News Briefs

If you drove to work this morning without your seat belt connected, you probably aren't alone, but you are among the many who are breaking the law. The new law took effect last Monday and requires seatbelt usage for those in the front seat of an automobile.

The fine, if discovered by your friendly officer, will be $10 for the first six months, then it will rise to $25.

DNR officials continue to look for something to go wrong with the Boyne City landfill. After taking samples several months ago, they now say they are inconclusive, which is another way of saying that they didn't find what they thought they should. Maybe they should stop looking at parts per billion which is like a fleck of sand in the Sleeping Bear Sand Dunes.

Chandler Township approved a $29,400 budget for 1985-86 at their annual meeting last Tuesday. The budget shows a 10.1 percent increase over the previous year and will continue the same services as last year.

A boating safety course will be starting next Monday, July 8, at the Walloon Lake Country Club on Country Club Road. The class is free of charge to any young boaters. Those between the ages of 12 and 16 will be awarded a boating certificate which allows them to operate a motor boat with six horsepower or more without adult supervision.

The course covers subjects like marine laws, nautical terminology, aids to navigation, first aid, equipment requirements and boating safety.

The second session will be held on Thursday and young boaters are urged to attend both sessions.

The gremlins are out again at the Press office when we ruined a roll of film that included pictures of Boyne City's new float being constructed, the home tour, fashion show, and firemen's auxiliary's brunch held Sunday. We're sorry it happened.

Parades, fireworks, fun, set for Fourth

If you are looking for a parade, you have a choice of three of them in the area as Boyne City, Horton Bay, and East Jordan will each be holding parades in celebration of the Fourth of July.

Or if you are looking for a fireworks display, both East Jordan and Boyne City will be shooting off fireworks. Boyne City sets theirs off on the Fourth of July approximately 10:30 p.m. while East Jordan fires theirs on Saturday evening.

Boyne City will lead off the parade schedule on the Fourth of July starting at 10:30 a.m. The parade route will start at the Boyne City High School, and work its way downtown where it will end up at the Veterans' Memorial Park.

That parade will be followed by the Horton Bay Parade, which is a different kind of parade than the usual floats and other entires. Their parade will be starting at 1:00 p.m. on Horton Bay Road and then come through Horton Bay to end up at the Horton Bay Methodist Church.

East Jordan will be holding their parade on Saturday as part of the Freedom Festival. The parade will line up at the Gulf and Western Plant and work its way through the town to end up at Vanderwall Funeral Home.

It is supposed to start at 3:30 p.m.

While parades and fireworks are the highlight of the Fourth of July celebrations, each town has many other activities planned covering almost anything that anyone would want to do.

When the Boyne City Fourth of July parade ends, The Horton Bay parade begins, allowing enough time for some of the floats and the viewers to get out to the area.

Promptly at one o'clock, some 80 to 100 entries will begin their march down the main street past the general store and the Bay Township Hall in a procession of rag-tag, side splitting, devil may care fun that has become the trademark of this home-grown parade.

Parade organizers Jon Hartwell and Kathy Roloff report a long list of musical entries, led by Boyne City's Betty Kelts and her All-American Kazoo Party Marching Band. The Boyne City High School band will be playing some favorite numbers for the celebration, as will the Jelly Roll Blues Band, Boyne City Barbershoppers, Krista Knight's young Suzuki fiddlers, the Barnard Grange, Horton Creek Swim Team Marching Band, and others.

There will be animal acts of all kinds, including the running of the cows by a Horton Bay resident who has participated in the real run in Pamplona, Spain. Horses of all kinds will be ridden by riders of various skills.

Antique cars, old fire engines from Boyne City and Charlevoix as well as many other floats and hijinks.

Notables including Carl Charron, a Boyne City football star of the late fifties who went on to play professionally. And Norman Cash of the Detroit Tigers. Sean Ryan, a popular musician who lives in the Horton Bay area will be singing his famous "Winnebago" song atop a moving vehicle of the same name.

All in all, it will be one of the parades not to miss. Traffic will be detoured during the time of the parade.

In East Jordan, The Freedom Festival will be underway with activities for young and old planned all day and through the weekend. See the schedule in a special "pull-out" section of the Northwest Michigan Vacationeer that is included with this newspaper.

Boyne City also has an event filled day starting with a run in the morning, the parade, chicken dinners, frog jumping contests, and other activities.

All of the communities in the area have planned a exciting, fun filled day and weekend filled with activities to go to and see.

Miss Boyne City 1985

Brenda Caldecott is the 1985 Miss Boyne City in the resurrected contest that was held last Saturday at Stafford's One Water Street Restaurant.

school. The 5'8 1/4" 117 lb brown-haired with blue eyes Boyne City native lives in the Horton Bay area.

