Boyer City is still looking for parade and raft entries according to Jim Howell, chairman of the Rotary Club that has taken over the sponsorship of the Fourth of July event.

The raft race, which is really a float down the river that, for the entrants, can't get over soon enough, begins at 2 p.m., while the parade will be starting at 10:30 a.m.

Weird rafts and weird floats in the parade are acceptable said Howell. Just call him at the First National Bank in Boyne City for more details.

Fay Limron has resigned from the Melrose Township Planning Board due to health reasons and the township officials are seeking a replacement. Those interested can contact Larry Olliffe at 535-2994.

Wilson Township officials learned at their last meeting that money is available for recreational purchases. The township has identified the purchase of a new site for the township hall as a priority last April and is looking at the possibility of adding some recreational land. They are forming a parks and recreation committee to oversee future projects.

Bay Township's search for a park has not been cancelled according to Bob Sorenson of the township planning committee. The planners authorized the resubmission of a grant request to the Kammer Trust Fund in order to find money to purchase property on Walloon Lake.

Bay Township also will be fixing up some roads within the township after county road engineer Fred Welch writes up the improvements. The road concerned include Wildwood Harbor Drive, Curtis Lane and Forest Avenue.

The East Jordan Garden Club will be sponsoring a Farmer's Market at the South Arm Twp. Hall on M66 Hwy., starting Friday, July 5. It will be open 8 a.m.-12 noon every Tuesday and Friday throughout the summer.

Energy renovations to cost $600,000

Boyer City schools could be planning on spending almost $600,000 in energy renovations over the next year after they heard the recommendations from Bill Coberley, a energy consultant from Elzinga and Volkers, Inc.

The board had hired the firm several months ago to find out how the system is doing with energy consumption and how they could do it better to save money that is being spent on gas and electricity.

Coberley went through a presentation saying that in general, the school system is doing above average in comparison to the rest of the nation.

He did say that the middle school gym should probably be replaced, rather than renovated, because the paybacks earned from the renovation would take too many years to make it economically feasible.

For each school, a team of engineers from the firm, John Looze, the building maintenance supervisor, and members of the school boards' building committee worked up a list of energy saving items. The engineers then took the items one by one to decide the possible paybacks to the system.

Among the recommendations that the firm made for all of the schools was the inclusion of an energy-maintenance management system so that any improvements made could be monitored and reviewed for operation and performance.

In the high school, the recommendations included roof insulation, window retrofit, additional lighting retrofit, and a boiler replacement for energy saving.

They also included other recommendations to the site, the building and the mechanical parts of the building.

The cost projection of the repairs would amount to a savings each year of about $5,577 with a payback period of 6.19 years if the high school windows alone were replaced.

With a roof retrofit, the savings of $5,026 per year would be achieved, but because of the high cost involved, the payback for the school would take 69.85 years.

If the school agrees to replace the boiler, a savings of $6,657 per year would result.

The total cost of all of the operations are projected to be $420,590 for the high school.

In the Middle School, the recommendations included new windows, new lighting in the gym, a new water heating system, airlock entries and fans in the gym. Other recommendations included installing an elevator, repairing one exterior wall against water leakage, installing fire dampers and fixing a broken sanitary sewer below a hallway floor.

In the Elementary School, the firm made no energy recommendations but did suggest several other site and building recommendations. Those included changing the fascia panels to vertical, install a barrier free ramp to the stage, put in more asphalt paving around the school building and providing service to correct problems the system has with the heating control system.

They also suggested canopies at the main entrances to minimize snow and ice build-up along with planting some trees to slow down the wind at the entrance of the building.

If the board goes with all of the recommendations, the total amount of money expended, less the return provided by the paybacks would still leave the system with paying out almost $101,309 from the general fund assuming only a six percent increase in energy costs for the next 10 years.

To pay for the building improvements the board is looking into borrowing the money from the state through a program designed for energy saving improvements. The loan would come through what is known as Section 431 funding.

While not all of the recommendations may be done, the board agreed with most of the improvements suggested by the building committee and are being divided into priorities.

The board hopes to get started on some of the improvements yet this summer once the design and specifications are let on bids.

Board member Dick Wulff told the board members that the figures only represent the maximum amount the project could cost, and would probably be much less.

The board will be studying the recommendations to see what would be implemented at future meetings.

Vance named EJ Father of the Year

A life-long resident of the community, Vance is the 30th consecutive man to be honored by the Rotarians at their Annual Father and Son Banquet. The Banquet was initiated 63 years ago as a community event and has been sponsored by the Rotary Club since 1955, when their first Father of the Year was named.

Club members nominate members of the community who are good family men, who work and relate well with children and young adults, who are respected in the community, who project a positive image, and who have served the community well.

Vance's activities include being chairman of the Antrim County Social Services Board, Board of Directors of the Bellaire State Bank, active in his church, active member and Paul Harris Fellow for the East Jordan Rotary Club in which he serves as chairman of the Youth Exchange Program.

