Consensus says Lake Charlevoix in good shape

Even though Lake Charlevoix is getting older every year, the consensus of three experts on lake aging told the Lake Charlevoix Management Planning Advisory committee that the lake is in very good shape.

The committee, as part of the learning process is undertaking, heard from three experts on water quality last Saturday at its meeting held in Boyne City.

The three told the members of the committee about the processes that all lakes go through from the time they were made by the glaciers, through to today and on to the future.

According to the first speaker, Jim Bricker of the Tip of the Mitt Watershed Council, all lakes go through an aging process called eutrophication, which splits the aging process into three divisions. Young, middle-aged and old. He told the committee how sediment from the rivers and the shorelines settle in the lake. Signs of a lake getting old include weed growth along the shorelines and out into the middle of the lake in some of the worst cases.

Bricker told the members that man can do a lot to speed up the process as he adds nutrients to the watershed for agricultural and cosmetic purposes.

In some cases those nutrients, primarily phosphorus, end up in the lake and help, with other natural chemicals, to speed up the growth of harmful algae and other plants.

Dr. Darrell King, a fisheries and wildlife professor at Michigan State University, took a different tack when he made a presentation to the committee.

He said that from the data he has looked at in the last few days concerning the lake, his conclusion is that the lake is in very good shape.

He also said that while nutrients are a concern, it would takes literally thousands of tons of phosphorus to cause any immediate damage to the lake.

He told the group that one of the things going for the lake is that it is big, long, and deep.

The slideshow he presented to the committee showed how some of the nutrients in the water can affect a lake.

He also said that sometimes, weed growth is not a bad thing, depending on the point of view. Fishermen like to see weed beds because they are good fishery producing areas, while others like wide open water so they will not foul up their boats as they pass through them.

King completed his presentation by telling the group that the lake has a long way to go before any damage could be seen, a process that may take as many as 10 to 15,000 years providing man does not speed it up considerably.

The third speaker of the day told the committee that the Department of Natural Resources will be doing a water clarity research program on the lake this summer to determine if the water is getting better or worse from the last time it was tested.

The program will determine the amount of dissolved oxygen in the lake, the temperature at certain depths, and the transparency of the lake using a Secchi disc every two weeks during the summer.

The DNR will also be doing a chlorophyll, "a" count along with the other tests it is making.

Dick Mikula, an aquatic specialist of the DNR, told the committee that the DNR will also be doing some specialized work concerning the lake.

They will be taking specialized samples to document the perceived decline in water clarity on the lake.

Water samples will be taken in the deep basins of both the South Arm and the main body of the lake during the summer.

One of the concerns that they are going to try to determine is whether or not the lake is increasing the chlorophyll "a" count, or whether the lake is precipitating calcium carbonate.

The calcium carbonate that may be forming is called "whittings" and is caused by the amount of carbon dioxide dissolved in the water that may be chemically reacting with other chemicals to form the precipitate.

All of the testing on the lake will be used to back up the research that was last done to the lake in 1978.

While the committee learned a great deal about the lake processes, some of the members were asking whether or not they should be concerned as much about the lake as they should be concerned about the sociological aspects of the watershed.

Board member Rick Smith of Boyne City noted that the lake and its quality is in the eye of the beholder.

When asked by another member of the committee what may be the best thing that could be done, if the group was given the money to work with, Dr. King said that perhaps, the best thing would be to ask those in the watershed what they wanted to do with the lake.

He said that the information being gathered for "free" by the DNR would help, but that the aspects of the communities that are in the watershed are probably more important for the preservation of the lake.

He ended the meeting by telling the committee that they have embarked on a long term venture, and that while he thinks they have to look at the lake, they should also look at the entire watershed that feeds the lake.

Deer causing problems in county

With the change in the weather, the deer are getting out of their normal winter yards and are causing problems with motorists, according to the Charlevoix County sheriff's department.

Heavy concentrations can be found in many places within the county and drivers are warned to be on the lookout for them especially between dusk and dawn.

Thumb Lake Road on the eastern edge of the county and Noxwood Township on the western side are the largest problem areas where most deer have been seen.

In the area near the Big Rock Nuclear plant, and just west of Horton bay are other areas where large amounts of deer have been seen.

In one two-hour period last week, six car-deer accidents were reported to the local sheriff's office.

Jerry Hosmer struck and killed two deer as he was driving along Thumb Lake Road about 1:00 a.m. last Thursday.

Deputies from the sheriff's department reported large herd movements in several locations across the county as the snowmelt is allowing the deer to look for new food sources.

The sheriff's department also warned of dogs chasing deer and that dog owners should keep their dogs penned.

This group of Boyne City folks decided to welcome spring with an early picnic Monday afternoon. Hot dogs and hamburgers were on the menu along with other summer time foods, and everyone seemed to be enjoying the break in the weather.

How to work with agencies to develop wetland discussed

BY JIM SILBAR and
BARB CRUDEN

So, you bought what is now known as a wetland, you are wondering what can be done with it? Some of the solutions to Act 203, the new wetland act, can leave property owners, especially those in the Lake Charlevoix wetland areas, with decisions that may not be to their liking.

If you have property along the shoreline of Lake Charlevoix, any of the river systems that feed it, or are part of the watershed and your land is presently not developed, there are many avenues of approach that can be taken so that you have, as a property owner, the right to be able to utilize the land in question.

The problems come when you try to develop the lands without having the proper approvals from the many governing bodies that can be affected in the development of the wetland areas.

This is because the state recognizes that the wetlands are a valuable resource, and that what may happen in any one of them, may affect those in other areas across the state.

That is one reason why the state passed the wetland act in 1980.

If you are intending to develop the land you own, several of the people making the decision as to whether or not you will get the permits necessary have said that perhaps the best advice they can give is to utilize one of the many companies that work with land development and are familiar with the wetlands and how to work with them.

They can be found in the Yellow Pages under "environmental consultants" or under "engineers."

Those companies will be able to undertake most of the projects involved, see them through the many planning and permitting agencies and be able to help decide among the many alternatives possibly necessary to developing your site.

If you wish to do it yourself, the place to start is to get a copy of whatever planning codes are in effect in the township or city where your property is located.

