Boyne City okays present parking scheme

After a short discussion concerning the Fourth of July activities and possible solutions to make them more interesting next year, members of the city commission started listening to a discussion of parking in the downtown area led by City Manager Randy Frykberg. Frykberg told the commissioners that there has been a vast improvement in the downtown parking area and that he, Along with Chief of Police John Talboys concur that short parking zones in front of such business places as the Boyne Country Party Store, Lake Street Video, and the Wolverine-Dilworth were needed.

He added that to put the normal two hour parking limit by those businesses would hinder the businesses as their customers go into and out of the parking spaces usually within a short time.

Frykberg also suggested that Talboys evaluate each request for short parking zones within the downtown and decide without it having to be brought before the city commission. The commissioners agreed that would be the best idea.

During the discussion, Commissioner Cass Toton said that if the merchants themselves are still parking in the area provided for their customers they deserve to be ticketed.

The commissioners also were told that summer tax bills were being sent out Tuesday. City Treasurer Edith Beck told the commissioners the bills included one-half of the school as well as the city taxes.

The city commission was supposed to meet Tuesday evening at the Boyne City Library to discuss the proposed city museum at Old City Park. Plans were to be presented by Don Glowinski, who had presented possible concept drawings at an earlier commission meeting.

The plans presented were to be more detailed and include a possible site plan as to where the building would be placed within the park.

Commissioners are expected to approved the location of the new historical museum which would be paid for by the extra voted millage of last year along with donations from the Historical Society, Rotary and Lions Clubs as well as the monies gathered from various projects of the historical board. The cost of the new building has not been determined, but is expected to fall in the range of $65,000 to $85,000.

Helping with the maintenance would be a move by the Chamber of Commerce into the museum which would help offset some of the costs as well as provide some supervision in the building.

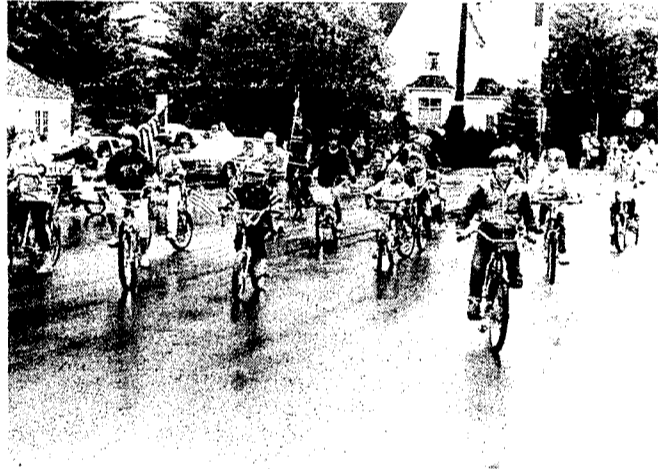

Despite weather, it was a grand day

Yes, it rained on the parade, the other side said "poured" as the Moody bunch ended the parade.

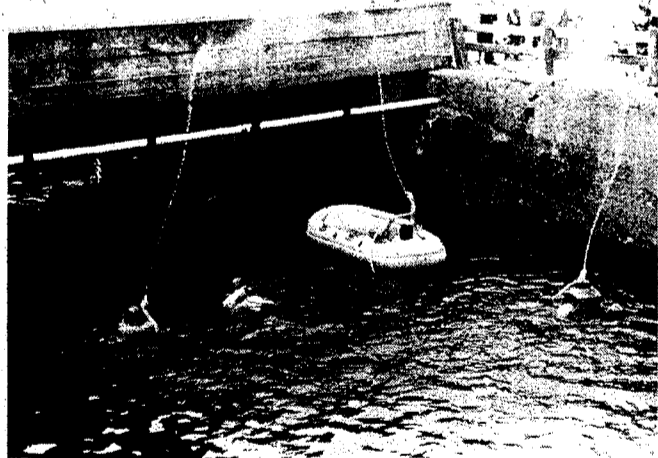

Many people set up their crafts displays only to have the rains fall.

This mess of bikes was one of the features in Boyne City's parade.

Bud Bates lost his shanty again only to see it being pulled in the parade.

Getting even with water hoses this group floated down river spraying the crowds.

