News Briefs

Boyer City will be competing in the Elk Rapids Academic Festival scheduled for this coming Saturday at the Elk Rapids High School. The festival is being held for the fourth year.

The festival revolves around Brian Strain, the interscholastic quiz down expert, with twelve others schools also attending.

The 45 minute quiz-downs are patterned after the old General Electric College Bowl television program. Five separate quiz-downs will take place simultaneously using two different school sites.

The Boyer team will be one of the twelve teams participating from the Greater Grand Traverse area and the only team from Charlevoix County.

The State of Michigan will no longer be registering three wheeled all-terrain vehicles for use on Michigan roads. The reasons given include the amount of accidents the vehicles have had when they were driven on roads.

Michigan taxpayers with confidential questions about the upcoming May 12 - June 30 Tax Amnesty program can call a toll free information hotline just installed by the Department of the Treasury. The number is 1-800-I.O.taxes, or 1-800-468-2937. The line will be open from 8 a.m. to 8 p.m. to answer questions about the program.

Also running a hotline will be the Michigan Public Service Commission's consumer services division. Their hot-line will be running over-time in observance of National Consumers Week. They will answer utility related questions at 1-800-292-9555. The Saturday, April 26, hours are from 10 a.m. to 1 p.m. Their normal hot-line hours during the week are from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m.

Fish, Mansfield named to BC Board

Boyer City--Doctors Richard Fish and Richard Mansfield were named as interim members of the Boyer City School Board at the monthly meeting held last Monday night.

They were named to replace Larry Monshor and John Mathers, two school board members who were recalled last month.

Because of the recall, the board also had to elect new officers as Monshor and Mathers both held offices on the board. Vice president of the school board will be Bill Christensen, while the treasurer slot was taken by Don Glowinski.

The board picked the names from six that were submitted to them by Superintendent Rich Kelly.

The board then approved bids from contractors for the ongoing energy conservation work the system has been installing over the past year.

Approved were bids for a wall system retrofit for both the high school and the middle school which will change the look of the schools as well as increase in the insulation of the exterior walls. The cost of the new walls will be $79,450 with an additional $2,781 for the bonding that is required.

The walls consist of an application of Celotex, styrofoam and plaster, all bonded together to make up an energy efficient wall. Burdco Construction of Traverse City was the low bidder for the work.

They were also the firm that was given the job of painting at an additional $3,360.

An elevator that is required to get handicapped students from the first floor to the second at the middle school will be installed by the Detroit Elevator Company.

They were the sole bidder as the specifications were written for a very small elevator and they are one of the few companies making one that size. Their bid to install the elevator was $14,700 plus a $88.20 bond. The elevator will be installed in a new shaft that will be constructed at the side of the building in the area of the music room.

It was estimated the shaft would cost about $8,500 for the masonry work, but no bids were received for the job. The school system will try to find a local contractor to do the work.

Aluminum windows from Wojan Aluminum will be installed this summer. The firm was given the bid based on the recommendation of the architect.

The decision to go with the Wojan window was made after a presentation of another window company and the Wojan company. The bid for the replacement windows came to $13,950.

In other action, the board approved the request of the Boyer City Swim School to use a school bus this summer for the swim program as a part of the community education program.

They also granted tenure to three teachers; Nancy Huff, Wendy Stadt and Debbie Neidhamer.

The board then approved a resolution saying that two administrators, Shelly Martin and Sherry Sheldon would not have their contracts renewed. This is a procedure that has been done for several years due to the school system not knowing if monies will be available from the granting agencies to pay the two. They are expected to be rehired in June when the budgets are finalized.

The school system will be going for a renewal of 21.3 mills a year early in the annual June election. The millage will cover the school years of 1987-88.

Also, the board approved a new text and class as part of the Home Economics curriculum in the high school.

They also agreed to transfer $10,000 from the general fund to the athletic fund to cover the costs of the startup of the new baseball sports and some additional track equipment.

Water main work along Division Street is progressing nicely as crews from the C.H. Smith and Company work towards the new Air/Industrial Park. The watermain will serve the park and will provide looped service for other neighborhoods in the area of the airport.

City borrows money for TIFA project, hears landfill concerns

Boyer City--Boyer City's landfill in Evangeline Township took a little of the spotlight off the city borrowing $424,300 to pay for the water and sewer main work now under construction to serve the new industrial park when almost the entire Township board showed up at the noon meeting Tuesday to get an update on what could be done to see the former landfill closure brought to a conclusion.

The landfill problem has been ongoing since the city closed the landfill to further dumping last year. City officials again told the new township officials that when monies were available, then the city would start to cap the dump with the proper materials.

