THE INVASION BEGINS

The invasion that has begun puts life into those school ideas, and Boyne City schools like many others are bright halls silent all summer. Teachers are brimming with exhibits and posters—and children.

Boyne awards bid to Seals and Roberts

City commissioners awarded a contract Tuesday to Seals and Roberts Construction Company. The company was low bidder at $13,159.25 for putting the prefabricated airport terminal on foundations at Boyne City Airport. Also involved will be the terminal's utilities.

Three companies bid on the job. A fourth bid was also submitted but parts of it were either missing or not dealt with. Although it was the lowest bid ($11,454), because of the omissions, the commissioners discarded it.

The airport building will be trucked here in four parts at the end of next week, city manager Randy Frykberg said. The terminal will be ready for use within 60 days from then.

Financing of the project is to be through a Michigan Aeronautics Commission low cost loan of $2,250 and a grant from the state of $25,000.

Frykberg said the city engineer's estimate for local construction work was $16,704, about half way between the high and low bids.

At their Tuesday noon meeting, commissioners also approved the submission of final application papers for a grant for Peninsula Beach construction, having garnered required approval from the Department of Natural Resources. The grant of $215,000 is for half of the total cost of making a landscaped peninsula on the new city beach to protect swimmers from boaters as well as to protect the beach from wave erosion.

The remainder of the cost will be covered through an "innovative private public sector" contribution said Frykberg. This will include land, dredging, and labor. The estimate of actual cash demand on the city, he said, would be under $60,000.

The pre-application for grant funds for the $430,000 project has already been submitted to National Parks Service, Department of the Interior.

John DiMartino, the plant manager of United Technologies Automotive in Boyne City, cuts a piece of the cake that celebrated the thirtieth birthday of the plant here in Boyne City. The cake was shared by the employees of the firm during their coffee breaks last Friday. Originally opened as Boyne Products in 1954, the firm has been making automotive switches for almost the entire industry.

Boyne City was busy with bicycles last weekend as the annual DALMAC bicycle tour came through town on Saturday and Sunday. Those businesses that were open seemed to be very busy serving the bikers who were taking a break from the pedaling that started in Lansing and were working their way to the Mackinac Bridge. The tour has two sections that pass through Boyne, one during a trip of 100 miles in a day, while the other was "just a tour," according to some of the riders.

United Technologies has 30th birthday in Boyne

United Technologies Corporation here in Boyne City celebrated their 30th anniversary with coffee and cake last Friday.

The company began operation on September 1, 1954, with the name of Boyne Products Company, making switches and turn signals for the Ford Motor Company. As the business grew, they also started to produce switches for the Chrysler and General Motors companies.

In 1967, the company was acquired by Essex International and that company was absorbed by the conglomerate, United Technologies Corporation in 1974.

The Boyne City plant, which employs 350, is part of the Automotive Products Division of the parent company. Over 10,000 people are employed in that division around the world.

The division is a leader in the automotive technology business. It is a world wide supplier of components and systems to car and truck manufacturers in many countries selling to Ford, General Motors, Volkswagen, Chrysler, Mack Truck and International Harvester.

Nearly every car and truck made in America contains one or more of the United Technologies Corporation's products.

With the plant locally and the employee with the longest service is John DiMartino, who is also the plant manager. He also celebrated 30 years with the firm.

Post office opens 'branch' at 1st National Bank

Boyne City area postal customers will now be able to rent a box, pick up their mail and conduct other postal business, while doing their banking at the First National Bank and Trust located at 502 West Boyne Road.

This is the result of the establishment of a mail convenience center at the branch bank featuring post office lock boxes, mail acceptance and stamp sales. Also included is a drop box collection box in the drive at the bank.

The contract station will benefit the Postal Service, local businesses and the mailing public. It will give customers ready access to postal services (primarily retail services) at a new location 1.6 miles from the main office in downtown Boyne City.