After reading through those rules, you will have to get a permit from the Soil, Erosion and Sedimentation Section of the Charlevoix County building department if the work to be done is within 500 feet of a lake or river or is more than one acre in size.

You also need to pick up an application that will go to the DNR for work proposed for a wetland.

Both applications will require paying a fee.

Ron Geer, who is the head of the soil and sedimentation department, suggested that those with known wetland areas may want to start with the DNR permit first. He said that he can make suggestions and allow permits for work that would keep the soils from flowing into the lake or onto adjacent properties but the DNR has to grant their permit first.

Geer also said that his department is willing to survey the site prior to any work that is to be done in order to make suggestions that could help influence the DNR into granting a permit.

While there are a few things that could be done without a wetlands permit, you almost have to be involved with agriculture or lumbering in order to be able to start work without a permit.

In general, a wetland landowner is going to need a permit to do any work other than maintenance structures such as a breakwall, constructed prior to the enactment of the act.

Filling out the application is no guarantee that the DNR is automatically going to issue a permit.

When landowners start the application process, they will have to give a description of the land, where it is located within the county, and what use is proposed for it.

The DNR, at its option, may require also an environmental assessment of the proposed use, which shall include effects upon the wetland benefits, the effects on water quality, flow, and levels, and the effect the development may have on the wildlife, fish, and vegetation within a contiguous lake, river, or stream.

Within 60 days of receipt of the completed application, the DNR may schedule a hearing that will be held within the county where the work is proposed.

It is at this meeting where members of the public may object to the proposal. They would also have an opportunity to file written objections, sending them in to the hearing officer within 20 days after the public hearing.

The DNR then has 90 days to make a decision on whether or not the proposed activity will be permitted.

The factors that the DNR will be looking for as they go through the granting process include the relative extent of the public and private need for the proposed activity, the availability of feasible and prudent alternative locations and methods to accomplish the expected benefits of the proposed activity, the extent of the beneficial or detrimental effects that the proposed work would have

Water well guarantees East Jordan future

Saying he had "good news" for the city council, East Jordan city superintendent Mike Dionne announced test results for the new city well.

"Two million gallons per day," Dionne said. And other test well shows a second could bring another 1.38 million a day.

The wells are north of the high school football field. Test drilling costs were covered by a state grant of $25,000. The well development has already been budgeted for 1985-86, Dionne said.

City council approved the Anishinabe Title IV Council's request for use of its new property on Mill Street. City council said it fell properly under present R-2 zoning. The city stipulated an annual permit review.

Residents brought complaints to add to downtown business people's complaints at the last meeting, saying that the city was over-burdened with visitors' cars at the Original Michigan Fiddlers' Jamboree.

Mayor Pat Sweet responded that the city would have three new parking lots finished this spring. The Jamboree only comes twice a year, she said. "If it inconveniences some of us, it's worth it," she added.

Payment on the operational loan from the city to its Tourist Park budget was postponed until 1986-87 when the expectancy is that the park will start paying for itself and will be able to handle the loan.

Councilman Al Joseph pointed out the loan required no interest payments and had no time limit.

A letter from Sheriff George

Lasater was read. Lasater praised the cooperation of ambulance director Bernie Hammond in responding to a call in severe weather.

Hammond pointed out he also had the back-up of the volunteer fire department on that call.

With the arrival of spring, the city is enforcing the junk ordinance. Council noted it applies to unlicensed, junk cars.

Replacements for two resignations from the recreation commission were approved. They are Ken Brill and Virginia Jacobson.

The council also approved Barbara Worgess' request for a special use permit to operate an accounting business from her home.

A hearing for Sherry Meredith's request will take place Tuesday, April 2 at 7:15.

Boyne airs complaints on M-75 to MDOT official

Boyne City Commission in a well-filled commission room, Tuesday noon, heard state rehabilitation of M-75 may not come before 1987.

Present were Charlevoix County road commission members, city officials, concerned residents and business people, and Jerry Seward, district engineer from Michigan Department of Transportation.

City manager Randy Frykberg said, "We've had a discussion of this (road rehabilitation) over the years." A 1985 survey of road deficiencies has been ordered by the state, but, Seward explained, no money has been allowed for any road work, "though the department has been cognized of the problem for quite a long period of time."

The difficulties are cuts on federal funds and the fact that many Michigan roads are also in need of attention.

Police chief John Talboys said, "I think you're going to find it hard to convince anyone in this room that there's any state highway in worse condition than M-75. We don't understand why it's been let go so long."

One businessman said, "We're damaging our products just (trucking them) three miles."

A resident, Robert Williams, said two or three trailer trucks going by at the same time are beginning to rattle his house to pieces. The home valued at about $50,000 has windows going out of plumb.

Williams said his neighbor across the street can't plaster, because the plaster cracks under pounding of the traffic.

Others cited safety hazards, and the effect on city development with a poor highway leading in.

Seward said the department welcomed comments including those sent to his office.

He explained that with limited funds, rural roads that cost six or seven times less than the one-mile M-75 project were the ones often given priority.

Commissioner Bill Grimm said that although repair of M-75 from the high school into town was needed, he had expected the work would

Sand to be removed from Jordan River

What man did, man will now undo in the Jordan River. Michigan Wildlife Habitat Foundation selected the river along with about seven others out of the many in Michigan proposed as candidates for rehabilitation.

The area chapter of Trout Unlimited will apply the foundation's donation of $7,000, in addition to a $10,000 donation from the Harder Foundation, an environmental organization in Detroit, to remove sand in the river bottom.

The sand, according to Steve Swan, fisheries biologist for the Department of Natural Resources, covers the gravel, fills in holes, and buries logs considered desirable by trout for spawning purposes.

Rather than to dredge the whole river in a destructive sweep, the procedure will be to dig ditches down to the original river bottom.

The ditches will trap sand being pushed along by the current.

As the ditches fill, they will be dug out, Swan says, hopefully by the Michigan Youth Corps. The DNR is providing the technical assistance, said Swan.

