A sweet nostalgia spreads over me when I think of berry picking time on the farm. We had a red raspberry patch planted in rows on a hillside but there was nothing exciting about picking them compared to going to Lynch's woods for the wild blackberries.

On the day that Papa came home from the fields with his hat full of blackberries we knew what was in ings were worn, no going barefoot on those trips. Getting a sun tan was not the style but I had one anyway—no hat for me, however Mother wore a straw hat and sometimes a pair of Papa's overalls.

Those blackberries were big, luscious and so very sweet. We ate a lot just from the bushes and still managed to fill our pails. Mother canned them in 2 quart cans. She always had to make at least two pies while she was at it. We had a few bushes of "black caps" or black raspberries growing on the back orchard fence. What I would give for a few of those berries now in a bowl with fresh cream and a little sugar!

I have found a new recipe for strawberry shortcake on a beautiful calendar. You could use the same easy, delicious shortcake for blackberries, blueberries, raspberries, fresh peaches or cherries. For the cherries I would omit the lemon juice and season with 1/2 teaspoon almond flavoring.

SHORTCAKE

- 1 1/2 cups all-purpose flour
- 1 teaspoon baking powder
- 1/2 teaspoon baking soda
- 1/2 teaspoon salt
- 2 tablespoons sugar
- 1/2 cup shortening
- 1 1/2 cups corn flakes cereal, crushed to 1/2 cup
- 1/2 cup buttermilk

In medium size mixing bowl, stir together flour, baking powder, soda, salt and sugar. Cut in shortening until mixture resembles coarse crumbs. Add cereal and buttermilk, stirring until dough leaves side of bowl. Spread dough evenly in greased 8 inch round cake pan.

Bake in oven at 450 degrees about 20 minutes or until lightly browned. Cut into six wedges and serve warm with fruit sauce.

Remembrances

Marshall Sayles

Wild strawberries are ripe! Sweet, juicy and ready for picking.

Those who have never picked lush, wild strawberries have missed one of life's greatest delights.

Of course, there is a lot of stooping, bending, sitting, back aching, insect biting and weed sneezing, but a quart of the small, red berries is worth it.

Moneywise they cost nothing. Costing nothing has perked me up as long as I can remember.

So I took a small pail and went to the field. (Now, here's where you should pay attention. I've never known anyone to take a pail into the fields without getting into trouble.)

Among the weeds I found a nice berry patch. There were hundreds in all directions sitting there waiting to be picked, tasted and stomach patted.

Last winter when I was at the hospital being checked over, the doctor had said that I was no longer twenty years old; and those aches and pains were nothing more than the body saying slow down, you nut.

Now, in the field, bending over to pick the first berries, I had forgotten what the doctor had said—until I remained bent over. I could not bend back up.

I tried my best, but my best wasn't good enough. Which was a strange thing, for my best had always been good enough before. Then I remembered how the doctor had said that my best had dwindled. And that's something I'll never understand. I know men older than I am whose best hasn't dwindled at all.

If I didn't move, my back wouldn't hurt; and I got to thinking. Three times in my life I had sinned without being caught. Perhaps the Lord had come across my former deviltry and was now punishing me retroactively.

Maybe if I repented I could stand up. So I whipped up four or five quick repents. Nothing happened. My body remained pointed toward the earth. Strange thoughts ran through my mind and came out my mouth in the form of swear words. That made things worse than ever, what with the Lord hanging around checking on my past sins.

To make a short story way too long, my wife finally came out with the wheelbarrow, pushed me into it and bump rode me back to the house.

Personally, I don't care if I ever see another lush, wild, strawberry patch as long as I can swallow. Who needs it?

But a wife and a wheelbarrow. Well, there's something no man should be without.