First runner-up, Debbie Healey is nineteen and is a sophomore in college studying interior architecture. Her mother and father at Cherry and Dan Healey. She is also from Boyne City.

Second runner-up Kiesha Crozier is a Boyne City graduate having graduated this June from the high school. Harvey and Shirley Crozier are the parents of this actively involved teen. She is presently working at Northwestern State Bank and was involved with basketball, tennis, cheerleading, track and the ski team. She is planning on entering the fashion-merchandising field at college.

She hopes to open her own store someday. All three girls will be riding on the Boyne City float at the various parades in the area throughout the summer.

New understandings reached by Wolverine

Wolverine Power Supply Cooperative, Inc. and the Detroit Edison Company have reached new understandings regarding the Fermi 2 Nuclear Power Plant.

The proposed settlement is good news for the approximately 400,000 people who receive their electricity through the Wolverine system, according to Raymond R. Cristell, Wolverine's Executive Vice President and General Manager.

"Under the new agreement, member/consumers will not begin to see Fermi 2 related costs reflected in their electric bills until the late 1980's, at the earliest," Cristell said. "Fermi 2 costs will then be gradually phased in through the end of this century."

Fermi 2 is a 1,093 megawatt boiling water reactor, jointly owned by Wolverine and Detroit Edison, and located near Monroe, Michigan.

Although final documents still need to be drafted and are subject to approval of federal regulatory agencies, Cristell stated that he is pleased the two companies have amicably resolved their differences.

"As a result of this agreement, Wolverine can devote even more attention to prudent load management and effective marketing programs that should lessen the impact of high cost wholesale power," Cristell said. "The gradual phase-in of Fermi 2 costs should avoid some of the rate-shock problems confronting other utility customers throughout the country."

The settlement, which still needs official approval from both the Rural Electrification Administration (REA) and the Nuclear Regulatory Commission (NRA), provides the following:

-Wolverine will not be required to seek additional borrowings to finance Fermi 2 construction and related interest costs.

-Wolverine's ownership in Fermi 2 will hold steady as of certain key dates.

-Wolverine will be able to continue its purchase of interruptible on peak and off peak power from Detroit Edison through October 31, 2002.

-Wolverine will have assured rights to purchase an additional 40 to 80 megawatts of capacity and energy from Detroit Edison from 1992 through 2002.

-Wolverine will sell back more of its Fermi 2 energy and capacity in earlier years than had been agreed to earlier.

-In exchange for the above, Wolverine and Detroit Edison will execute a mutual release and covenant not to pursue litigation.

Wolverine first became involved in the Fermi 2 plant when its two predecessors, Northern Michigan Electric Cooperative and Wolverine Electric Cooperative, jointly purchased a 20 percent ownership interest in the plant in early 1977.

At the time the cooperatives bought into Fermi 2, Detroit Edison estimated that Fermi 2 would cost approximately $977 million—and the plant would be ready in 1980. Today, Detroit Edison projects the plant's total costs at $3.575 billion with an expected commercial operation date of this October.

With the December 31, 1982 merger of Northern Michigan Electric Cooperative and Wolverine Electric Cooperative into Wolverine Power Supply Cooperative, these cost increases caused negotiations between Wolverine and Detroit Edison to take on added seriousness.

The result of these negotiations was a revised Fermi 2 agreement which included a cap on Wolverine's Fermi 2 investment, reduced Wolverine's ownership entitlements, and provided for a sellback of a portion of Wolverine's excess capacity to Detroit Edison.

When the 1983 amendment to the agreement was negotiated, Detroit Edison estimated the plant would be completed by late 1984. For a number of reasons, the

East Jordan harbor project unveiled and approved by Council

A twenty-year-old idea is finally becoming true in East Jordan as plans for a proposed 1.2 million dollar harbor project were unveiled and approved by the East Jordan City Commissioners last Thursday.

The project would include, in the first phase, a main pier, a fuel and pump-out station, restrooms, 20 floating slips for boats, and walkways along the coast of the Memorial Park in the downtown area of the city.

The project was given the go-ahead, even though Superintendent Mike Dionne said that grants from the state or the federal agencies was not likely.

In that case, the city fathers said they are prepared to ask for a two mill levy for three years in order to pay for the new docks.

Saying that the project was "first class," mayor Pat Sweet also told the commissioners that the project may even be necessary for the survival of the city.

