News Briefs

Don't wait until July 1 to buckle up--get in the habit now--it could save your life.

That's the advice from Secretary of State Richard Austin who reminds all motorists that Michigan's new safety belt law goes into effect July 1.

Austin said that from his own personal observation on the highway, more motorists have begun wearing belts since the law was passed. "Wearing a belt is a no-cost, simple way of substantially cutting highway deaths and injuries--a good habit to get into," he said.

Six other states--New York, New Jersey, Illinois, Missouri, New Mexico and Indiana, in addition to Michigan's neighbor, Ontario, now have safety belt laws.

Michigan Bell's 1985-86 Charlevoix County-Emmet County telephone directory will be distributed to area customers this month.

E.W. "Mike" Reid, local corporate affairs manager, said the directories also include listings for Alanson, Boyne Falls, and Brutus.

The Customer Guide pages in the front of the directory contain information designed to help consumers save time and money, including tips on dialing long distance calls and taking advantage of discount periods.

Results of the first city wide clean-up were impressive, according to observers. The city landfill was quite busy as many city dwellers took the opportunity to get rid of many items they had in their yards and around the home.

Volunteer firemen are to be commended for washing down the streets in the downtown section of the city. City workers picked up much of the sand and debris that had accumulated over the winter.

With this issue of the County Press is a first for the history of the newspaper. At least as far back as any can remember, the newspaper has never run any four color process pictures. Many daily newspapers are using this form every day, but this is the first time for the County Press, thanks to Zaiger Beverage and their belief in the National Mushroom Festival.

Baseball may become new sport at BC

Baseball may become the newest spring sport if the Boyne City School Board agrees to fund it at its next meeting. After hearing from a dozen interested parents who asked the board if the sport could be brought back to the school next spring, the board agreed to consider it.

The supporters of the sport told the board that they felt there was enough interest from the students to support a team.

High school principal Rick Casper agreed with the parent group and told the board of an informal poll that was made by athletic director John McGeorge that also supported the group. Casper did say though, that with the addition of the sport, one of the other spring sports may suffer and may have to be dropped. Casper said that if those students who are presently playing tennis should decide to play baseball instead, there may not be enough support to have that sport. He told the board that tennis is presently not a league sport, while baseball is and almost all of the other schools within the league have teams.

George Shiotellis, the board president, told the audience that a similar poll was taken four or five years ago to see if enough interest could be generated to have a baseball team. He said the poll at that time showed that the sport would not be able to have enough student interest to warrant its being put on the sports program of the school.

One member of the audience, citing that because of the interest in the senior leagues of the Little League program, the student athletes would be interested in having the sport added. He also told the board that of all the sports in the northern part of Michigan, more baseball scholarships have been awarded than many other sports.

He told the board that many other schools in the area do support a baseball program, and he would like to see one started here in Boyne City.

Casper then added that he would like to see the sport added to the program, and that it be funded as it would become a varsity sport.

Superintendent Rich Kelly then told the board that if they approved the additional sport and paid for the coaching, he would like to see them also add girls softball as a varsity sport, and start paying for the coaching done presently on a volunteer basis in the middle school of other sports.

No action was taken by the board as they wanted to think about the additional program until the next meeting when a decision could be made.

In a related matter, the board agreed to let the Little League and the City Parks and Recreation use the hardball field at the high school, the softball fields at the elementary school provided that the leagues have supervision and help with the maintenance of the fields.

Management group to hire aide

The Lake management Planning Advisory group was given the go-ahead last week to hire an assistant to help them sift the accumulated data that they are getting as they try to determine a lake management plan.

The okay was given to the committee by the Charlevoix County Planning commission as part of their regular meeting held last Thursday.

According to County Planner, Larry Sullivan, his office has accumulated quite a bit of data and he recommended that the planners hire someone to help put the data into a format that the advisory group could understand and work with.

Sullivan said that he felt the committee was getting bogged down with water quality, and that he felt quality of life issues may be more important considerations that the group will have to look at when they make up their plan.

Sullivan also recommended that the planners, in addition to hiring an assistant, make use of a septic leachate detector to help determine immediate areas of problems, and establish a technical committee.

The planners agreed to the use of the leachate detector, but tabled the technical committee idea.

Sullivan also told the planners that the DNR is doing an ongoing survey this summer on the lake and that they should agree to its continuance.

The leachate detector will be used to find septic systems that may be leaking material into the lake. Those areas where leachate has been found will be among the first areas that the

They then took under advisement a request for a one-time donation of $5,000 to the city library. The library board had asked for the donation so that a boiler heating system in the building could be replaced.

The heating system dates back to when the building was constructed in 1918, Allison Mellon told the board, and has needed replacement for several years.

Library board members told the school board that this coming fall, the state inspectors would probably not approve the heating system because of the condition it is in.

The library is trying to find funding to replace the system and has been able to save approximately $5,000 for the purchase of a new heating system.

Estimates they have had come to about $10,000 for the replacement of the system. The library board told the school board that the city cannot expend more money to replace the system as they have already given their budget of $20,000 for the operation of the library.

They also told the school board that the money they receive from donations is slated for the purchase of new books and unless expressed by the donor, they feel that the donation is for the purpose of buying new books, not for providing operational monies.

The board tabled the request until they can see where they could fit the donation into their budget. They promised to make a decision for the library board at their next meeting.

