East Jordan to vote on harbor project in Nov.

East Jordan City Council will put the harbor funding issue on the November ballot, despite the public support shown by citizens at last week's town meeting.

Mayor Pat Sweet said at a special joint council-harbor commission meeting last Thursday that timing, the primary reason for deciding to use a building authority rather than put the issue on the ballot, is no longer a factor.

Although the meeting had been called to form the building authority, new developments changed the agenda.

According to Sweet, because the city received no bids on dredging for the harbor, it is unlikely dredging can begin before spring.

The city also needs certified prints and detailed information on the dredge before it can be initiated, which could take another one and one-half or two months.

"It's going to be so close to the November election that we won't gain anyway," Sweet said.

City estimates are that a levy of two to two and one-half mills for five years, along with income generated from the harbor project, will be sufficient to pay off the bonds.

"We are hoping for five years at the most for the two mills," Sweet said. "I am hoping that after five years we will need less than one mill."

To save time council had planned on forming a building authority to issue bonds under PA 37 of 1941 rather than putting the issue on the ballot. A town meeting was called last week to gauge public opinion and the overall response was very favorable.

Sweet said that most of the comments she has received since the meeting have been supportive, but even those in favor of the millage funding for the project asked why it could not be put on the November ballot.

"I think putting the issue on the ballot does simplify it and I think it will make a lot of people more comfortable with it," she said.

A representative of Miller, Canfield and Stone, the bonding agent chosen to handle the bond sales, was expected to attend Tuesday's regular council meeting to help the city draft a proposal for the November ballot. A proposal must be submitted by September 10.

"I think the best thing to do is put it on the ballot," Councilwoman Ellen Cihak said.

Councilman Jim Black agreed saying that if the issue is defeated at the ballot box, it is important that council know the public's opinion.

But council is confident that the public is supportive of the harbor project, with several of the members saying they have had many positive comments after the town meeting.

Sweet said that the change in procedure may be advantageous for the city in another respect.

If the city had authorized the building authority, a referendum could be forced if a petition against the city's action was signed by at least 10 percent of East Jordan's registered voters.

"If there were to be a referendum vote, there would more than likely be a special election," Public Works Superintendent Mike Dionne said, adding that would cost some $2,500.

When questioned about the prospect of funding from the Michigan State Waterways Commission, Sweet said monies should be available.

"I think we are as close to the top as we can get," Sweet said of the city's position on the funding ladder. "As far as Waterways is concerned, we have funding."

But Sweet added that Waterways' proposals must first be approved in the state legislature and final funding decisions will not be made until after federal budget allocations. If funding is authorized for the East Jordan harbor project, money will not be received until October 1986.

She said that if the city does as much as possible with their own funds, they will gain a year over starting the project after the grant monies arrive.

News Briefs

Some folks are trying to think up a city-wide promotion that could be used to attract some visitors after the summer season. If you have any thoughts on a possible city-wide event, contact Jeff Bradford at Boyne Dry Cleaners.

Winter hours will be starting September 9 at the Boyne City Public Library. The hours that they will be open are Monday through Thursday, from 10 a.m. to 4 p.m., Monday, Tuesday and Thursday evenings from 7 p.m. to 9 p.m. and Saturdays, 10 a.m. to noon and 1 p.m. to 3 p.m.

A resident of East Jordan, Jane Russell, was one of five winners in the "Walk Michigan" contest that was sponsored in part by the county recreation department. She will be spending a free weekend on Mackinac Island. Her name was drawn from a group of names submitted to the recreation department in mid-August.

With the schools now in full session, drivers of automobiles and trucks are urged to be cautious as they roar up and down the streets of the community. The times to be especially cautious include 7:30 to 8:30 in the mornings and 3:00 to 4:00 in the afternoons.

If you are desiring a seat on the City Commission in Boyne City, you will have until Sept. 10 to get your petition into city hall. Then you can work until the November election to get yourself elected.

Thirty-eight cattle were destroyed in this barn fire last Wednesday in a barn owned by Dave Grutsch and located next to Bill Chase's home on Peninsula Road near East Jordan. No value has been set on the structure and the loss as the fire is still under investigation, according to East Jordan Fire Chief Dick Barnett. He has asked for assistance from the State Fire Marshall to help determine the cause of the blaze. East Jordan was assisted by Boyne City and Ellsworth fire departments in fighting the fire. Firemen were on the scene until shortly after 1 a.m. The barn, which was used primarily as a hay barn was totally destroyed. Grutsch was insured, according to Barnett.

Boyne replaces airport insurance

Finding themselves without an insurance carrier for the airport, and the inability of the local agent to find a replacement, Boyne City officials agreed to purchase liability insurance for the airport from the Michigan Municipal League.

The insurance would cost less than the present policy, Randy Frykberg told the commissioners at the noon meeting Tuesday. Other insurances for the city are still available and in place Frykberg continued, but said that the entire insurance program is a problem for many communities throughout the state.

When Frykberg was asked by Commissioner Bill Grimm on the possibility of repairing the Park Street Bridge, he was told by Frykberg that the paperwork for the project is still pending. The city has been looking at grant and other monies to do the work.