While the idea was started 20 years ago, the city has never had the funds available to get the project started. Dionne said this project, which is a scaled down version of one designed several years ago, could be financed by taking out a loan of $300,000 for 20 years, with an additional $150,000 that the city has on hand. The cost of the first phase is estimated to be about $450,000.

He also said that by condominiumizing the docks, the cost to the tax payers would be further reduced.

Harbor commissioner Walt Thorsen said that the city may want to pay more up front to allow the city to maintain control over the docks by not having to make long term leases. Dionne told the commissioners that the majority of the docks would be available for the public.

Everyone is in a holiday mood in our North Country for our Fourth of July celebrations, and other festivals around the area including the National Cherry Festival, and that reminds me of an old Low Country proverb:

"Forget ye not to eat plenty
And drink ye merrily"

The Fourth is a big day in our town. Parades have never gone out of style and we are all happy about that. Then there are the big barbecues in the park put on by the Rotary Club served with potato salad and baked beans which very often provides for the noon meal.

Many of us have guests from down state at this time. How about serving these low calorie pancakes to family or guests. A delicious meal and save those calories for later in the day.

COTTAGE CHEESE OATMEAL PANCAKES

1/2 cup skim milk
1/2 cup quick cooking oats
1 cup low fat cottage cheese
1/2 cup flour
2 eggs beaten
2 teaspoons vegetable oil
1/2 teaspoon cinnamon
1/4 teaspoon salt

Heat milk, stir in oats and let stand 5 minutes. Add remaining ingredients and let stand 10 minutes.

Using as little oil as possible cook as pancakes until brown on both sides. This recipe makes 6 pancakes.

Serve with applesauce, maple syrup or low fat yogurt.

Everyone will be hungry during that long evening wait for the skies to darken enough for the fireworks to start. The young folks of all ages will enjoy Judy's easy

TACO PIE

1 pkg. crescent rolls
1 lb. ground beef
Taco seasoning, in an envelope
Corn Chips
Sour cream, about 1 cup
Shredded cheddar cheese

Line a 9" pie pan with crescent rolls. Crush 1/2 of a bag of corn chips and sprinkle on top of rolls.

Brown ground beef, drain off all grease.

Add taco seasoning and simmer 5 minutes. Add sour cream, spread on top of chips. Sprinkle with as much shredded cheese as you want and then more crushed chips.

Bake at 350° for 20 minutes.

Here is a very impressive and exotic salad to serve to a crowd. Tim made this delicious salad for us, using it as a dinner main course. Filling our salad bowls the second time for a beautiful dinner. The chicken can be cooked and the vegetables can be washed, dried, and crisped ahead of time - even the day before, and put together at the last minute.

TIM MANLON'S CHINESE CHICKEN SALAD

2 boned chicken breasts
Chicken marinade*
1/2 head Chinese cabbage, 1/2 head each of romaine lettuce, iceberg lettuce, red and bib lettuce.

Tim says "Use as many of these as desired for color. The Chinese cabbage gives the salad extra crispness."

3 green onions

Bake chicken in 350° oven or microwave until done using no seasonings. Cube chicken.

Marinate chicken for 1 hour in a cool place.

Meanwhile cut various lettuces in 1/4 to 1/2 inch strips, place in a very large bowl. "I find a large stew pot will do nicely if you do not have to impress the boss," says Tim.

Add chicken and dressing and toss well. Should be served before the lettuce wilts.

Don't forget to add the onions, should be cut in strips lengthwise about 2" long.

* MARINADE

Sesame oil
Soy sauce
White vinegar
Brandy
Sugar

Tim goes by taste for the marinade - easy on the sesame oil, about 1 teaspoon, maybe a tablespoon of soy sauce and white vinegar. Use just enough sugar to counter the vinegar—a tablespoon, and he is more generous with the brandy, maybe a 1/4 cup.

DRESSING:

Use the same ingredients as for the marinade but use peanut oil in place of the sesame oil and use more. This is best applied to the salad one ingredient at a time, taste testing it as you go. This is the fun part. Salt and pepper can be added but it is not really necessary.

For a dessert which can be eaten on the way or at the fireworks try

JUDY HAMMONTREE'S CAKE COOKIES

1 pkg. any flavor pudding cake mix
1/2 cup flour
1 teaspoon vanilla
8-10 oz. whipped topping
1 egg

Mix and make into balls. Roll in 4X sugar. Will be sticky.

Bake at 350° for 15 minutes or until done. Will crack on top. Chocolate and lemon are very good.

Jottings

BY JIM SILBAR

According to the latest press release from the MSDAGVET Company, a division of Merck and Company, arborists are signing the praises of a new chemical treatment for dutch elm disease.