EJ schools drop book millage idea for year

BY KAREN L. NEUMEYER

Although the textbook millage sought by the East Jordan School Board was defeated by only four votes, the board will not seek a new vote this year.

Tom Rossler, superintendent, recommended against such a move, stating, "We agreed that we would ask the voters for a decision (on this issue) and that we would not seek another vote this year." Board members agreed with Rossler amid comments of appreciation for the support voters had given the other millage requests.

In other business handled at the regular meeting on June 11, the board reappointed Gigi Antoine the Title IV director for the 1985-

86 school year. The board also renewed its affiliations with the Michigan High School Athletic Association and with the Michigan School Board Association.

M-75 to be paved this summer says Frykberg

Boyer City will be seeing new pavement on M-75 between the old railroad tracks by Stark's Total in the downtown area to Hannah Street on the north side of town as the city received a letter from the Michigan Department of Transportation that said emergency funding was approved so that work could be done on the road.

While the road is slated to be rebuilt sometime in 1987, the emergency funding will allow the road to be paved with a coat of asphalt.

The road work is supposed to be completed by this September according to the letter.

In other action at the noon city commission meeting, City manager Randy Frykberg told the commissioners that two new shopping docks would be installed in the City Marina in the next two weeks. The barge that will be setting the piles for the docks should be coming back to town shortly to complete the work.

City tax bills will be sent out to residents within the next two weeks according to Frykberg. This year, the taxes will include 16.66 mills for city operating taxes, one mill for debt retirement and one mill for the historical museum.

Also included in the tax bills will be one-half of the Boyne City School taxes. They will be asking for payment of 16.35 mills. The total taxes being collected will account for 35.00 mills for the city and the schools.

BC swim school registration set

Once again, Boyne City Swim School will be offering classes at Whiting Park. Classes will begin July 1 and are available for pre-schoolers through adults.

The swim school is based on the Red Cross progression of classes with offerings from beginner through lifesaving. Registration for classes will be held from 11 a.m. to 1 p.m. on Wednesday and Thursday, June 26 and 27 at Memorial Park in Boyne City.

This year's staff, all of whom are Red Cross certified, will consist of Carol Goodenough, Sharon Aimesbury and Katie Bobowski as instructors. Joann Baldwin will be the full-time lifeguard and Mark Forreider will be the bus driver/beach supervisor.

Fees for this year's regular swim school are $12 per child not to exceed $20 per family. Pre-swim school fees are $14 per child for the first session and $7 for a second child or if child is enrolled in two sessions.

Also, any person not enrolled in Boyne City Public Schools for the 1984-85 school year must pay an insurance fee of $1.50.

After city commissioners deny amendment, rezoning fails

It took over an hour, but the end of the debate seemed to satisfy most of the crowd that attended the Boyne City Commission meeting last Tuesday after the Boyne City commissioners decided to turn down an amendment to the current zoning ordinance that would have allowed Planned Residential Developments on parcels of land smaller than five acres.

When that amendment was turned down, it killed any hopes of another developers request for rezoning on a parcel of land that was smaller than the five acres.

The land that the rezoning was asked for, was four small parcels on Front Street across from the Harborage marina and owned by Mary Ann Watkins.

The amending of the ordinance started after the planning board wanted to try to allow for requests for rezoning on some of the smaller parcels of land in the city so that those parts could be built on with the controls that the PRD zoning has written into it. The request for the rezoning occurred after Ron Makino, a developer from Bellville, MI, had requested information on how a piece of property smaller than the five acres could be developed. He had an option on the Watkins property at the time.

An amendment was developed and was sent to the city commissioners for adopting. As the amendment was going through the process of being adopted, several residents came into a city commission meeting to complain. They were told that the amendment had one more reading to go before it would be adopted and that they should get together to fight the amendment.

That brought over 50 residents to last Tuesday's meeting, where the forum was heard.

Leading the arguments against the proposed amendment was Bob Kostin, an attorney who has a home just down the street from the proposed development that the amendment would have allowed.

Kostin told the commissioners that the proposed amendment would create a monster for the city as the planners had not included any standards that would be applied. This, he said, would open the city up for the court system and those who may want to fight the city zoning. "No matter what," he added, "It would appear that the city would lose everytime."

"I cannot see how this new amendment would be helpful to the city," he added. "It would create a new standard for each request."

At that point, Makino asked the city attorney Bill McTaggart if the ordinance would create new standards. McTaggart said it does open the door for planners to set their own standards. He felt that the ordinance if adopted, would be right on the edge of legality.

After hearing that the city manager Randy Frykberg suggested that the proposed change was not in the city's best interest, commissioner Steve Moody withdrew the motion to adopt the amendment.

The commissioners then agreed to send the proposed ordinance back to the planners so they would come back with something that would be acceptable to all. In effect, that killed the amendment and the rezoning request.

In other action that night, the commissioners approved another 12 year tax abatement for the proposed changes that the John Hunts will be making to Studio One Hair Design.

The planners had recommended that the Hunts only receive a 3 year abatement, based on what they saw from plans. The Hunts made some changes to the plans to comply with what the planners wanted so the commissioners granted the abatement.

