News Briefs

Workers at United Technologies plant in Boyne City rejected affiliation with United Auto Workers union last week when 139 workers voted against joining the union to only 95 wanting the U.A.W.

United Tech makes turn signals and dome lamp assemblies for Ford and Chrysler and has been non-union for 31 years. This was the third time the plant has had a union organizing effort.

The Boyne City Historical Commission is also looking for contributions. They are asking for donations for the proposed museum the city is considering. Anyone donating more than $50 will receive a plaque with their name on it. Ruth Handy at Northwestern State Bank will accept all donations.

The East Jordan City Council did not approve the extension of hours at Elm Pointe. They have taken under advisement, the commission's recommendation to extend them and will vote on the action at a later date.

Mrs. Lee F. McDonell is $10,000 richer after her name was drawn at the annual Walloon Lake Association raffle and auction last Saturday evening. Also drawn was the name of Charles Booth for the $2,000 prize. $1,000 prizes went to Ivan Wiles, Dave Krimendahl and Don Fitton.

There is still room available for horseback riding at Windmill Farms under a program sponsored by the Charlevoix County Youth Activities program. More information on the Thursday riding sessions can be obtained by calling 547-5930.

Bids will be taken August 7 on 10.5 miles of pavement rehabilitation, resurfacing and placing of shoulders on M-66 from M-32 in East Jordan north to Wickersham Road. Expected completion for the estimated $1.75 million project is September of 1986.

Boyne OKs $10 million bond package

Hearing no objections, the Boyne City Commissioners approved the bonding procedure for Magna International's LexaMar project in the new Air-Industrial Park during the Tuesday noon meeting.

The bonds which will be issued in the amount of $10 million, will be used to develop the plant and some of the facilities within the park. With the approval of the city, the bonds can now be prepared and sold to investors.

While the city will be the issuing agent, under the rules of Public Act 62, the bonds will not be carrying any obligation to pay by the city. That is the responsibility of the company. The bonds are similar to Economic Development Bonds but fall under a different guideline as they are industrial bonds.

According to Dick Beagle, the head of the economic task force for the county, the bonding is a standard tool that is being used by almost every community wanting economic development.

The commission also heard a short review of the planning board's meeting held Monday night. The planners recommended that the city put all of the land in the new industrial park into a Planned Industrial District.

That zoning designation allows the planning commission to have some controls over the kind of development and the types of construction within the new park district.

The planners heard questions from Rudy Florenski who wondered about whether the new park required a vote of the people, whether the city attorney had the legal right to participate in real estate, and that the city couldn't buy the land because of back taxes being due.

He was told by the City Manager Randy Frykberg that since the new industrial park was industrial and not recreational, no public vote was called for, attorneys do have the legal right to deal in real estate, and the taxes would be paid by the seller prior to transfer of title to the city.

The city also heard a presentation of the financial report of the fiscal year that ended April 30, 1985. Eric Peterson of Hill, Woodcock and Schroderus told the members of the commission that the city was in pretty good shape, and was working to reduce the deficits in the water and sewer area of the budget.

The city received income amounting to $1,877,705 from taxes, charges, governments, fines and fees, interest and contributions, while it spend slightly more than it took in, $1,892,130.

The areas of greatest spending for the city included general government, public safety, highway and streets, and water and sewer. The deficit amount was paid for by prior year savings.

Peterson told the commission that the city is doing a good job and is improving, considering the economic conditions of the area.

The city also heard about a request to use the Veterans Memorial Park area for a show of the Lippenzanner stallions that are coming to town on August 24-25. The show will be sponsored by the Rotary Club and includes 20 of the horses from that famous stable in Vienna, Austria. The horses are trained in dressage, which is a type of movement horses used to make on battlefields in the days of men with armor.

Known for a jump-kick, the horses are still being trained in the style of yesteryear and are specially bred for the work.

After the meeting, Frykberg said that the site plans for the new LexaMar building will be presented within the next few weeks to the planners. He also said that the city was working with the State Commerce Department on the grants the city needs.

Seat belt law brings OK from officials after looking at data

A month after taking effect, Charlevoix County Sheriff George T. Lasater said that Michigan's seat belt law has had a positive impact on county residents.

According to Lasater, a survey of seat belt use indicates that use is up some 80 percent in the area. He added that most of the comments he has received concerning the law, which requires all front seat passengers to wear a safety belt unless they or their vehicle are exempt, have been positive.