They say that the have found a way to control the fungus that beetles carry from tree to tree.

Now that interested me, but only because of the National Mushroom Hunt that we hold every spring. The reason is, those morel mushrooms are said to be found in abundance around the stumps and old logs of dead elm trees.

And to my way of thinking, a dead elm tree, out in the middle of Chandler township where the hunt is usually held, means that if it were alive and well, that hunting ground would be decimated.

Just think, no dead elms, no morels.

Some of the folks around here would rather die than not be able to eat a few morels each spring. Others would find their almost empty pocketbooks even emptier if they couldn't find enough morels to sell to some of the suppliers of wild foods.

Of course this is all a dream because of the amount of dead elms that are laying around the woods these days. Got to be millions of dead trees out there.

Seems that the trees found the blight several years ago and have almost all succumbed to the disease that the new cure is supposed to stop.

According to the release, it takes three years to effectively control the disease.

The real question might be, is the DNR going to inoculate each living tree in their state owned lands to prevent the disease from spreading further? And if so, who is going to do it since the DNR has had austerity budgets for the past decade assuring that they don't have any manpower to do the job.

After all, between the Jordan River Forest of the Chandler Hill area and the Jordan River, there must be a couple of million trees that they could work on.

It probably would take the entire Job Corp of the state just to do the job in that one state forest.

But, of course, they would never do the job because all of us mushroomers would stand up and be counted. After all, those morels do have a taste that is a lot better than the store bought variety. Besides, right now they are free. Only if you can find them when you are out in the woods.

I wonder if the morel would grow on a few Chinese elms, or maybe box elder. There's a few of them I would like to cut down around the office.

... This being the week of fireworks, I don't think I should have to tell you about the number of burns, accidents, and other things that can happen when you set the things alight.

The problems only triple though, when you are one of the guys who set off the displays for all of us to watch.

You see, the shell is placed in a tube called a mortar. Just like the real thing from the army days. The mortars come in different sizes for the different sized shells.

And that is where one of the problems can be found. If you put a three inch shell in a six inch mortar, The explosion that gets it off the ground and up into the air is dispersed around the shell and out into the open air. In the proper tube, the explosion is somewhat sealed by the size of the shell against the sides of the tube.