Trout fishermen, objecting to the whole procedure, say that the sand is a natural aspect of the river environment, but Trout Unlimited, as well as other agencies, says that most of the sand is the result either of erosion from the road that runs parallel to a portion of the river, or to what came from soil disturbance

BEVERAGES

Our forefathers were always very enterprising when it came to the making of beverages using whatever was available. Our pioneers drank "yarb" tea or herb tea and during the revolutionary war times many patriots refused to drink tea from England and they made their own from spices and herbs. Also during those times alcohol beverages were very common; rum being the most popular. I have recently read a book entitled "Log Cabins and Hard Cider" describing the first presidential election after Michigan became a state. When William Henry Harrison's motto was "Tippicanoe and Tyler, Too", hard cider was served at all of the political speeches which won the election for Harrison.

During the Civil War coffee was unavailable and a drink was made from roasted chicory and other plants. I can recall that during WWII we put our coffee grounds through the percolator the second time. Coffee was rationed.

Last summer we were all making sun tea; we really do not have to wait for summer. Just make it this way.

COLD WATER ICED TEA

The day ahead, pour 4 cups cold tap water into a glass can or pitcher, add 8 to 10 tea bags, let stand at room temperature. The next day remove the bags and stir. Pour tea over ice cubes in 12 oz. glasses. Serve with sugar and lemon slices.

ICED COFFEE

Iced coffee is especially good during hot summer days yet is delicious served any time of the year. Make it this way. Make coffee double strength and pour over glasses filled with ice cubes. I drink hot coffee black, however I always use cream and sugar when it is iced. Very thirst quenching!

SHIRLEY'S BREAKFAST BEVERAGE

This is a very special beverage which is a complete meal. My daughter drinks this every morning and has been doing this on week days for about five years. It always sustains her until lunch. She drinks

[Dear Editor: As I said last week, I'm vacationing in the hospital. This column was drawn from among those published years ago when I was still thumping on a barrel head with a mop handle to get people's attention.]

Here is one of the things that happened because we did not spend the winter in Florida.

What's the matter with your elbows?

Maybe I've caught something that attacks highly intelligent men.

It's the winter. Cold weather and low humidity are rough on elbows. Just look how hard and wrinkled they are. If we had gone to Florida instead of staying in Boyne City this winter you wouldn't have elbows like that. Warm weather would have prevented it.

Nobody will notice if I keep them covered.

Hang on to them. I'll get the hand lotion.

Hand lotion?

Yes. It will soothe them and make them feel better.

You are not putting hand lotion on my elbows.

Now, quit fussing. It will ease the soreness.

Give me that bottle. Where does it say it can be used on elbows?

It doesn't. It's something I found out.

Ha! Another one of your old wife's remedies.

Hush up. Now roll up your sleeve again.

I will not. The last time I rolled up my sleeve for a woman she gave me a Swine Flu Shot. Remember how I ate like a pig after that?

Stop that. Let me see your elbow.

I never thought you'd develop a thing for elbows. Besides, you saw them once. The mystery should be gone by now.

Quit stalling and roll up your sleeve.

Suppose someone were to come in. Normal husbands do not let wives put hand lotion on their elbows. It's embarrassing. Oh, that's cold.

Stop acting like a baby.

If you have been paying attention, you will have noticed that I'm having a difficult time adjusting my mind to all this.

Will you shut up and hold still?

Madam, are you quite through with my elbows? I'd like to have them back if you don't mind.

There. Now, the next time you want your elbows done, you can do them yourself.

Later in the coffee shop, my friend noticed that something had fertilized my usual grouch, making it larger than ever.

"What's got you buzzing?" he asked.

"Oh, it's my wife," I said. "Just because we didn't go to Florida this winter she did my elbows with hand lotion."

He didn't laugh. He didn't hoot and holler. He just sat there staring at me and drinking his coffee.

"Look," I said. "I've decided to go to Florida next winter."

He didn't say a word. Just sat there staring at me.

Damn, how I hated that.

This photo, compliments of Luella Houck of Boyne City, shows men employed at a shingle mill in the early 1900s at a location off Skop Road in the swamp southwest of Boyne Falls. Note the bundles of shingles ready for shipment. Second from left is Sylvester Baker and second from right is Jim Baker. Do you recognize any of the others? The Press would appreciate a call identifying any people in the pictures it prints. If you have any old pictures of the area that you would like to share with the readers please bring them to the office so we can make a copy and print your picture in a future edition.

Jottings

BY JIM SILBAR

Scientists these days are the mathematicians. At least those who are involved in pure science tell me so. (My daughter, who visited my brother the scientist over Christmas, tells me that he spends more time with his computer than doing practically anything else).

Now I read in one of the newspapers that someone is really working on finding out about the fourth dimension.

And I have a hard time just figuring out what things are in two dimensions, let alone three. But four, I can hardly even think what that dimension would be.

The three that we are most concerned about are height, width and depth. Anybody who has tried to draw anything has to utilize those dimensions.

But one problem that I see coming on, is that those folks playing in the fields of the fourth dimension are going to have problems.

Besides all the spacial considerations, like hyperspace travel, and the warp factors of the Star-trekies, they have one huge identity problem that most have not even started thinking about yet.

What I am talking about is the fact that the fourth dimension does not yet have a name.

Not only have these mathematicians not seen a fourth dimension, even if the ever do, they won't know what to call it.

According to the article, those guys with their noses in their computers, it used to be books in my day, have been able to determine that there is a fourth dimension. They have even gotten so close that they have seen a shadow of what one of those shapes may be like. All thanks to computers.

I can't even begin to think what kind of a software package they are using, but one of those scientists told the writer of the article that he was first intrigued by the possibility of the other dimensions when he read a comic book back in the 1940's.

In that book, which was about Captain Marvel, the boy reporter was shown some aspects of the world of tomorrow.

The leading scientist of the day, at least in the comic strip, was talking about scientists working on the seventh, eighth, and ninth dimensions. The boy reporter, being as quizzical as I am, wondered what ever happened to the fourth, fifth and sixth dimensions.

And that was the basis as to why he, the present day scientist, started thinking about becoming a mathematician.

And I am glad that someone reading comic books can use those thoughts of yesteryear to find a profession.

Maybe, when I was a kid, if I had not read so many Superman comics, I wouldn't have been a newspaperman. But, I don't think it was too much of a factor, I was more interested in trying to fly like Superman by jumping off of things like garage roofs, tree houses, and the like.

Maybe I became involved with this business because of the crashes that I never told my mother about.

After all, a lot of folks have told, are telling, and will be glad to tell me that I am crazy to work this hard.