To allow people time to discipline themselves to comply with the new law that took effect July 1, the Charlevoix County Sheriff's department policy is to issue verbal warnings to those found not in compliance with the law, except if there has been an accident where personal injury resulted.

"I felt there should be an educational period and a period to get used to it," Lasater said.

According to the law, a violation carries a $10 civil fine until January 1, 1986, when the fee rises to $25. No points are given for the infraction.

Lasater noted that in the over 50 traffic fatalities that have occurred in the county over the last nine years he has served as sheriff, some 20 victims probably would have survived if they had been wearing their seat belts, and out of those 20 people, 10 could have walked away from the crashes with only minor injuries.

In a recent accident on Deer Lake road, a passenger who was not wearing a safety belt was killed, but the driver, who was wearing a seat belt, survived, according to Lasater. He added that a Friday night mishap in which a Boyne City resident rolled his car, might have been fatal had the driver not been wearing a seat belt.

"There have been several accidents recently where having a seat belt on was a definite factor in the occupants not having injuries," Lasater said.

Local city police say they have given few warnings or citations for infractions of the seat belt law.

Boyne City Chief of Police John Talboys said he is not aware of any tickets given for failure to comply with the new law, and it has not been an issue in any accidents since the law took effect.

Talboys said that he has found reaction to the law to be mixed.

"You'll find that about 50 percent of the people don't like the seat belt law," he said.

A spokesperson at the East Jordan police department said that there have been no citations and few verbal warnings issued by their officers in regard to the safety belt law.

This little fella looks like he sure enjoyed the ride on the merry-go-round.

Riding along in the parade were Gale and Jean DeNise, Grand Marshalls of the parade.

After marching down the main street in the parade, the Birmingham Celtic Pipes and Drums entertained in the beer tent.

These lightweight horses pulled the sled with over two and a half times their weight for the win in that division.

Not all of the visitors to the Polish Festival were concerned with what was going on. This one fell asleep in daddy's arms.

TOMATOES

Before recordings of the history of this hemisphere, tomatoes were growing wild in their native Andes and pre-Columbian Indians grew many kinds of tomatoes for food. Yet people of our ancestry long considered the "love apple" as poisonous, being a member of the nightshade family.

They were taken to Europe where the Italians first grew them for food about 1550, and later grown in gardens of other countries such as England and France more as a curiosity than for food. The French called them "Pomme d'Amour", hence the English and American term "Love Apple". When famous people like Thomas Jefferson raised and ate them they became accepted. After having made good abroad the tomato has attained great importance in its native hemisphere.

Mother always tried to raise tomatoes in her garden; Good Friday was the day she planned to set her seeds in boxes of soil to grow in a sunny window until the danger of frost was past. Then to be planted in the garden. Some years like this past one, there was a cool spring late in arriving and the tomatoes got a late start. Then she hoped and prayed that there would not be an early frost in September before they ripened. In that case she had to buy them to can.

Tomatoes do not seem to taste as good to me now as those vine ripened, juicy red ones. We ate them, sun warmed, in the hand just as they were. You could shake a little salt on them but it was not necessary, and sliced tomatoes were on the table for almost every meal.

Mother canned bushels for our winter use, nearly always in 2 qt. cans. She made soup, macaroni or rice casseroles, escalloped tomatoes or just served them in sauce dishes with maybe a bit of butter or sugar added. Here are a few recipes using those luscious and tasty tomatoes.

SESAME CHEESE TOMATOES WITH COTTAGE CHEESE DRESSING

For 6 use:
3 large tomatoes
Salt and pepper
1 cup shredded cheddar cheese
2 tablespoons butter
3 tablespoons sesame seed
1/4 cup soft bread crumbs
Cut tomatoes in half horizontally and place in a shallow baking pan, cut side up. Salt and pepper. In a mixing bowl blend together cheese, butter, sesame seed and bread crumbs. Broil tomatoes about 5 minutes. Top each with about 1 1/2 tablespoons cheese mixture. Broil 2 to 3 minutes.

COTTAGE CREAM DRESSING

1 cup cottage cheese
1/2 cup dairy sour cream
3/4 cup (about 8 slices) cooked, crumbled bacon
1/4 cup milk
2 tablespoons sliced green onion
1/4 teaspoon salt

In a mixing bowl beat together cottage cheese and sour cream until fairly smooth. Add bacon, milk, onion and salt. Cover and chill.