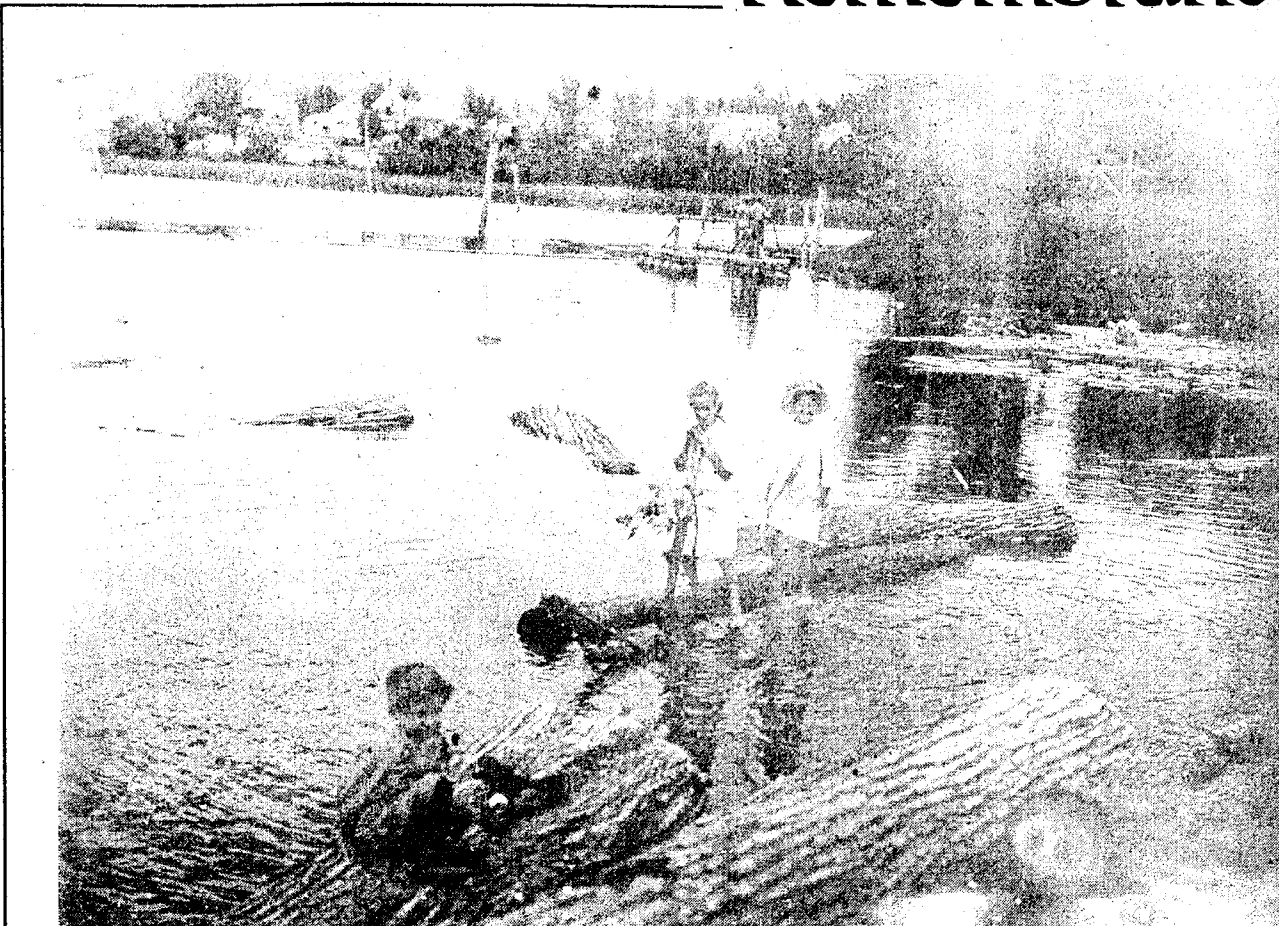

If you happen to be the guy who has to light the fuse, and the shell is in the wrong sized tube, you get a problem of the shell exploding in the tube.

Looks neat to the viewers, but it would look a lot neater to the guy touching the thing off, if the shell blew up out in the upper air. Some parts of the shell take a long time to burn out.

And you have to walk and work amid the burning gunpowder. With other live shells that could catch on fire as you are loading it into the tube.

Anyway, play it safe and let only those guys who have to do it, play with the fireworks. Everybody would be a lot happier, especially when you are sitting down among a crowd to watch.

Remembrances

Ahhh, summertime. A time for all the children to go out and play on all the floating logs that plied the Boyne River back in the lumber days of the city. Parents today probably wouldn't let their children play on the logs, but the children could probably find many other dangerous activities to play with in today's world if they were let to their own devices. This slide, while not in good shape, shows one of the portable cabins that the men used when the logs were in the mill pond prior to being cut up for Chicago and Detroit homes.

Barbara Cruden

First it was men and women jogging. Then came those bent-over bicyclists. The latest thing is women's weight-lifting.

Rather astonishing to see the powerful configurations that women weight-lifters can achieve. I guess we always knew it was possible. But is it feminine, people exclaim.

This leads immediately to another question: What is 'feminine'?

Try asking: "Who cares," says one young woman. "I'm going to be me." Good luck.

Another comes up traditional. "Easy. Being appealing to men." "Yes, but don't you draw the line somewhere?" asks a Ms. Price.

"Only a dummy doesn't know where the line is," answers Straight-on.

Moving into maturity, Mother of three speaks up. "Being feminine isn't all physical," she explains. "It's being a caring, gentle person, one who..."

"Yes! Someone who's not rowdy—likes nice things!" chimes in the voice of another, in "typical female fashion" darting off in a totally different direction.

There is room for a whole collection of approaches, according to the most out-spokenly feminist magazine. "Ms." publishes seductive advertising slam-bang next to articles about your least-glamorous suffragists.

Marshall Sayles

At the drug store the other day a young fellow, still smelling of bread and butter, referred to me as a "senior citizen" and I immediately developed a high pressure system in my southern sector.

We mature cosmopolitans should fight that title and all the untruths associated with it.

Here's one untruth: Just because we're no longer as spring as a chicken some people seem to think we're sitting in the balcony, watching the world go by. False, false, sickeningly false—a mess of cock-and-bull with no substance.

Now listen. The majority of people do not live to be eighty. Most of us kick off in our seventies, placing middle age between thirty-five and forty.

I tried to convince a sharp looking thirty-five year old that she was, after all, middle-aged. And wow! It was the first time I ever heard her swear with her mouth open.

Well, I feel the same about "senior citizen"—a buzz word for an old, cranky has-been, spouted by some people who think we have acquired all the intelligence we can cope with.

Bunk! With a capital U.

All my life, sex, whiskey, ignorance and the money changers have tried to lead me astray, but I've slain them all hip and thigh; and so long as my quiver has a drop of ink I shall fight this "senior citizen" business with language designed to settle the issue short of a fist fight.