Frequently, we receive pictures of the slash wood that lined the shores of Boyne City in the early days. A few have asked what all that firewood was used for that was piled on the docks and the land. Most of it, we found out, was used to make charcoal to feed the pig iron plants that were in Ironton and Boyne City. The makers of the charcoal used many of the byproducts to make things like alcohol. The bark was used to make tannic acid, which was then used in the leather plant. While there was a lot of waste in the early days, most of the products were used and reused until they were worthless.

Jottings

Rush, rush rush. It's hard for me to believe all the rushing around just to get things done before the "big" holiday throngs hit the beaches and the shores around our area.

Seems like all the construction guys are working doubletime just to keep up with the orders that they are getting.

Mrs. Somethingorother wants to have her job done before the afternoon tea that she is planning in two... yes two days. Mr. Whatitname has had a standing order for fill dirt to be delivered to his place in the woods for three months he tells me and his contractor keeps "putting him off."

If I were a contractor, I might do the same thing...forever. When you work as hard as possible, exceeding the safety limits of your body, something is going to go wrong. Health is also a consideration for the working class of the north.

And I see that happening to a lot of working folks here in the area.

We do our darndest to get the jobs done on time but their is always some person, sometime, who doesn't have the consideration that the work requires.

Boy, would I like to be in a position to go to their business and ask why the job I ordered yesterday at 5 p.m. isn't done today at 10 a.m. when I called for it.

Then the tables would be turned. Of course, those who think they hold the power are usually those who can't take the heat when it is applied to them.

Anyway, all the construction jobs around these towns will be done...all before the Fourth of July, according to most of the contractors I talked with in the past couple of days.

Then they tell me, there is a lull during the months of July and August. Come September though, they are out working harder than ever, because everyone wants to get their job done before the snow flies.

I feel somewhat sorry for the contractors though, they get to take off most of the winter so that they can go skiing, or ice fishing, or down to those sunnier and warmer climes to continue on working.

It kinda makes me jealous.

Last week I had an opportunity to see something that I never thought I would see in Boyne City. I saw a parking lot filled to the brim...and overflowing.

The occasion was the Glen's Market grand opening.

I always wondered where all the people came from. Now I know...All around the place. Everyone was there, almost, it looked like the day before Christmas at a downstate mall.

The funniest part of it was that no one could buy anything. That came the next day.

Every day, we hear of a new restaurant starting up. The latest is Dave Phillips' place called appropriately enough Phillips' Mill. To say that his eatery is unique is certainly true. After parking your car in a lot that looks like you would have a quarter-mile walk, a horse and carriage stops to pick you up and take you across a bridge to the front door. The mill part of the name is because of a great big water wheel that he built with the help of C.H. Smith and Co.

They provided a water tank from

Sunday openings provide needed services

We would like to congratulate all of the merchants who have started to open up on Sundays.

Not because they are going against the will of the consumer who is always trying to buy something they don't need, but because of the insight into seeing all those consumers who do need something.

The consumer, like most of us, appreciates a day or a weekend off of their normal job so that they can do some of the work that needs to be done around the home.

We sometimes wonder if more businesses will stay open to serve you if you want to finish a project but forgot to buy that item needed, or some pharmaceutical that the child needs but you ran out of at the wrong time.

We have heard all the arguments about Sunday being a day for the Lord, and while we appreciate those who wish to follow that ideal, reality shows that being open on Sundays makes good sense for a lot of folks. Quite a few religions are holding services on a Saturday, just to accommodate those who can't get to a service on Sundays. Or those who don't want to go on a Sunday.

Even those who do go to church on Sunday, end up having at least a half a day for doing all the other things that they like to do.

And the merchant who is open on that day, can and does service those customers. The next thing that the merchants should consider, is staying open a little later in the day, so that those of us who work until 5:30 can get to the store to buy the items that we want for the project of the evening.

We are sure that those days will come also as the merchants of the community become aware of a need, and can see the potential of trying to fill it.

McCune Art Show judge talks about art

"Just tell me why it's supposed to be so beautiful," is the frequent challenge of those who don't like art shows.