TOMATO AND SYBO SALAD

From my "Recipes from Scotland" Tomatoes
Syboes (Spring onions)
Salt, Pepper
Simple French dressing

Put the tomatoes in boiling water for half a minute, then into cold, and remove the skin. Cut into slices, season with salt and pepper and lay the slices, overlapping, in a long, narrow dish. Sprinkle generously with finely chopped syboes, and pour a little French dressing over all. This is excellent with brown bread, butter and cheese, or with potato salad and cold meat for lunch.

This next recipe is one of my own that I have prepared through the years. I do not remember where the recipe originated. A very attractive and tasty dish using canned tomatoes.

HAM CREOLE

1 nice center slice of ham (1 1/4 to 2 lbs.)
cloves prepared mustard
brown sugar
1 medium sized onion
1 small green pepper or 1/2 large No. 2 can tomatoes
2 tablespoons flour

Place the slice of ham in a casserole, stick a few whole cloves in it, spread lightly with prepared mustard, and sprinkle with brown sugar. Cut the onion and green pepper into small pieces, add to the tomatoes and pour over the meat. Cover and bake in a moderate oven 1 hour. Uncover and bake until meat is tender. About 10 minutes before serving, thicken the tomato sauce with the flour which has been mixed to a smooth paste with a little cold water.

Potpourri--
After this last weekend, I am almost exhausted. I mean, after going to the Polish Festival, the Walloon Lake auction, the polo, and several other get-togethers, the weekend was busy to say the least. The only place I did not get to see was the Portside Art Fair. But I'll make up for my lack of art education this weekend when Charlevoix holds their art fair.

Does it seem like the flies are worse this year? Or is it that when you are outside, they don't seem to be as bothersome as when you are in a room with a fly buzzing around. I wonder about those flies, especially after reading a story and seeing a horror picture about the transformation of a fly and a human. Maybe we may be reincarnated as a fly in our next lives.

I also have heard a theory some years ago, that a fly flying doesn't make a noise with their wings until their last few days of life. I wonder if there is any truth to that?

Boat owners should be worried about the increased costs that the state is trying to decide to enact. Those with boats over 50 feet will see the license increasing from $240 to $660 if they are approved. Those of us who have something considerably smaller, like 12 feet, will see an increase of $1.50 for the license.

The state senate committee is having a hearing on the matter next Tuesday in Traverse City at the Waterfront Inn. If you want to have your voice heard, you should try to get to the hearings. They will start at 1 p.m.

Of course the state has rules for hearings. They are requiring that people who wish to speak also put it into writing.

Maybe that is because the senators who will be conducting the hearing have a hard time hearing...or listening to the people who may be concerned.

After all, they could have held that hearing in the Charlevoix area where a lot of big boats are kept.

But the decision will be made down in Lansing where the closest water runs through the town and through the watering holes.

Remembrances

This is the railroad depot that was at Walloon Lake back in 1906. The terminal is where all the summer residents would unload their summer clothing [see the trunks piled high on the trailer] before getting on a boat to go to their summer cottage. Perhaps this is the depot that Ernest Hemingway came into when he spent the summers here in the area.

Ware-withal

BY GALE WARE

Eating an apple is a satisfying experience for almost anyone who has teeth in the right places to bite into the fruit, but I am one of the apple eaters of this world who goes one step further and considers the eating of an apple a celebration.

I'm not sure when I got on this track, but somewhere along the line I began attributing to apples all manner of power and goodness. For example, there is my conviction that they are portable fountains of youth. I bit into an apple and a picture flashes in my mind of children of all ages dancing and skipping and running and competing in joyous vigor. As the tangy sweetness fills my mouth, I immediately feel younger, stronger and smarter. I don't go so far as to fantasize that my grey hair disappears, however. Even fantasy has to have some limits.

Apple-eating not only makes me feel strong, it makes me feel wholesome and the mere thought of that word makes me feel virtuous.

My faith in the magic that an apple imparts to the eater probably stems from a couple of sources. There's the adage that I heard so often in my childhood, "An apple a day keeps the doctor away", and then there way my mother's unshakable view, voiced repeatedly, that "apples are good for you". Mother followed through on her belief by popping apples into almost everything we ate from sweet potatoes to muffins to pancakes, cakes and pies. She also made high bowls of applesauce cooked with sticks of cinnamon. Her sauce had slices of apple in it that were distinct, not cooked to a mush. And, of course, there was always a bag of apples sitting on the basement stairway.

I am happy to note that apples are universally recognized as one of nature's finest products as a convenience food. They're self-packaged in cheerful colors and they don't easily wrinkle, bend, sag or spoil at room temperature. They are socially acceptable wherever food is consumed informally except at cocktail parties. This exception doesn't inconvenience me one whit. My cocktail party attendance has fallen off considerably in recent years and it wasn't too steady to begin with.