The city did say they were going to plant 1,000 trees and other shrubbery this spring to start a reforestation project on the landfill site. C.H. Smith, the former landfill operator for the city told those in attendance at the meeting his firm was going to move the white goods, refrigerators, stoves, and other large appliances as soon as the road restrictions are off. He projected about thirty days. He also said his firm was going to do some work out at the site to help clean it up.

When township officials asked what they could do to help finish the closing of the landfill, they were told it would help if they also expressed their concerns with state governing officials.

City attorney William McTaggart, who lives in the township also told the township officials the best advice he could give would be to keep pressure on the legislature and the government to provide the monies for the closure.

Steve Smith, also from the firm of C.H. Smith and Company, told the audience "The landfill is our problem and our garbage. We shouldn't look to the state for funding, we should do it ourselves." Smith suggested that those who have used the landfill should help to close it. He implied that the surrounding townships as well as the DNR should be contributing to the cost of closing it.

The loan to pay for the city improvements being made to the water and sewer for the industrial park will be at a 7.25 interest rate according to papers signed with Northwestern State Bank which was the only bidder to provide money for the improvements. The loan will be paid back to the bank through the use of the Tax Increment Financing Act (TIFA) which will allow the monies raised in taxes because the new construction are slated to repay the loan.

City officials anticipate the pay-back will be in four years instead of the five originally proposed. Their reasoning is because of the other businesses that will be under construction yet this year in the park.

The city also formally adopted a new millage rate for taxing the city at 18.25 mills for fiscal year 1987. The new millage is a reduction of city taxes of .40 mills under the present fiscal year.

The millage was broken down to 15.75 mills for city operations, .50 for debt retirement, and 2 mills for the capital improvement program.

The commissioners then approved a request from the Boyer City Lions Club to use the Veterans Memorial Park for the annual Mushroom Festival. City Manager Randy Frykberg told the commissioners the festival is one of the positive things for the city and he was glad to see the commission approve the request. Frykberg also told the commissioners the club is planning on having a carnival this year to replace the one that did not want to come back.

The city owned property in the area of the New Peninsula Beach will be the subject of a public forum to be held next Monday night after the city planning board meeting.

The commissioners approved the meeting to find out what the public desires to do about the two parcels of land in the beach area they had asked offers on recently.

The highest offer came from Northern Associates, the developers of the Harborage Marina next door. Their offer was for $65,500 for both parcels of land.

The forum will give the public an opportunity to tell the city what should be done with the land. At a recent commission meeting, the city was taken to task for the selling of the land and they then backed off the sale.

The reason the city was hoping to sell the land was to help provide some of the city's share of the grant that will be providing the money to build the new beach this year.

The meeting is set for 7 p.m. in the commission chambers of the city hall next Monday after the planning board meets.

Representation will come from members of the Parks and Recreation Board, the Economic Development Commission, the Planning Board and the City Commission. Frykberg said they are expecting to hear from the public.

Doctors Richard Fish and Richard Mansfield sign on as the newest members of the Boyer City School Board. The two were chosen from a field of six to replace recalled members John Mathers and Larry Monshor. The new board members were seated moments after the signatures were gathered to join in the school board's business of the evening.

Sportsmans Park lease denial explained by mayor

East Jordan--After the Jordan River Sportsmans Club was not issued a renewal of their 25 year lease of the East Jordan Sportsmans Park, a representative was sent to attend a city council meeting and inquire as to why. Representing the club was Tom Breakey who contended that the Sportsmans Club lease on the property called for a continuation of successive 25 year leases.

Mayor Pat Sweet offered an explanation for non-renewal, claiming that the club had not kept up their part of the lease. The lease stated that if a three year abandonment of the park were to take place, the lease would be null and void, and the city would take over possession of the property. Sweet also contended that the city would not qualify for grants to improve the park if they did not have total possession of the property. The city wants to use fill dredged from the Harbor-Marina project to raise the horseshoe drive in the park above water level so that it can be utilized by the public. The Sportsmans Club granted the center of the horseshoe drive to the city with the stipulation that the city keep up the drive by grading the chuckholes out of it on a regular basis.

It is common knowledge that the park has become run down in recent years and the city felt that the Sportsmans Club had not complied with the lease. Breakey was armed with the Sportsmans Club's original lease and read from the passages that "as long as the property is maintained as a wildlife refuge the 25 year lease will continue." Breakey contended that the Sportsmans Club was required to perform at least one act of wildlife refuge maintenance every three years to keep up the non-abandonment of the property. Superintendent Dionne offered information to the council that the club had done some wildlife maintenance on the property when they installed birdhouses for the wildlife that populate the area, and that the city had assisted in the venture by providing a boat and a city employee to help out. Breakey went on to describe other maintenance that had taken place where the public cannot go, meaning back in the marsh.