They are off and running in the 2 mile and 8 mile road race.

Crowds enjoy celebrating 4th in Boyne, EJ, Horton Bay

Charlevoix County was roaring with people over the weekend as some of the largest crowds ever watched Fourth of July activities in East Jordan, Boyne City and Horton Bay.

Most merchants asked said they had a good weekend, despite the weather on the Fourth which caused entries in the two and eight mile runs to either run faster or stop because of the rain and lightning. The rain Friday also delayed the parade in Boyne City for almost an hour as officials waited to see if the sun would come out.

With the end of the morning rains, the Boyne parade started, minus a few floats and marching units. Taking awards for their floats were, for the church, club and fraternal category, the First Baptist Church with its float featuring the Statue of Liberty. The Snowbelt Chorus of barber-shop singers took second place while the Boyne City Riders placed third with their show of horsemanship.

In the category of retail and industrial floats, the Pied Piper of Hamlin Rollers took the first place followed by Boyne City Arts and Crafts and REH Acres.

Bernie Konkrat and the Moody Gang took the individual float awards. For the Civic category, Boyne Falls won the prize with the Gaylord Alpenfest float took second and the Boyne City float third.

Bob Mathers took the first place in the antique car category with his 1922 Model T. John Strue took the second place driving the Barretts of Boyne Model A delivery truck. Mathers also took the third place with other cars.

John Heaton won the prize for the best decorated bicycle with Mike Peters and Tracy Glowinski finishing second and third respectively.

After electing new officers, the Boyne Falls school board went right to business and voted to adopt a new millage rate for the school system of 32.97 mills, borrowed money against anticipated taxes, and heard proposed changes in the school rules for students.

Jim Churchill was elected to head the school board, while Bill Cousineau was named to the vice-president position. Art Sawarski was elected to the post of treasurer and Bob Winhusen was named again as secretary for the first agenda item to start the new school year off.

The board then approved a higher 32.97 millage rate which includes 2.6158 mills after discussing the new millage rate during the Truth in Taxation Hearing held recently.

In other action, the board accepted the resignations of Jim Crowell, a teacher and guidance counselor, and Diane Kelly, a music teacher. Kelly will be moving to a new position in the Boyne City school system while Crowell will be going into a private consulting business in Ohio.

The board then heard the first reading of proposed changes in the student handbook which included such changes as the school starting time, a clarification of the absence policy, guests to school dances, new independent study rules, a change in the way the honor roll is figured out and the times the library would be open for students.

All were agreed upon by the board with the exception of the school library. Board member Pat Griffith told the rest of the board the library should not be closed. School Principal Mike Wallace told the board he will look into other alternatives to keep the library open during the school day.

The board did not take any formal action on the handbook as they will be discussing it until the next meeting.

The board members then agreed to borrow $390,000 at 4.80 percent from First of America Bank in Petoskey. The bank was the only bidder for the tax anticipation note, according to Bob Redmond, the school superintendent. He told board members the reason for little interest in the note might have been caused by upcoming tax changes and the banks wanted to hold off from making loans such as this one. The interest for the note, which is due next spring, will amount to $13,312.

The board then passed a resolution okaying payroll deductions for those employees wanting to have the new state employment retirement plan. The action is voluntary for the workers, Redmond said, and the passage of the resolution would follow the new state law.

Bob Winhusen asked if the board would be opening a door to the future as the issue could become a bargaining tool for the teachers and other union members.

Then the board had a first look at a proposed job description for the school principal. The new description add the duties of athletic director and takes the AD position off of the Schedule B area.

They also accepted insurance bids from two firms, one local, to cover almost everything that could happen to the school.

Mark Jarema was appointed to maintain the school buses at his new facility. He will be able to do all work except major repairs, Redmond said.

Committee assignments were started so the new board could meet negotiation schedules this July.

The board also agreed to a different means of recapturing more dollars from the state as part of a new state law for state aid. Redmond told the board he thinks the new law will mean more dollars for the school district for the next several years.

The board also had a informal discussion concerning a proposed park within the township. The township has decided not to fund the park which has already received state grant money. County Recreation director Mike Davis asked the board to consider taking on the project. The board took no action on the question.