The new convenience center will be operated by bank employees with all services except, International Mail, Postal Meter Settings and the Acceptance of Bulk Mailings, being provided during their regular banking hours. 105 post office boxes have been installed at the new location, which will enable mailers to conduct postal business while on shopping trips or traveling to work. Small boxes rent for $20 per year and mail will be available for pick up at 9:30 a.m. on regular banking service days.

This nation wide program of mail convenience centers has proved popular while extending service to meet the needs of growing communities.

For further information, call the Post Office at 582-9941 or stop in to the First National Bank and Trust, 502 W. Boyne Road and inspect the new convenience center.

Frank Jastnaki shows off one of the new parcel lockers that are available at First National Bank's new postal convenience center to bank manager Jim Howell. The center will be able to handle most types of mail services that the postal services offer, just as the main post office downtown does.

Guidelines set for home meals by A-C-E

The ACE (Antrim, Charlevoix, and Emmet Counties) Nutrition Project, of which Charlevoix County is a member, has put into effect a new suggested donation schedule for their meal sites. This schedule is based on the annual household income. No one will be denied a meal, if unable to contribute to this scale. $6,000 or less, 60 cents; $6,000-$10,000, $1; $10,000-$15,000, $1.50; $15,000-$20,000, $2; under age 60, $2.25.

A certain percentage of the nutrition project must be raised through donation, or county government assistance. For the current fiscal year (83-84) this amount is $32,207, of which the county contributes $2,916.

At the present time the project income for meal donations $18,854 (at the end of July). It should have raised $24,409. This does make the project short of $7,550.

At the present suggested donation of 60 cents it is making it only 10 cents more than when the program began in 1974.

OH, TO BE A LOOPHOLE TYCOON
 He: Now that the campaigns are on fire, how do you think the election will go in November?
 He: Republican, all the way.
 He: How can you say that? I've read several things you've said that sounded as though you kind of cozied up to the Democrats.
 Me: No, no. You've gotten me mixed up with my writings. Sometimes I think one way, but say something else.
 He: In other words you often misquote yourself.
 Me: Not this time. I now say that I shall vote Republican as many times as the law allows.
 He: Do you often throw temporary fits of insanity like that?
 Me: Now, listen. You must have heard what President Reagan said about sending a teacher up in one of those space ships. Well, my daughter teaches school. It would tickle her half to death to be flown off into space where she wouldn't have to keep order or mark papers. I lean toward Reagan doing stuff like that.
 He: Are you nuts? Your daughter won't have a chance. The teacher chosen to go will be the daughter of some Republican tycoon who is surrounded with lawyers and loopholes.

 Me: Darn. I don't have a loophole to my name.
 He: And you ain't no tycoon, either.
 Me: I used to think I was until the bank called up and explained the penalty for being over drawn.
 He: So why don't you vote straight Democrat? The Republicans ain't going to flip nothing your way.
 Me: I can't do that. I'm too old to change my ways now. I first voted for Wendell Wilkie. After that I voted for Tom Dewey, Jerry Ford and people like that.
 He: And not one of those men were elected. How come you can't see the error of your ways?
 Me: That has always bothered me. Whenever I've seen the error of my ways, it has always been too late to pull in my horns.
 He: So, have I converted you?
 Me: Converted? We're talking politics, not church. Churches do not fling people into space.
 He: Now what's the matter?
 Me: Oh, it's this darn typewriter. I just had it repaired and I don't know whether to test it or bomb the Russians.

Jottings

BY JIM SILBAR

It seems that in order to keep up with the Jones nowadays you have to get a satellite dish to put in your yard, or on top of the business, or somewhere on your ground.
 Just look around the town and you see more and more of them every day being put up, or are already installed.
 Now we could see putting one up if we lived somewhere in the country where the cable system doesn't go, but when they are in town it just seems to be an expense that would take an awful long time of watching such things as the baseball program from West Consohocken, or somewhere.
 But, having one of the devices does make for an interesting amount of viewing. I wonder if, because you might have one, you spend more and more time watching tv instead of doing the honeydo lists that have accumulated.
 Myself, I don't think I would want one. At least not yet in my life. The reason being that I have kids in school and while they watch enough television now, I don't want to give them an opportunity to watch more. Even if you can get HBO and all the other movie channels.
 I would like to have one, though, only because when I come home from the office after an especially distraught day, I think I could lose my tension by watching the screen. You know, get so absorbed in watching that you forget about the troubles of the day.