I'm not picky about the kind of apples that I eat as long as they're crisp and juicy. I must admit, though, that my favorites are the Fancy Red Delicious which are sinfully expensive. I celebrate with them only when I am feeling very low or very high.

Finally I come to the biggest reason for my affinity for apples, the one for which I have no explanation: eating apples makes me feel loved. I guess it's like the feeling some people get when they take a bubble bath only I feel that way from the inside out instead of the outside in.

In any case, I am convinced that apples are one of life's greatest gifts and apple-eating is a lovely way to celebrate life.

Let me say something before I start writing. I had been taking an awful lot of medicine per doctor's orders. Pills, pills, pills, three times per day and on Sunday. So many pills, in fact, that I became disgusted and quit being sick.

The following information was included in a "Call of the North" story in the Dining section of Friday's Detroit News. After describing Ellsworth's Rowe Inn and East Jordan's Jordan Inn, the story goes on to say:

"Stafford Smith opened a $2-million complex in Boyne City on a point of land that juts out into Lake Charlevoix at the end of Water Street. An upscale menu, reasonable prices and stunning decor are drawing a standing room-only crowd nightly to Stafford's One Water Street.

"Wow! That just about sums up the newest culinary extravaganza cooked up by Stafford Smith and some Boyne City developers. One Water Street has to be the newest, costliest restaurant venture ever to hit northern Michigan.

"Poised on a piece of land near the mouth of the Boyne River at the head of Lake Charlevoix is Smith's $2-million multiroom eatery, decorated to the hilt. Prices are reasonable, food is imaginative and good tasting, and wines are thoughtfully selected and moderately priced. And the whole community has already found this out, because the place is packed at dinner time." The story goes on to describe the unique interior of the building and winds up saying "The food is upbeat and Michigan oriented."

Other eateries are mentioned, like the Walloon Lake Inn, but this column leans toward stuff said about, for and against Boyne City.

Now, having said that we lean toward Boyne City, I shall now speak of Boyne Falls.

I looked up Saturday and found myself at the Boyne Falls Polish Festival. Heavens, what a crowd!

People had come from far and wide. I knew that when I saw a couple of far and wide women with kids tied to a rope so they wouldn't get lost in the mass of humanity that kept going around and around to see everything laid out to see.

This year's festival was a real humdinger. I looked that word up. It also means a gem of the first water. The event is also of the second and third water. What an attractive gumption Boyne Falls displays with its Annual Polish Din-shig.

Boyne City will put on a gem of the second water this week end. The annual old car display and the north's largest flea market will be held at the city park. Thousands, if not hundreds, of people will be there. My wife is wondering if we shouldn't throw a length of rope in the car so I won't get lost in the throng, leaving no trace. It's almost impossible for a husband to vanish once he's been tied to his wife.

That's it. I can write no more. I've stopped taking those pills and my mind is constipated.

Would you like to be the judge?

Editor,
A friend of mine in Traverse City saved this article for me, and I am thankful to him. So many people say to me, how is everything going, Art? And my usual answer is that I have been so busy that I have not had time to add up the score.

I would like to suggest that we all add up the score together. Take the pros and cons and let the people be the judges.

This article, by Gordon Charles, outdoors editor for Traverse City Record Eagle, in a Lansing paper "says" buying and selling of salmon eggs has been outlawed in Michigan by Ingham County Circuit Judge, James R. Gidding and has ordered the DNR to ban the practice immediately. The opinion was requested by Michigan United Conservation Club.

Under Michigan laws, it is illegal to sell any part of any protected game fish, so says Frank Kelley, our attorney general, at the same case. We Americans are so proud that we live in America and are governed by democracy so that we all can enjoy equality, and laws are for everyone to abide by regardless of who you are, or where you come from.

To me, democracy is one word with one meaning, and is the very foundation of equality and justice, the foundation of our Constitution. To me, our judicial system was created to enforce our laws, and in a true democracy there cannot be discrimination.

In this case, we, the people of our state, are forbidden by law to sell or offer for sale any part of our protected game fish, and the judicial system enforces these laws.

Now, here is one for you judges. Did you know that a private company, with the blessing of our DNR who should be protecting these salmon for the people of our state as eight other states and Canada do, who has rivers that these salmon spawn in, know if our DNR and our judicial system enforced these laws, how could there be in one year (say 1983) the last year with complete records, sold and offered for sale over 3 million pounds on the open market all from our rivers where the fishermen with valid licenses are arrested and fined for attempting to catch one of these salmon to eat?