LOCAL FISH

One of my favorite fishermen brought me two beautiful fillets of northern pike the other day. Every time when I receive fresh fish right out of our Michigan lakes, I say, "this is the best fish I have ever tasted."

This is the way we fixed them. The larger one we cut into 4 good-sized serving pieces, then in one dish I poured some milk, and in another dish the following mixture:

¾ cup corn meal
½ teaspoon salt
Dash of pepper
1/8 teaspoon dill weed (our favorite seasoning)
1/8 teaspoon onion salt

Mix these ingredients together well then dip the pieces of fish in the milk then into the dry mixture.

Have corn oil hot in a large skillet and fry the fish, turning once, until flaky and golden brown, about 10 minutes on each side according to the size of the fish.

Fish never tasted so good. We did not even decorate it with the tartar sauce we made and we ate the whole thing."

This is from an old cook book—I could not find the published date or what group put it out, though it advertised "Victrolas" which puts it well back into the twenties. Published in Waukegan, Illinois.

HOW TO FRY PERCH

"To my way of thinking there is nothing finer than a medium-sized perch. They should be skinned not scaled, and then let stand in salt water for an hour or more before cooking. Remove from the water, wipe with dry towel, roll in flour, drop in boiling lard, as for fried cakes. Cook 12 to 15 minutes according to the size of the perch."

Perch is delicious fried the same way that we cooked the northern pike using non-cholesterol corn oil. Our grandmothers did not have the refined oil that is available to us today. They used lard or drippings.

Some of our local fish are also well-known in other parts of the world. Scotland's northern lakes that are too cold for good swimming team with trout. Scotland also has lots of salmon and herring.

Our first Scottish dinner at the "Old Waverly Hotel" in Edinburgh served this menu.

Haggis
Poached fish, Potatoes and Carrots
Plum Pudding
White Wine

Here is the "Plain Scots Style" toboil salmon which seems to be the way some do it here also.

"Scale and clean the fish without any unnecessary washing or handling. Place it in a strainer in a roomy fish-kettle, and pour in sufficient cold water to cover the fish. Bring slowly to boil, skim carefully, add salt (½ oz. to qt. of water), cover and simmer for required time (10 minutes to the pound and 10 minutes more). When done lift up the strainer to rest across pan to drain, covered with a folded soft cloth."

Plain boiled potatoes are served with poached fish and a vegetable. Just seasoned with salt and pepper, and a little vinegar on the side.

One-half oz. would equal ¼ tablespoon.

CHICKEN TORTILLAS

CASSEROLE
3 cups diced, cooked chicken
1 can cream of mushroom soup
1 can cream of chicken soup
1 can Rotel (tomatoes and green chillis-spices)
½ cup chicken broth
2 small cans mushrooms
2½ flour tortillas
Cheese
Pimiento (optional)

Mix chicken broth with Rotel; chicken and mushroom soups. Break tortillas in small pieces, line bottom of 13 by 19 inch pan.

Add layer of chicken
Layer of Mushrooms
Layer of soup mixture
Layer of cheese

Repeat until all is used ending with cheese.

Bake at 350° for 45 minutes.
If desired, add pimiento to soup mixture, it gives it a little more color.

Jottings

BY JIM SILBAR

If you weren't one of those who were "up north" or one of those who decided the traffic was too heavy so you stayed in your yard, you missed a weekend of parades.

Good ones, better ones and the best one.

This past weekend say all of them. And it also saw many more people than previous parade years.

It's funny how parades seem to attract crowds. Especially out to Horton Bay where they have one of the fun parades.

For a couple of years now, they have been putting on a parade every year, even though the parade committee thought a couple of years ago to only have them every other year.

But things change with the times and the parade committees. They are now doing a parade yearly.

The original thought was the amount of work it takes to host a parade. It was too much for some members of the committee back then, but with the change in the committee, every year from now until they decide to change it.

That is one of the things that make the parade rather unique. Another is the amount of crazy ideas the parade participants come up with each year. Always trying to outdo the "other" guys.

To say the entries are unique is not exactly the right word. Crazy, stupid, dumb, a gas, wonderful, and a few other adjectives could give you some kind of idea but not necessarily the right one.