The board then heard from Rich

It was a hard, thankless job done very early on a Sunday morning when many would rather sleep in a little bit. But the Boyne City Volunteer Firemen were out in force to wash down all of the streets in the downtown area last Sunday, using the water from the fire hoses to push the sand and dirt into piles where it could be picked up, or down the storm drains where the city workers can dig them out. The firemen did the work as part of the first all city clean-up day.

City clean-up successful, may become annual event

Boyne City's first clean-up campaign was extremely successful according to what city administrators were saying at the Tuesday noon meeting of the City Commission.

"It was a very exciting day for the community," city manager Randy Frykberg added. He told the commission that the open landfill on Sunday was well used with lines of trucks and cars waiting to dump items several times during the day.

Letters thanking those who put in efforts to insure the success of the event will be sent out from the city, Frykberg said.

The commissioners also voted to spend up to $1500 for playground equipment for the Veterans Memorial Park and to spend $19,400 for the purchase of two used pick-up trucks that will be replacing one older dump truck in the city fleet.

The trucks will be used by city workers in the summertime for those jobs that do not require a large truck, and as they are capable of plowing snow, will be used in the winter for areas where the larger trucks can't service.

Frykberg expects the city to save money in comparison with doing the same job with larger, more expensive to run, trucks.

The playground equipment will consist of a swing set and some sprung animals that will replace

EARLY SPRING PLANTS AND MORELS

Our Colonial ancestors were much more knowledgeable of the first edible spring plants in fields and woods than we are. It was necessary for them to prepare their own medicines, as well as foods. Their European ancestors taught them that dandelion plants were used medicinally, the leaves eaten as salad and blossoms made into wine. They were familiar with mushrooms, the first tender leaves of the skunk cabbage, watercress, leeks, comfrey and many herbs.

This is "morel madness" time in our Boyne area, and it is so very important to identify our magnificent morels. To truly identify those creamy white and black mushrooms, see that the hollow top portion extends to the base of the plant. Any mushroom looking like a morel that is attached the same way that an umbrella is fastened to its handle is not a morel. Sort those kinds out immediately.

One reason that morels are so special is that the period of availability is so very short, and we need to be out early and late to find them. They come up about the first of May and are gone by the first of June. So it is a good time now to think about how we are going to prepare them. Of course, it is hard to beat these morels just fried in butter with a little bit of salt and pepper; we do not want to disguise the taste. However, I will be prepared to use them in this next recipe. It combines sliced potatoes, sauteed mushrooms (I'll use morels) and green onions in a lemony-mustard dressing that is low in calories. Served warm on a bed of lettuce it is only 200 calories. (From the "Progress Report," Pomona, Calif.)

POTATOES AND MUSHROOMS DIJON STYLE

About 4 medium potatoes
2 tablespoons butter or margarine
8 oz. mushrooms, thickly sliced
2 1/2 tablespoons lemon juice
2 tablespoons water
2 tablespoons Dijon-style mustard
1/2 teaspoon tarragon
1/8 teaspoon pepper
3 green onions with tops, sliced
Salt to taste
1 small head lettuce
1 tablespoon chopped parsley
Slice potatoes 1/4 inch thick; cook, covered, in 2 to 3 inches boiling water until not quite tender, about 10 minutes.

Meanwhile, heat butter to sizzling in large skillet. Add mushrooms; saute over high heat until lightly browned. In small bowl, mix lemon juice, water, mustard, tarragon and pepper; stir into skillet. Drain potatoes and add to skillet with green onions. Mix gently to heat through. Season with salt. Spoon hot potato mixture over lettuce slices. Sprinkle with parsley.

Grandmother was out to cut those first tender stalks of rhubarb every spring. She made puddings, pies or just plain sauce. Try this delicious

RHUBARB CRUNCH

1 cup flour
3/4 cup rolled oats
1 cup brown sugar
1/2 cup butter
6 cups small cubes of rhubarb, about 2 lbs.
1 1/2 cups sugar
1 cup orange juice or apple juice
3 tablespoons cornstarch

In medium bowl, combine flour, oats and brown sugar; cut in butter with pastry cutter or two knives until mixture resembles coarse gravel.

Press 3/4 mixture into bottom of 9x13 inch baking pan. Cover evenly with cubed rhubarb and set aside.

In medium saucepan, combine sugar, orange or apple juice and cornstarch. Bring to boil over medium heat, stirring constantly until thick and clear. Pour evenly over rhubarb and sprinkle with reserved flour mixture. Bake at 350° about one hour, until bubbly and lightly browned on top. Makes eight to ten servings.

It's tougher to keep it than make it.

Everyone needs an IRA.

Be honest. Have you truly maintained a sensible savings program over your lifetime?

There is a way to build savings while you save on income taxes. Why should you pay more taxes than you have to?

If you begin an IRA right now you'll save on the taxes you would normally pay a year from now when tax time once again comes calling.

Can't deposit $2,000? You needn't. Just deposit what you can, when you can.

As a working American you can tuck away as much as $2,000 or if you have a non-working spouse, you can save $2,250. But, here you can have an IRA by depositing only what you can afford at the moment.

By starting your IRA now, rather than waiting for the last minute next April, you gain the interest advantage.

You'll be amazed how fast interest piles up while you defer taxes on the amount you deposit as well as the interest those deposits earn.