It did not take our attorney general, Frank Kelley, long to give an opinion in court before Judge James R. Gidding, but he was requested by our Senator Mitch Irwin and our Rep. Pat Gagliardi, over two years ago, for a ruling on Act 165, Sec. 3, paragraph 10, pertaining to the same subject, and they are still waiting.

Will all you judges okay the same opinion? Let us find a judge, they have more clout than legislators have.

Now, these 3 million pounds of salmon and salmon by-products which include salmon eggs or spawn, have been declared to be unfit for human consumption. Last fall, in the Petoskey News Review, the DNR claimed that the salmon that were taken in the weir on the Jordan River were so contaminated with PCB that it would be unfair to charge their private company the usual 2 1/2 cents per pound, but these contaminated salmon were included in the 3 million pounds sold on the open market.

We sure have some very efficient health department that protects the public health.

An exciting "Auction for the Arts" will be held on Thursday, August 8 in Petoskey to benefit the Crooked Tree Arts Council. Highlight of the day will be the evening auction at 7:30 p.m. at the Perry Davis Hotel in Petoskey, when auctioneer Ernest Dumouchelle will wield the gavel and 100 original works of art will go to the highest bidders.

The silent auction is underway now at the McCune Arts Center in Petoskey, featuring art antiques and collectibles, with the main items for the "big auction" on display in the Perry Davis Hotel lobby in Petoskey.

Charlevoix' donations to the radio auction include a round trip flight to Beaver Island from Island Airways, an evening boat cruise for four persons from Ward's Charter Service, a chance to sit with the Bridge Tender at the Charlevoix drawbridge for an adult and two children, a helicopter flight to a special location in the Little Traverse Bay area compliments of the Kleinpells, lunch with well known author Edith Gilbert, and a boating tour of Walloon Lake.

All Thursday afternoon on the porch at the Perry Davis Hotel, Crooked Tree Arts Council artists will be demonstrating their talents. Janis Glass of Charlevoix, head of the Arts Council's docent program and popular Arts Center teacher, will be painting in watercolors, and Betty Adgate, former Boyne City art teacher, will be demonstrating basketweaving. Stephen Kendall of Off Bridge Street Artists, winner of the 1985 Crooked Tree Arts Council's Juried Fine Arts Exhibition, will also be painting. Other fine artists will be there as well to "show how it's done" and talk with visitors about what it's like to be an artist in northern Michigan.

From 5:30 till 7:30 p.m. on the 8th, there will be a cocktail hour preview at the Perry Davis, your last chance to go over the offerings and make your selections for bidding. The action will also move across the street at 5:30 to Pen Plaza, where an old-fashioned box social will be held. Women are encouraged to bring a lunch to auction off. The person who bids highest for the supper will eat with the woman who made it. "It's an old custom that goes back to the 1920s", according to co-chairperson Ima Williams. "People can bring candelabras and wine glasses and be as fancy as they like, but they'll need to bring a blanket or tablecloth to sit on".

At 6:30 p.m., the Northern Michigan Chorale will sing on the porch at the Perry Davis. The Hotel will be offering "Auction for the Arts" dinner specials all evening. In fact, the entire Gaslight Association is participating all day August 8, with each shop having a specially priced feature.

Among the approximately 100 works to be auctioned off by Ernest Dumouchelle are two original Carol Wald works, "Study of a Young Woman" in pastels and a pencil drawing. Ms. Wald, originally from Detroit, has received numerous national awards and commissions for her work and has been featured in national magazines. There are all sorts of other original works of art in all media, and unique items such as a collection of 20 hand-hooked rugs, circa 1830 which have been on Harbor Point for many years. There's a cape buffalo head, a large Indian totem pole, and a lovely large Persian scarf approximately 150 years old. Items are on display at the Perry Davis Hotel Lobby and the Arts Center.

Charlevoix County artists donating their original works include Betty Adgate of Boyne City, with a watercolor of a church, Barbara Godwin's art nouveau porcelain calla lily vase, and earth-toned stoneware planter with floral applications by Jo Moffitt, a watercolor of poppies by Jan Glass, a blue earthenware casserole by Chuck Koucky of East Jordan, and an elegant porcelain vase with Iris motif by Cynthia Tschudy.