They also heard a complaint from Doug Altschwager, the owner of the Lakeview Trailer Park who thought that the water bills that the park has to pay are too high. He was told that his bills were in line with what everyone else in town is paying, and although they are high, they are required by law to operate the water and sewer systems at breakeven levels. The rates for water and sewer are based on those figures.

"You aren't the only one complaining," Moody said as he had to pay the same amount for water and sewer as the residents in the park. Altschwager was told that although his bill was higher than some other areas where he owns or manages parks, they were not out of line with other communities here in the north. He was also told that he had to pay them or the water in the park would be shut off, just as any resident of the city.

Altschwager asked if he could connect up some wells on his property and was told by the city that he could if he met all the regulations from the health department and other factions having control.

Altschwager said that the discussion had answered many of his questions concerning his bills.

Marshall Sayles

One of the worst things that ever happened to me was when I wanted something and got it.

I do not know about you, but fifteen days from now I will be throwing my hat into the air and hurrahing the 4th of July. It falls on a Thursday, one of those holidays the government failed to switch to Monday to make a long week-end. Flag waving would not stir such a large lump on any day but the 4th.

Remember when Franklin Roosevelt tried to change the date of Thanksgiving? And how the public stood up on its hind legs, rapping him on the knuckles? Well, the date remained the same and our government at long last began to pay some heed to the druthers of the common man.

Politicians and presidents are not common people. They are uncommon people who are scared silly whenever the common people rise and clutch.

A lot of common people do not know that the uncommon people are actually afraid of them. I imagine some people in government will be upset with me for opening the bag and letting out this long kept secret.

However, I feel rather secure in saying that if it weren't for the howl of the common people, our politicians would without doubt have us blowing our Independence Day trumpets on the Monday before or after the 4th.

But, yet I don't know. Just to be on the safe side maybe I should shut my trap. I can't count the times a shut trap saved the day for me.

Let me say "A happy 4th to you!" and be done with it.

A friend has taken a serious look at the many financial mergers going on around the country. One big company goes in snucks with another big company, creating a larger, more profitable big company.

Now my friend has been twitting me about waving the magic wand, merging our kingdoms and winding up with a pot of gold fit to be considered by some large firm looking for a good buy or a tax shelter.

I tried to head him off by saying that it's difficult to merge when you do not have a pocket full of the stuff that dreams are made of—nor the nerve to go a skating on such thin ice.

But he would not be headed off. He said we could start from scratch and push forward. Many people in Boyne City, he said, started with nothing but a goose egg, and just look where they are today!

Well, geese are now outlawed in Boyne City and besides I'm old and no longer shiver tickled with making of money.

I say this with no intention of offending those who are raking it in hand over fist and who some day will grow old and wonder why they worked so hard to keep the city, the state, the government and their relatives from buying at the moon.