Robert Veryzer, who is in the business of explaining art and who will be judging the upcoming Crooked Tree Arts Show, thinks everyone responds to art, but he said, they enjoy it more as they become more knowledgeable.

Veryzer has spent years teaching design, as head of the design department at the famous Cranbrook Academy at Bloomfield Hills, also teaching at the Center for Creative Studies in Detroit and now at Purdue University.

Veryzer and his artist wife Marion have their permanent home in East Jordan, though they are down at Purdue while classes are in session.

For 30 years, however, he worked at General Motors, involved in the design of such cars as the Corvair and the Stingray as well as in teaching design at General Motors Tech Center.

And now this expert in design will be judge for the Juried Fine Arts Show starting July 7 and running to July 28 at the McCune Arts Center in Petoskey. The show, of course, is open to the public.

"You use design in art," Veryzer continued, adding that a judge looks at "basic elements of design and at technical ability" in finding the quality of the work. But what makes it "fine art" is how successful the artist is in conveying a message.

What kind of message, we asked.

Veryzer responded that the message was a matter of feeling, "a light, festive feeling," or something "to create depth of feeling."

Graphics, which is one of the categories to be included at the show, is the use of two-dimensional space. The artist is concerned here with how color or line or both can express feeling. "You take a Mondrian painting—it's pretty close to graphics," he said. Veryzer was referring to Mondrian's rectangles of color, which have frequently been adapted by fabric designers and others.

The difference, in a nutshell, between fine art and design, Veryzer said, is that design is used, as in the case of a house design, and fine art is looked at—as in the case of a painting hung on the wall.

Besides graphics, the show at the McCune Art Center in Petoskey will include paintings, sculpture, and mixed media.

Mixed media, he said, is the combining of materials. "Just about anything goes, these days. You can paint a picture and add driftwood," he said, by way of an example.

Veryzer's own "personal involvement would be water colors," he said. He paints for his own pleasure, but often sells his work.

when he and the staff have the time to prepare an outline for such a program.

The idea for a wish book was first presented at the recreation board meeting last Thursday night by county recreation director Mike Davis who suggested that the county recreation department help the city in looking for funding for recreation programs. In the discussion that followed, it was thought that a city wide "wish book" program could be established rather than one just for recreation.

Frykberg hopes to be able to put some time into developing a "wish book" idea for Boyne City.

Barbara Cruden

We love our children. And we pity the Chinese, because only one child per family is being allowed. They're being very strict about it over there in order to keep the number of Chinese below the amount of available food and housing.

But the Chinese are the future. The rest of the world is lagging in population consciousness. A chart published this month by the Audubon Society shows that at AD 1, the world contained about 200 million people. By 1850 it hit one billion. Only 100 years later it hit 2.3 billion—more than double.

It is now already at 4.4 billion! And by the time our kindergarteners are 18, another billion will have been added. The billions are being added faster and faster.

In the United States we consume far more per person than do people anywhere else, so although U.S. population increases only about one percent per year (mainly by immigration), we contribute to the problem negatively by misuse of the environment and very expensive tastes in consumerism.

Only in the last decade or so have countries in the Third World been willing to look at population controls. Customs, religion, and economics have prevented change.

For example, custom in some African communities requires large families because farm land is allotted to families according to the number of children in the family. The larger the family, the more land father gets, and the greater his prominence.

In other countries, grown children are the only "social security" parents can have, so they make sure there will be some children to survive to adulthood by having a large family.

The Audubon story said by 1960 biological resources started falling behind relative to the number of earth's inhabitants. So now we have to get behind several programs. One is the limitation of immigration, which Congress has begun. We can't encourage other countries to consider us the solution to their over populating practices. We have already added a possible 10 million of illegal immigrants, not to mention legal immigration and refugees.

At the same time we bar the doors, however, we must increase our efforts to solve Third World problems, especially in view of our being one of the fortunate "haves."

And we must begin to look at our own customs—our allowing topsoil to blow away, our paving good farmland into shopping malls, and so on.