So plan on coming to the "Auction for the Arts" on Thursday, August 8. You can acquire original works of art, often at modest prices, have fun, and at the same time assist the Crooked Tree Arts Council in its efforts to provide the finest in all the arts to all persons in Charlevoix and Emmet Counties.

This handmade three foot tall bronze recirculating water fountain with gulls and abstract lilies, designed and donated by Russell Secrest of the Artisan's Gallery, is one of the featured items available at the Auction for the Arts. Walter Baker, who crafted the item, stands in back of it admiring his work.

Polish Festival Drew huge crowds again

Boyer City's old La France fire truck made an appearance in the Polish Festival parade.

The judges had a hard time figuring out the winners, as they studied their notes and discussed which float was the best of the many that appeared in the Festival parade.

Even the Democrats got into the Polish Festival activities as they held a chicken bar-b-que on Friday night. They must have made some money for the future elections as they sold out of everything before the evening was over.

Even the Little Miss and Little Mister were able to ride a float, along with several friends.

Leo Prawdzik looks out from his seat of this old antique car as he was honored as the "Honored Citizen" of the annual Polish Festival that was held last weekend. He has lived in the Boyne Falls area all of his life except for a couple of times when he went to work downstate.

Members of the Plymouth Pipe and Drum Corps showed off their marching steps at both the parade and at the horse pulling contest where they opened the event with the national anthem.

Antique car show brings out the best in restoration

BY LESLIE DAILEY

If the concept of antique car restoration inspires you, or if you want to look at what someone else has done with an antique car, or even if you just like looking at something as old as you may be and think about the memories, then you should stop in at Boyne City this weekend for the annual antique car show and flea market that will be held along the waterfront in Veterans Park.

Among the many cars that will be shown off will be the winning car at the 1984 national competition that was held in Hershey, Pennsylvania last year.

Owned by Richard Chambers of Rockford, Michigan, the 1928 Model A roadster is a gleaming beauty among the over 100 cars that are expected at the show.

The show is not for the new cars, they all have to be at least 25 years old in order to qualify for entry. Most of the cars will be in restored condition but some may still be in their original state as the owner probably hasn't found the time or the money to do the job.

They may have additional parts added to them which were available at the time of construction, but that is the limit. No hotrods or anything that clas-

Throw birdseed at weddings

Birdseed is the ecologically safest stuff to toss at the bride and groom, says a Connecticut lawmaker who has introduced a bill banning instant rice weddings, reports International Wildlife magazine. Innocuous as it seems, instant rice kills birds that eat it by absorbing moisture, causing severe bloating, says Mae Schmide, the legislator introducing the birdseed bill. She does not advocate policing weddings, but simply wants well wishers to convert to birdseed.

tely at a loss when you look at a wine list in a restaurant?

No matter what your idea of wines are, it could be worth your time and your mind to take a trip down to the Old Mission Peninsula yet this summer to learn about the great wines that are from grapes now being grown in the region.

You see, good wines first come from good grapes, and only certain varieties will produce exceptional wines. And then you have to have just the right growing conditions. Long hot days, cool nights, and a winter that won't kill off the buds from the next year's crop.

All of these conditions are found in the micro-climate that the Old Mission area contains.

But the wine business in upper Michigan took many years to develop.

In the case of Chateau Grand Traverse, the growth of a winery has been just short of phenomenal.

It all started when Ed O'Keefe, a nursing home developer and operator, went to Europe to discuss a project and started drinking good wines.

After he came back, he started an import business to bring back to the States some of the good wines of France along with several others.

He learned about the wine business and the more he learned, he wondered why some of these fine wine producing grapes were not grown in Michigan.

As he learned even more about the growing of the grapes, he realized that there were prime conditions for them on the Old Mission peninsula near Traverse City.

He went to some of the so called experts in the business who proceeded to tell him that the grapes he wanted to grow would never survive our harsh winter climate.

But the former Philadelphia resident who summered in the Traverse City area just knew that the area would be right for growing the Johannesburg white reisling, chardonnay and merlot grapes.

Undaunted, he flew to Germany to meet with Dr. Helmut Becker, the head of the viticulture department at the University of Geisenheim. The school is long noted for being the best wine school in the world.

O'Keefe took along 10 years' worth of weather data to help determine whether the peninsula had the right kind of micro-climate to sustain the grapes.

Dr. Becker said that he thought the area would, and came over to see for himself. After inspecting the land, and doing some checking of the weather statistics for the predominately cherry growing area, he was really impressed.

O'Keefe then purchased some land, about 100 acres of prime cherry orchard, and proceeded to rip out the trees and move about a million cubic yards of dirt around to make a slope that would let the cold air drain off.