The issue was not totally resolved at the time, and more investigation into the matter would be called for. City attorney Scott Beatty will review the legality of the continuation of a 25 year lease and Mayor Sweet will meet with the Sportsmans Club at their next meeting to discuss the matter with club members.

CAKES

Good cakes have been with us for a long, long time. From the honey cakes we read of in the Old Testament to featherlike Sally Lunn teacake and pound cakes served in early Williamsburg. Nearly all of the wonderful cake mixes on the market are prepared mixes of the cakes previously made by good cooks across the country. Our Grandmothers made marble, devils food, angel, Lady Baltimore, and pound cakes as well as jelly rolls, fruit cakes and cheesecakes. Cooks were judged by their ability to make feather light cakes.

It was a real project to make a perfect cake before mixes and heat controlled ovens were on the scene.

"With weights and measures just and true,
Oven of even heat,
Well buttered tins and quiet nerves,
Success will be complete."

From an old cookbook. How true it was! I remember Mother making a hickory nut cake. We had a hickory tree past the orchard. We had to gather the nuts, let them dry then remove the outer layer. Hickory nuts are too hard to crack with a nut cracker. We had to use the hammer and a large stone or anvil; then be careful not to hit your thumb instead of the nut. After the nuts were cracked we still had to pick out those tasty meats with a nut-pick. After moving to the farm near Silverwood we no longer had a hickory tree, though we went through the same process with butternuts as we discovered a butternut tree on the back forty. Both hickory and butternuts are very rich in flavor; so sweet and buttery.

I recently discovered a recipe for hickory nut cake in "A Cookbook for the Thrifty Wife" put out by the Plus Ultra Society-Central Church of Christ, Fort Wayne Indiana. This inspired me to make a cake from "scratch", though I had to substitute walnuts for the hickory nuts. The cake was rich in flavor and light in texture.

HICKORY NUT CAKE

- 1 cup sugar
- 2 cups flour
- 1/2 cup butter (I used margarine)
- 1/2 cup milk
- 2 eggs
- 3 teaspoons baking powder
- 1 teaspoon vanilla
- 1 cup hickory nut meats

Prepare pan (I discovered that this needs 2 - 8 in. or 9 in. layer pans or one 9 in. x 13 in. loaf pan.)

Sift flour once, measure, add baking powder and sift again.

Cream shortening until light and fluffy. Add sugar gradually and cream thoroughly. Add the eggs one at a time and beat until smooth. Add sifted flour mixture alternately with the 1/2 cup milk, beat after each addition until smooth, add vanilla.

Bake in moderate oven (I used 375° for a little over 1/2 hour.)

This frosting really complimented the cake

CREAM CHEESE FROSTING

This recipe makes a generous amount for any 2 layer or large loaf cake.

- 2 - 3 oz. packages cream cheese softened
  - 2 tablespoons half and half, or milk
  - 1 teaspoon vanilla
  - 1/8 teaspoon salt
  - 1 lb. package confectioners sugar
- Beat in small bowl of mixer the milk and cheese then the salt, sugar and vanilla.

Here is another cream cheese frosting which my friend, Nellie, makes—very tasty!

ORANGE BLOSSOM FROSTING

- 1 - 3 oz. package cream cheese
  - 1 tablespoon orange juice
  - 1/2 tablespoon shredded orange peel
  - 2 1/2 cups sifted confectioners sugar
- Blend.

Now, I am all for the convenience foods like pie fillings and cake mixes that make foolproof baking so very easy and I will make

Deni Hooper's CHERRY DUMP CAKE for our family reunion.

- It takes:
- 1 - 21 oz. can red tart cherry pie filling
  - 1 - 21 oz. can crushed pineapple and juice
  - 1 - 19 oz. yellow cake mix
  - 2 sticks margarine
  - 1 cup fine coconut
  - 1 cup chopped nut meats

Spread cherry pie filling in a 9 x 13 pan. Cover with pineapple and juice. Sprinkle dry cake mix over fruit. Cut margarine over cake and sprinkle on nuts and coconut. Bake 1 hour at 325°. Deni serves this warm with ice cream.

Jottings

BY JIM SILBAR

She told someone once the only things she missed out on was learning to ride a bicycle and taking a trip to England.

Not that she did not have the opportunity to do both, but they never were learned or done.