March—the mad month of March—teems with m-ish phenomena. Mainly it is the mucilage of mud and the mush of melting snow. In fact, I think March is more marine than April is supposed to be.

But there are recompenses. Mourning doves call, making the most melodic, gentle sound in the world.

The mad March hares and mad March squirrels dash about.

And the mallards, well, always the mallards, but now, mostly the mallards.

Now revealed are the amusing mazes made by mice all winter long under the snow.

March is marginal, neither winter nor spring. It was named for the Roman god of war because after being cooped up all winter, the Roman soldiers could be let out to go forth in glorious battle.

Indeed, one could agree that March may be mettlesome or menacing, merry or morose, but never meek. Even though some say it can be relatively lamblike, some days.

This year it came in like a lamb, as the old saying runs, and thus it must go out like a lion. I hope it manages to find a mild lion.

Meantime there is the interim mess. From manse to mansion, mention mud and housekeepers become melancholy. The so-called crust of the earth has become mire. Up with the mop, down with the morale. What use spring housecleaning.

But think how now the Masquerade begins. The bare bone trees will blossom and leaf out. The hills will be masked in green. Wildflowers will multiply.

I know an artist who hates the onset of March because he hates to paint leaves. No structure, just masses of green, he grimaces.

But undeterred, we, like the Roman legions will go forth, now on top of the snow crust, now up to our left knee in it. We will shuck our mittens along the way, unbutton our coat, and sing "Welcome, sweet Springtime, we greet thee with song."

Then because we never knew the rest of the words, we continue "mmm-mmm" and on through March.

Compliments sports coverage

Editor, and Jerry Froats,

We feel it is time, with basketball season at its close, to voice our appreciation for the fine coverage you have given the Boyne City varsity and junior varsity games.

Your own unique way of reporting the facts on paper make your articles read more like a short adventure story than a "routine" sports write up. Truly, your style rivals any other area newspaper sports writer!

Eagles say "thanks"

Editor,

A special thank you to all for donations received for the cake walk (fund raiser) for Jim Hartung of Wallon Lake, sponsored by Eagles Auxiliary of Boyne City on March 16.

Jim, who is a paraplegic, has cerebral palsy and has never been able to converse with friends. With your kind donations this may happen. His need is a Computer Voice Synthesizer. We're hoping to raise enough money to purchase this. Donations from the cake walk totaled $476.00.

Additional donations may be sent to: Northern Michigan Mental Health Services for Developmentally Disabled, Attention Ellen Gehl, P.O. Box 278, Gaylord, MI 49735.

Thanks to all.

Northern Michigan group acts on recycling

Recycle North is seeking a Charlevoix County resident for its board. The new non-profit organization already has a program and has hired two staff people to begin implementation.

Board member John Magee, of Harbor Springs, said the group is interested in recycling projects over the whole area, but in its initial stages it is concentrating on Emmet County.

He said they would be glad to share information and plans now, and Scott Blanchard is preparing explanatory presentations and brochures.

Magee said the presentations were for any interested groups in northern Michigan.

Immediate plans for recycling include a processing center for crushing glass, baling used paper, and handling metals and used motor oil, in preparation for shipment to Michigan companies that will use the waste material in manufacturing new products.

Once under way, he said, the program can be fairly self-supporting. Drop-off points will also be set up with a trailer or boxes to collect used cans, bottles, papers and oil.

Ideally, he said, recycling is a cooperative effort between the citizen organization and the local governing unit. "All successful efforts in Michigan so far have involved that cooperation," he said.

As for cooperation between groups and Recycle North, Magee said, "We definitely want to work with other counties and other boards, going to each others' board meetings, and taking whatever other steps..."

The group is planning Recycle Day for Emmet County on May 4. After that, Magee said, drop-off centers will be opened.

Northern Michigan United Auto Workers [UAW] representatives were in Washington recently, attending a national conference in our nation's capital. They also met with lawmakers to discuss auto import restrictions as well as other legislation which is pertinent to the industry and its employees. Pictured here with Northern Michigan Congressman Bob Davis are: L-R, John Shimel of Williamsburg, Prince Moon of Onaway, Karl Dyksterhaus of Jenison, Gary Quick of Rapid River. Seated are L-R: Mrs. Ruth Crawford of East Jordan and Ms. Phyllis Marchinkewicz of Boyne Falls.

Gifted students can apply for Summer Institute until April 5

Two weeks of a "highly intensive, accelerated program" in the arts or sciences will be available again this year for gifted and talented students, said consultant Kathy Martinchek of Charlevoix-Emmet Intermediate Schools. The program is Summer Institute.

Martinchek, whose concern is with the talented students, said, "An opportunity like this is so rare!"

A limited number of boys and girls from 10th and 11th grades are chosen to attend one of five Michigan universities for the two weeks at a total cost to the individual of $125.

Martinchek said the state department of education funded the rest of the cost, valued, Martinchek said, at about $700.

The purpose is to offer enrichment to students who often must spend their school days marking time in classes not sufficiently challenging to them. Actually, over the years, Martinchek said, many gifted young people become turned off by the lack of challenge and show only mediocre accomplishment in school records. Consequently, she said, it isn't always easy to spot the gifted students, who tend to try to hide their differences from their peers.

Application forms have gone out to schools in the Char-Em district, and will be screened to find the four most qualified from the district. The original deadline has passed, said Martinchek, but because of snow/days and spring vacation hold ups, the last chance deadline is now April 5. Selections will be announced on April 8.

Students from the Char-Em area will probably go to Northern Michigan University or Central Michigan University.

They will live on campus and follow programs of their choice from 8 a.m. to 10 p.m. Not all their time is spent in studying, explained Martinchek. Social activities are interspersed in among the projects presentations, counseling, lab work, and research going on.

Programs include such courses as drama, art, computer science, and advanced math. Even computer-art, said Martinchek.

Institute dates are in the middle of the summer, she said, the schedule varying from area to area.

Editor,

As I write, the vote on the MX is getting most of the media attention, but Congress will vote on another important issue in early April. The administration already has an all-out campaign underway to win Congressional support to resume funding the Contras, or "freedom fighters" as President Reagan calls them, who are attempting to overthrow the Sandinista government of Nicaragua.