On to the fall color tours. In driving back from Gaylor the other day, I started to see some of the trees turning into the magnificent works that we humans call vivid color.
 Early fall is one of the most enjoyable times of the year. The colors that Mother Nature works up really give the eye a sight to behold.
 Fall is the time of hearing, too. What you hear are all the chain saws out working in the back forties getting enough wood cut up to last the winter.
 When the saws are working, the BTUs expended in cutting would probably keep an old, uninsulated home warm for a month, according to a few of the folks I have talked with who were out cutting for themselves.
 It is hard work working out in the woods.
 It is even harder when you have to contend with the yellow jacket nests that always seem to be just where you want to work.
 Now those guys get downright nasty when someone wants to disturb a nest.
 I can remember running away from one for what seemed like a couple of miles before the bees finally quit coming after me. And I was only stung twice in the process.
 Those little buggers give up hard.

endless interest. Look at what cigarette advertisers have done with the tough, the sophisticated, the languid, or the tense ways of holding a cigarette.
 Look how psychologists have analyzed the smallest gestures for their tell-tale meanings: the crossed arms, the side-slipping glance, the tapping foot.
 And then, how we enjoy the movements of animals: of a waterborne swan, or the hunched-around glare of a cat, or the stretched-up alertness of a rooster, about to crow.
 I don't know how city people manage with only the gestures of pigeons or of other people to observe.
 The last evening I had a visitor whose gestures struck me as pure comedy. Katy didn't mean to be funny. In fact she was the epitome of solemnity, slowly moving about the room with stately steps. I thought she might be about to give forth on some serious matter.

 I prodded her. "What's on your mind?" I asked.
 "Katy did," she answered, her green face unsmiling.
 Not to be bewildering—the visitor was a 1½-inch insect called a katydid, and her pacing was along the wall. Her long green legs made each step something of an event.
 I know people dislike bugs, and I can be as cross as the next about flies. But, I think that, contrary to familiarity's breeding contempt, becoming acquainted with insect life makes for a degree of fascination.
 And not that the katydid actually chose to be solemn, but her gestures represented a style, an idea, even though they are said to be biologically determined.
 I took her outside, and tonight I think I recognize her voice once in a while in the night, through the jazz racket of crickets and other insects.
 I smile because I'm reminded of her most endearing gesture. It was when she had walked out on an electric cord, strung overhead, and then decided to turn and go back. This involved bringing six long green legs into a fulcrum-like grip—slowly, slowly moving to a crosswire position, rocking just perceptibly off-balance like an elderly judge on top of a stepladder, and finally making the 180 degree turn to tight-rope-walk back to the wall.
 Out in the country there are a lot of miniature gestures like this—a squirrel trembling with anger, a grouse thumping his feathers. I'd hate to leave bugs out. They have some momentary drama, too.

Souvenir hunters for years have been collecting bricks made in the Boyne City brick factory, which was located on Call Street here in Boyne. The picture shows the complete plant as it was back in the early teens. In the foreground is the kiln that was used to bake the bricks [the building with the V supports], while the many other parts of the manufacturing firm were done in the other buildings on the grounds. ## A reminder for 18-year-olds from Selective Service

The Selective Service System is reminding all male citizens or aliens residing in the United States, who were born after January 1, 1960, that they must register with the Selective Service System within 30 days of their 18th birthday. Individuals born anytime during 1966 may, if they wish, register and not wait until 30 days before their birthday.
 Registration is a simple process which requires the registrant to supply his name, address, date of birth, social security number, and telephone number. Identification should be brought along when registering. Registration may be completed at any U.S. Post Office.
 In addition any individual who has registered since July 1, 1980 and has since legally changed their name, permanent address, or current address are also urged to update their change with the Selective Service System. Again, these change of information forms may be obtained at any U. S. Post Office.
 If an individual born after January 1, 1960, has not registered with the Selective Service System they are urged to do so at once. Currently a man must register to receive federal student aid and job training benefits.
 To date over 11.3 million men have registered with the Selective Service System. This represents over 97% of those men eligible for registration (men born in years 1960-1964).
 Registration...it's quick...it's easy...and it's the law.