Jottings

BY JIM SILBAR

Quick, anybody know a computer "hacker"?

I need to find one quick, before they announce the Saturn plant is going to someplace else than here in the north country.

You see, the friendly folks at generous motors are telling everyone that a computer is going to make the final choice as to where the plant is going to be located.

And if I can get a hacker to break into the computer, then we might have a chance to grab that plum.

After all, this is a lonely quest. My pleas to have some of the county types working for us to get new industries haven't been able to come through.

I figure it is time to take the matter in my own hands.

I figure that we could use all those jobs, and we could use all those other industries that are needed to make the plant work.

Heck, I would even be satisfied if we could get a EDS plant here. And they are part of General Motors, too.

We need to rally around the hills, boys, the time is getting late. What else can we give them that hasn't already been offered by some other state.

Come on Blanchard, let's give them more and more breaks. With all those workers providing taxes to the state, they could come up north tax free forever.

Let's offer them the entire township, or the county for their plant.

We don't need all of the land, the water, the forests that a lot of folks are moving up north for. Bring on building crews.

There are times when I wish I had the time to do the many things that others consider real important.

The other day, I was talking with someone who said that if they couldn't get out on the water to fish, they wouldn't be able to make it through the winter. Another guy said that boating was his game, and that he needed all the extra time so that he could set sail. And still another said that she loved to go out and find mushrooms while she looked at all of the wildflowers.

Myself, I wonder just what these people do for a living.

Most of us are too busy trying to keep our heads above the water, to busy to see the forest for the trees that we never get a chance to enjoy some of the things that surround us everyday.

Perhaps that is why the tourists who descend upon us every summer enjoy this area that much better. They leave all those worries behind them when they come up north.

We who live here, have to work the worries in among the playtimes.

My playtimes are spent doing much of the work that needs to get done. Like start getting the garden in shape, or raking up the leaves and the branches of trees that fell during the winter. Or getting out the lawnmower to see if it still works.

One of these days, I am going to take a day or two off and see how the rest of the working class lives.

I know the grass is greener on the other side, I just have to figure out how to get there and if it would be worth the trip.

Marshall Sayles

He: Sunday is Mother's Day. What are you going to do?

Me: We shall join the world by celebrating with flowers and eating out.

He: That's it?

Me: Oh, perhaps there will be a deep-felt Hallmark on the living room table next to the flowers.

He: Father's Day doesn't come until 35 days after Mother's Day. That's like saying fathers aren't as important as mothers.

Me: No it ain't. It's just that mothers thought about naming Mother's Day before fathers thought about Father's Day. Mothers are a little quicker on the draw.

He: They are not. I'm a father and I ought to know.

Me: Just because you are a father it doesn't mean that you are automatically a smart man. I know lots of fathers who aren't quite smart enough.

He: OK, name five or six in a hurry.

Me: Name five or six Boyne City fathers who aren't very smart? What are you trying to do, get me into a fresh mess of trouble?

He: But you do know who they are, don't you?

Me: Yes.

He: Now look, you fool, a great number of Boyne City fathers are standing by with bated breath quivering with anxiety to know which ones are smart and which ones have cogs turning in the wrong direction.

Me: We started out with Mother's Day. Let's keep it that way.

He: You are nothing but an old father dodger.

Me: Now, you listen. I think fathers and mothers are highly important in the scheme of things. Each should be honored in their turn. It just happens that Sunday is Mother's turn. Fathers will receive their just dues the sixteenth of June.

He: You know something? I think the men should come and take you back to your room.

Me: Suddenly I feel irregular fragments of grief bouncing around in my head. Excuse me while I leg it for home so I can eat some Limburger cheese and remove the taste of your remarks from my mouth.

He: It fills my heart with a nameless joy to think that I have won this argument.

Me: You've won nothing. Sunday is Mother's Day and there's nothing you can do about it.

Then I gurgled a low musical laugh that welled up from the merry depths of my joyous nature, filling the air with a glad and child-like melody. I always do that when I get the best of someone.

But my friend didn't look at it like that at all.

He thought I had the hiccups.

Once upon a time, the mill pond that is behind the present day Ski and Shore office was used to hold the logs prior to them being cut up by the big band saws at the White Lumber Company mills. Men used to work out of the flating shack to get the logs in order for the cutting schedules. Getting to work back in those days could mean getting dunked as the only way to get to the shack was to walk across the logs. Sometimes, you fell in the water. This picture was taken from a slide that was shown at the local theater back in the early twenties. We think it was taken several years earlier, about 1900.

Are people defying logic?

It is always a little discouraging to hear from the closed-mind mentality of the flaming liberals among us. These people are constantly beating their gums or their typewriters in an attempt to spread apprehension and distrust of the values and institutions that have made this country great. In doing so, one of their most apparent traits is that they are never confused by the facts.

Another, of course, is to underestimate the intelligence of their perceived audience. Constant repetition of distortions and lies do not make them true.

A case in point is the moral posturing of these types who would dabble in foreign policy without remembering—maybe they never even bothered to learn—the lessons of the past. For example, in their professed zeal to cut federal spending, they save less than .005 percent (that's five thousandth of one percent) by disowning the only force in this hemisphere that is actively fighting for their freedom from the tyranny of godless communism.

But then they go on to rant about a tyranny vanquished 40 years ago.

