. In all, the exhibit encompasses three rooms at the museum.

"This exhibit shows the progression of Indian work from their initial way of making things to white man's influence on the use of cotton thread," Graham said. "It is a very colorful, representative exhibit depicting many of the things the Ottawa used themselves in everyday living and for ceremonies rather than for sale or trade. That makes it very interesting."

The picturesque resort community of Harbor Springs, located on Little Traverse Bay, is home for this rare exhibit this summer.

Last summer, the historical commission put on a well-attended Ottawa Quillwork on Birch bark exhibit featuring about 150 pieces of work ranging from boxes, dishes and other utilitarian and decorative items.

As with this summer's beadwork and textile exhibit, many of the pieces displayed were viewed by the North American public for the first time.

The book, Ottawa Quillwork on Birchbark, especially produced for last year's exhibit, was highly acclaimed. The magazine, Michigan

History, noted that the book was, "...an extraordinarily fine publication of exceptional quality."

The historical commission is producing another book for the beadwork and textile exhibit, which Graham says promised to be, "...even better than last year's."

The 64-page full-color book, with text by ethnologist Feest, will be available for sale at the museum. It includes 63 color and 22 black and white photographs of the items on display.

The Andrew J. Blackbird Museum, which was once the home of noted Ottawa Indian Andrew J. Blackbird, is located at 349 E. Main St. in Harbor Springs. Exhibit hours are from 10 a.m. to 5 p.m., Mondays through Fridays, and 12 p.m. to 5 p.m. Saturdays.