She was too busy trying to raise a couple of youngsters, both very rambunctious, working at several jobs throughout her career to provide some of the best things she could to the family lifestyle.

Sure, she could have learned to ride a bike. After all, she helped those two kids to learn. "Watch me, mama, watch!" was the command from each of them as they learned to go up and down the sidewalks in front of the house.

And she could have taken her trip to England also. She did get so far as getting a passport and all of the information on the trip, but she never made it. She thought she would be a burden to the tour group as she did not feel up to a lot of walking, looking at all of the things she had studied for many years.

So she never took the opportunity.

Then she did end up with failing health, had a heart attack, and then varying forms of congestive heart failure. It finally did her in.

But, she was one of the best things to happen to my life.

Yes, we had many arguments over the years. We also had many times of hugs and friendship.

Contrary to the accepted belief you should never work for the family, I went into the business.

I knew I could never have accomplished all in life as my father, I would never have walked in his shoes while he was still alive. The community would not have allowed it.

But my mother always thought better. She kept telling my father to let me try, let me take the bull by the horns, let me succeed or fail based on what I did and not what he was telling me to do.

She had the faith that I would do all right in the world.

To this day, I don't know if I am doing all right in the world. Life is just a struggle from one crisis to another. But, I am living through it, working out the problems as they arise and hoping I made the right decision each time.

She taught me that.

She also taught me many other things.

She loved to read, and she urged that on me. She loved to do the research on a subject she would become knowledgeable about. I almost have learned how to do that, too.

She also never stopped learning. Said it kept her going and her mind functioning.

And she sure did like her coffee hour.

Every morning, after I started her doing it many years ago, she would go out to the coffee shop to have a cup with the "boys", those people who she could converse with, laugh with, and share another of her loves, NFL football.

In the last few years after finally telling me she didn't like to drive outside of town, going to the coffee shop was the only place she would drive to every day. The grocery store was right next door, so she really had no reason to go any place else.