We must also face the need for family planning around the globe, and support it, instead of pulling back as our administration is now doing. Yes, avoid abortion, but no to no control.

Yes, we love children, but do we want them to come to the starvation or turmoil of an overpopulated planet?

The Military Order of the Purple Heart was founded in 1932 and has been awarded a Congressional Charter. The Purple Heart goes back in time to George Washington who, during the Revolutionary War, established the "Badge of Military Merit in the figure of a heart in purple". The decoration was instituted as a reward and incentive for "gallantry and fidelity to essential service".

After the war, all records of the decorations were lost. Shortly after the bicentennial of Washington's birth, records of the decoration were rediscovered. The award was revived in 1932 by President Herbert Hoover and General Douglas Mac Arthur and renamed the Purple Heart.

Diss announces candidacy for 103rd

Peggy Steckling Diss, Democratic Candidate for the 103rd State House of Representatives, plans to make constituent service a major priority when elected. Diss states that due to the size of her district and its distance from the state capital, it is difficult for the average taxpayer to contact his State Representative. She believes that listening to and providing help for people is what a State Representative should be doing. When elected Diss will provide cost-free phone service to her office in Lansing for all of her constituents. Tax dollars will not be used to finance this service. Diss plans to raise the necessary funds through voluntary contributions. Diss is a teacher in Gerrish High School District

Resource inventory fieldwork to begin in Charlevoix County

The 1984 Natural Resources Inventory field work will begin soon in Charlevoix County. This inventory of land and water resources was authorized by Congress in the Natural Resource Act of 1976 and is conducted by the Soil Conservation Service, an agency of the United States Department of Agriculture. Soil Conservation Service personnel from the Boyne City field office will be performing the field work in the county and may be asking landowners permission to visit their land. The inventory is based on 160-acre sample units scattered randomly over the county. Current land cover and use, current and past erosion, wildlife habitat, and built-up land are some examples of the information gathered from each sample unit. This year nearly 200 sample units will be field checked in the county. Combined with the sample units completed in 1981, this will provide an 11 percent sampling intensity which will provide statistically valid data on the land and water resources at the county level. This data will be available to the county board of commissioners, the planning commission, the soil conservation district, and other interested agencies and individuals. The current plan calls for the same sites to be inventoried again at the end of 10 years in order to assess changes in the resource base over time. The information collected has not been collected by any other inventory. At the national level, this inventory will provide Congress with the information needed to make intelligent decisions regarding conservation of our land and water resources. Cooperation by landowners will be appreciated. For any questions, please contact the Soil Conservation Service, Boyne City, 582-7341.

The cottagers of Lake Louise Christian Community at Boyne Falls are welcoming the public to an Arts and Crafts Festival at Lake Louise United Methodist Camp on July 7. This Festival is part of the celebration of the community's 50th anniversary. Mrs. Helen Beers is overall chairwoman for the weekend.

Between 1917 and 1927, several thousand acres of land surrounding Thumb Lake (as it was known then) were purchased by Charles Horner of Eaton Rapids. He and his brothers had a humanitarian dream of its value for work with youth in camp programs. They gave the lake the name Lake Louise. Over the next several years the brothers and several Methodist ministers worked out steps for the giving of the property to the two Methodist Conferences. In 1934 the Lake Louise Christian Community, a non-profit corporation, was created to own and manage the property. The Rev. Charles H. Beynon is present president of its board of trustees. In the ensuing 50 years almost 50,000 youth and adults have participated in the camp program at Lake Louise. In addition to the United Methodist Camp there is a thriving Baptist Camp, and a Detroit Presbyterian church had campgrounds there for a time. Camp Kinawind, at the west end of the lake is the newest camp and is operated by the Detroit Conference of the Methodist church.