Perhaps they are trying to divert our attention from their lack of objectivity by a shrill tirade against the President because he is to visit a German military cemetery that happens to include the remains of a few S.S. battle veterans. Is the volume of their hysteria designed to make us overlook their faulty reasoning? These people actually support a here and now threat to our freedoms but then deplore an action of conciliation toward a former enemy who is now our staunch ally. But then again, one must not be confused by the facts.

We might even look at this incident another way. Suppose, for example, that an American President were to participate in a short ceremony at the vast Civil War cemetery at Gettysburg where those who died in Confederate Gray lie alongside those who gave their all dressed in Union Blue. Would such a presidential action be perceived as honoring slavery?

It's important, therefore, that we keep our wits about us during these attacks upon our intelligence and remember that noise level in an argument is no substitute for logic.

Benefit concert to be held for Charlevoix Hospice

The Charlevoix Community Chorale and Orchestra, directed by Ellen Addington, of Ellsworth, will be presenting a May Festival of Song, on Sunday, May 12 at 5 p.m. at St. Mary's Catholic Church in Charlevoix.

This Festival, celebrating spring and recreation, will include music to please everyone—sacred, with hymns to be sung by the congregation, chorus and orchestra; some favorite contemporary tunes like Edelweiss, which will feature Philip Schairbaum, as he accompanies the group with guitar, and the Pine River Four quartet.

One of the highlights of the program will be "God's Trombones," Roy Kingwald musical setting of James Welton Johnson's poem inspired by the old time negro sermons—some pre-dating revolutionary times. The powerful voices boomed, crashed and thundered, sounding to many like a wonderful trombone.

Although the imagery might appear to be primitive in nature, it also points up the essentially dignified and profound religious substance of the sermons.

The leader of the preliminary prayer, which "prepared the way for the sermon" was many times a woman. Fran Pletz, of East Jordan, is the prayer leader, and John Frey, of Charlevoix, is the preacher.

Other musical highlights will be the "Suite for Flute and Jazz Piano," by Claude Bolling with Joyce Personaire of Ellsworth, flutist and Elizabeth Humphrey, also of Ellsworth, pianist.

They will be assisted by Tom Woehrman, Harbor Springs, string bass, and Larry Wojcik of Petoskey, on drums. This number is a delightful fusion of classical and modern elements of music, which answer each other, mimics, quarrels, interrupts and ultimately embrace. It is a happy, tender little gem.

Members of the chorus and orchestra represent Bellaire, Ellsworth, East Jordan, Petoskey, Traverse City, Harbor Springs, and Sweden.

Other soloists are Dan Staublen of Charlevoix, who will play a marimba solo; Bob Herbon and Ron Klooster of East Jordan, Kurt Vallenga and June Zoerhof of Petoskey; Fran Tollas, Jerry Staublin, Ginny Woods, Vince Chew of Charlevoix; Jim Keller, Ron Renwick, Bob Tollas and Bob Martin, the Pine River Four Quartet, also from Charlevoix.

Jane Erskine, of Grand Rapids, interpreter for the deaf, will "sign" all of the music. She is brought back by popular demand.

Allen Valkema, Diane and Bill Kelly, residents of Boyne City, will be performing with the orchestra.

All proceeds from the program are to be donated to the Charlevoix Hospice, Inc., a worthy, hardworking organization which provides care and support for the terminally ill of our area. Funds are badly needed to carry on this work, so any offering and support will be greatly appreciated.

The Festival of Song is a happy way to greet spring. Have Mom put on her corsage and join in a fun time.

Diabetes persists and grows to be major killer

BY W.C. DUCKWORTH* M.D.

When 43-year-old Henry first came to see me for a physical, he had symptoms he hardly thought worth mentioning. For some time, his hands and feet had been "tingling," a sign he mistakenly attributed to poor circulation. He also had difficulty walking up a flight of stairs.

Henry had some elements in his medical history that were significant. He was 20 pounds overweight and his maternal grandmother had had diabetes. There was a good chance that Henry did as well and that his symptoms were due to diabetic neuropathy, a common complication of diabetes in which nerves are damaged and some nerve cells eventually die.

The blood glucose (sugar) test I ordered confirmed my suspicions. In fact, Henry had probably had the disease for about four years.

This case is typical of people who have Type II diabetes, the type that usually develops among adults. Five million of these people don't even know they have it. What makes this disease insidious is that the symptoms are so undramatic, as they were in Henry's case, and that often it is not until complications develop that someone thinks to visit a doctor. In addition to neuropathy, the complications include heart, blood vessel, kidney and eye disease, and they can be very serious.

One of my patients who had neuropathy involving the nerves leading from the heart had a heart attack he didn't even know about, because he never felt the pain. The nerves that transmit messages from the heart to the brain were so damaged by diabetes that they did not convey the appropriate pain impulses or signals.

Diabetes with its complications is the third-ranking cause of death by disease in this country. And it is on the rise—increasing by 6 percent a year. About 600,000 new cases of diabetes were detected in 1983. At this pace, the disease could become epidemic. An individual's chances of having diabetes are high. A baby born today who lives to age 70 has a one in five risk of developing Type II diabetes.