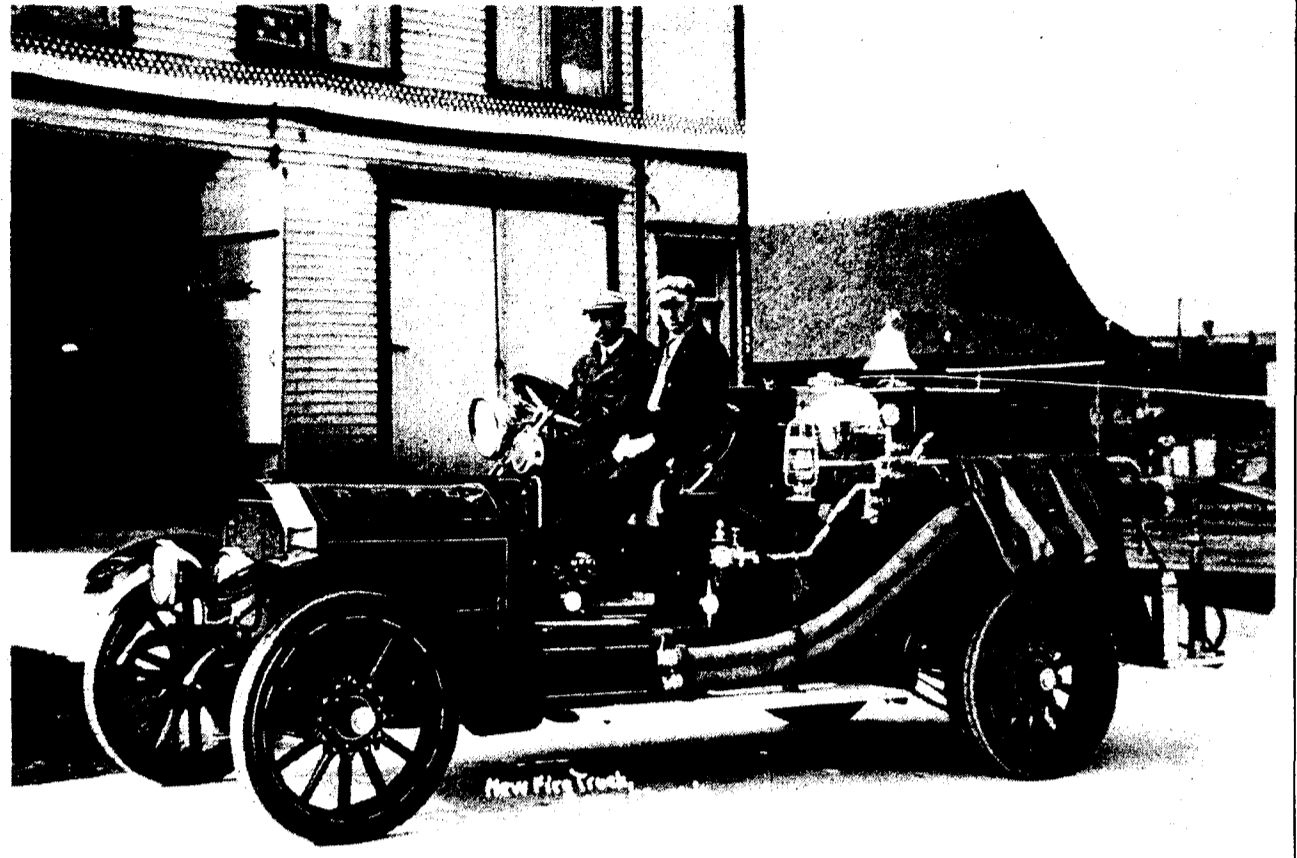

If she had to go to the hospital inside of the large city, she would find someone to drive her. In some cases, it was me if I were in town for the weekend.

Yes, there were many times when I failed her. I failed to see through her facade of being in good health last Christmas when the entire family got together for a special dinner.

I might have been able to see that she was needing someone to help her full time, although she would never admit it. I might have been able to make sure she took all of the pills, even if she got a cold and didn't want them. I might have done a lot of things, but...I'll never get the chance.

Not after April 3, 1986.

Vacation means that splendid period of time that feels like recess felt back in grade school, only longer. And to many people, it also means that phrase with such a grand sound - "getting away from it all". But vacations do have drawbacks. They follow the natural order of things that calls for pain before the pleasure, which in this case means packing.

Just how much or how little one packs for a vacation depends in part on the length of the stay. More importantly, though, it depends on the point of view. Some travelwise vacationers believe that less is best. I do admire and respect these people. But I have this gut feeling that more is better.

We're about to go on a vacation to Florida. It's always very warm there in April so shorts and short-sleeved tops are called for. And, I figure, lots of them because clothes wilt fast in the heat. But we're going in order to get a good view of Halley's Comet. This means we'll be out late at night which will be cooler, as well as bugger. So nights call for long-sleeved shirts and slacks. And we'll need lots of them, too, because they'll get so messy with bug repellent that no one will want to wear the same thing twice.

Having packed all these clothes, the suitcases are full and the sweaters aren't even in yet, much less the underwear for ten days. Actually, the underwear won't take up much room because we don't have enough of it for ten days, which brings up the matter of locating a laundromat. Should we locate one close by, we won't need all the shirts and shorts and slacks.

They can be recycled. On the strength of the laundromat idea, I suppose I could remove some of the clothes. But I hesitate to do that because there might not be a laundromat in the Kissimmee neighborhood.

Since this will be a trip by car, we'll have some extra space which I intend for better things than clothes. My husband, Bob, will use the cartop carrier as the base for transporting the telescope he built. With most of that on the roof of the car and the suitcases in the trunk, the back seat will be fairly free. And I do have heavy plans for that space. The car's a subcompact. Some extra weight will make it ride better.

So I'll take my typewriter. It'll help both the car and my mind run smoother. Whether it's the hum of the motor or the neat, clear letters coming up on the page, I find that my mind settles down and comes to order better when I use a typewriter.

And I can take books and magazines. I don't read a lot on our vacations, but it's good to know I can.

And I'll surely take a dictionary. I'm always looking up words when I read or write and often find their meanings don't quite match what I thought. And I marvel that I've made my way so far in life carrying so many wrong notions.

Clearly, I'm not one who vacations to "get away from it all" since I can't bear to leave behind so much of what "it" is. I'm more one who sets her sights on the vacation destination - meanwhile gathering up and carrying out as much as possible from the place that I'm departing.

I just phoned up a hardware in Boyne City and discovered that twenty-five pounds of grass seed costs $450.00, including lawn mower.

I made a fool of myself a couple of weeks ago. It was the second time in my life I've thrown my nose out of joint. It happened when I mentioned Gulf/Western Industries of East Jordan. I should have said the Automotive Group of Wicks Manufacturing Company. Industries are changing hands so rapidly these days it is easy to make a fool of yourself by calling the new firm by the old firm's name. The other time I made a fool of myself occurred when I decided to become a newspaper columnist and did.

If everyone in Boyne City who has ever made a fool of themselves would raise their hands there wouldn't be an innocent soul left to point and say, "My gad, look at that."