Again the commission was asked to make a commitment to close the city landfill by Evangeline Township resident Marsha Towne. She was told that a decision on the landfill would come Sept. 10, at the night meeting of the commission.

Part of the decision would be based on whatever information the city can find at a meeting to be held that day in Gaylord. That meeting will explain the Clean Michigan Fund, which is supposed to offer help in cleaning up landfill sites and other refuse problems throughout the state.

The city is hampered from actually closing the landfill because of the cost it would take and the inability of the state legislature to offer funds that would get the job done. The state will have to provide the funding under the Headlee Act, which limits the amount of money that can be raised and used by taxes.

When asked by Cebe Gillespie on whether or not the city would still be granting licenses to serve the city after the decision is made to close the landfill, members of the commission seemed to be in agreement that if the city gets out of the refuse business, they would have no control. "If we get out," Commissioner Cass Toton said, "Then we also cannot control those wanting to get into the business of hauling refuse."

Presently the city ordinance allows for four licenses to haul refuse. Those would be eliminated if the city revises or drops the ordinance.

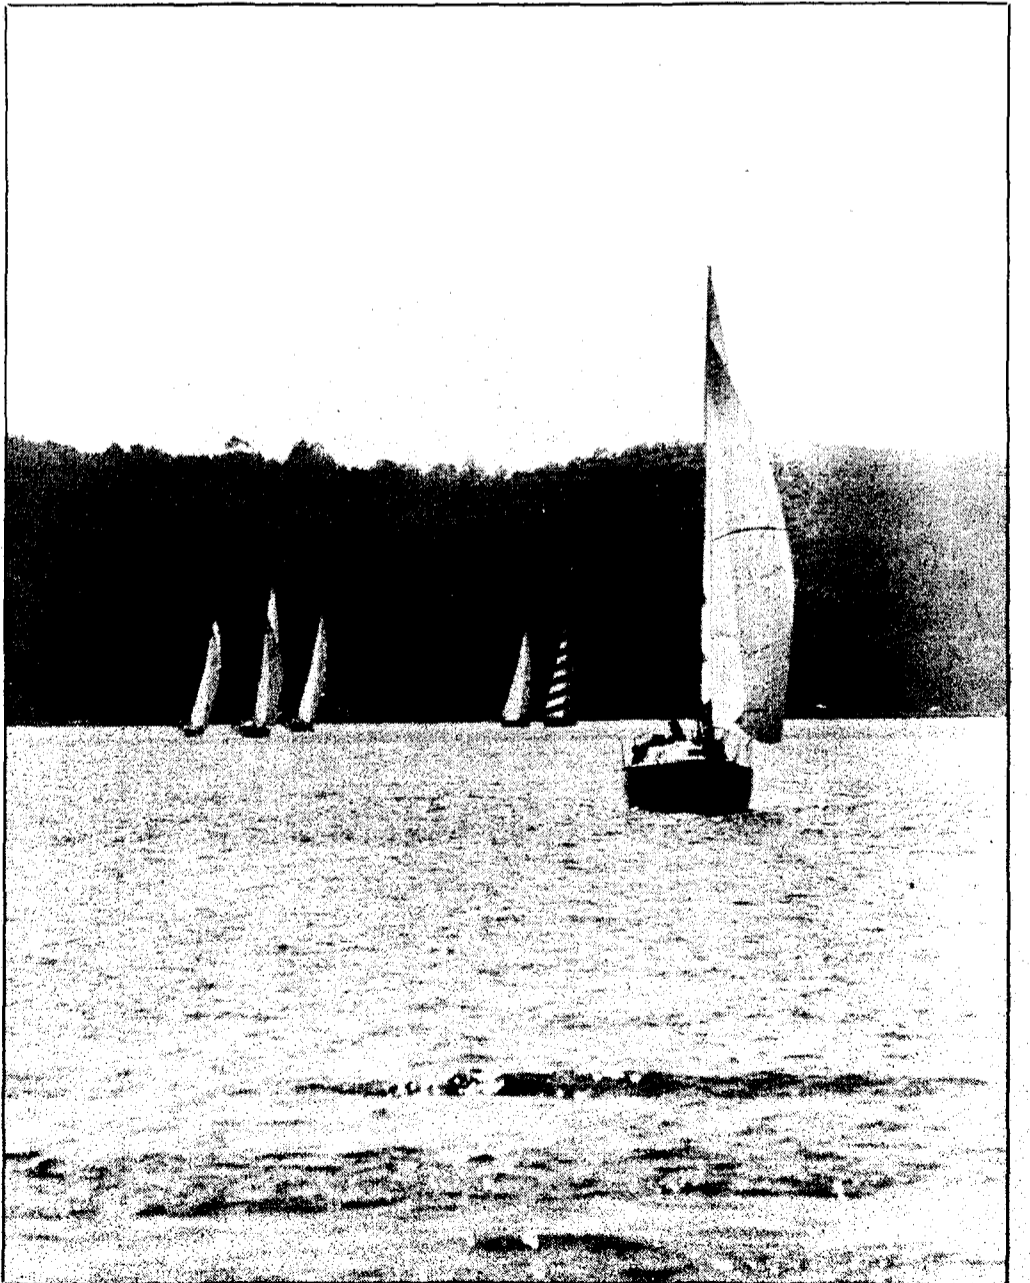

"Free enterprise could carry the community nicely," said Bob Simons, a Boyne City resident who is still considering opening a refuse business. He also said that if the city had four or even six licenses available, it would not make any difference.