Not only is Type II diabetes frequently unrecognized by patients; its cause also eludes scientists. We are still investigating the precise nature of the metabolic defects involved in this disease. In fact, Type II diabetes, which also is called non-insulin-dependent diabetes, may actually be a group of diseases that researchers cannot yet separate. One factor that suggests it is more than one disease is the diverse spectrum of patients. The typical Type II patient is overweight with only mildly elevated blood sugar; diet and exercise alone are usually sufficient therapy. But at the opposite end of the spectrum is the thin, severely hyperglycemic (high blood sugar) patient who usually requires injected insulin to supplement his body's own insulin in maintaining normal blood glucose and functioning.

What Is Type II Diabetes? Any kind of diabetes interferes with the body's ability to convert food, especially carbohydrates, from glucose (a form of sugar present in some fruits and produced by the body from other starchy foods when they are digested) into energy. For this process to take place, glucose that has entered the bloodstream must move into the body's cells. In liver, fat and muscle cells, the hormone insulin is essential for glucose utilization. If there is no insulin or too little, or if the body cannot react to an appropriate level of insulin, then there won't be sufficient glucose in these cells. They'll starve while sugar accumulates in the blood—producing high blood sugar, or hyperglycemia—and spills into the urine.

In Type I diabetes, the body simply stops producing insulin. But in Type II, the body still produces some of this hormone. It may even be present in above-normal levels, but because of cellular abnormalities still not clearly understood, the body's tissues may be unable to use the insulin properly, a condition known as insulin resistance. Although no one knows why or how this happens, it appears that faulty insulin production—too much or too little—contributes to insulin resistance. It may be that insulin receptors on the cells don't get a firm hold on insulin molecules, or there may be a lack of response to insulin within body cells.

Who Is at Risk? Heredity appears to play a stronger role in Type II (non-insulin-dependent) diabetes than in the insulin-dependent disease. In one study of identical twins, when one twin was diagnosed with non-insulin-dependent diabetes, almost every sibling developed the disease within the next few years. It is suspected that an inherited metabolic defect may be responsible for this tendency. Whatever the underlying defect may be, a family history of diabetes—no matter which relative has had the disease—puts someone at high risk.

Another high-risk factor is obesity. Between 80 and 90 percent of the people who develop Type II diabetes are overweight. The chances of developing the disease double with every 20 percent of extra weight. Age doesn't help either. People over 40 are at higher risk; in fact, 40 percent of diabetic Americans are over 65. Gender also is a factor. Females develop diabetes twice as often as males. Women who have a history of spontaneous miscarriage or who have delivered large babies—weighing at least 9 pounds—also are diabetes-prone. Blacks are twice as likely to get diabetes as whites, and Hispanics are five times as likely.

Warning Signs People with Type II diabetes often experience none of the classic symptoms of the disease—frequent urination, excessive thirst, unusual hunger, weight loss, weakness, irritability or nausea. Instead, they may develop frequent infections of the gums, skin or urinary tract; changed or blurred vision; pain or cramps in their legs, feet or fingers; cuts and bruises that are slow to heal; intense itching; drowsiness; and/or frequent fatigue. Or, they may have no symptoms at all.

How Is It Diagnosed? Since diabetes results in abnormal levels of glucose in the blood, a simple blood test is commonly used to screen high-risk people. If the glucose content is higher than a specified level, this may indicate that the person has Type II diabetes.

If the blood glucose test is not conclusive, occasionally another, more sensitive test can be performed. The oral glucose tolerance test requires that blood samples be tested for glucose levels over the course of two or three hours after the patient drinks a glucose solution. The results tell the doctor how well the body uses this form of sugar.

Treatment

There is no cure for diabetes. The goal of treatment is to control the level of glucose in the blood. There is some evidence that good control of blood sugar levels may reduce the severity of the disease and the chances of developing complications. The first treatment step is diet and weight loss. Weight reduction improves insulin's effectiveness. In one study, it was found that a 20-pound weight loss led to almost a doubling of insulin action in obese people with normal or impaired glucose tolerance. The improvement did not depend on achieving ideal body weight; people who remained obese after having lost 20 pounds improved as much as did the people who reached ideal body weight.

In controlling diabetes, it is not only calorie restriction that is important but also proper food selection. Foods that make blood sugar levels rise dramatically must be limited. Simple, concentrated sugars—such as those found in candies, pastries and sugary drinks—are restricted. What is recommended is a diet high in complex carbohydrates and fiber in the form of fresh vegetables, fruits and bran. Many Type II patients—if they are motivated—can control their disease entirely by diet.

In addition, most patients with diabetes are advised to increase the amount of exercise they get. Exercise usually increases body cells' ability to use insulin with a resulting decrease in blood glucose levels.

In some cases, diet and exercise alone are not sufficient to control blood sugar levels. It is at that point that the physician may decide to prescribe an oral hypoglycemic drug, a tablet that may lower blood sugar in a number of ways—by stimulating insulin secretion from the pancreas, increasing cell sensitivity to insulin and/or decreasing the output of sugar from the liver.

Oral anti-diabetes medications are not injected. (Digestive juices destroy insulin taken by mouth.) Insulin injections should be reserved as a last resort for most Type II diabetes. The reason is that the amount of insulin needed to overcome insulin resistance, particularly in obese diabetic patients, leads to blood levels of insulin that are much higher throughout most of the body than in normal people. The potential long-term effects of high circulating levels of this powerful hormones are currently being evaluated.