I say this with great fear of contradiction.

Young people fighting their way up the ladder of success these days are having a more difficult time than I did. If you don't believe it you haven't checked the price of ladders lately.

He: Washington is mumbling something about the Social Security System going broke before long. What would you do if your mailbox were empty on the third day of the month?

Me: I would peddle my house and live in a tent.

He: Houses aren't selling and tents are outlawed in Boyne City.

Me: Then I would wrap myself into the welfare state and live two notches below a threadbare saint.

He: You have too much money to go on welfare. If you lie to them the county sheriff will throw you in jail and feed you bread and water until the county board of commissioners scream about the high cost of feeding prisoners.

Me: Are you saying that I could go directly from Social Security to jail?

He: That's a nasty possibility.

Me: Damn all Republicans and Democrats.

You can take the boy out of the country, but you can't take the country out of the boy. I like that because I hate big cities with a great passion and with everything else I can get my hands on.

This leaves me with a small town mentality which includes, among other things, wanting to know foolish things that are none of my business. For instance, how is it that I have never seen a preacher when he's sick to his stomach?

Dear editor: A couple of the above items were written earlier before a live audience.

An item in last week's offering sort of laid an egg, getting me into hot water. Laying eggs in hot water is not my cup of tea. A person can get an awful burn doing that.

Question: What do these well-known entertainers have in common? You may be surprised or you may not, according to how up and at 'em you are. I wasn't up and at 'em at all until I happened to run across this list in the World Almanac.

Famous people:

I shall now give the answer in case you guessed wrong. All of these wonderful entertainers were born within the great state of Michigan. I think those people who say "So what?" should go back to bed until the swelling goes down.

In past years there have been "entertainers" who were born in Boyne City but who were not giggled at beyond Boyne Falls. They didn't mean to be entertainers even though townspeople often

Picture brings back memories

Editor,
Your picture of the furnace casting room of March 5th brought back many memories to me. I'm enclosing a written "Remembrance".
In 1977 when taking a night class from Robert Morgridge in genealogy and local history I was encouraged to write up some of the happenings of interest during my childhood. One was our trip to the furnace to watch the blast off. I'm enclosing it in hopes of seeing it in print.

Thank you
(Mrs.) Frederica Vogt Loughry

THINGS TO REMEMBER A trip to the Furnace (As seen by a nine year old girl.) BY FREDERICA VOGG LOUGHRY

In the very early nineteen hundreds mother took the first four of us to see the 9 p.m. blast off of the iron furnace in North Boyne.

We lived at First St. and Division on the south side of town. We were allowed to enter the wide door to the casting room and stand at the foot of the sand molds. The furnace was in front of the formations with the hearth facing the prepared molds.

Men were waiting at the foot when we arrived. They had wooden clogs on their work shoes, caps on their heads and glasses, and shovels handy. The forms were made like a trunk of a tree with limbs running parallel to each other. Out of these smaller branches, also parallel to each other, later when filled with the molton iron, called "pigs".

There were iron shovels placed at the opening of trunk and limbs and as they filled one was shut off and the other opened.

The door to the furnace opens and the hot molton iron runs forward with intense heat.

As the forms filled men ran forward with shovels throwing sand on the "pigs", later lifting them with iron poles, like a long crow bar.

When the hot molton iron had had it's run there was a final blow which brought a resounding blast that sent up sparks and flames which illuminated the darkened night skies.

Later when cold, the "pigs" were stacked outside in the yards like cord wood, awaiting the big boats that would take them to the large cities to be made into stoves and iron implements.

It was a four mile round trip and by the time we reached home we were four tired children, half undressed when we reached the door of the house, each vying who would be the first one in bed. A game often played by us.

Editor,

It is now six years that I've looked forward each week to the arrival of the Charlevoix Press. I've enjoyed watching the "Blooming of Boyne". It's the next best thing to being there.

I'm so grateful your newspaper exists! I wish for your continued growth, too.

Lucy Ackland
Miami, Florida

Editor,

Attention all you dreamers that dream of the U.P. as a separate state. Now is the time. It will never be easier and with the most fantastic perks too. Here's how. Just "borrow" the civil war cannon from the Veterans Park in Boyne City, mount it on the bluff overlooking the north end of the Mackinaw bridge, lob a few minnie balls into the water near the bridge but don't hit it for gosh sakes. Washington will want to know what the ruckus is all about and that will give you your chance to be heard. Don't blow it. Explain that you are about to be invaded by those pesky summer tourists who will overrun the entire U.P. Just say you suspect them of being Commies because their skin actually turns red in the fresh air and sun. Explain the plight of the Mackinac Islanders, how they are cut off from everybody for six months out of the year, how they are so poor they still use horses, how their great college went kaput. Reagan will have them liberated in nothing flat. Explain all this and why it is absolutely necessary to secede from the lower part of the state, wrap it in the flag, John Wayne, motherhood and apple pie and sent it to the White House. You'll get some fast action. After all Harlingen, Texas is only thirty-one hours of driving time away and Reagan sure knows all about that and what it means. You must hurry though so he has time to get the fleet in before freeze-up and out again.