Gillespie thinks that the city ought to continue to provide protection for the businesses that are presently engaged in the refuse hauling business. He wants the city to be able to approve carriers if the landfill operation of the city is stopped.

City Manager Frykberg told Gillespie and the audience that in the meeting next Tuesday, that matter would be discussed.

Sailors from the area were out in droves as the annual Red Fox Regatta made their overnight stop in Boyne City over the Labor Day weekend. The boats sailed an Olympic Triangle race before heading in a zig-zag course down the lake from Charlevoix. Sunday morning the boats then restarted to go back to Charlevoix. Over 50 boats participated this year.

NEW FRIENDS AND RICE

The last few months I have had the fun and privilege of adding several new friends to my list of beautiful people. First, Jack and Judy Hammontree who moved into our area last fall. They both like to cook and are interested in all kinds of food from the preserving and use of the natural foods to luscious desserts. Judy has given me recipes that I am anxious to share.

Then there is Tim Manlon whom I met in California this winter, a very special friend of my daughter and her husband. Tim cooked for us and we talked for hours about foods from all over the world. Tim is an engineer and has spent a number of years working in Saudi Arabia and spent his vacations in places like Cambodia, Hong Kong, and Malaysia. So many of his recipes have a far eastern flavor. He gave me some recipes which he hopes some day will be in a "Bachelors Cookbook" written by him. Many are served with rice.

Tim's Stir-Fried Flank Steak
1 lb. flank steak, sliced thinly across grain
3 whole spring onions
2 cloves garlic minced

1 teaspoon fresh ground pepper
1 to 2 teaspoons fresh ginger root, minced
2 teaspoons honey

The following ingredients are added in enough quantities to coat the meat only. There should not be more than 1/2 inch of juice in the bottom of marinade container.

Use equal amounts of:
White wine
Sesame oil
Soy Sauce

Combine all ingredients in a large bowl and allow to marinate for 1 to 2 hours.

Add 1 teaspoon peanut oil to wok or heavy fry pan and bring to high heat; stir-fry steak quickly in about 4 portions according to the size of the pan. After all the meat is fried return it to the pan along with any left over marinade, cover, simmer for 10 minutes. If need be, sauce can be thickened with corn starch paste. Serve with rice.

Now, here is Judy's
Broccoli Rice Casserole

1/2 stick oleo
1 small onion, chopped fine
1 pkg. frozen broccoli or flowerlets from 1 lg. head
1 can mushroom soup

Sometimes, folks have been known to say that of this country, we have nine months of snow and ice and three months of tough sledding.

I would like to change that as we do go from season to season.

Starting with January, I would like it known that we have excellent sledding weather until April, then we have morel season, which lasts until the fishing and sailing season, then we have the fly season and the color season, and finally the sleet season before we head back into the sledding season.

You see, we are more than just a four season resort area, contrary to what the Chambers of Commerce may say.

Sure, parts of the seasons can be broken down to just the four you would normally think of, but I like to break it down even closer.

Like the season we are just going into starting this week.

This is the fly season. This is the time when all of the flies that were hatched this summer start looking for places to drop their eggs to get through the winter.

And, if your place isn't attracting flies that want to get indoors to see what they can find, then you have a better screen set-up than I have. You probably also don't have kids running in and out of the house, too.

Or else you have pest strips put up in all the right places.

Unlike me.

I keep thinking that every time I go past a hardware store, I should buy one of those things like a pest strip, or even the old flypaper things, to hang up around the office and the spots outdoors like the picnic area, but I always forget.

I remember them just after making a trip downtown and am back home with the shoes kicked off and relaxing in front of the telly tube.

But my "war" with flies always seems to go on. I use a fly swatter in vengeance, relieving my frustrations on each and every one of the poor things.

I figure that if there is such a thing as reincarnation, I will probably be doomed to come back to earth as a fly...just in time to be swatted by some person with a fly swatter.

Luck is with us though, our fly season lasts just a few short weeks, unlike a place like Mackinac Island, where I have heard the flies are strong enough to lift a carriage full of people off the dock and deposit them in front of the Grand Hotel.

There are many season that bring memories, and one that most of the business people like is this week.