Two new car sales businesses in BC

A dream of small business independence and confidence in the future growth potential of Boyne City has attracted two businesses to the area.

Barnes Motors and Brunell Motors, both located just east of Boyne City on M-75, and each independently owned, recently opened for business offering deals in good used cars.

Shellie Barnes, a native of Eastport, Michigan and his wife Sue, a former Boyne Falls resident, opened Barnes Motors Friday, August 3, following a period of extensive research and anticipation.

"We researched a few different towns," Barnes said, "but chose Boyne City because of the aggressive attitude of the business people here. Boyne City seems to be really on the move toward expansion and growth."

"We chose our location specifically because we feel the city is moving out this way," Barnes said of his location on M-75, across from Boyne City Lanes.

"Coming from Eastport," Barnes said, "Boyne City seems like a big town. We're small town people and our hope for the business is to grow yet at the same time maintain a small town flavor."

Barnes' experience in car sales stems from a family run "ma and pa" style business founded by his father in Eastport. The family business includes an International Harvester Truck dealership as well as a lumber yard and hardware store.

"Our practice has been no hype, but good service," Barnes said. "We plan the same for our business here."

According to Barnes, the business will look toward a grand opening sometime next spring. Plans are being made for an increase in the lot size as well as adding a service garage.

"We're hoping to be an asset to the Boyne City community," Barnes said. "We would like to remain small and any expansion will be gradual."

The Barnes' are currently living in Eastport where Sue operates a beauty salon, and hoping to move into Boyne City by next spring.

Across the street and down a bit is Brunell Motors, owned and operated by Roy Brunell of Boyne City.

Currently in the process of opening for business, Brunell, encouraged by his wife Wendy has been busy since January preparing to get things in order by Labor Day.

According to Brunell, who has spent the recent months constructing a sales office and putting together a nicely hand crafted wood sign, the business will remain small and be strictly a one-man operation.

Brunell, a former salesman at Bob Mather's Ford dealership has lived in Boyne City for 11 years and is deputy district governor of the Boyne City Lions Club. He has held a position with the board of directors for Charlevoix Hospital for eight years.

Wendy Brunell is an employee of the East Jordan Iron Works and a member of the East Jordan Lioness Club.

Brunell's intent is to keep inventory at a minimum, "at least at the beginning" and serve his customers by going out and finding the car they want.

Coincidence is the only explanation for the proximity in location and the opening of Barnes Motors and Brunell Motors. Both salesmen agree that competition is good for business.

Roy Bruneel, owner and salesman at Brunell Motor Sales in Boyne City, is pictured here beside the business sign which he handcrafted himself.

Shellie Barnes is the owner of Barnes Motors, Inc. The business recently opened in Boyne City offering quality used cars at affordable prices.

Paper into paper from area business

"Don't waste paper," tree lovers say, reminiscent of their mothers who said to them, "Don't waste money. It doesn't grow on trees."

Recycling paper does save trees, of course, and money. But it is mainly his interest in trees and the environment in general that started John Magee in the business of recycled paper.

In northern Michigan it was next to impossible to buy recycled paper, and plenty of people have wanted to. It's a matter of pride with them. Magee, with his wife Carol started up the business near Petoskey about six months ago to meet that need. He said he wanted recycled paper himself and this was one way to get it.

"I can make paper," he said. "You can make paper out of straw or anything you can first make into a pulp."

But Magee was interested in a more commercial grade and a larger supply than can be achieved through hand-processes.

Prior to the venture he had served in nature centers in Michigan and in Massachusetts. He has a Colorado university environmental degree.

His first step was to purchase 1000 pounds of recycled paper from a recycling mill and to share it one way or another with friends and groups.