Now for the perks. Ask the C.I.A. for help with the logistics of establishing the critical path for the exercise. They will send a few thousand advisors along with fifty million or so dollars in covert aid. This will be the initial grant only. The rest will follow on a regular basis. Of course they will depend on you to keep it covert. Reagan will see to it that you get a few hundred million in economic aid right away but you'll have to wait a bit for the military aid. Congress, you know. Bob Davis will be a big help here. He likes to give military aid—even when his constituents say no to it.

But wait, there is still more. You will be on the list for at least the next ten years—two of Reagan and eight of Bush. By then you should be able to make Marcos look like a two bit piker and have your own state. The shining waters of the Gitchee Gummee will sparkle with the tears of the grateful natives. You'll be so proud.

Now what will Reagan want? Certainly all the brown points and maybe have you name the new state for Nancy and himself but what the hell—no pain no gain.

If you should need any clarification on any of this contact Larry Speakes at the White House. Pat Buchanan, same address - could be a big help with the publicity, too.

Now there is just one more thing—me. What do I want out of it? Well, I live a mostly quiet and modest life and would be very happy with a few million to buy my own South Sea island—not too big—and sufficient monies to maintain a bevy of wahines to minister to my needs and wants. Note—they don't wear shoes. This part could come under Humanitarian Aid and be processed fairly fast.

Well, there you have it. Now let's see some action.

I was discussing this little gem of an idea with a friend the other day when a look of sadness crept over his face and as he walked away I could hear him muttering that the early heat wave must have thawed me out too quick this spring. But then he doesn't understand Rambo either.

Me: Yes, we expect to get there before to long.

During the biggest financial slump this country has ever seen, I was smart but unable to find a job. In those days being smart and having a job had nothing to do with each other, as you will see if you will just hold on for a moment.

When I had had enough of not having enough I decided to go to the bank and ask the man for a borrow until better times blew in from Cadillac.

I sat at the man's desk and told him that I was at debt's door. He shuffled some papers and said that there was no way he could pull me through.

Within a week the bank gone broke and the man was pushing me aside trying to get through debt's door before I did.

A year later Franklin Roosevelt became President. He grabbed debt's door and threw it into the lake. And we all lived happily ever after --- except for a few people who were too smart to hold a job.

LexaMar starts with new MiniMar facility

LexaMar is Excellence!

The large sign reaching across the entire back wall of the new MiniMar facility helps to ensure the quality auto parts being made in the temporary facility are made to high standards. The facility, which started making windows parts for the Pontiac Fiero, is expected to be torn down and moved to the new Lexamar plant now under construction when completed this summer.

A trip down the production line starts with the plastic window first being silk screened with a special logo in two colors. Scott Kerridge applies the first color.

After a trip through a heat oven to dry the ink, the part is black painted in areas that will not show when installed on the car. Shawn Anderson mans the sprayer to paint the part.

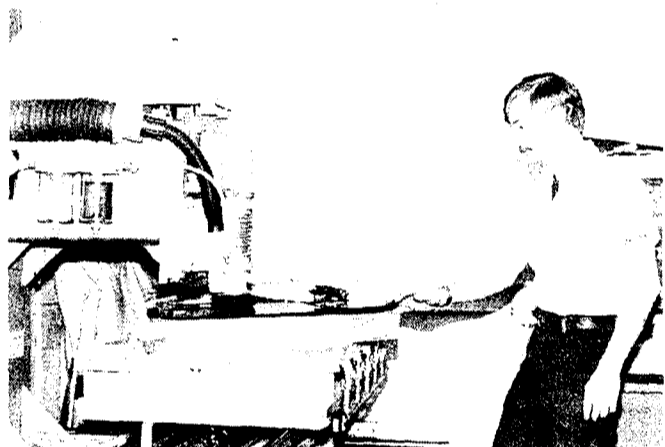

After drying, Jim Habasco applies another screen print to the window, using a specially made frame that makes the window flat prior to being silk screened.

Then the part is touched up by Bill Spence and sent into another oven where Dave Lewis inspects the parts as part of the continuous quality control the plant is stressing.