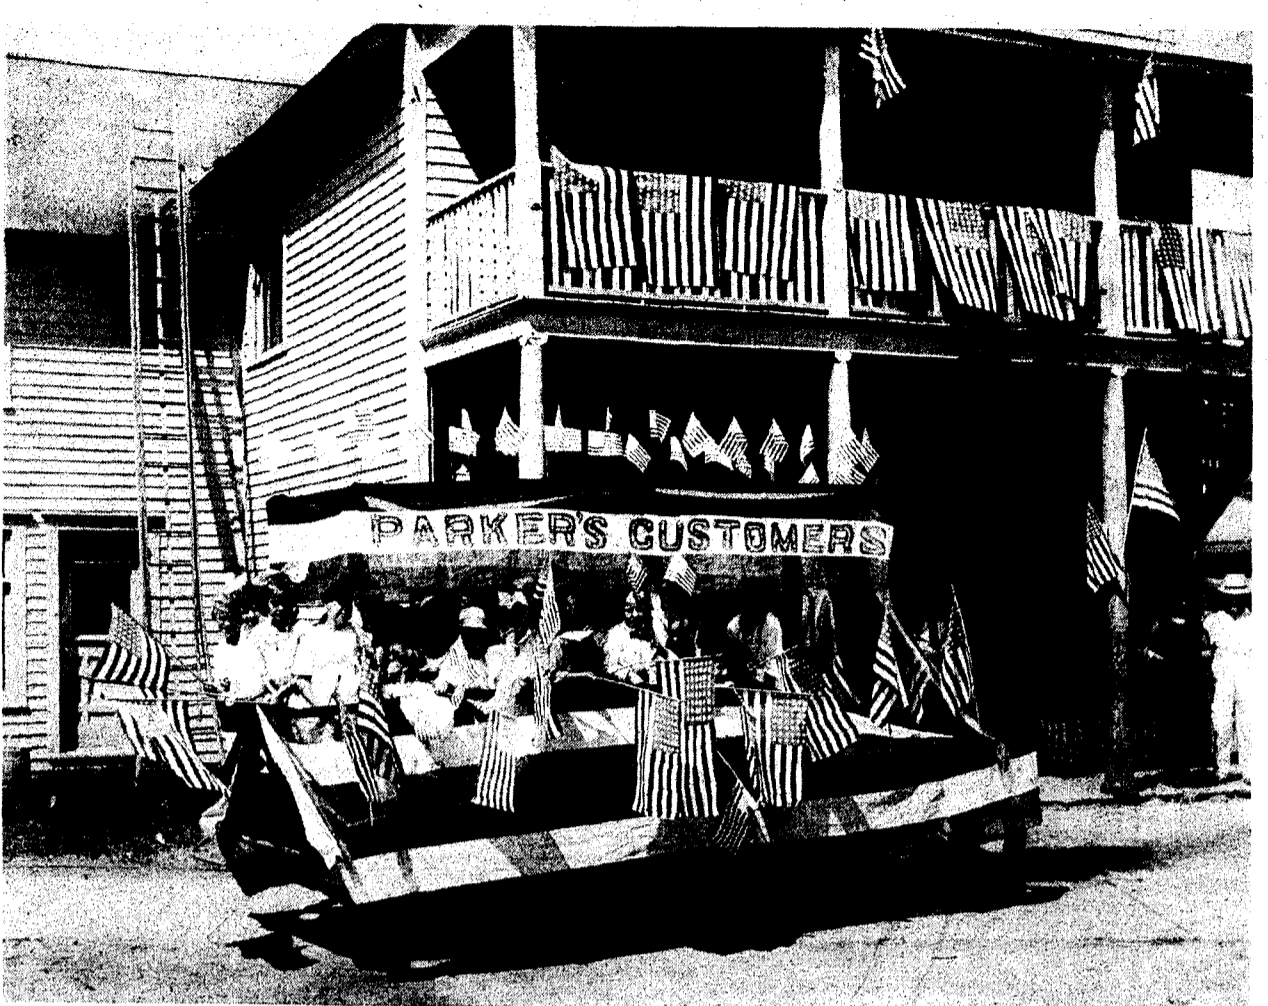

That and my age is why I am unwilling to willingly merge.

Whenever I use up all by brains writing a column I sometimes borrow some from my friends and bring the thing to a wise ending. But quite often it doesn't end up as I had planned.

That shouldn't bother me, for I've never yet seen a man end up the way he had planned. Are you going to end up the way you've planned? I'll bet you won't. You'll end up like everyone else ends up by just ending up and letting it go at that.

Now, I'm different. If I see that I'm not going to end up the way I have planned, I'll just plain refuse to end up.

Remembrances

If you like things of the past in this day and age, you will enjoy the Horton Bay parade on the Fourth of July as it will be just like this picture shows back when lumber was king in Boyne City. This carload of kids posed just long enough for the photographer in front of Parker's Store which was located on Pleasant Avenue in Boyne City before heading out to the Fourth of July parade the city held that year. The wagon, complete with bunting, is similar to the many units that will be featured in the Horton Bay parade.

Barbara Cruden

Probably there have always been the rich and famous on one hand and the nobodies on the other. And probably always there has been the third category which includes in its membership some from both rich and not rich.

That's the category of kind folks who do good deeds on the QT—so much on the QT that they may never even know that someone thought it was a good deed. This important category erases the difference between being rich and being not rich.

I was thinking of a man who took a bunch of kids into the woods to save fish, trapped in puddles after a beaver dam was broken.

This was a super-good-deed because the kids got to feel they also were being kind, and because everyone had fun. And the children learned about wildlife.

Asked seven months later at the end of the school year what he liked best about school, one child named the trip to save the fish.

It was just a little thing out of the man's day. He wasn't even the teacher.

Like they say: the little things... Kids can learn a lot on their own, both in the woods and at home. And not just any kid may be in the right frame of mind to heed wisdom from just any adult.

Still there is all kinds of room for a little adult generosity. Do you remember being a child, wanting to building something out of scraps of wood and not getting anywhere with it?

Or were you a child that couldn't hold the bat right or do a belly-flopper downhill on a sled in winter?

How many sighs have been heaved as children tried and despaired of drawing or sewing or putting a model ship together by themselves.

Waiting to grow up did not seem like much of a solution when one was bursting with ideas.

I think of lonely children and children that need help with reading.

And I think of people who don't want children around. They must have completely forgotten their childhood.

I remember trying to pat sand into the shape of a house one day when I was a child playing alone in our sandbox. My uncle strolled by, asked what I was making, saw the problem, and knelt down to make a house by shaving the mound with a little board.

That easy! There stood the little house with smooth sides and roof, and trim, sharp corners.

My uncle smiled and went on strolling. Obviously, it was a kindness I never forgot.

The other day I saw a boy hanging around while a carpenter was building a cabinet.

A little later I saw the two of them with their heads together over something.

Still later, some time after the carpenter had gone home, I realized the boy was busily sawing away on his own.

Another quiet kindness done. Another not-so-rich man sharing his great wealth.