"But," said the sharp young fellow at the drug store, "your hair is gray. You don't walk so brisk. You go to bed early and see the doctor more often. You get pains and a short skirt doesn't turn your head a bit.

I'm sorry, sir, but you are a senior citizen whether you like it or not."

You know something? If there's anything I can't stand, it's common sense spoken by an idiot.

Would you care to know what bothers me on this Fourth of July? I'll tell you anyway.

As a newspaperman I have been giving the government written instructions for the past oh, 40 or 50 years and it still has not sprung from the pit. With each new president the pit seems to get deeper and more difficult to spring from.

I voted for Ronald Reagan, thinking he would be the top pit springer of all time, but the poor fellow has more pits than he had planned on springing from.

I was shaving in the bathroom the other morning when I got to wondering how other people saw me. When I was through shaving I studied my face for 10 or 15 minutes. Suddenly I could see myself as others saw me. Heavens! I'll never do that again.

Oh, darn! The bunghole in my think tank just blew out and now I don't have anymore juice for this column.

Sorry about that.

Harvey, Milton and Eleanor Sieting and Eva Lewis.

On June 21 to 23 Ted and Jane Mockerman, Mercer and Bernice Carey, Bessie Brown, Julia Minner from the RLDS Church attended a 45th retreat at the Park of the Pines. Patriarck Ellis Gardner and wife Delores were teachers.

Delores composed many songs with music; also she played her guitar and sang some of them.

One hundred and eleven senior citizens were entertained on June 27 by some of their folks with a mock wedding.

The most honorable Harvey Pangborn performed the wedding ceremony. Mary Kenny was Clementine the bride. Milton Veverka was Mr. Brown the groom. Mary Giffard was matron of honor; also Ruth Russell was bridesmaid. Lucille Starkey was flower girl and Debbie Peck was ringbearer. Jane Mockerman was mother of the bride, Al Omland was the father of the bride.

Milton Veverka sang "Always" and Ted and Jane Mockerman sang "I Love You Truly." A hilarious and good time was had by all. They played a lively song when the flower girl came tap dancing down the aisle. Mr. Brown (Milton Veverka), father of the bride, held a play gun to the groom so he wouldn't try to run off. The wedding continued, the honorable Harvey Pangborn wearing a straw hat and bib overalls.

When asked who objects to the wedding, the mother of the bride jumps up and crying replies, "I don't want her to marry that crum." After the wedding bird seed was thrown on the bride and groom.

If you are 65 and over, come and join every day. The center is open from 9 to 3 with lunch being served at 12 o'clock noon. Director Sue Brill has great ideas for entertainment. You'll miss a good social time and fun if you aren't here.

Wolverine

From Page one projected commercial operation date continued to slip still further, with Detroit Edison's latest official date being this October. These delays caused the plant's total projected cost to increase from $2.7 billion in 1983 to Detroit Edison's present estimate of $3.575 billion.

These increases led Wolverine's management to pursue additional negotiations in order to protect the integrity of the cooperative. The new understandings are the latest result of that process.

Wolverine supplies wholesale power to seven rural electric cooperatives which, in turn, sell electricity to approximately 400,000 persons in mostly rural portions of Northern and Western Michigan.

Unusual pecking order

Magpie birds follow one of the more unusual displays of bird behavior, says International Wildlife magazine. After the death of a fellow magpie, the flock assembles, then one by one, or in groups of two or three, the magpies swoop down to peck at the dead companion. According to an Idaho State University researcher they conduct these elaborate funeral "rites" to find out what killed the magpie and to see which of them died, so they will know how the death will affect the pecking order.

"Road Show" exhibit at McCune July 6-31 July

The Crooked Tree Arts Council will present the traveling unit titled A Road Show which represents the work of 23 Michigan artists selected by Mary Jane Jacob, curator at the Museum of Contemporary Art in Chicago and formerly in the modern arts department at the Detroit Institute of Arts. The exhibit will open at McCune Community Arts Center July 6 and continue through July 31. Its emphasis is on experimental art, the kind that often can't be accommodated by traditional gallery and museum facilities. Joy Colby, in the Detroit News, wrote: "Road Show is C.A.I.D.'s most selective and mature effort to date, exuding a quiet strength and confidence. Its artists, hailing from all over the state, maintain their individuality regardless of whether they're painting, book-making, felting, drawing, photographing or constructing wood, metal or glass. Once again, we're reminded that there is some outstanding art being made in Michigan. Mounted with grants from the Michigan Foundation for the Arts, the Michigan Council for the Arts, and the Detroit Council for the Arts, the new show has traveled from the Jesse Besser Museum in Alpena, the Race Street Gallery, Grand Rapids, Midland Center for the Arts, and closes its tour at Petoskey's McCune Art Center in July."