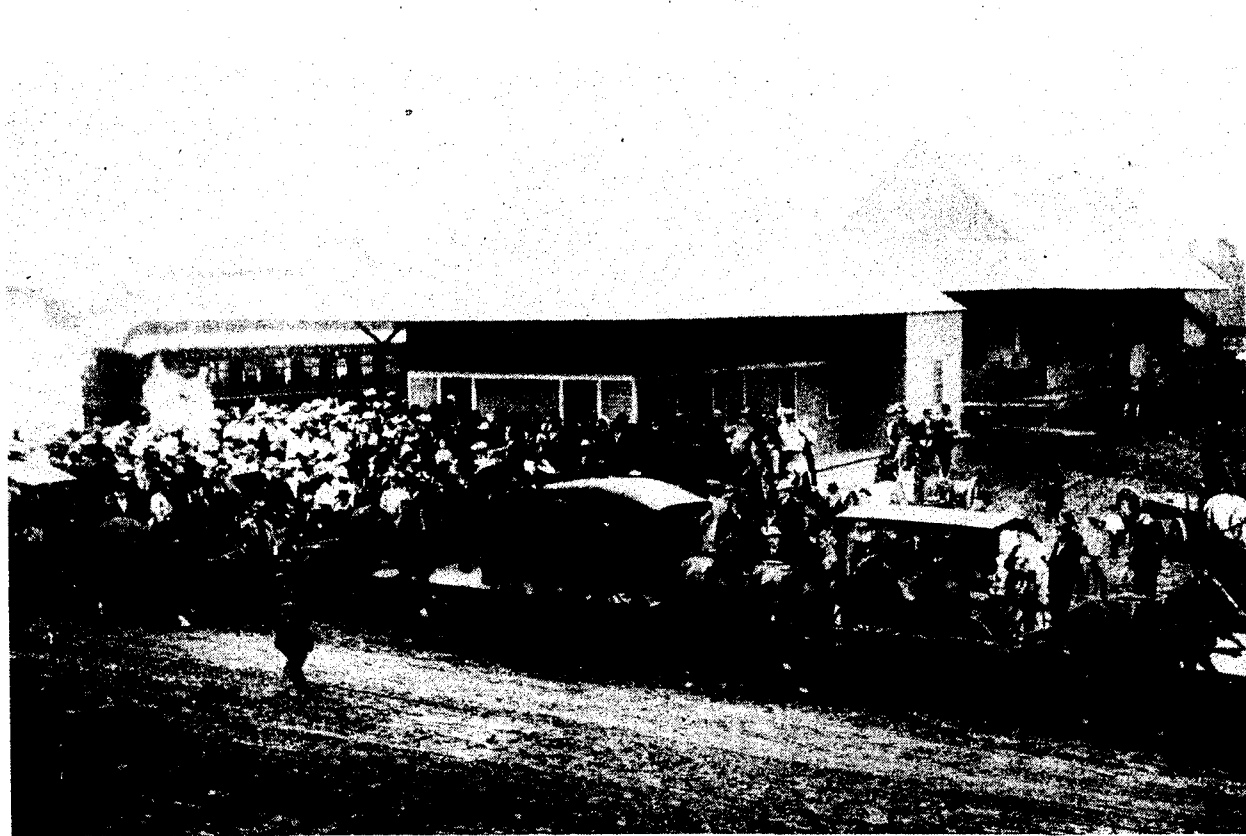

This is one of the times that they allow themselves time to relax after the busy summer season. A few even use this time to take a vacation, or clean up the store.

Of course a few lament that the season for making money is over. That is probably because they get so used to making money during the summer, at least enough to pay off a lot of the bills, that they want to get more to continue paying off the bills.

Now in our business, we look forward to some of these weeks, if only because we can concentrate on one of our several publications.

So relax, enjoy the fall just like the rest of us...the color season is just around the corner.

Back in 1919, excursions were the big thing. This excursion was unloading at the Boyne City depot of the Boyne City, Gaylord and Alpena railroad when the photographer caught the action. The passenger depot was located next to the present railroad building and the Depot Restaurant in Boyne City. The days of passengers coming into Boyne City are long gone, along with the railroad tracks, which were taken out just a few years ago. If you have any pictures of the old days of Boyne City, bring them into the office so we can make a copy for this feature.

Ware-withal

BY GAIL WARE

September has officially arrived, but the calendar on our kitchen wall is still turned to August. September will have to wait until I'm done with sorting, savoring and tucking away the memories of our August vacation.

Vacations are supposed to be for refreshing the body and the spirit. That's a heavy load for a short period of time. It can be lightened, though, if we get away from the idea that we ought to be HAVING FUN! every minute of our holiday. This hectic concept is hazardous to our health. It's also bad for relationships because it tends to make us very cranky.

Vacations can be taken any way we want them. The possibilities run the gamut from backpacking treks through the wilderness for those who seek challenges to ocean cruises on luxury liners for those who find dressing for dinner all the exertion they care to take on. Whatever the choice, "getting away from it all" is the common thread that runs through all our vacations.

On our vacation, I got away from several "its" that make my days lumpy. There's the alarm clock, for one. It's ridiculous as well as unrefreshing to be dictated to by a noisy little mechanism that won't shut up until someone punches its button.

I also got away from the task of preparing meals except for the peanut butter sandwiches that we put together wherever we happened to be at lunchtime. It's not that I mind cooking; it's the figuring out what to prepare that bugs me. My imagination curls up and goes into deep sleep when it comes to food. "Why can't we just take a pill for dinner?" is a question I've whined for years.

But the thing that gave me the greatest pleasure was the chance to get away from dependency on the car. I know it's odd, almost un-American, not to like automobiles, but there it is. So on vacation, we stayed in a comfortable motel in the heart of a small town. The motel stood a block away from the post office, handy for mailing picture postcards, and within easy walking distance of five good restaurants.

And all the stores were close enough to allow for shopping on foot to buy bread or beer or bloomers or whatever.

For just plain strolling, we could walk along the lake shoreline or up and down shady residential streets.