The one thing that hits my brain is that these everyday type of people, from corporate, from rural farmlife, to little community life all seem to have a great time making fools out of themselves.

We all laughed.

And we all had a great time.

The other parades are great also, although Boyne City could use a little help in making their parade better.

Perhaps they should do the same thing that East Jordan does. I am sure there are a few manufacturing companies that could afford to sponsor a band group like East Jordan manufacturers and businesses have done for several years.

And everyone knows band help make a parade. Boyne City couldn't even talk the high school into participation as far as many of the parade observers saw. And remarked about to me.

Why I had to defend the organizers is beyond me, but I tried to explain as best I could. I told the folks I didn't know.

Of course I did know a lot about the East Jordan parade. They have been working on it for almost a year. And every couple of months, I would get a press release telling what was going on. I sure appreciated those as the weekend was very busy trying to get to everyone's parade and other activities.

I'll bet I put a couple of hundred miles on the car moving from community to community getting to the action.

I enjoyed it though, and even stayed around to hear the concerts in the park each of the bands provided in East Jordan when I could have been, make that should have been, home with the family.

But, I like watching and listening to kids play instruments, especially if they are in tune, and I like bagpipes.

Someday, Dr. Stewart, a player of the pipes, may get asked to give me a lesson on how those things work. Providing I start training now to get the old wind up enough to fill the bag with more than just hot air.

I am surprised no one had invented a portable compressor to hang on his belt to pump up the bag as he walks along. Americans are famous for trying to find easier ways to live, you know.

But easier or not, I enjoyed the weekend. And if you missed it, you missed one of the great times in the county.

Consider the comma. Compared to other topics that one might consider on a summer's day - philosophical concepts like success or happiness often surface in the heat - the comma's pretty small potatoes. But after the graduation and wedding ceremonies that June delivers in such abundance, these concepts have been well covered for the time being. So considering something concrete like a punctuation mark gives a nice change of pace.

Even if you can't get excited about it, you have to be impressed by what the comma can do. It packs a lot of power for its size. For instance, if you write, "Would you believe, rain?" or take, "My friends, always rise when I enter the room." That's a whole different ball game from, "My friends always rise when I enter the room." The words sound pompous either way, but they make a different point when a comma enters the picture.

Commas aren't needed as much as they once were when the written language was more formal. But current standards still call for a lot of them. Their main job is to point out pauses in a sentence. sometimes the pauses don't pause enough for the average person to notice. But grammarians insist that the pauses are there, which is what counts.

Direct address calls for commas. For example, "Hail, Brutus." Or you can turn it around and make it, "Brutus, hail." Either way Brutus gets his comma whether before or after his name. And he gets one on both sides if he's addressed in the middle of a sentence.

The business with Brutus brings up the fact that commas are used singly or they're used in pairs that go on each side of some words or phrases. The pairs of commas never face each other though, like parentheses. That would be fun, but it just isn't done.

Phrases that aren't necessary for the sentence to make sense have to be set off by a pair of commas. Say you write, "My little sister, who kicks and

Remembrances

The quality of this picture is not a photographer's dream, but we think you will enjoy it. In the 1890s there were four tugs that did nothing but tow schooners through the channels of Round Lake. Shown are the Avery, Taylor, and Martin. They resemble Walt Disney's "Little Toot", the happy harbor tug.

Marshall Sayles

A friend read the Free Press the other day and said that if the Supreme Court keeps making those personal decisions he might not need to go to church much longer.

With great fuss being made over our beloved Statue of Liberty and with patriotism generally on the up swing, this Independence Day was to be a very extra special event through every middlesex, village and farm.

But no. Rain fell on our celebration even though the Fourth of July is supposed to be immune to cranky weather. The clouds opened wide turning our patriotic swagger into a soggy stagger.

I stood it as long as I could. Then I shook my fist in the air, yelling, "What's going on up there?" Realizing that I had had enough, the rain quit, allowing the city to pull off a rip-snorting Fourth of July celebration.

I stopped the rain because I have never been able to whip up much patriotism during a thunderstorm.

Another word about the Statue of Liberty, Independence Day, patriotism and our freedom to make fools of ourselves anytime we want to:

It is this: We should give our forefathers a great, big pat on the back for making the past what it is today.