Housekeeping is an occupation that includes more than its share of dismal duties, so efficiency experts, along with old hands at housework, are constantly coming up with new ways to make the chores seem jollier by shortening the time it takes to do them.

I appreciate all the hints I'm given for getting dinner on the table faster and making dusting merrier, but I resist following any advice about my laundry that would shorten the time I spend at a task that I like to linger over: hanging out the wash.

Hanging clothes on lines strung between sturdy, rusted clothes poles refreshes me. I gather strength from the warmth of the sunshine on my back and the sight of the branches of trees gracefully bending and bowing in the wind.

One of the things that makes hanging clothes outdoors attractive is that the length of the season is totally controlled by the hanger. I enjoy that power. In early spring or late autumn, I feel bold and clever clunking around on frozen ground in my boots, pinning up clothes with gloves on. I also feel a bit chilly, but my smugness wards off much of the cold.

Clothes hangers can do their pinning at whatever hour suits their personalities. For those who are sociable, hanging at the same time as neighbors in adjoining yards is almost as good as sharing coffee at the kitchen table. For those who prefer solitude, hanging very early works best. The hours just after dawn are a peaceful time to plan your day or your life with only the birds and squirrels providing background sounds for your thoughts.

By far the best reason for giving the wash a good outdoor airing is the smell. Clean, wet clothes have a faintly sweet smell that you miss when you rush them to the dryer from the washer. When you hang clothes, they are right in front of your nose. You can't help but catch a whiff. Later, when the clothes are dry, the smell is even better. The laundry has picked up the essence of sunshine and wind. You experience it, especially as you unpin the sheets with your face buried in them. The fragrance meets you again that night when you lie in a freshly made bed wrapped in a clean nightgown. After many decades of outdoor hanging, I'm still hooked on sun-bleached, wind-softened clothes. I understand that a dryer takes care of laundry with less effort, in less time and that it delivers a load of clothes that's more wrinkle free.

No efficiency expert, however, will ever convince me that clothes dried in a dryer are nearly as satisfying as clothes dried outdoors. My clotheslines are good and trusted friends and it's my pleasure to spend as much time as possible in company with them.

"Guitars sound different when played classically" says EJ teenager

First time listeners of master musicians strumming classical guitar music often are astonished.

"I never dreamed guitars could sound like that. All I've ever heard are the radio-TV popular type twang-gers," remarked one mother of teenagers. "What a surprise it was, and I'm really looking forward to this year's free concert."

She was referring to the third annual Guthrie Masterclass series for guitarists now being held in East Jordan on June 16 through 23. (Classes were first introduced by the Portside Arts Fair at Elm Pointe, then moved to fee-free accommodations in the annex of the Presbyterian Church, East Jordan.)

Internationally famed concert guitarist and teacher Robert Guthrie of Dallas, Texas, has brought nine master musicians here from Boston, New York, Cincinnati, Minneapolis, Chicago, Ann Arbor, and one from Arizona to further their technique under his tutelage.

They will be strumming their guitars during long practice hours in the community and the homes of George Secord, Dr. and Mrs. Mitch Carey, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Koucky,

Mr. and Mrs. Keith Richardson of East Jordan, and Jean Muha, Ellsworth.

And, they will be presenting a free concert for the public on Saturday evening at 7:30 p.m. in the Presbyterian Church, East Jordan.

Guthrie made his debut with the Dallas Symphony Orchestra in the 1970s and has received rave reviews as "a guitarist's guitarist and a musician's musician." "He possesses that sparkle which, in any field of endeavor, creates a yawning gap between the few giants and the masses of merely competent and capable."

Said another: "The population explosion of guitarists...the resulting efforts of their side-show-hawkers-turned-promoters, make it difficult to find words to describe his talent that are 'both honest and credible,' but I accept that challenge."

Guthrie and Duo Classico has toured internationally. He is a frequent guest of nationwide FM radio stations, has made recording for National Public Radio, served on the faculties of Yale University, Southern Methodist University, Aspen Music Festival, and Queens College, New York, among others. Why choose East Jordan for the Guthrie Masterclasses?

At least three good reasons: Its scenic beauty "more off the beaten tract and the hospitality of hosts," and it was the childhood home of Guthrie's wife, Mary Endress, whose prodigious musical talent was discovered at age six.

A graduate of Interlochen, the North Carolina School of the Arts and Southern Methodist University, Mary became his musical partner in 1979, forming Duo Classico ensemble, which also features her specialization in renaissance, baroque and art song repertoire.

She also does most of DUO's original transcriptions and oversees recording and the publishing of their arrangements.

It was Mary's grandfather, the late Joseph Bugai, who spearheaded the effort to see that the Jordan River became state owned. It was his belief that it would help that it be saved from "developers" for future generations to enjoy.

"A classical river. We like to introduce it to our master musicians. The Jordan Valley appeals to all artists, visual and performing," say the Guthries.

McCune featuring garments and silks Saturday

Original garments and accessories handwoven and painted on silk will be featured during a fashion show and sale at the Virginia McCune Community Arts Center at noon Saturday, June 15.