And the townspeople were gracious hosts. When you notice that you're smiling when you walk out of stores and restaurants, you know you've been treated well.

We spent five days in our vacationland doing as we pleased. We came home refreshed in body and in spirit just like we were supposed to. And I'm happy to report that we didn't HAVE FUN! every minute.

I guess I can turn the calendar over to September now.

Christmas! It's just around the corner.

The information was passed along to me this week by the Reader's Digest.

Carolyn Davis and the entire magazine staff wished me the best for the holiday season. My first Christmas greeting this year.

The whole gang patted me on the back, drooling over the startling discovery that I had been "a valued subscriber since January of 1983".

They appreciated my patronage so much they were sending an attractive 1986 desk calendar to my very own home.

The staff was so excited over my having been a steady customer for two years hand running they stumbled over each other in a rush to yell, "Bully for you!"

A priority customer, they said. Wow! I had not been so puffed up since I found a cute dangle dandy in a ten cent box of candy hawked during an intermission when the Henderson Stock Company played the Boyne Theatre back in '33.

Being a rural rooster from the brambles of Wilson Township, I was quick to swallow every line of the magazine's tasty tittle-tattle, thumbs under my arms and my chest pushed out. After all, the nation's largest publication had pushed the weeds aside and sought me out. Heavens, how I like being sought out.

I was so pleased I went into the yard, hung my hat on a weeping willow and executed an Irish jig, forgetting that I am English from my little nose to my big toe.

As my arms and legs began to tire, my wife stepped from the house, dumping a pail of cold water on my happy dither. "It's all a bunch of bunk!" she said.

I knew it! I knew it! I have never had gaiety pushed upon me without there being some bunk attached to it.

In order to receive that nice free desk calendar, it was necessary to pick out someone and pay for a Digest gift subscription. Please send $7.97 for the magazine and another $1.44 to pay the post person for glancing through the magazine in his/her spare time. Also, the cost would be jacked to a staggering $21.41 per year in the event that I had fled the milk-weeds of Wilson township and was hiding from my creditors in a foreign country.

And come to think of it we had been receiving the Reader's Digest for 25 uninterrupted years, not just two years as the staff had said when they threw that fit. One of their computers had blown a fuse, tickling the staff amiss.

Not only that, there is not a Carolyn Davis working for the Digest. That's a made up name; there ain't no such person on their payroll. At least that's what a Detroit newspaper found when they called to talk to her.

I learned all these things after my wife had so cleverly used a pail of water to emphasize the word "bunk".

Nor is Christmas just around the corner as I was led to believe at first whoop. No one can get to Christmas without going through Halloween and Thanksgiving.

Even The Reader's Digest, with a patched up computer system, can't pull that off.

A warrant has been issued for delivery of cocaine for Dennis Bret Pelligrini, according to officials of the Traverse City Narcotics Division of the Michigan State Police, who were in charge of the investigation.

Pelligrini, a white male, age 27, has been interviewed and more arrests are expected, the officials said. Federal Drug Enforcement Administration agents have identified Pelligrini's source of cocaine in Denver, Colorado.

On Aug. 26, officers from the Traverse City Narcotics Team, East Jordan Police Department and the Antrim County Sheriff's Department seized one-half pound of cocaine, $13,000 and an automatic rifle near East Jordan and in Bellaire.

Glen's Markets simplifies shopping for special diet needs

Has your doctor told someone in your family to watch their daily intake of sodium, cholesterol or calories? Do you find shopping for the right food products frustrating and time consuming? Are you concerned about choosing foods that are acceptable on that special diet while still keeping variety in your meals?

Glen's Market is helping to answer these questions by offering the Nutri Guide service as an aid to its customers. Dale Domsten, Vice President of Marketing & Sales for Glen's Markets, says, "There is a greater consumer awareness in today's society on nutrition and healthful foods than ever before. We feel it is our obligation to provide our customers with as much nutritional information concerning the foods they consume as is possible."

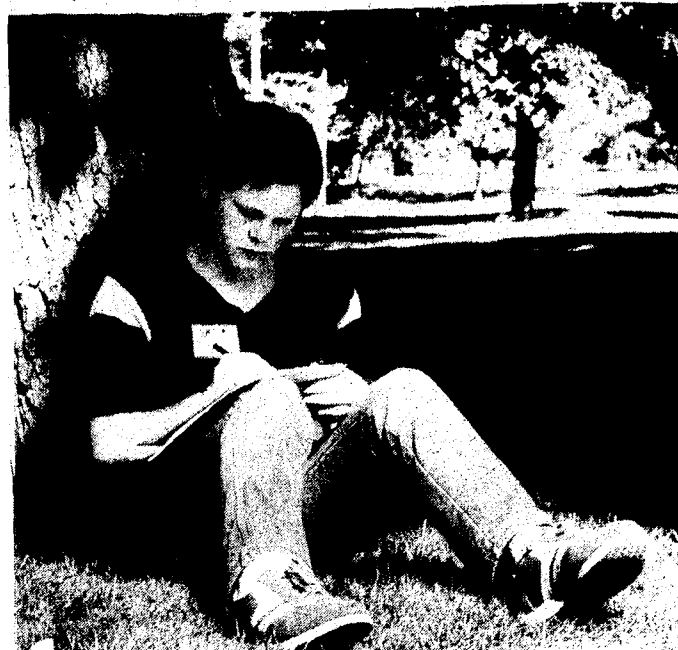

The Nutri Guide service will help you plan shopping lists and menus by pointing out foods which may be allowed on special diets. Brochures, listing all Glen's Market products that are acceptable to the Nutri Guide service, are available to our customers, free of charge, at the front of each store. Quantities of the brochures are also available to local physicians and dietitians upon request.