Following the revelation of the C.I.A. role in mining Nicaraguan harbors, the Boland amendment denied further funds to aid the Contras at least until March 1, 1985, when the House and Senate would again have to vote on whether to resume aid to the Nicaraguan rebels. Prior to the Boland amendment, the C.I.A. had been aiding the Contras secretly because this assistance was in direct violation of Article 15 of the Charter of the Organization of American States (OAS) to which the United States is a signatory, which prohibits direct or indirect intervention in the internal affairs of any member state. It prohibits not only armed intervention, but any other form of interference or attempted threat. It also violates the Charter of the United Nations which prohibits the threat or use of force against the territorial integrity or political independence of any state. It is therefore also in violation of Article VI of the United States Constitution which provides that all treaties made under the authority of the United States are the supreme law of the land. Nothing has happened to change that situation. Nothing in these agreements limits their application to governments we approve of. A vote now, to resume either covert or overt aid to the Nicaraguan rebels would be a violation of our treaty obligations and the U.S. Constitution.

Speaking in Quebec on St. Patrick's Day, before a Canadian audience and Canadian television cameras, President Reagan said "We cannot look the other way when treaties are broken." He was speaking of treaty violations by the Soviet Union. We have an even greater responsibility not to "look the other way" when our own administration asks Congress to violate our own treaty commitments.

Both the House and Senate must vote on resumption of aid to the Contras. Our Senators and Representatives should receive a flood of letters and phone calls telling them that we will not be "looking the other way" when they vote on this issue.

Hold-up attempt fails

An attempted armed robbery was reported in Hayes Township on the Boyne City-Charlevoix Road on Saturday, March 23, at 8:15 p.m.

The two victims, Scott Louiselle and Dianne Psihopaidas, both from Charlevoix, resisted the gunman hold-up. The sheriff's report says shots were fired, but neither was hurt.

The suspects fled on foot to an awaiting car and drove off. Law officers found the abandoned car with a gun inside, a department spokeswoman said.

Sheriff deputies were aided by Charlevoix city police. The sheriff's department is investigating suspects at this point.

Wetlands

on the public and private uses to which the area is suited, including the wetland benefits.

The probably impact that the proposed work would have in relation to the cumulative effect created on and by other existing and anticipated activities within the watershed, the probably impact on recognized historic, cultural, scenic, ecological or recreational values and on the public health or fish and wildlife is another stipulation. Also the size of the wetland being considered, the remaining amount of wetland in the general area, and its proximity to any waterway.

They will also look at any economic value, both public and private, of the proposed land change to the general area.

Under the act, the DNR may impose conditions on whatever permit they grant if the conditions are designed to remove an impairment to wetland benefits, to mitigate the impact of a discharge of fill material, or to improve water quality.

If the permit is denied, then property owners have several additional avenues to try.

The first is that they could petition for an appeal hearing. If that is still not to satisfaction, the property owner may have the case tried in circuit court and that decision would be final.

As of today, there have been seven appeals to the state. Two of the seven have required the state to give permits. In one case, the permit was modified in order to obtain approval.

Five other hearings have been scheduled before the administrative hearing officer in Lansing and are not yet finalized.

No hearings as yet have been filed on any properties within Charlevoix County although several are being considered by the property owners.

Another option, not recommended by anyone, is that the property owner just start the work. The fines, however, for doing the changes may be as high as $50,000 per day for each violation, and up to two years in jail, or both.

In addition to the penalties imposed, the court may order a person who violates the act to restore the wetland as nearly as possible to its condition immediately before the violation. The restoration may include the removal of fill material deposited in the wetland or the replacement of soil, sand, or minerals.

This was the determination in one known case in Charlevoix County.

If the court determines that an action of the department in the denial of the permit constitutes a taking of the property, then the court shall order the department, at the department's option, to do one or more of the following: compensate the owner for the full amount of lost value; purchase the property in the public interest as determined before the value was affected by the act; or modify its action with respect to the property so as to minimize the detrimental effect to the property's value.

Those three options are part of the political maneuvering that went on to get the act passed back in 1979. Other considerations were the agricultural interests. Realtors also tried to get input into the act, but the real estate offices in the north failed to lobby effectively according to Steve Pew, the head of the Michigan Board of Realtors.

Those with property in the Lake Charlevoix watershed should be aware that they have to work with the governing bodies to get the permissions necessary before they start to disrupt the watershed.

ATWOOD BOYNE CITY BOYNE FALLS
EAST JORDAN PETOSKEY

"Locally owned banks serve their communities best!"

Ronald McDonald showed the kids of both East Jordan and Boyne City elementary schools a little bit about physical fitness last Friday when he visited both schools for assemblies. The kids joined right in to some of the stretching exercises that Ronald displayed.

Ronald McDonald gets them moving last week

Ronald McDonald went "back to school" at East Jordan and Boyne City Elementary schools last week to present his "Fitness Fun with Ronald McDonald" show.

The show highlighted the importance and fun of proper exercise, and how forming good attitudes about sportsmanship, teamwork and believing in one's self contribute to a healthier life.

The fitness show is one of many resources that McDonald's has developed and made available to schools and local groups. Other films, action packs and curriculum materials are available by contacting your local McDonald's manager.

EJ Civic Center serves all, young and old, with hundreds of activities in a year

BY ELOUISE ROSSLER

"What can we do?" Often there is an answer provided by the East Jordan Civic Center recreation program, whether you're 8, 18, or 80!

Activities are planned on a regular basis in the Civic Center. Special events are planned when the opportunity, need, or interest arises. The Civic Center resounds with happy children's voices during roller skating and echoes with the joys of a fiftieth anniversary celebration or a wedding reception.

Roller skating lessons are available to all ages and open skating is held twice weekly on Thursday evenings for high school age and adults and on Saturday afternoons for all ages. Private groups often have skating parties and reserve the Center. Pat Berlo, Recreation Director for the City of East Jordan, handles all skating activities, as well as overseeing the entire yearly program schedule.

Classes run all year long in such varied areas as Dancerize (exercise class), aerobics, karate, boxing and baton. Tumbling and gymnastics are offered as well as table tennis and volleyball. Each year before July 4th dance instruction is given so people can enjoy dancing the waltz, two-step or polka at the annual Polka Tent. Craft classes were held last summer. Ballet lessons are offered and there is a chess group with regular meeting times.