He said he read a lot of books and talked to a lot of people before deciding to go fully into the business of selling recycled paper—"primarily offset paper especially made for printed material," he said.

The Magees also sell a grade made for use in ditto machines, but the machines are "very touchy," he explained, being precisely set for a certain weight of paper and this prevents some machines from accepting any other paper.

"The papers we sell are all heavy enough to print on both sides," he said. The Magees also market stationery, as their free catalog states.

The catalog goes all over the United States to individuals and small groups as Earth Care Paper is a unique service. Carol Magee said it had just been written up in the September "Mother Earth News."

Recycling mills do not sell directly to such small markets, so Earth Care Paper buys from mills in Michigan and Wisconsin for retailing by catalog.

Magee said some paper mills also buy used paper from paper brokers for recycling. It's not cheap to produce recycled paper, Magee said, but it does cost less than cutting and shipping trees to the mill.

Unfortunately paper brokers operate mainly in large metropolitan areas; it hasn't yet been economically feasible for them to buy small amounts. But Magee recently completed a recycling feasibility study for the county, his wife said. The study included a survey with surprising interest shown by those questioned.

She said half of those

Cindy and John Magee pioneer recycled paper in northern Michigan. It's one of their contributions to the environment for more trees and for less waste going to dumps. The Magees market their papers from their office in Harbor Springs.

Red Fox Regatta results

Every Labor Day weekend, the Charlevoix Yacht Club sponsors the Red Fox Regatta, and this year's race drew 74 entrants, compared to last year's 65. The annual event is "becoming more and more popular each year," according to organizers Edith and Warren Todter of Boyne City.

Saturday was the first day of sailing competition on Lake Charlevoix, with a plotted course of 18.5 nautical miles. Starting in Charlevoix, the skippers headed for Two Mile Point, rounded a buoy and turned north towards a buoy at Oyster Bay. From Oyster Bay, the yachtsmen sailed southeast to Hemingway Point and continued eastward to a buoy near the Ye Nyne Olde Holles Golf Course. From that point, a lake wide triangular maneuver was required as the yachts rounded buoys at Whiting Park, Horton Bay, and back to the buoy near the golf course.

From Whiting Park, the course turned southeast again towards a buoy at the Harborage condominiums in Boyne City, with a short northeast stretch to the finish line near the mouth of the Boyne River. Sixty nine yachts finished Saturday's race.

Saturday's race was very pleasant until the last half of the "fleet" neared Boyne City. A drizzle set in, the wind died, and 12 yachts were left listless in the water for a while before a breeze carried them to the finish line.

After registering a "pile of protests" the yachters gathered at Boyne City's Veterans Memorial Park pavilion for a charcoal lunch of corn and hamburgers. Jeff Kelts of Boyne City organized the luncheon affair. Sunday's race was fast and exciting despite a steady rain and a slight mishap, where two of "Bandit's" crew were accidentally thrown overboard in waves. "Tigger" dropped out of the race to help rescue the people in the water.

The course started at Saturday's finish line, and eliminated the triangular pattern of the previous course. The boats sailed from Boyne City, past Advance, across the lake to Horton Bay, due west to Hemingway Point, northwest to Oyster Bay, from there to Charlevoix's Ferry Beach, and finished at the Charlevoix Yacht Club.

Sixty four yachts finished Sunday's race with wet decks and Overall trophies of pewter depicting red fox heads were awarded to the top three two day times in each of five divisions. Penant style flags for rigging display were presented to the skippers of the first three finishers in each division on both days.

It was almost like the start of the Port Huron to Mackinaw race last Sunday when the boats that were participating in the annual Red Fox Regatta left Sunday morning in a slight drizzle. It was a spinnaker start for most of the boats, as the winds were from the right direction, for the 70 some odd boats in the race.

EJ hires new athletic director

The East Jordan public school system has appointed a new athletic director for the upcoming year. Steve Hines of Mancelona will be the man to fill the position vacated by Dennis Snarey. Hines says that he is "very excited" about his new job and looks forward to working with the East Jordan youngsters, and has confidence that the sports program will continue to be backed well by the community. He also notes that East Jordan's program has a good foundation and that with lots of faith and proper leadership and guidance, the new generation of students can excel.