The next city-wide blowout will be the merchants' Annual Sidewalk Sales, attracting hundreds of bargain seekers looking for their money's worth at a marked down price. Like many others, I sometimes buy an article, not because I need it, but because it is so cheap. There is nothing in this world that stirs the average American buyer so much as the word "cheap".

And while we're at it, how come lawyers, insurance agents, real estate people and bankers don't put out card tables, reduce their prices and hawk their wares on the street along with other merchants?

I think the people in Boyne City would turn a flip flop if they were to go down town and be hawked by a bank.

Me: Did you know that the average person gets smarter as he gets older?

He: It's too bad that you aren't the average person.

Me: Three dashes, two hyphens and an exclamation point to you, too.

This column was written in the full glare of public approval. I think.

Ware-withal

bit me this morning, is over there." The part about the rotten behavior of the little tyke gives heartfelt detail, but the sentence can stand without it.

Then too there are other places where commas are called for like between items when you're listing things. And the commas are supposed to be there before or after quotes, or both, to separate the speaking parts from the rest of the writing.

A lot of the time though, commas are a freewill arrangement. If you're writing along and feel a pause in a sentence, put in a comma. As the author, you're entitled.

What with all this freedom, some sense of responsibility on the part of the writer is called for. No one, especially a finicky reader or an English teacher, wants to be paused every second or two. So it behooves the writer to think before he sprinkles commas all over the place.

That's quite enough about the comma. It makes a decent subject to focus the mind on for a little while, but there's no point in carrying it too far. On a warm summer day, there's just so much time that a person has to give to considering the comma.

Michcon interest-free loans

June 17, 1986 -- More than 500 of 21,500 MichCon residential heating customers in the Company's Northern Michigan-North service area have taken advantage of In-terest-Free Financing on two energy-saving improvements. The MichCon program, introduced in June, 1981, offers interest-free loans on ceiling insulation and furnace flue device.

"There are many more customers who are eligible for our interest-free loan program," said William L. Johnson, Mich-Con Vice President, District Operations. "And, now is an opportune time to weatherize your home for winter and take advantage of these two energy-saving improvements."

MichCon residential heating customers in the Company's Northern Michigan-North service area reside in the counties of Charlevoix, Cheboygan, Emmet, Chippewa, Otsego and part of Antrim.

"Our studies show that just six inches of ceiling insulation can provide customers with a measurable annual fuel savings," pointed out Johnson. The company offers two loan options to help customers reach a ceiling insulation level equal to R-19 or approximately six inches. Loans up to $750 are available for "do-it-yourself" insulation and up to $1,000 for contractor-installed ceiling insulation.

"Further studies show that a furnace flue device can offer an annual fuel savings from 7 to 10 percent," said Johnson. For a contractor-installed furnace flue device, loans up to $500 are available through MichCon.

Loan eligibility for either ceiling insulation and/or a furnace flue device is based on a home's existing level of ceiling insulation and/or annual natural gas heating usage--not income. There is no required down payment. And, a MichCon customer

Sitting around a campfire waiting for the hot dogs and other foods to get cooked were these members of Boyne City's Brownie Troops. They enjoyed a day picnicking and learning at Whiting Park recently.

Jill Karkosak and Nikki Roberts strung up their own necklace made from Fruit Loops and other edibles. Nikki may have a hard time eating hers, as she picked the summer to outgrow her baby teeth.

Chris Anderson, Marybeth Ferris and Jamie Cheplicki learned how to make an edible necklace during the campout for the Brownies.

Brownie troops 277 and 250 spend fun filled day at Park

On Wednesday, June 18th, seventeen girls from Boyne City Brownie Troops 277 and 250 got together at Young State Park for a fun-filled day of outdoor activities.

The girls gathered at Veterans Park in Boyne City and rode a Charlevoix County Transit bus to the state park. Once there, they helped unload supplies and started the day with a flag ceremony.

The two troops were divided into 3 patrols for the day's activities. The girls decorated name tags, representing their patrol. Then it was off the first round of scheduled activities. The patrols rotated to a different activity three times during the day so that each girl had a chance to participate in everything. The girls all made bird feeders, pet rocks, and edible necklaces, took a long nature hike, and created a "sit-upon" to make life more comfortable on the damp ground.