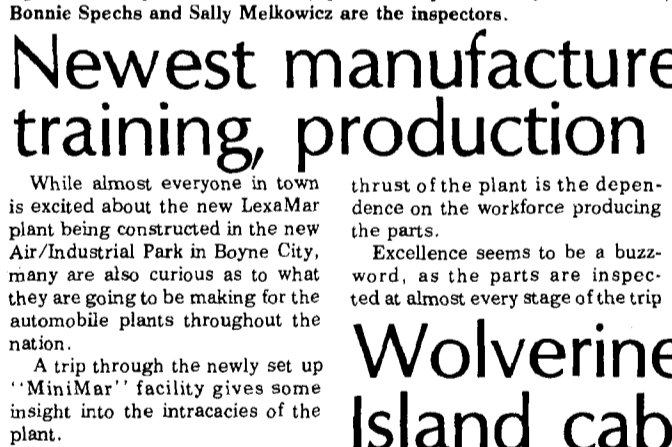

Another inspection, this time the final inspection makes sure the part is right before it proceeds to another part of the plant. Mary Ann Boulton, Bonnie Spechs and Sally Melkowitz are the inspectors.

The part then goes to a router where the flashing from the moulding process is cut away. Cliff Leazier runs the part through the automated router.

Final assembly is done when the part has tape applied to the window, along with a nylon string to facilitate removal if needed. After packaging, the part is shipped out to the plant producing the car.

Newest manufacturer in town starts training, production

While almost everyone in town is excited about the new LexaMar plant being constructed in the new Air/Industrial Park in Boyne City, many are also curious as to what they are going to be making for the automobile plants throughout the nation.

A trip through the newly set up "MiniMar" facility gives some insight into the intricacies of the plant.

The mini plant was set up in the back of the REH Acres building where a miniature manufacturing plant can start from raw materials to producing a finished part. Although the parts produced are not in the quantity as when the new plant gets on line, all of the steps to manufacturing are being done, or will be done in the facility to help train the staff of workers.

Thirty-one production workers are working in the mini plant. About 150 are projected to be working in the main plant after completion. The company also has three managers working in the mini facility along with top management working in leased space at the airport terminal.

Many of the steps being used to produce the parts employ new and unusual technologies, the main thrust of the plant is the dependence on the workforce producing the parts.

Excellence seems to be a buzzword, as the parts are inspected at almost every stage of the trip from the mold to the large package going to the final assembly plant in other areas.

When the new plant is completed this facility will be torn down and moved over to the industrial park along with the workforce.

The idea for starting a temporary facility is to train the workers and shorten the time it would take to have the new plant in full production.

Wolverine Power wins Beaver Island cable case

Boyer City - Wolverine Power Supply Cooperative, Inc has received an approximately $600,000 damages settlement in its Beaver Island cable litigation against Canonic Transportation and Dundee Cement Co.

The suit resulted from a December 13, 1982 incident in which a Dundee cement barge, leased to Canonic Transportation and in tow with a Canonic tug vessel, dragged its anchor line snagging Wolverine's 24-mile long subtransmission power cable to Beaver Island. The vessels pulled the power cable approximately one mile off course - eventually severing it.

The Dundee barge had dropped its anchor in high seas near Beaver Island in Lake Michigan as it attempted to reestablish tow with the Canonic tug vessel. After reestablishing tow, the Dundee vessel was unable to lift its anchor lines due to compressor failures. The vessels then headed for Harbor Springs, with the Dundee barge dragging its anchor lines and eventually hooking Wolverine's underwater electric cable to Beaver Island. Wolverine's electric cable runs from Cross Village to Beaver Island on the bottom of Lake Michigan.

"Wolverine is very pleased with the outcome of this case," said Raymond R. Cristell, Wolverine's Executive Vice President and General Manager. "While the settlement received in this case was significant, it is more important to note that this case sets the precedent that Wolverine will not tolerate any type of irresponsible acts to its generating plants, transmission lines, substations or other properties."

Wolverine owns and maintains two subtransmission cables to Beaver Island - one each from Cross Village and Sturgeon Bay. Wolverine transmits wholesale power to Beaver Island where Top O'Michigan Rural Electric Company distributes that electricity to island residents.

Wolverine's position in this case was aided greatly by Richard Chappell, Wolverine's Manager, Transmission, Engineering and Operations, considered by many to be the foremost expert on subtransmission power cables in the United States. The cooperative retained legal counsel in the case from James B. Dreyer of Dreyer & Associates, Sarasota, Florida