Although Hines is just 29 years old, he has substantial experience in today's sporting world. He was Mancelona's athletic director for one year, and coached both boys' and girls' varsity basketball for two years. He played football, basketball, and baseball on the high school level at Lapeer and where he graduated at Mancelona.

Hines will coach boys' varsity basketball and baseball along with girls' junior varsity basketball for the next two years.

He will be working with 14 freshman girls on the basketball squad, and likes the idea because, "they haven't developed any bad habits and are more perceptive to what you're trying to teach them." He says he will wait to express any new plans or ideas at the present time, as he is "feeling around" and wants to get accustomed to his new job. those fish in streams for spawning. A few weeks before beginning spawning runs, the fish eat ravenously and grow about two pounds per week. At maturity, chinook reach up to 35 pounds while coho usually grow to no more than 15 pounds.

Most salmon trollers will use lures which have been popular for years: Northport Nailers, Huron Herrings, J-Plugs, Canadian Plugs, Squids, Sparkle Flies, dodgers, Flutter Chucks and Zippers. Stream fishermen use a variety of Mepps Spinners, Little Cleos, Salmon flies and spawn.

The DNR will permit liberalized salmon fishing from Sept. 10 through Oct. 25 on five Michigan rivers this year and in 1985. They are the Au Sable River in East Michigan and West Michigan's Big Manistee, Pere Marquette, Muskegon and Sable rivers.

Anglers on those streams' designated areas are allowed to keep foul-hooked or snagged Pacific salmon. The DNR's 1984 Michigan Fishing Guide lists the liberalized areas for each stream.

Salmon fishermen planning a Great Lakes charter boat trip should budget $50 to $60 per person for a half-day's fishing. Most charter boat captains require at least four passengers. A free Fishing and Specialty Charters Directory is available from the Michigan Travel Bureau, Department of Commerce, Lansing, MI 48909.

Levels of chemical contaminants have dropped in Great Lakes fish. However, the Michigan Department of Public Health continues to discourage children and pregnant or nursing women from eating salmon.

Boyne City, East Jordan salmon fishing expected to be superb

When Michigan's 1984 salmon season ends, it is expected to be the most productive ever with a record 370,000 anglers trying their luck for the silvery fish, according to the Automobile Club of Michigan.

The Department of Natural Resources expects sales of trout and salmon stamps to be 1 percent above the record number sold in 1982.

Great Lakes salmon fishing should peak from now through mid-September. Streams should have heaviest pressure between mid-September and mid-October. By the end of November, anglers will find few salmon along Great Lakes shores and in streams.

Some two million coho and chinook, the same number as last year, should return for spawning runs across Michigan. Forty-two "hot spots" are listed on the Auto Club's 1984 Salmon Guide.

Best West Michigan results are expected on Lake Michigan at Charlevoix and at the mouths of the Betsie, Grand, Manistee, Muskegon, Pentwater, Pere Marquette, Platte and St. Joseph rivers, according to a survey of DNR offices. Best runs in East Michigan should occur on Lake Huron at Port Hope and in Southwest Michigan on the Huron River south of Flat Rock.

Major Upper Peninsula runs are expected from Lake Superior into the Black, Big Iron and Dead rivers and from Lake Michigan into the Manistique River.

Fishermen will find limited action in some areas where wiers block salmon runs.

Those streams include: the Little Manistee and the Jordan rivers in West Michigan and the U.P.'s Ana River. Portions of the lower Platte River in West Michigan and East Michigan's Au Sable river also are blocked.

When anglers began searching for salmon

16 years ago, they fished primarily along streams and piers in fall. Presently, about 70 percent of all chinook and 90 percent of all coho are taken by trollers from ice-break through September.

The popularity of trolling has evolved as fishermen learned that salmon take lures more readily in lakes than streams. Another discovery is that the firm, fresh meat of lake-caught salmon tastes better than that of