His first planting of grapes was in the summer of 1975 after he built a plant to produce the wine. About 50 acres were planted with vines he brought in from Europe.

While waiting for the vines to start producing, O'Keefe purchased grapes from other areas to produce wine.

His first picking of the Geisenheim Clone 239 was late in 1979. From those grapes he made a chardonnay and sent it off to be graded in the first of many wine competitions the firm has entered. The new wine, made from grapes grown in northern Michigan took a gold medal in the German competition.

Since then, Chateau Grand Traverse wines have taken many awards, 34 within the last 18 months alone.

The 1981 Chardonnay produced by the firm took the prestigious gold medal at the American Wine Competition held at the International Wine Center in New York City. That competition is perhaps the best in the United States and is open to all wineries that produce "Vinifera" varietal wines.

To show how exacting the requirements are for that competition, the judges follow strict rules, such as not talking to one another. As a control, judges are periodically served duplicate wines with different code numbers to check their alertness, and the Wine Review magazine will publish not only the winning results and tasting notes of the judges, they also publish the notes and comments concerning those losing. All wineries are warned beforehand to enter only those wines that they consider their best. This type of competition is considered the "Super-bowl" of American competitions.

While the Chardonnay won its share of medals, the 1982 Johannesburg Reisling Semi-Dry took a gold at the American Wine Championship that was held in San Francisco. That competition is considered to be the "Olympics" as the only wines that can be entered must have won a gold medal within the past year in other competitions.

So far the company has won 12 gold medals, 10 silver medals, 7 bronze, and has had 5 honorable mentions.

Why the emphasis on competition? "Because we want the real experts of the industry to decide if our wines are good or not. Not some self-styled ex-haunted, he flew to Ger-to meet with Dr. Helmut the head of the viticulpartment at the Univer-Geisenheim. The school is toted for being the best chool in the world.

eeffe took along 10 years' of weather data to help ine whether the peninsula e right kind of micro-to sustain the grapes.

Becker said that he nt the area would, and ver to see for himself.
nspecting the land, and some checking of the er statistics for the minately cherry growing e was really impressed.

eeffe then purchased some land, about 100 acres of prime cherry orchard, and proceeded to rip out the trees and move about a million cubic yards of dirt around to make a slope that would let the cold air drain off.

His first planting of grapes was in the summer of 1975 after he built a plant to produce the wine. About 50 acres were planted with vines he brought in from Europe.

While waiting for the vines to start producing, O'Keefe purchased grapes from other areas to produce wine.

His first picking of the Geisenheim Clone 239 was late in 1979.
From those grapes he made a chardonnay and sent it off to be graded in the first of many wine competitions the firm has entered. The new wine, made from grapes grown in northern Michigan took a gold medal in the German competition.

Since then, Chateau Grand Traverse wines have taken many awards, 34 within the last 18 months alone.

The 1981 Chardonnay produced by the firm took the prestigious gold medal at the American Wine Competition held at the International Wine Center in New York City. That competition is perhaps the best in the United States and is open to all wineries that produce
"Vinifera" varietal wines.

To show how exacting the requirements are for that competition, the judges follow strict rules, such as not talking to one another. As a control, judges are periodically served duplicate wines with different code numbers to check their alertness, and the Wine Review magazine will publish not only the winning results and tasting notes of the judges, they also publish the notes and comments concerning those losing. All wineries are warned beforehand to enter only those wines that they consider their best. This type of competition is considered the "Super-bowl" of American competitions.

While the Chardonnay won its share of medals, the 1982
Johannesburg Reisling Semi-Dry took a gold at the American Wine Championship that was held in San Francisco. That competition is considered to be the "Olympics" as the only wines that can be entered must have won a gold medal within the past year in other competitions.

So far the company has won 12 gold medals, 10 silver medals, 7 bronze, and has had 5 honorable mentions.

Why the emphasis on competition? "Because we want the real experts of the industry to decide if our wines are good or not. Not some self-styled ex-

Attract hummingbirds

It's surprisingly easy to attract hummingbirds to most yards and gardens, says National Wildlife magazine. Planting red flowers, or hanging red-colored vials of sugar water are particularly enticing to hummingbirds, which are in constant search for energizing flower nectar and tiny insects.

pert," said O'Keefe.