As an added convenience, color coded tags are located on shelf molding to help you find the products you need faster. Yellow tags identify foods that are for calorie controlled diets. Red tags mark foods in the fat modified category and green tags identify foods that are low in sodium. The tags are easy to read, and their bright color make the Nutri Guide coded products easy to locate.

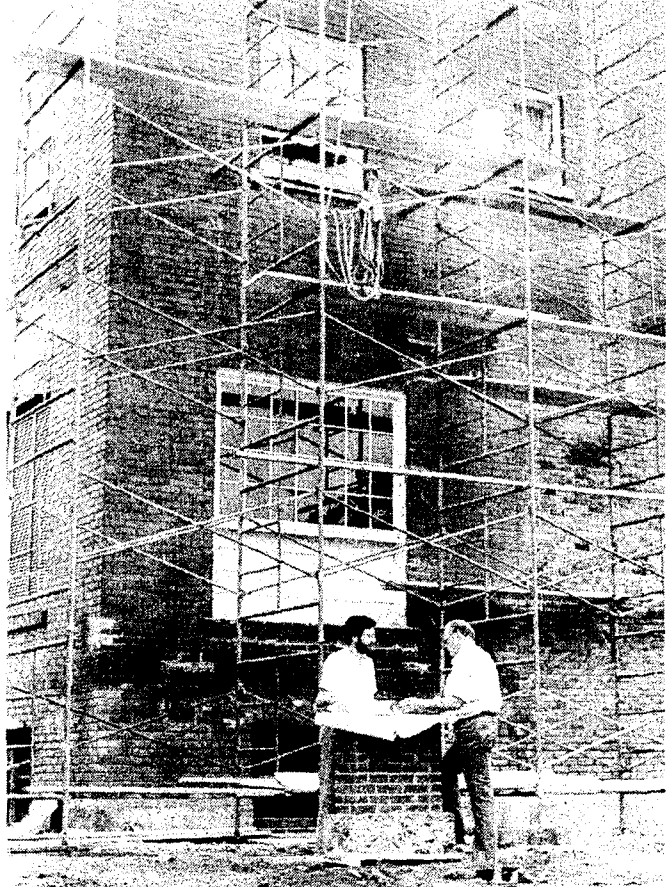

To maintain the quality of the Nutri Guide service and to provide their customers with the most current information available, Glen's Markets will update the program twice a year. HOUGHTON - James Baker of Boyne City is shown participating in the Poetics "exploration" during Michigan Technological University's Summer Youth Program. Baker was one of approximately 1200 students expected to visit the MTU campus this summer to participate in week-long courses designed to introduce students to academic and professional fields not usually studied at their home schools. Exploration topics range from bicycling, biology and geology to backpacking, journalism, microcomputing, and sketching. Baker will attend Boyne City Middle School in the fall.

Workers are reviewing plans to make sure that the former Dilworth Hotel will conform exactly to what it was like when it was constructed in Boyne City.

Here, the architect and the contractor are going over some plans that show how the project is supposed to be completed. The contractor is hoping to have the original design of the porch constructed before the middle of October.

The matching grant would provide half of the estimated $1,272,000 needed to build the 720 feet long main viewing/fishing pier, a boat landing, docks, a wave attenuator and service facilities.

Councilman Carl Beck suggested that the city's model of the harbor be put on display before the election, and Sweet noted that she and Dionne will be available to address groups on the harbor project issue.

"I want to emphasize that we do not want to let our momentum down," Sweet said.

Germans facing pollution problem

Germans may be paying a higher price than they realize for the freedom to hit the gas pedal, says International Wildlife magazine. Exhaust fumes from speeding cars, traveling faster than 100 miles per hour on "autobahns," are now thought to be a leading culprit of acid rain—killing spruce trees throughout the fabled Black Forest in southern Germany. No government speed limits are yet in sight, and auto emission standards, in effect in the U.S., are still years away.

MESC considers plan to mail jobless checks as economy move

Jobless workers in many areas of the state will not have to visit unemployment insurance offices as frequently to collect their benefits this fall if staff-recommended economy measures presented to the Michigan Security Commission in Detroit today are adopted.

The proposal now being considered by the five-member Commission calls for the conversion of Michigan's unemployment insurance benefit program to a claims-by-mail system in the upper half of the Lower Peninsula and the entire Upper Peninsula, the closing of 23 Michigan Employment Security Commission (MESC) offices and the elimination of 181 staff positions according to MESC Director Richard Simmons Jr. Job Service offices would remain in six of these communities to maintain the MESC's employment services throughout the state.

Simmons said, "The plan was developed as a means of coping with the cumulative effects of federal budget reductions which have been eroding the agency's administrative budget for the past five years."