The more Type II diabetes is studied in the laboratory and the clinic, and the better we understand this mysterious disease, the greater the likelihood that we will eventually learn not only how to prevent it, but also how to reverse diabetes once it has developed. In the meantime, early detection and treatment are the best preventive medicine to maintain good health and help avoid serious complications.

Cookbook sale to benefit Historical Society

Want to know how the doughnut got its hole or the truth about Johnny Appleseed? Do you remember when a jelly roll was a confection before it was a blues band?

If you think a Saturday Night Special is another dreaded handgun, you will be pleasantly surprised to know that in Bea Smith's, My Heritage Cookbook it is a hearty dinner recipe.

While summer, fall, winter and spring are predictable Michigan seasons, in Bea's cookbook they are also chapters. Under the chapter for 'spring' recipes, there are some delightful tips on more mushrooms—how to cook them, not find them. One of her treasured recipes turned up in an unexpected place. It was being used as a bookmark in a public library book. The delicacy called 'the girls' asparagus quiche' is so-named because when Bea served it to her club, 'the girls' just loved it!

Bea Smith, Boyne City's favorite cook, will be dishing up doses of wisdom, folklore and family gossip along with her recipes at a tea at the Horton Bay home of Billie Beckenhauer Wednesday, May 22, from 3-6 p.m. Sale of the My Heritage cookbooks will benefit the Boyne City Historical Society. Friends interested in attending the tea or purchasing a recipe book, may contact the Society's president, Billie Beckenhauer at 582-9536.

Cancer screening kits available in BC May 14

Free cancer screening for colorectal cancer will be available in May, sponsored by the Burns Clinic Foundation, Northern Michigan Hospitals, and the American Cancer Society.

Cancer of the colon and rectum (the lowest section of the gastro intestinal tract) is the second most common type of cancer in American men and women. In 1984, 126,000 new cases developed and about 60,000 people died from the disease.

Currently the cure rate for colorectal cancer is 40-50 percent. Experts feel it can be increased to 80-90 percent if the cancer is detected at an early stage.

The Hemocult stool blood test is a simple, effective, and painless test for colorectal cancer. It checks the stool for hidden blood which may be a sign of cancer or other intestinal disorders.

During the month of May, free Hemocult screening kits will be given out to individuals over 40. You take the kit home, prepare the special slides and mail them back to us. If the test indicates the presence of blood in your stool, both you and your physician will be notified and follow-up testing will be recommended.

The kits may be picked up in Boyne City on May 14 from 1-4 p.m.

For additional information, call 348-2134.

the equipment that was removed from the park last fall.

Commissioners expressed some concern over the equipment, stating that what the city may need for such things in the future, may be a "Wish Book" where donations could help fill the gap between the needs and the city budget.

They also agreed to adjust the agreement between the city, the housing commission and federal government to reflect the actual costs of the Boyne City Housing Commission projects that were built back in the late sixties.

Also discussed was the okaying of a takeout license permit for Char-Boyne, Inc. They are the owners of the Tannery and the Granary. Since not taking any action implies agreement with the request, that is what the commissioners decided.

In other action, the city manager noted that the city is now 25 years old under home rule. Frykberg asked for ideas as to how it could be celebrated by the city and one suggestion was to plant silver maples in some of the parks as this is the silver anniversary. Frykberg then gave the commissioners a list of all those who have served the city in the last 25 years. He also gave the present commissioners a city hat to wear.

Kelly that the school system did not have to roll back any millage because of the Headlee Amendment. Through a complicated formula, the millage reduction factor was over 1.00, coming in at 1.0013.

If the factor had been under 1.00, the millage would have had to be reduced according to the amendment.

Also at the meeting, the board agreed to have a truth in taxation hearing next Monday night at 7:00 p.m. That hearing will decide to allow the collection of an additional 1.22 mills for operating purposes. The hearing will set the total millage for the school system at 30.4 mills, which is within the limits that the board has proposed for the school operations in 1985.

The proposed increase would be 4.18 percent.

The additional millage was approved by the voters at the recently held special election. The additional millage is not really an increase in the overall millage that property owners have been paying, but is above the present authorized millage rate.

The board then approved the resolutions covering the annual June school election. One resolution named the election inspectors while the other approved the wording of the ballot as to what is being elected.

The board closed the meeting by going into a secret session to work on negotiation strategies they are planning when they have to bargain with the Michigan Educational Support Personnel Association.

committee will have to look at as they develop their plan.

The funds for the project have been offered by the Water and Air Team Charlevoix, but some problems have arisen as county prosecutor Kraag Lieberman told the board that they should not have any binding associations with special interest groups.

The commissioners then agreed to let WATCH do some of the technical work and turn those results over to the committee.

Sullivan noted that any agreement the committee made with WATCH would not be exclusive and the committee will be studying other income sources.

BV Garden Club votes to give $300 for library landscaping

Twenty-four members of the Boyne Valley Club met at Litzgen Lutheran Church in Petoskey, Michigan, on Thursday, April 25th. President Winifred Shields opened the meeting with members repeating the Club Collect.

Plans for attending the State Convention which will be held at Grand Traverse Resort Village on May 29, 30, and 31st were discussed. It was announced that the Fall Meeting of Dist. 5 will be held at the Zion Lutheran Church in Petoskey.

Sue Phillips outlined plans for our beautification program and asked for volunteers for planting and maintenance.