"Some highly creative textile artists work here in Northern Michigan," said Audrey Collins, coordinator of the arts center sales gallery.

"It's exciting for us to bring them together and show off their designer collections," Collins said. "Working with these artists has taught me what a small piece of original, wearable art can do to lend distinction to a wardrobe."

Four area artists are pooling their work for the fashion show. They are Nancy Koucky of East Jordan, Rebecca Pence of Boyne City, Sari Ruthven of Petoskey, and Catherine Siterlet of Harbor Springs. Koucky, Ruthven, and Siterlet are weavers, while Pence paints on silk.

Mary Lee Huber, a professional fashion commentator, will moderate the show. The Charlevoix woman is well-known for her informative narration, which tells construction details, care instructions, and ideas for wearing each garment.

Patrons will be able to try the fashions and accessories for themselves following the show, when the artists will be available to discuss and sell their work.

In addition to showing finished work, Harbor Yarns and the Fabric

Shoppe will mount a display of some of the imported silk yarns they carry for those who enjoy creating their own handmade garments.

Other works in silk, including fragrant sachets by Mary Lee Huber and soft-sculpture fish by Char Bickel, will also be featured.

A luncheon of cheese, fruit and wine will be served at noon, with the fashion show following. Silk door prizes will be awarded, courtesy of the artists. Tickets are available in advance at the McCune Arts Center.

Credit Union opens in EJ

If you ever had a question about traveling over to Charlevoix to work with a credit union, now you don't have to as the Charlevoix Federal Credit Union just opened their first branch in East Jordan at the Walker Building.

The new office, which is set up on a part time basis for the start and open on Thursdays and Fridays, will be offering the same services that the firm offers in Charlevoix. High interest savings plans, low cost checking accounts as well as car, boat, home improvement and even airplane loans are possible from the local credit union, said John Dobulis, the manager of the credit union.

Even though they do not make business loans, Dobulis said that they will make loans for just about anything with a limit of $15,000. He also said that the loans all have a four year payback period so that the money within the credit union is constantly being used within the community. The firm decided to come to East Jordan because of customer requests that they have been getting from those having to drive over to Charlevoix.

The new office was set up for the convenience of those customers as well as to attract more users of the firm.

Dobulis told the Press that since their opening six working days ago, the firm has added about five new accounts per day as well as servicing the accounts that the firm had from the East Jordan area. He expects that the office will be very successful for the firm based in Charlevoix, and that the East Jordan office will be operating on a full time basis shortly.

The firm will be holding a grand opening June 27 and 28 for those wishing to meet the staff and find out what services the credit union can offer.

Presenting the check for $100 to Judy Shioltelis for winning the Xi Gamma golf tournament is Celia Pollack, the president of the sorority. Sixty-six women entered the tournament held last Saturday at Ye Nynne Olde Hölles.

Xi Gamma tourney draws women from area

66 entrants came out under sunny skies early Saturday morning to play in the third annual Xi Gamma golf tournament held at the Ye Nynne Olde Hölles Golf Course and when it was over, Judy Shioltelis, who says that she had only played golf one time before this season, was declared the winner.

Second place was taken by Karen Roberts while third went to Mary Swoboda.

Four people tied for the fourth place spot, according to the result table that was figured out on the Callaway System of scoring.

The low gross winner was Kathy Etienne of Charlevoix and East Lansing. She also took the award for the longest drive.

More than two-thirds of the entrants in the match were given awards and door prizes which were furnished by Boyne City businesses and by members of the sorority.

Seven husbands helped with the scoring of the match and also helped out at the sixth hole which was a hole with a contest for a donation.

After the game, a salad buffet was held at the course along with a champagne punch. The prizes were given out at the luncheon.

The tournament saw entries from Gaylord, as well as East Lansing and the local area around Charlevoix County.

A large contingent of citizens was present at the meeting to protest the passage of the Second Reading of zoning amendment #8-85 and #9-85 which related changing the Zoning Ordinance for PRD. The change would have allowed PRD's on parcels of land under 5 acres in size. Numbers prove seat belts work to save lives

* 20,000 persons die in the front seats of automobiles each year. Another two million are injured, with 70,000 of those injuries considered serious. *The U.S. Department of Transportation estimates that lap-shoulder belt systems are 57 percent effective in preventing moderate to fatal injuries in traffic accidents. Thus, if you are wearing a belt system while involved in a crash, you are 57 percent less likely to be killed or injured than if you had not been wearing a safety belt.

* The Automobile Club of Michigan found that the rate of injury for unbelted occupants of cars was almost double that of belted passengers.

* A 1981 University of Michigan study estimates that Michigan citizens could save $200 million annually from full use of safety belts.

* The chances of being fatally injured in an automobile accident are 40 times greater from the vehicle rather than remaining inside.

* According to the National Highway Traffic Safety Administration, if there were 70 percent safety belt usage nationally, 9140 lives would be saved each year and 327,000 injuries could be reduced or prevented annually.

* In 29 foreign countries where safety belt use is mandatory, highway deaths have declined by an average of 25 percent.