Although a state agency, the MESC receives all of its administrative funding from the federal government through the U.S. Department of Labor. A year ago, federal budget cuts forced MESC to close six full-service branch offices and a day labor office in the southern portion of the state and 19 part-time claims locations in sparsely populated areas and to eliminate 232 staff positions. Since 1980, budget cuts have forced MESC to reduce its staff by 56 percent from 6,226 employees to 2,734 employees and its number of office locations by 35 percent from 112 locations down to 72.

If the proposed cut-backs are implemented, MESC will be left with 55 offices, including eight offices offering employment service assistance only and two offices providing just unemployment insurance benefits. The remaining 45 offices will offer both employment service and unemployment insurance programs.

The MESC Commissioners, who determine policy for the state agency, are expected to decide on the proposal at their August 8 meeting. If adopted, the agency will begin implementing the plan, including the office closings and layoffs, by October 1, 1985, the start of MESC's 1986 fiscal year.

The proposal recommends the closing of MESC offices in Caro, Cheboygan, Clare, Corunna, Detroit (8600 Woodward), Flint (4160 Van Slyke Road location only), Gaylord, Hillsdale, Iron River, Lulington, Munising, Niles, Ontonagon, St. Ignace, Sandusky, Shelby and Three Rivers.

Offices in Battle Creek, Cadillac, Menominee, Midland, South Haven and Wyoming would move to smaller quarters providing only employment services. The payment of unemployment insurance at these offices would be eliminated. Simmons explained that the 23 offices proposed for closing were selected in part because the cost of leasing these facilities could no longer be justified by the number of claimants they served. In most cases, these particular offices are operating well below their planned capacities.

"By closing these offices, the MESC will save approximately $735,000 in overhead expenditures such as rent, utilities, and other nonpersonal costs," Simmons added.

"The proposed cut of 181 UI positions will keep MESC in line with its federally allocated staff size for fiscal year 1986," Simmons said. The staff cut will affect employees at remaining MESC branch offices and the agency's administrative headquarters in Detroit.

Simmons said, "Michigan is not the only state experiencing budgetary problems. Forty-one states are projecting nonpersonal services (NPS) shortages this year along and the problem is not expected to end with the new fiscal year."

"This situation exists across the nation because the U.S. Department of Labor (USDOL), which funds us, has repeatedly failed in recent years to sufficiently finance overhead of NPS costs such as rent, utilities and data processing to the extent necessary," Simmons said.

Compounding our problem in Michigan is the greater than expected drop in the number of jobless workers receiving unemployment benefits, he added.

MESC's UI administrative budget is directly related to the agency's workload. When claims are down, so is funding for staff and correspondingly for fixed and other overhead costs.

Simmons said that unemployment claims in Michigan are now at a 12-year low, having dropped to 95,000 for the week of June 29.

"This low claimsload is due to the improving economy, tighter eligibility requirements for UI, more permanent separations from the work force for some workers and fewer federal UI benefit programs," he explained.

"Another factor influencing our federal funding for FY 1986 is lower federal estimates for the number of claims expected during the year."

The agency expects claims-by-mail to be easier on many people who now find themselves driving as many as 25 miles or more every two weeks to collect their benefit checks, according to Simmons.

Claims-by-mail will require that jobless workers visit a MESC office to initially file their claim for unemployment benefits and for periodic eligibility reviews. Unemployed claimants will certify by mail on a biweekly basis that they are able to work and that they are available for and seeking work, as required by law. MESC will then mail benefit checks to eligible claimants.

The agency will also offer claims-by-mail to UI claimants affected by the proposed office closings in the lower half of the Lower Peninsula if they live more than 25 miles from their nearest remaining MESC office.

Boyne City Ramblers start season Fri., Sept. 6 with Harbor

After getting off to a miserable start last year, the Boyne City Ramblers' varsity football team has an even tougher assignment for this year. Only two seniors are listed on the roster for 1985. Last year's single victory was a timely win as it came on Homecoming night, and it is evident that the Ramblers may repeat with a similar record. The Ramblers have been dealt a tough hand to play already this year.

With 19 team members listed on the roster and injuries already plaguing the team, the Ramblers are going to have to get extra tough to make a good showing.

This year's veteran gridders in varsity uniforms will be Dan McGeorge and Darren Everest. McGeorge plays in the backfield at the halfback or quarterback positions and has experience running the ball. McGeorge played in the backfield last year as a junior.

Everest is a returning lineman standing an even six foot and weighing in at 180 lbs. Everest will play the tackle position wearing jersey number 61.

Of the juniors this year, Pat Weeks was chosen as the starting quarterback, but at last week's scrimmage in Mancelona Weeks suffered a shoulder injury and will not be able to play for at least four to five games. Even then Weeks could still be in the process of recuperating after being immobilized for so long.

Last year Weeks was brought up from the JV team late in the season and was utilized in the later stages of the games. His performances were highly scrutinized by all the coaches and spectators and it became clear that Weeks could give the Ramblers a throwing game as he hit his targets fairly consistently. He also showed the ability to run the ball well when called upon.