Ms. Berlo has developed the East Jordan Civic Center Band as a follow-up of the annual and Original Michigan Fiddlers' Jamboree held in East Jordan. This jamboree brings together local and faraway fiddlers, young and old, for a good time and lots of good music. The East Jordan Civic Center Band provides music and calling for monthly Square and Round dances. A practice session is held the night before the dance. The time and talents of the callers and musicians is donated.

Dances for high school and for middle school students are held throughout the year. Live bands provide music at some; tapes and records are also used. A dance is held over July 4th for younger people.

Many youth oriented activities are a part of the Civic Center. Halloween brings Spook Skate Night. The East Jordan Rotary provides cider and donuts and the V.F.W. helps with this activity. A costume gets a middle-schooler into this event free. The East Jordan Lions and Lionesses join for Santa's arrival annually at the Civic Center. Hundreds of youngsters visit the jolly old fellow each year. East Jordan High School holds a Homecoming program at the Center. Star Wars video-tape was shown with the cooperation of the East Jordan library for youngsters during school Christmas vacation.

Cultural events have included Prince Street Players with children's drama and the Dayton Ballet Company provided by the Crooked Tree Arts Council to be performed at the Civic Center. Interlochen Center for the Arts, through its Outreach Show on the Road, has presented outstanding plays for East Jordanites. Ms. Berlo is an active member and past President of the Crooked Tree Arts Council and is the local coordinator for the Interlochen program. The Inter-tribal Anishinabe Council has used the Center for native dancing.

Organizations often use the Civic Center for their own special services. The East Jordan Garden Club holds its annual Flower Show at the Civic Center and also provides the Center with greens swags for its Christmas decor. The March of Dimes has held skate-a-thons to raise money. The Charlevoix County Humane Society holds a flea market with all proceeds going for its benefit. The East Jordan Area Chamber of Commerce held a Snowmobile Auction to raise funds.

The Civic Center provides ample space several times a year for elections. It is the cheese distribution center for the Charlevoix County Social Services. The local police department has had all-day training sessions in the Center and the Fire Department held a panel discussion on wood burning safety to kick off Fire Prevention Week. A local church held a four-day meeting in the Center.

Ms. Berlo's department also runs the summer swim lesson program, giving many young East Jordanians their first chance to learn to appreciate the "cool" lake water in June. Classes are available for the young-hearted, older persons who want to learn to swim.

The Civic Center also houses the East Jordan Senior Center, which runs its own program and activities.

Located in the heart of town, the Civic Center thrives on the pulsing flow of activities of East Jordan's old and young.

River clean-up

during the logging period.

Swan said natural sanding does occur, but it would be a long time before such sand would be sufficient to drive away the trout. And trout is the great concern, both for local sportsmen and for tourism.

East Jordan Chamber of Commerce director Judy Shea said the Chamber has worked closely with the various agencies involved, and endorses the project.

Another misunderstanding centers on the location. Many suppose the whole river is to be ditched. Actually, the focus is on the headwaters only.

Another concern is for a lamprey barrier. Lamprey swim into the river to spawn. The chemical presently used to kill lamprey also kills the insects that are the food for trout. The DNR is committed to having a barrier in place by the time the next chemical treatment would be due in 1988. The hold up has been to find a satisfactory location, and to improve barrier design. Experimental models are now being tested.

Carol Magee, director of Tip of the Mitt Watershed Council, explained that continued de-sanding of the river over the next few years might be funded through a 25-cent collection from each trout stamp sold. Legislation for such a step is now under consideration.

Work is also proposed for preventing further erosion from the road bed.

"We're really pleased," said

Magee, "to see they're taking steps to protect the river and to prevent the erosion."

The DNR made the study last fall of where the erosion was coming from. Data will be released soon.

Obedience classes slated in April by Humane Society

Among other things, the proper dog knows enough to sit down when its owner stops to talk or shop. And the proper dog does not charge across the street after another dog if the owner says, "heel!"

How a dog can get to be a proper dog is the business of the Humane Society's Dog Obedience Training Classes which are scheduled to begin Tuesday, April 2 at 7 p.m.

The classes will be taught by Chuck Robinson, who is one of the Society directors, and who has taught previous classes for the Society.

All fees for the classes will go toward maintaining the Humane Society Animal Shelter in Charlevoix.

Christopher John Linhard was born to Mr. and Mrs. Richard J. Linhard of Boyne City on March 4 at Northern Michigan Hospitals in Petoskey. He weighed 8 lbs., 6 ozs., and was 20 3/4 inches long at birth.

Brothers and sisters of John are Brett, Brad and Jonathan of Boyne City, and Joanie, Julie and Jeffrey Linhard of Mount Clemens.

Grandparents are Mr. and Mrs. George A. Spack of Grosse Pointe Woods, and Mr. and Mrs. John H. Linhard of Sterling Heights. Great grandmother is Sylvia E. Teal of Costa Mesa, California.

more important than breed, Sturm said. Not all breeders are careful to breed for temperament. But of all breeds, Sturm thinks the golden retriever and the German shepherd are among those that learn the most easily.

Dog obedience classes are not suitable for dogs less than six months old, and Sturm said the handlers may not be under 14 years old. The dogs also should have all their current shots.

Unlike the Emmet County Humane Society, which receives around $25,000 a year from the county, the Charlevoix County Society receives no public funding. The money to pay for salary, telephones, vaccines and other materials, and insurance comes from donations and Society dues and projects like the obedience classes.

Because the animal shelter is next to the sheriff's department, it is often supposed that the shelter is tax-supported. It is not, although, Sutrm said, the county supplied the facility, and the county also has an animal control officer in the sheriff's department.

The Society will be meeting March 13 at 7:30 p.m. in the East Jordan public library.

Jordan may attend.

Some owners become quite interested in the whole process and want to go on, Sturm said. "There are many stages," she said, and AKC dog shows feature dog obedience competitions, which are open to all dogs, including mixed breeds.

member Pat Sturm, there may be advanced classes, starting an hour later, if enough dogs qualify. Both classes will run for 10 weeks. Interested owners may call the Shelter from 1 to 6 p.m. weekdays, 547-9711, or call 582-9220, to obtain registration information.