* New York state's safety belt use law, the first in the nation, took effect Jan. 1, 1985. During the first three months of 1985, traffic deaths declined 27 percent to 184 compared to 252 recorded for the same time period in 1984.

* More than two-thirds (68 percent) of adults in the United States favor safety belt use laws for drivers and front-seat passengers.

The same survey, conducted early in January 1985, revealed that 83 percent of those polled said they would wear safety belts all or most of the time if their state had a law.

Boyne area to hold first home tour next Wednesday

In 1856 two hardy homesteaders, John and Harriet Miller, beached their boat on the shore of the Boyne River and climbed the riverbank to discover an abandoned and dilapidated shelter, their first "dream cabin."

Nealy one hundred and thirty years have passed since the Millers made their commitment to this area, but Boyne-on-the-Bay is still a beautiful and idyllic place for a "dream cabin."

For the first time, local sons and daughters are opening their homes for a Home Tour to benefit the Boyne City Historical Society which is working with the Historical Commission to establish a museum for the area's artifacts.

Four homes and four condominiums will be open for public showing, each with a different architectural style and decor ranging from colonial casual to formal modern.

The "Kostin Cottage House" owned by Bob and Judie Kostin is a renovated, turn-of-the-century tannery row house on Front Street in Boyne City. The original 24' x 24' structure has a kitchen and guest addition which retains the charm and character of a quieter era. While the feeling is "nostalgic," the mood is "romantic" due to the expanse of indoor flowers that sweep onto an outdoor garden patio surrounded by more bright summer flowers.

While you're in the neighborhood, walk across Front Street to view four Harborage-on-the-Bay condominiums, units 39, 45, 50, 54 with decors that range from nautical to contemporary. The apartments feature a variety of floor plans designed by Dave Trautman to take full advantage of the panoramic view of Lake Charlevoix.

From there, drive across town to Hi and Sharon Stover's Spanish hacienda on the corner of East and State Streets. Built in 1926 of imported brick, the interior features a cozy contemporary atmosphere in ice cream sherbet colors. The home was originally known as the "House of Kaden" after Frank and Mae Kaden.

Continue along the lake to Gary and Lynn Osterbeck's country estate on the Boyne City-Charlevoix Road. Nestled in five acres of woods, this lakeside home was designed by the owners and built by Larry Trumble. The main focus of the Country French interior is the 17-foot wide, floor-to-ceiling stone fireplace.

Turning north, off the Boyne City-Charlevoix Road, onto West Road is Bill and Billie Beckenhauer's "Hillhouse" overlooking Lake Charlevoix and the Village of Horton Bay in Hemingway country. This Early American home has recently been redecorated to create a more formal Colonial atmosphere in shades of antique white, pastel blue and sunny yellow. A swimming pool set into the side of the hill is a delightful surprise.

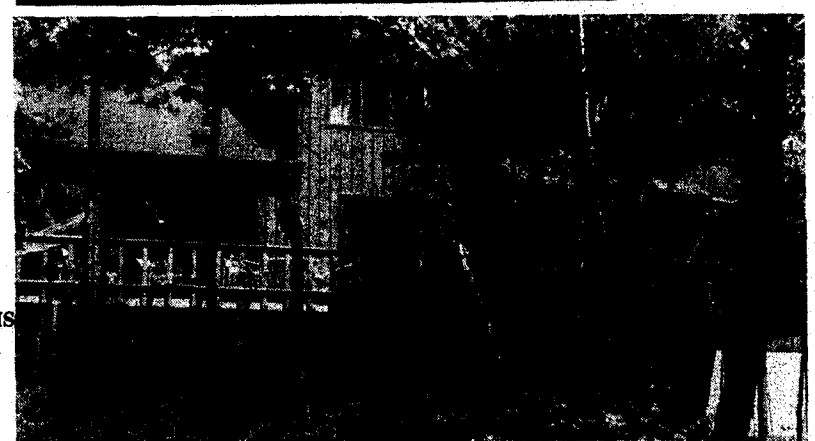

Finish the afternoon in Boyne City. The community's newest restaurant, Stafford's One Water Street, is offering a $6.00 luncheon special for Home Tour ticket holders that includes rolls, salad, entree, beverage, dessert and gratuity.

Maps to the homes are printed on the tickets, and each home will have a green and white yard sign to make touring easier. Tickets for the June 26 Home Tour are $6.00 each and are available at the Boyne City Chamber of Commerce, the Bread Box Bakery, the Depot and Pippins, or by calling the Chamber office at 582-6222.

Homes may be visited in random order at the convenience of the ticket holder between 11 a.m. and 5 p.m. on Wednesday, June 26. No children, please.

- BECKENHAUERS' HILLHOUSE
- STOVERS' SPANISH HACIENDA
- KOSTIN COTTAGE HOUSE
- HARBORAGE ON THE BAY CONDOMINIUMS

Boyne golf courses ready, filled with excitement says Kircher

The two Boyne USA Resorts in the north-west quadrant of Michigan's lower peninsula, especially Boyne Mountain golf/ski resort, are bursting with excitement.