Other juniors on this year's team will be Paul McGeorge, Dan Stolt, Brandon Billings, Jim Feagan, Scott Beebe, Matt Speltz, Keoki Kuheana, Steve Sutton, Greg Webb, Norm Hadix, and Tom Lasater. Of all the Ramblers this year, Hadix is the largest sized player at 205 lbs. Hadix plays at the tackle position and is a very aggressive defenseman.

Hadix tallied many tackles last year on the JV team and was responsible for some big sacks.

Sutton is another tackle for the Ramblers and has been listed at 196 lbs. this year. Sutton always plays on a high intensity level and moves well for a big man.

At the guard positions will be Lasater, Webb, Kuheana, Speltz, and Stolt. Kuheana is the largest guard on this year's team at 173 lbs. and the others range from 165 lbs. to 147 lbs. Although not exceptionally large they all have good speed and could be pulling guards to the option or sweeps.

The Ramblers have one player that will be an exclusive end in Scott Beebe. Last year Weeks connected with Beebe many times in the early JV season for huge gains and numerous touchdowns. All in all, Beebe has the ability to be a fine receiver on offense and is a tough defender.

Other players at the end positions could be Tom Lasater and Paul McGeorge. McGeorge could also play at the center position.

Playing in the backfield will be juniors Brandon Billings and Jim Feagan. Feagan had some exciting runs last year on the JVs and scored TDs when the passing attack failed. Billings is a large rambling style of running back and has a lot of heart. He has the size and speed to break many would-be tackles.

Five sophomores have shown up to contribute their talents to the team this year. Jeff Fineout has good size for a sophomore and will be in the backfield.

Glen LaCroix, although slightly smaller, could be an advantage for the Ramblers with his speed.

LaCroix runs a blistering 440 and is very competitive.

Another talented youngster on the team this year is Bill Wicker. Everything he does, he does well. Wicker weighed in this year at 177 lbs.

Two more sophomores are on the roster in the likes of Shawn Bauman and George Lasater. Bauman will be a center and Lasater specializes in defense.

On last year's JV team Lasater led his teammates in tackles and tallied close to one hundred by season's end.

East Jordan prepares for tough season

BY STEVE GEE

After finishing a dismal third in the Ski Valley Conference with a 4-3 record (5-4 overall) last season, the East Jordan Red Devils are looking forward to improving that mark.

Head Coach Ted Jeffery is looking forward to a good season, with the key to that keeping his players healthy. The Devils had a good turnout this year with 30 members making the Varsity squad, although a couple have already been lost due to injuries.

East Jordan opens the '85 season at home on Friday, September 6 in a non-conference bout with Elk Rapids. The Devil's opened last year's season with a victory over Elk Rapids. "Both non-conference games will be a challenge this year. Elk Rapids is a senior team and Charlevoix is always a lot to handle," Jeffery said. As far as conference play is concerned, Jeffery feels that Gaylord St. Mary's and Inland Lakes will be the teams to beat.

Last year's team was tougher on defense than on offense and Jeffery hopes to even the two out this year. "The team knows that we have to score more touchdowns in order to win games."

The team is full of depth, also. Jeffery commented that there is a lot of competition for starting positions. The defense last year was highlighted by the boisterous play of three-time All Conference winner Jim Roberts. Senior Dale Schroeder has the job of filling those shoes this year and fellow team mates commented that he is really psyched up for the task.

The Red Devils have twelve returning lettermen, eleven of which are seniors. Senior veterans include Tom Galmore, halfback; Jeff Gee, Center; Mike Goebel, end; Carl Knop, guard; Bill Kraemer, tackle; Bill Lytle, quarterback; Phil Nemecek, tackle;

Dave Russell, fullback; Dale Schroeder, guard; Aaron Spence, halfback and Dan Swanson, guard, while junior Ted Snowden, halfback, lettered as a freshman two years ago.

New players on the Red Devil squad are senior Jim Testa, end, and juniors Stan Antoine, tackle; Darcy Bennett, tackle; Darren Bishop, tackle; Terry Burt, guard; Gerald Clark, end; Ron Cook, end; Steve Dionne, halfback; Darren Graham, fullback; Gene Hayden, tackle; Brian Howard, center; Bob Joyce, tackle; Greg Kitson, quarterback; Kim McKinnon, tackle; Shannon Olstrom, end; Jim Raymond, end; Don Reich, end, and Steve Smith, guard.

Although a conference title is what every team shoots for, Jeffery said "We're going to play one game at a time, looking for a good year. But we'll have fun...win or lose."

Assisting Jeffery again this season is Al Peterson, and the Devil managers are Ryan Clark and Scott Peck.

New 4-H club organized

A new 4-H club is now being formed in the Boyne City, East Jordan area. The club's emphasis will be on rabbits, small game animals, and poultry, including chickens, ducks, geese, and turkeys. Any youth through the age of 19 is eligible to become a 4-H member; however only those youth between 9 - 19 are eligible for county, state and national awards. Julie Kenney of Boyne City will be project leader for the club.

4-H youth programs provide hands-on learning and social experiences to help young people become self-directing, productive, and contributing members of society. Members will also learn specific skills and participate in activities in the small animals area. Examples of activities the new group will participate in include Fall Achievement Day, Emmet County Fair, Rabbit and Poultry Expo at MSU in East Lansing, and many others.