A limit of 10 people-plus-dogs has been placed on each class. Sturm said the effect of the basic training is to train the dog owner as well. Training a dog is a special skill with its own logic. Sturm gave as an example the fact that commonly owners want to punish their dog when it comes back after running away.

"When a dog runs away and then comes back, don't swat it, because it's right that he came back!" she explained.

Of course there has to be practice between lessons. This again is an educational experience.

New headquarters in Boyne announced by Ministry

The Faith Community Fellowship Assembly of God Church in Boyne City has been announced as the new headquarters for the Christian Self-Counseling Ministry (CSCM). Until its introduction to Boyne City January 1, the Christian Self-Counseling Ministry was headquartered in Oscoda, under the direction of its founder, Dr. Frans M. J. Brandt. The move to Boyne City came as part of reaching the ministry's objective of bringing the concepts of Christian Self-Counseling to communities throughout the country and abroad.

Dr. Frans Brandt is a Christian Psychotherapist, author and lecturer in mental health and counseling. He has taught for the University of Maryland, El Paso College, Park College, and Central Michigan University. Dr. Brandt holds 3 graduate degrees in Human Development Counseling. He has most recently authored a new book, The Way To Wholeness (which is a revised edition of The Renewed Mind). This book offers Christian re-educative therapy and self-counseling helps.

Dr. Brandt is currently writing a new book, tentatively titled "Victory Over Depression." He will remain an active part of the CSCM, serving as a board member as well as Counselor/Trainer and speaker for future seminars and workshops.

The new Executive Director of CSCM is the Rev. Clifford Molnar, Pastor of the Faith Community Fellowship. CSCM's goal is to help establish walk-in counseling centers in every community by teaching people that they can help themselves with God's help. The interdenominational ministry will train people to help themselves who will, in turn, learn to teach others what they have learned. There is already a Christian Self-Counseling Seminar scheduled for April 25, 26, 27, 1985, to begin work toward this goal.

For further information about the ministry, contact Pastor Clifford J. Molnar, Executive Director, Faith Community Fellowship, P.O. Box 168, Boyne City, MI 49712, (616) 582-6022.

Dr. Christian Jensen, Art Steinbrecher, honored by ass'n.

Fifty-four Michigan residents who were instrumental in bringing electricity to rural areas of the state will be honored with Rural Electrification Pioneer awards by the Michigan Electric Co-operative Association at its annual meeting in Lansing, April 9-11.

Recognized for their vision, their technical and organizational skills and their persistent efforts to light up the countryside, the rural electric pioneers are being cited as part of the 50th Anniversary observance of the Rural Electrification Administration.

Created by Franklin Roosevelt, REA has provided low-interest, long-term loans to enable the distribution and generation of electricity in rural areas. When commercial utilities did not respond, rural people joined hands and formed 1,000 electric cooperatives, including 14 in the state.

In Michigan, the rural pioneers organized the first co-op meetings, helped install the first power poles, canvassed their areas for new members and volunteered use of their land for necessary rights-of-way. Each pioneer devoted hundreds of hours to extend service to their home areas.

The awards will be presented by David Hamil, former head of REA under four U.S. Presidents, at the MECA annual meeting April 9 at the Lansing Hilton Inn.

Dr. Christian Jensen is the person chosen from Top O' Michigan. His award will be accepted on his behalf by his wife, Anna.

Art Steinbrecher was selected by Wolverine Power Supply Co-Op as their honored pioneer.

Restaurateurs invited to submit "all Michigan" menu for Michigan Week

The search is on to find a palate-pleasing "All-Michigan Meal" in a statewide contest to help add spice to the annual Michigan Week menu of events.

The four-course meal judged best will be served during Michigan Week, May 18-25, to patrons of the winner's restaurant. The contest is open to all Michigan restaurateurs. Each restaurant which enters promises to serve a "Michigan Meal" that week.

The contest is sponsored jointly by the AAA Michigan, Michigan Restaurant Association and Greater Michigan Foundation.

"This contest is more than just a salute to Michigan's fine agricultural products and its great variety of good restaurants," said Greater Michigan Foundation President Ron Steffens, who also is the AAA Michigan Marketing vice president.

"It symbolizes what Michigan Week is all about—pride in our state and a desire for all to do something to recognize it."

Top prize for the creator of the "All-Michigan Meal" will be either a weekend for two at a Michigan resort or $500 cash. The winner also will be featured in an AAA Michigan Living article. The five finalists each will receive a plaque.

Recipes must include only Michigan ingredients for four servings each of a soup, vegetable, entree and dessert. Michigan Restaurant Association and AAA employees are not eligible.

East Jordan preparing for Little League season

The board of directors for the East Jordan Little League have set a date for a combination organizational meeting and signups of potential players.

On April 3 in the elementary school cafeteria, youngsters will be allowed to sign up for this spring's action and many league positions will be voted on.

The elected offices will include president, vice president, secretary, treasurer, player agent, auxiliary chairman, umpire in chief, sr. league vice president, softball vice president, and safety and equipment officer. The league will also be collecting yearly fees for all teams. Senior League players will pay $10 and Minor and Major Leaguers will be charged $6.

According to organizer Mike Burr, East Jordan has a very extensive Little League organization. "Little League is a big business," and he went on to illustrate just what is involved in having a Little League in your town. His figures showed that East Jordan spends $47 per year per player with approximately 200 players on assorted teams.

Burr says that the money spent is backed up by local citizens who "want a top quality league."

From 1980 to present, East Jordan's Little League disbursements ran up to a mark of $47,294 for operation of the Little League.

When asked just how the community pays this sum, Burr said, "We have the BEST sponsors. They stand behind the Little League year after year." Burr praised three sponsors in particular for supporting the league for 27 years. These sponsors are Gulf and Western, Rotary, and East Jordan Iron Works. Burr says that these companies expend a lot of effort to support us and get very little back in return other than the knowledge that they are helping out.

There is another bright spot in the league, as Burr felt that East Jordan is very fortunate for having excellent Little League coaches who emphasize good sportsmanship more than winning a lot of games.

Some suggestions that may be aired at the organizational meeting are giving the teams nicknames, such as the Rotary Wheels or the EJW Tigers and so forth.