College faculty and personnel. All SOAR participants were greeted by the admissions' staff and President Melvin Vulgamore and his wife Nan. Albion College, founded in 1835, is located in the south central Michigan town of the same name. During the academic year 1984-85 Albion is celebrating its 150th year. A privately supported coeducational liberal arts college, Albion is related to the United Methodist Church and has more than 1600 students from 30 states and 11 foreign countries.

SOAR is a freshman orientation and registration for future Albion College students and their parents. The program allows future Albion College students to visit the campus, register for classes, and get a taste of what college life will be like. Incoming freshmen are encouraged to bring their parents so that they will have an opportunity to discuss college life with Albion

Award winning homes being sold by EJ realty
The American Wood Council has designated the Optimum Value Engineered Home (OVE) as an award winning home for 1985. Wallace A. Poure, marketing manager for the American Wood Council, told the OVE builders/dealers that the Delta model of the OVE was chosen for the national award because it incorporates the quality and beauty of wood as well as energy efficiency without increasing the affordable price of the home. The OVE concept is used in a model home in Lansing called the Delta, which is one of just 12 projects in the nation to receive the 1985 "Design for Better Living Award" from the American Wood Council, an organization of wood industry trade groups. This OVE concept home is now being built in the East Jordan area. One has been completed in Central Lake and nine others are scheduled to be built in the Antrim, Charlevoix County areas this summer.

Award winning homes being sold by EJ realty

Rob Michanowicz, of Jordan Valley Realty stated that these OVE homes are particularly suited to northern Michigan's longer and colder winters. The OVE home is highly energy efficient, the results of several innovations. OVE claims annual energy bills under $200 in some existing models. Current utility bills are being kept for records of energy use on models in this area from the Central Lake home. The design includes Permanent Wood Foundation PWF system that offers a drier, better insulated foundation than conventional construction; a Plenwood heating and cooling system that circulates heated or cooled air below floors as well as throughout the home for even and efficient temperature control; and textured reverse board and batten plywood siding for minimum air infiltrations. This home also has a striking "new design" look. Versatility is another enhancement.

Computer club organizes

The Northern Michigan Commodore Computer Club recently conducted its second organizational meeting in Gaylord. With well over 3 million Commodore home computers sold, the club was formed to provide hardware and software assistance and self-help information to Northern Michigan computer owners of all levels, whether beginner or expert programmers and users. A self-ranking system is being originated wherein each member will be available to answer questions, help solve problems, and give general advice in their particular area of expertise. A newsletter is also planned which will offer tips, software reviews and general information on the latest updates from Commodore.

BC sets new "shooting" area

A new shooting area for the annual 4th of July fireworks display has been announced by Fire Chief Butch Erber. "We spent a lot of time deciding where to fire from this year," Erber said, "and it's going to be a new experience for us. I hope it will work out for everyone concerned."

The new firing area is in Sunset Park between the Boyne River and Water Street. The area will be roped off in the afternoon of the 4th, so that firemen can set up their mortar firing devices.

"There may be a little convenience to the public," Erber said, "because we will be taking up some of the prime public viewing area. However, I am sure the view will be more spectacular when we fire from this location. It is closer to the public."

The area to be roped off will take in about half of Sunset Park. Twelve parking stalls on Water Street by the old maple tree near One Water Street Restaurant will also be blocked off. This is a safety factor, because when shells are fired, burning wadding from the shells does drift in that general direction and could harm the finish on cars, especially those with fabric tops. Chief Erber pointed out that his department's concern is safety for everyone. "We will rope off enough of a safety zone, barring some freak accident, that the spectators will be safe, provided they keep out of the danger zone," Erber said.

"Those that may be near the roped off area may feel ground concussion when the shells are fired," Erber continued. "If you don't want to feel that concussion, view the fireworks from another location."

New this year will be the firing of some 10 inch shells which are the size of basketballs and shoot over 800 feet into the sky.

"I've never shot any shells that large before," the chief explained. "I am sure that these sizes will produce a powerful bang. Something like a sonic boom."

The reason for moving the shooting area is because of the construction of One Water Street Restaurant. There is still room there to shoot from the lake-shore, but the drift back of debris would endanger the new building.

Shooting from Sunset Park this year is an experiment. If it does not work out this year, the firing site may be moved to the marina peninsula.