O'Keefe is not alone in the business, he has a lot of help to produce the wines and perhaps the most important person is Roland Pflieger of Herxheim, West Germany. Pflieger works between two wineries, one which is owned by his father in Germany and O'Keefe's. Pflieger is a graduate of Geienheim University with a degree in Viticulture and Eonology, but his training in the wine industry started well before he went to school. His family has been in the wine business since the 1600's, about 400 years, and Pflieger started as a young boy working with the wines.

The family business is doing well in the competitions also, a point which O'Keefe is equally proud of as Pflieger will continue to divide his attention between the Weingut Jacob Pflieger and Chateau Grand Traverse.

What makes the wines produced on the peninsula so much better is, according to Bill Skolnik, the national sales manager for the firm, a matter of temperatures.

He said that in relation to the wines that are grown in the California wineries, Michigan has the ideal temperatures. In California, he said that the temperatures during the day are in the 90's while at night only fall to the 60's. That is not as good for the Johannesburg Reisling grapes as Michigan's 80 degree summer days and 40 to 50 degree nights.

Skolnik also said that the sales of the Chateau Grand Traverse Wines is growing and exceeding supply. California is the largest wholesale market, with Detroit, Grand Rapids, Lansing, and Traverse City being the best in Michigan. Sales have also started to take off in Indiana and Minnesota and Florida. Chicago will start getting the wines next spring.

Skolnik said that the firm sells more wine in San Francisco, the home of the American wine industry, than he sells in all of Michigan.

To meet the demand, the winery is planting an additional 40 acres of vines at the rate of 10 acres per year through 1990. They are also urging other farmers in the area to start growing wines for them instead of cherries.

"The business of grapes is a lot better per acre than the business of cherries," said Skolnik.

The production increase will allow the winery to produce about 10,000 cases of wine each year.

Business is growing fast, sales are projected to increase 63 percent this year alone.

Because of the projections, Skolnik expects to see 600 to 700 acres of grapes being grown on the peninsula within the next 10 years.

While all of the growth of the company is good, the wines that they are producing now are excellent and the firm hopes to continue in that tradition.

In fact, if you want a tip on the what is the best wine, the 1982 vintage Chardonnay that is just coming into the bottling stage, is considered by a couple of local tasters are being better than the 1981 that took all the gold.

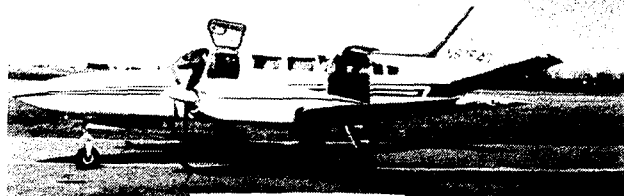

You can taste some of it when you go to the winery's tasting room which is located on the Old Mission Peninsula's M-37 about 500 psi kick

The largest bird in the world, the ostrich, is a strange bird, says International Wildlife magazine. A male ostrich typically stands seven feet tall, weighs 260 pounds, runs up to 50 miles an hour with strides as long as 15 feet and packs a kick of up to 500 pounds per square inch. Yet, the bird stops when a person waves a thorn-tree branch in its face.

Antique cars come to Boyne this weekend

ual. In the nationals, it may take hours to determine how well a car is restored, and details as small as width of the pin stripes on a wheel may determine the ultimate winner.

One of the cars that may be shown is a 1931 Model A that is owned by local restorer and auto mechanic Bud Sabin. Although he won't be entering it into the competition, he has won many trophies with it in past years. He stores the showpiece that he purchased for only $20 before restoring it to showroom condition.

Sabin is also restoring two other cars in his spare time. One, a 1911 Buick, is a frame up restoration job with only the frame completed. Sabin has everything ready for hanging the body onto the frame.

Many of the engine attachments are brass, polished and ready for placement on the engine. Chrome wasn't used back in the early automotive days, but those cars did have their bright work done, even if it took a week to polish up the brass fixtures.

It is a right hand drive automobile, with wood spoked wheels and only two wheel brakes.

According to Sabin, all the parts that are going into the car, even those under the hood, are going to be newly painted or polished.

The other car Sabin is working to finish, is a 1948 Crosley. The car was designed and made by the maker of Crosley radios and refrigerators. The original cost was under $1,000. In running condition, the engine puts out 25 horsepower.

This particular Crosley convertible is being renovated after being retrieved from underneath a fallen barn. The barn crushed the side of the little car completely.

Sabin is working on the car and so far has used parts of a Bluebird Bus for part of the floorboard, installed a new front axle, remade a wooden frame above the door, and is using a used door off another. The Crosley is well on the road to being seen