Burr also stated that the city is lacking a senior girls' softball field. With the high schools now sponsoring girls' softball leagues, the two could double up on utilizing the field during and after school sessions. Not that the league isn't satisfied with what they presently have, Burr says. "Other cities are in the same position and have to work with what they have."

East Jordan's Little League has 15 teams currently that are sponsored by area businesses. The Major League boys' teams are sponsored by EJW, Gulf and Western, Rotary, and Sherman's Canning. Girls' Major League Softball is sponsored by Bob and Jean's, American Legion, Hite's Drug Company, and the Insurance Shop.

Boys' Senior League is sponsored by Galmore's Honda, and Jordan Valley Pharmacy.

The names of Minor League sponsors were not readily available.

Boyerne's Coach Pfahler goes to Hall of Fame

EVERYONE in Boyne City knows that one-time football coach Paul Pfahler is perhaps the best football coach to hit this area, and now he is going to be inducted into the Michigan High School Football Coaches' Association's Hall of Fame.

Pfahler chalked up 99 wins while coaching for Boyne City, including one state championship team, and six conference titles. Of those six titles four of coach Pfahler's teams went undefeated.

In 1956, his team was 8-0, and in 1957 the team was 7-0. Between the years 1960 and 1969, Pfahler never had a losing season, 1961 being the year his team was "Undeniable State Champions." The championship team consisted of players such as Doug Grubbe, Chuck Vincent, Gregg Smith, Bob Snyder, and Tracy Newville, just to name a few.

Pfahler also coached Carl Charon who went on to play football in the NFL.

Pfahler moved to Boyne City in 1955 and held the coaching position for 22 years before retiring. He became known as having a soft spoken manner and was quoted in 1961 saying, "I consider each player a star for the Ramblers. Not one was better than the other. If it hadn't been a combination of team play, one player couldn't be a star, nor one player couldn't be better than his teammate." Those statements were recorded after Pfahler was asked who was better, Charon or Grubbe.

Pfahler's induction will include the honoring of 29 other coaches with guest speakers being "Bo" Schembechler and Duff Dougherty. The event will take place at Crisler Arena at the University of Michigan on April 20 starting at 6 o'clock. The Michigan High School Football Coaches' Association stresses the importance of having a good turnout for the Hall of Fame Banquet, and encourages anyone interested to attend. Tickets can be ordered by sending a check to Tom Fagen, 3540 Galpin, Ann Arbor, MI 48105. Tickets cost $15 per person and checks should be made out to "Hall of Fame Banquet."

Local teacher to ski in Grand Marnier Nationals

Ann Ekstrom of Boyne City will compete in the Grand Marnier National Ski Club Challenge in Keystone, Colorado March 27-28, as a member of the Team Dodge Ski Club.

The Team Dodge club, a six-member amateur slalom squad, earned a berth in the national competition and an all-expense paid trip to Keystone by winning the Grand Marnier Midwest Regional Ski Club Challenge at Boyne Mountain in February.

In addition to competing against seven other regional winners for the 1985 Grand Marnier Ski Club National Championship, Ekstrom and her teammates also will compete against television and film stars in the second annual Grand Marnier Celebrity Ski Club Challenge to raise funds for the March of Dimes.

Among the celebrities scheduled to participate in this special event are Morgan Brittany of TV's "Dallas" series, singer-composer Paul Williams, Jim Brolin and Connie Selleca, stars of the "Hotel" television program, and David Hasselhoff of "Night Rider."

Ski club challenges have been sponsored by Grand Marnier for the past seven years, in which more than 32,000 skiers from over 600 ski clubs nationwide have competed, making it one of the country's most popular amateur ski racing programs.

Spring fishing gets underway April first

With the warming trends continuing to come our way, many seasonal anglers come out of hibernation and take to the waterways of the county.

With the opening day of trout season on the Boyne River being April Fools' Day, anglers come from near and far to try their luck on the spring steelhead that populate the river. Steelhead have already made their way up the Boyne and some were spotted spawning Monday morning.

A few German Browns were also sighted, just downstream from the spawning steelhead, getting an easy meal.

There were also many one- and two-pounders in evidence at the old power dam, lured there by the spring run-off and warmer waters.

Other upcoming fishing events are the Walloon Lake bass fishing contest and a newly formed Charlevoix Area Trout Tournament.

The Walloon bass contest is a long-established event and draws bassers from all over the area onto the waters of Walloon Lake. Bass are not the only fish sought after on the lake, as trout, pike, smelt, suckers, and many other fish inhabit the lake.

The Charlevoix Area Trout Tournament is offering a $5,000 prize for catching a tagged brown trout in Lake Charlevoix. The tagged fish must be caught during tournament hours.

Other prizes will include a first place prize of $1,000, $500 for second place, and $250 for third place in four categories. The categories are for brown trout, lake trout, steelhead, and salmon. The Advance Tackle Co. of Boyne City is offering a special prize of $2,000 if the winning brown

One of the best indications that spring is here is when area youngsters get the urge to wet a line. True some of them are inept bait casters, but with practice they become good fishermen and should not be reprimanded too harshly when mistakes are made.

Retired for the season are these ice fishing shanties that were recently pulled off Smeltania in Boyne City. Some shanties do not withstand the strong winds of Lake Charlevoix, but these look as if they weathered the winter storms rather well.

Straight Talk About Individual Retirement Accounts.

With April 15th fast approaching, the appeal of Individual Retirement Accounts is growing ... as it should!

Because the amount of your contribution is fully deductible whether you itemize on your tax return or not, if you have earned income and pay taxes, you should consider an IRA.

The deposits you make to an IRA and the interest they earn grow quickly, giving you the security of a personal retirement plan, while substantially reducing your taxes all along the way — the immediate benefit of an IRA.

FIRST NATIONAL BANK and TRUST offers a variety of IRA plans with both fixed and variable interest rates available to you. Large annual contributions are not the only way to add to your IRA. At FIRST NATIONAL BANK and TRUST you can open your IRA for as little as $100 and add to it anytime.

Any of our New Accounts Representatives or Branch Managers would be pleased to discuss IRA's with you and to review your needs — let's talk!

Those considering a new IRA and those already having one are reminded that contributions for the 1984 tax year may be made only until April 15th.

Federal regulations require a substantial interest penalty for early withdrawal from an IRA prior to age 59 1/2, except in the event of disability or loss of life.