However, all the boaters that rent dockage there, would have to move their boats out of the way during the firing of the fireworks. They would be told that it is part of their 1986 docking rules that they must vacate their dock site on the 4th of July from 9 p.m. to midnight.

There is a great deal of enthusiasm these days for an old idea that lost a lot of ground when the automobile was invented: the idea of walking. Medical experts are calling walking the perfect exercise for all ages, one that will keep us bright-eyed and bushy-tailed well into our 80s. We are coaxed to put down the car keys and pick up the walking sticks for a longer, healthier life.

The move toward more walking and less riding suits me just fine. I've never been a fan of cars. They get cranky and unreliable at an unreasonably early age and require enormous amounts of money to keep them going. My feet are cheaper to maintain and quieter too.

One of the beauties of walking is that there are no rules. Some of the bossier doctors do push their patients to cover a certain number of miles per hour, but most of us feel free to do our walking any way we please. I do my walking with a companion. It's not always the same one, however. I choose my walking companions on the basis of how energetic I feel.

If I'm in the mood for a leisurely stroll, I invite a three-year-old along. Three-year-olds have a taste for lingering over flowers. They're expert sniffers and they constantly practice. They don't make distinctions between flowers and weeds; they love them all, especially dandelions. If you want to thrill a three-year-old, turn him loose on a lawn dotted with dandelions and let him have picking privileges. Someone he loves will be given a bouquet of drooping yellow "flowers" before the hour is out.

For a slow walk that's a bit more taxing, I pull a dandelion picker in a wagon. If the day is bright and cool, I add a hill to the trip to give my arm and shoulder muscles some attention.

For a brisk walk out and a slow walk home, I take a child who answers the call for a trip to the bakery! The walk to our destination leaves me breathless. The trip home is a lazy, sticky one.

If I'm feeling very vigorous, I look for a teenager who's willing to walk with me, preferably one who has recently had a growth spurt. The teenager keeps forgetting the difference between the length of his legs and mine and I'm left far behind if I don't trot more than walk. My heart and lungs cheer me on.

For plain, comfortable walking, I ask my husband to come out with me. There are a couple of advantages to this invitation. First, he's readily available so I'm saved the time and trouble of looking for a companion. Second, a lot of what marriage is about is matching strides. We two have had a lot of practice and it stands us in good stead when it comes to taking a walk.

However you choose to do it, walking is a delight. And the preparations take no time at all. All you have to do to get ready is make sure your shoes are tied. Of course, if you have a walking stick, by all means take it.

Officials predict good holiday

Michigan is headed towards its best tourism year ever and a strong Fourth of July holiday could keep the state on target for a 3 to 5 percent year-long increase in tourism over a year ago, reports AAA Michigan.

"An AAA survey of major state tourism indicators and attractions shows that many are from 5 to 20 percent ahead of last year at this time," said AAA Michigan Travel Operations Manager James Drury.

"So far this year over last, state park camping is up 11 percent, state parks day use has jumped 40 percent and Mackinac Bridge crossings are 7.4 percent higher," Drury said.

"Chambers of Commerce at Gaylord, Traverse City, Ludington, Charlevoix and Kalamazoo all report significantly increased activity over 1984," he added.

That pace is expected to continue through the 102-hour Fourth of July holiday and the Michigan Department of Transportation expects motorists to travel a record 800 million miles on state roads from noon Wednesday (July 3); through noon Sunday (July 7). Some 770 million miles were driven in 1978, the last 102-hour July 4th weekend. Last July 4th holiday fell on a Wednesday and was 30 hours long.

Michigan Travel Bureau officials report that tourism is experiencing two trends. Activity levels are increasing and persons also are traveling more and for longer periods and spending more money per day for such things as gifts and incidentals. Officials estimate that 1984's average expenditure of $70 per day has increased, but specific data is not available for an exact figure.

Private campground operators, enjoying better early weather than in 1984, report a 2 percent increase in business statewide. Tourism is up 5 to 7 percent on Mackinac Island while Boblo Island, bolstered by its new corkscrew roller coaster, has had a 40 percent rise in attendance over 1984.

Drury said that AAA's Michigan travel routings and TourBook distributions are up 4.9 and 4.2 percent, respectively, to record highs so far in 1985. Michigan is one of only five U.S. destinations showing an increase in AAA Michigan travel activity.

Holiday gasoline supplies are plentiful. Eighty percent of the stations contacted along major state highways plan to operate daylight hours on July 4, 46 percent after 9 p.m. and 17 percent after midnight.

After approving the plan, city officials expect to ask for bids so that the project may get underway as soon as this fall. The engineering and design work is already completed, and approved by the Waterways Commission and the Corps of Engineers.