Special Projects Chairman Vi Manglos reported on the proposed landscaping plans for the library which will cost $1500. The city will give $500 and the Garden Club voted to give $300. Hopefully other organizations and individuals will donate the remainder. Checks can be mailed to our Garden Club treasurer, Peg Spencer, 108 W. Pine, Boyne City, MI 49712.

Program Chairman Lois Pollock introduced our speaker, Bob Pluister, who talked on bees and their importance to our gardens.

Lois Pollock showed slides of Michigan butterflies and named plants that attract birds and butterflies.

Hostesses for the meeting were Ellen Wilkinson, Grace Davis, and Irene Brannon.

Sawyer displays paintings at Art Tree

Robert Sawyer of Boyne City currently has two historical paintings on display at the Art Tree, a sales gallery in the Virginia McCune Community Arts Center, Petoskey.

A painter who works with acrylics, Sawyer concentrates on scenes and themes of historical interest as well as rural scenes in the Emmet and Charlevoix county area.

Sawyer had dabbled in painting before he underwent heart bypass surgery in 1981, and after that, he began to take his avocation more seriously. He is currently issuing lithographic prints of one of his most popular paintings, a period rendition of the Advance Store, circa 1928.

Sawyer's realistic style lends itself well to his subject matter, according to the Art Tree sales gallery coordinator Audrey Collins.

Sawyer's two works are "Old Timer," a small barn located on Loomis Road in Charlevoix County; and "Bye-gone Era," the Advance grist mill that was destroyed by fire in 1960.

The Art Tree sells the work of over 150 Michigan artists. The sales gallery is open Monday through Saturday, from 10 a.m. until 5 p.m.

Kelley is a telecommunications operations specialist with the 2001st Information Systems Squadron.

His wife, Kim, is the daughter of James M. and Joyce Bellmer of Oden.

White Rose, a fashion shop, open in Boyne City

A fashionable dream came true for Elizabeth Huff of Boyne City last week when she opened The White Rose, a new concept in women's clothing stores in our area.

Her store features both small and large sized apparel for women.

Mrs. Huff had been dreaming of opening the store since she was ten years old. She chose the name of her boutique in remembrance of her parents. "Both my parents have passed away," she said, "and that was their flower to each other."

The store itself features fashion in sizes from three to 20, and in brand names like Liz Claiborne, Bobbie Brooks, Levi Strauss, Santa Cruz, and many more. "Sizes three-four and 19-20 in this area are pretty hard to find," she said, "and we're going to try and fulfill the needs of women who fit in these sizes."

Mrs. Huff's dream involved a lot of hard work. She purchased the building approximately five years ago, and took on the task of remodeling. First, she tackled the upstairs apartments then the store itself.

Mrs. Huff graduated from Northern Arizona University in Flagstaff, Arizona with her B.S. in fashion merchandising, and chose Boyne City for her marketing plans. "I think Boyne has a lot of great potential for growth," she said. "The town is ready for some color and some fun, exciting styles for the summer."

Mindy Stadt winner of spelling bee in UP

"O-c-c-u-r-a-n-c-e." Sorry, wrong, next. "O-c-c-u-r-e-n-c-e." Right, now spell ovation. "Ovation, o-v-a-t-i-o-n."

Right again, Mindy Stadt, you are the winner of the eighth grade Upper Peninsula Community Education Spelling contest.

Mindy, who is an eighth-grader at the Boyne City Middle School, said she felt like she was going to collapse after hearing those words from the moderator of the spelling bee. She may still be in a state of shock even though she won the match last Friday at L'Anse in the U.P.

Mindy is the daughter of Leon and Wendy Stadt of State Road and according to Lee, she gets most of the smarts from her mother.

To win the contest, the students had many words that most would never use in ordinary language, but they kept spelling them right on through the word list, a stump list, and on to a second stump list. Also taking a good place in the contest was seventh grader Lisa Jenkins with a seventh place in the finals. Her downfall in the contest was the word pulpit. She spelled it with two l's.

Equally proud of the students was school principal Jack Cyr. Cyr said that spelling is an integral part of the English curriculum and that the school is trying to increase the ability of the students through such programs as this and other school activities.

Lisa is the Daughter of Michael and Mary Jenkins.

According to Mindy, the key to her success is that she reads a lot. That reading must have helped her prepare for the spell-down as some of the words on the second stump list were unknown to the spellers.

She celebrated her win by sleeping in on Saturday morning.

Both girls had moved to the finals by placing in the regionals that were held earlier this spring.

S. Robert Taylor, the speaker at the Boyne City teacher in-service day that was held Tuesday at One Water Street makes a point in his speech about teaching the gifted and talented student. Even the teachers learned something from him as he captivated their attention for the day long session.

Horton Bay breaking tradition, parade this year

What would summer be without a parade in Horton Bay?

A terrible thing, according to members of the Horton Bay Parade committee, so they scheduled another one this summer.

Usually, the parades have been every other year, but so many people have requested one this year that the committee has decided to start every year parades, providing they can determine each year whether or not it will be worth the effort.

The committee has already lined up 25 entries for this summer, and many more are expected before the event on the Fourth of July.

The parade will be starting at 1:00 p.m.

So far, according to committee, the unique parade promises to be the most fun-filled parade the small community has ever had, and they have had six that were memorable.

Noting a lack of music, the committee has lined up several bands and area groups. They have also gotten several sports figures from the past to agree to be part.