At Boyne Mt. resort, there are two very substantial reasons for all the excitement.

For openers, the Main Lodge and the Boynehof Lodge, have been completely renovated from top to bottom, including all the public areas. The hotel rooms have been doubled in size by combining two into one. The result: Deluxe suites complete with wet bars, luxurious lounges and bath rooms.

"We created an entirely new hotel at Boyne Mt.," said Everett Kircher, president and founder of the popular northern Michigan resort duo, which includes Boyne Highlands golf/ski resort another 25 miles north along Michigan route 131. "We simply gutted everything and rebuilt from the ground up in both buildings. Our previous guests won't recognize the rooms we've created."

The second reason for all the excitement at Boyne Mt. is the opening of the front nine of the Monument golf course in mid-July. The back nine will be open for play in late August or early September.

The Monument course has been more than three years in planning and building. Every possible amenity, convenience and esthetic consideration has been incorporated into the project.

"We will have island greens and double greens. The course will offer panoramic views of Deer Lake, where the club house and our condominium development can be seen. The area is one of the most beautiful in all of Michigan. The course covers all types of terrain, providing plenty of challenges and offering a lot of surprises," Kircher remarked.

There will be anywhere from four to six tees on each hole. These include one to two pro tees, one or two men's tees, a senior tee, and a women's tee. The various tee positions will allow a golfer to shorten up if the wind is blowing hard.

"The Monument can be played as a 7100-yard course but it doesn't have to play like a monster. That's not our intent," Kircher said.

Under the United States Golf Ass'n. rules, a course can not have a 150-yard marker. But in his typical defiant fashion, golfers who play Kircher's Monument course will soon realize there are numerous 75-ton, 14-foot high markers strategically located about the course.

"If anyone thinks they're illegal, they can move them," Kircher says.

"We've put an incredible amount of detail work into the course," commented Ann Arbor golf course architect, Bill Newcomb. "It's the best course I've ever built. I think in years to come it will be rated among the top 100 in the country, just like the Heather Links at Boyne Highlands is now."

How did the course get its name? In time, the course will also be known for its "Hall of Fame" honoring the world's great golfers. The names of famous golfers will be placed on the 50-to-60-ton stone markers placed at each of the men's tees while top female golfers will be immortalized on the "little rocks" marking the women's tees.

"There is no question that the Monument course is an exciting course. Mid-July can't come too soon for me," Kircher concluded.

"Godspell" to be in Petoskey

"Godspell", the 1970s musical, will be performed locally by the Lyric Opera of Northern Michigan, Inc. in July performances. The show, with lyrics and music by Broadway composer Stephen Schwartz and directed by Denny Bechtelheimer and David Lake, is based on the Gospel according to St. Matthew.

The production of "Godspell" will play in Petoskey at the Presbyterian Church at 517 E. Mitchell Street on Monday evening, July 8. Tickets for the show are available at the Virginia McCune Community Arts Center in Petoskey. The show will also play in Charlevoix at the First Congregational Church on State Street on Tuesday evening, July 9. Tickets for that performance are available at the Chamber of Commerce in Charlevoix. Both performances will have an 8:00 p.m. curtain time.

The production is made possible in part with support from the Michigan Council for the Arts.

Land being cleared for Highlands course

Land is now being cleared for the third golf course at Boyne Highlands golf/ski resort, one of the two Boyne USA Resorts in the northwest quadrant of Michigan's lower peninsula.

To be named the Donald E. Ross Memorial, the course should be playable during the summer to 1988. Ross, a Scotsman, is considered by many to be the "Michaelangelo of Golf Architects." He is credited with more than 500 courses, most of which were built between 1915 and 1930. Much of his work was in the southeast, especially the Carolinas and Florida.

"We're hoping to duplicate some of Ross's finest holes to fit our terrain," said Everett Kircher, president and founder of Boyne USA Resorts, and the man who energizes the activities of the Michigan properties, Big Sky ski/golf resort in Montana, and other properties in the U.S. and The Bahamas. "We'll probably limit our selection of holes to such notable courses as Oakland Hills, Oak Hills and Seminole."

In addition to the development of the Ross Memorial, Boyne Highlands is also moving ahead with the construction of the Heather Highlands Inn, a $6.5 million condominium hotel complex slated for completion in December, 1985. A total of 72 units will be built. They will be in two buildings of three stories high, having 36 units in each building. Features will include full use of an indoor/outdoor swimming pool, saunas and meeting rooms, as well as the fine skiing and championship golf available at Boyne Highlands.

The properties, to be marketed by Heather Highlands Realty, Inc., are offered only to Michigan residents. Current sales figures indicate that the development is more than 60 percent sold out.

When all the courses are completed by early in the next decade, there will be six championship courses at the two resorts. Considering that Everett Kircher started with a single ski slope and a tow rope in 1947, the building and nurturing of Boyne USA Resorts has been a lifetime's endeavors fulfilled.