Land not used for camping purposes is leased for summer cottages, originally for retired Methodist ministers, but now also for others approved by the trustees. Cottagers Mrs. Meredith Herrington and Mrs. Phyllis Harrington are co-chairing the Festival on Saturday, July 7, starting at 10 a.m. Proceeds from Festival offerings will go to completion of a new Retreat Center being built at the camp to supplant a building which burned down several years ago. At the center will be boutiques for the sale of arts and crafts, baked goods, a book nook, Christmas corner, country store, including a "cookie walk," a junique sale and a snack shoppe.

Closed by will be a Kid's Korner for sale and display of kids' books, games, puzzles, etc., as well as a place to play. Hours for these activities around the center will be 10 a.m. to 4 p.m. A 5 km. Fun-Run and a Senior Stroll (both free), will take place at the camp field. Entrants should register at the field between 8:30 and 9:30 a.m. T-shirts will be available for $5. At 1 p.m., a free Sailboat Regatta (Sunfish-type) gets underway at the camp dock area. Registration for this event is at 11:30 and 2 persons per boat is stipulated. Float boat rides around the lovely lake ($3 per person) will be available at 10, 12, and 2 o'clock. A very special treat of the day will be an authentic Hawaiian Luau at 6 p.m. in the Retreat Center. Advance tickets are necessary for this event—$5 for adults and $3 for children 2 to 12. Checks made out to Lake Louise Christian Community may be sent to James L. Herrington, R. 1, Box 129L, Boyne Falls, 49713. In the evening, the festival will end with a campfire, sing-along and some unique entertainment. The day will close with a communion service. Sunday, July 8 is a day planned primarily for present and former cottagers and their families. At the morning chapel service the Rev. Donald Merrill of the United Methodist Church in Petoskey will preach. A cottagers' potluck dinner will follow. In the afternoon, there will be camp open houses, the history and artifacts of the community presented by the Rev. Ted Halsted, and a pictorial history arranged by the Ed Weiss family.

Engaged?

The Charlevoix County Press publishes engagement and wedding announcements without charge. Pictures are welcomed, but we do suggest a few guidelines. Good quality black and white photographs, either of the couple or bride-elect, are preferred. All photographs are kept on file in the Press office and may be picked up at any time following publication; those pictures not picked up after six months will be discarded. Wedding and engagement announcement forms are available at our office or will be mailed upon request and the receipt of a self-addressed stamped envelope. While we try to publish each announcement the week that we receive it (and in the case of weddings, the first publication date following the ceremony), space constraints sometimes force us to delay the printing of the announcement for one or two weeks. Therefore, we ask that information be received at least two weeks before the intended publication so that we might better plan for its publication. We will not accept wedding announcements received more than four weeks after the wedding.

To help clear up the annual confusion over which fireworks are legal, the Michigan State Police offer some definitions and precautions to help Fourth of July celebrants have a safe and legal holiday.

The only fireworks which may be sold at the retail level and used by the general public are restricted to: toy paper caps, snakes, toy smoke devices, toy trick noise makers, wire sparklers (size #14 or less), flitter sparklers, and both cone and cylinder fountains.

Any other fireworks are illegal for sale and use unless proper permits are obtained from the local governing body. Fireworks which send a projectile into the air, spin, twirl, or emit an audible signal (excluding toy paper caps and trick noise makers) are illegal. Local jurisdictions may have more restrictive ordinances. Contact them for additional information.

Fire marshal officers stress that many children, and adults as well, are seriously burned or injured each year while playing with fireworks and emphasize that caution should be used. These safety precautions are suggested:

Make sure the fireworks are legal for use by local ordinance and state law;

Check for manufacturer's label and instructions for use on all fireworks—illegally manufactured fireworks rarely have either;

Carefully follow instructions for use;

Provide adult supervision and don't allow very young children to handle fireworks;

Light only one device at a time;

Ignite fireworks outdoors only and away from buildings and combustible materials;

Don't attempt to alter or use fireworks in a manner not intended.

Persons having any questions concerning the safety and legality of any fireworks are advised to contact any State Police post of their local police or fire department for assistance.