The committee of three is meeting almost every week to work on the parade and they are accepting entries that are not commercial in nature, promise to be interesting, and a lot of fun.

Entries can be made by calling Jon Hartwell at 582-6288.

Transit observing Transportation Week

Michigan Transportation Week will be observed during the week of May 13, 1985 through May 18, 1985. Joining the other transportation systems in the state, residents of Charlevoix County will have the opportunity to participate in the annual observance of this event.

During that week Charlevoix County Transit will offer on Wednesday, May 15, to all senior citizens, rides at 10 cents between the hours of 9 a.m. and 2 p.m. Local trips only not to exceed 5 miles. This day will be designated as Senior Citizens Day. This will coincide with Senior Power Day, which will take place at the same time in Lansing.

Monday, May 13 and Tuesday,

May 14 are Get Acquainted Days. Between the hours of 9 a.m. and 2 p.m. every ride will cost only 25 cents. Local trips only not to exceed 5 miles.

In addition free commuter passes valued at $16 each will be given away for the following: For the person who comes closest without going over to guess the total ridership of the Charlevoix County Transit System since its start in July 1980 through May 17, 6 p.m.

And every day will be Name Drawing Day. All passengers can leave their names with the bus drivers on an entry form provided. All forms will then be collected and a name drawn. The lucky winner will receive a commuter pass for $16.

MECA Youth Advisory Board names five

Five Michigan high school students were elected to the Michigan Electric Cooperative Association's Youth Advisory Board at the conclusion of the Rural Electric Youth Days '85 in Tustin April 25-26.

Advisory board members, including two from Traverse City High School, were chosen by 29 youth days' students sponsored by rural electric co-ops throughout Michigan.

The newly-formed board will help MECA develop programs to educate Michigan youth about the rural electric cooperative business. Students on the board will help plan next year's Youth Days and future Rural Electric Youth Tours to Washington, D.C.

Each year MECA conducts Youth Days to inform students how rural electric cooperatives were started and how they conduct business in the 1980s. The two-day learning experience culminates with a mock annual rural electric co-op meeting where youngsters debate issues and problems that currently face co-ops throughout the country.

Those elected to the Youth Advisory Board include:

Jeff Gee, East Jordan High School, representing Top O'Michigan Rural Electric Company in Boyne City.

Morels can be source of arguments

One source of great arguments can be heard where ever mushroom hunters gather concerns whether or not a morel should be cut in half before it is used.

Those arguing for cutting say that the mushroom can harbor many things that are alive in the hollow part, and that cutting them allows for easier cleaning.

They also say that the cut halves can hold more when they are stuffed with other goodies since you can pile the stuffing on top.

Those who are arguing against the cutting say that to do so would destroy the inherent beauty of the morel structure, and that cutting them leads to dried out end products if the mushroom is broiled or cooked in a microwave.

Either way, all agreed that the morel is one of the tastiest mushrooms that can be eaten.

Sometimes a hump-back whale may carry over 1,000 pounds of passengers.

East Jordan splits ball games with Pellston and Bellaire

BY STEVE GEE

East Jordan's high school baseball team had a rough go of it last week, splitting double headers with Pellston and Bellaire. The team is 9-3 overall and 5-3 in the Ski Valley conference. All three of the Red Devils' losses have come in the second game of the double header after easily winning the first.

Monday at Pellston, the Red Devils trailed

1-0 after three innings of play. The Devils then scored four runs in the fourth (two on a Steve Dionne home run), seven runs in the fifth, and two in the sixth.

East Jordan won 13-2 in the sixth inning by the mercy rule. The mercy rule states that if a team leads by 10 or more runs any time after the fifth inning, then the team in the lead gets the win after the inning is completed. Pete Zoulek went the distance for the Red Devils giving up two hits and three walks while striking out five.

After clubbing eight hits in the first game, the Red Devils were held to two hits in the final game. Scot Bartig pitched a fine game giving up four hits and striking out 11 over five innings, but six walks and five fielding errors aided in Pellston's 6-3 victory. Pete Zoulek pitched the final inning for the Devils, walking three and giving up an unearned run.

Collecting hits over the double header were Pete Zoulek with three, Dennis Skrocki with two, and Darrell LaBeau, Bill Lytle, Jamie Bartlett, Thom Ashton, and Steve Dionne with one each.

The Red Devils traveled to Bellaire Thursday and had no problem in the first game, but a lack of hitting in the second game resulted in a defeat.

East Jordan clubbed 13 base hits and took advantage of seven walks to trounce the Eagles 12-4. Pete Zoulek went the first six innings giving up eight hits and three walks while striking out 10. Scot Bartig finished the game for the Red Devils.

The starting pitcher for Bellaire also pitched in the first game and the Devils had no problem hitting off of him, but could only muster three hits in the second game.

Darrell LaBeau pitched the first 2 1/2 innings, but had control problems and was relieved by Scot Bartig.

Bartig came into the game with the bases loaded and one out and proceeded to strike out the two people he faced. Sixteen of Bartig's first 17 pitches were strikes. Bartig went 3 1/2 innings giving up one hit and two walks while striking out six.

Collecting hits for East Jordan were Bill Lytle and Pete Zoulek with three; Bill Kraemer, Jamie Bartlett, and Dennis Skrocki with two; and Darrell LaBeau, R.C. Smith, and James Price with one each.