They had a sack lunch while watching the birds and squirrels nibble on the bird feeders, Bisbee, Cheplicki, Cheplicki, Carrie had an afternoon snack of "ants on a log" (celery sticks covered with peanut butter and raisins.) The day was capped by a hot dog roast over the open fire and of course s'mores for dessert. Brownie leaders Karen Roberts and Kathy Staton were there along with Junior Girl Scout leader Norvieta Anderson. Melissa Anderson was on hand as a program aide.

The Brownie Girl Scouts who attended were: Stacey Bisbee, Jamie Cheplicki, Patty Carrie

Crozier, Maribeth Ferris, Nikki Fettig, Tracey Glowinski, Jill Karkosak, Katrina Knipe, Jennifer Kuzmik, Amanda Roberts, Nikki Roberts, Amy Seeley, Robin Sharp, Kimberley Shelswell, Billie Jo Solgot, and Samantha Wright.

Anyone interested in Girl Scouts in Boyne City can contact Kathy Staton at 582-2257. Girls grades K-9 this fall are eligible to join and as always adult help is needed and greatly appreciated.

Hybrid blueberry developed for climate

After an intensive, 25 year research and breeding program, two hybrid blueberry bushes ready for release for the first time in 1986 promise to revolutionize the blueberry industry. Northern Michigan residents may have the opportunity to turn idle or underutilized acreage into highly productive blueberry plantings with outstanding financial return to individual farmers, and new economic potential to communities in both the northern lower peninsula and the upper peninsula.

Appropriately named "Northcountry" and "Northblue", the new hybrids are the result of crossbreeding between the old high-bush commercial varieties developed early this century and selections from the most outstanding wild blueberries found in Maine, Canada, Minnesota, and Michigan. The new varieties, sometimes referred to as "Half-high", produce a commercial size berry and comparable yield to their highbush ancestors. Most important for northern Michigan growers, however, are the qualities the hybrids derive from their wild cousins: their outstanding hardiness, vigorous growth, and superior flavor which sets a new industry standard for gourmet quality fruit.

Until the development of Northcountry and Northblue, hardness factors limited commercial and reliable garden production to a few areas in southern Michigan. But a documented hardiness to at least -40 degrees F. and blossom hardiness to at least 22 degrees without negative impact on production opens the possibility of commercial utilization of the new blueberries throughout the upper Great Lakes. Ironically, this new range for commercial production may eventually replace the old commercial areas. Generous snow cover and the acid soils of northern Michigan are better suited to lower production costs and more reliable yields.

In university research tests, individual hybrid bushes yielded seven or more pounds of marketable fruit. Even at wholesale prices that represents a financial potential for small plantings that far outstrip the return of investment most farmers are experiencing in today's depressed farm economy. U-pick operations or roadside markets offer an even better return. Many farmers in northern Michigan who have seen the price of beef, potatoes, and grain fall well below break-even costs have been quick to divert acreage into blueberry production. Arlen Turner, a part-time beef farmer in eastern Antrim County saw his retirement plans go down the drain with beef prices.

He is confident blueberries will be many times more profitable for his effort and investment even if beef prices return to profitable levels. He recently sold his entire herd at a loss and plans to plant 2,000 bushes each of the next several years.

The biggest problem in establishing the new blueberry industry in northern Michigan has been an inadequate supply of bushes to meet the demand for both commercial and home garden planting. Enough bushes are available to plant only 20 to 30 acres in the entire state in 1986, but plans are underway to increase the supply of bushes to sustain new plantings of 100 to 200 acres per year for the foreseeable future.

The Northern Michigan Blueberry Association (NMBA), is an organization of commercial planters, home gardeners and gourmet blueberry lovers. Its goal is to facilitate the development of this new blueberry industry. NMBA is offering growers who plant in 1986 and 1987 guaranteed market contracts for the rest of this century.

Additional information on the new hybrid blueberries and the NMBA may be obtained by writing: The Blueberry Project, c/o Green River Farms, Route 1, Box 256A, Manelona, MI 49659.

East Jordan now king of northern parades after 4th

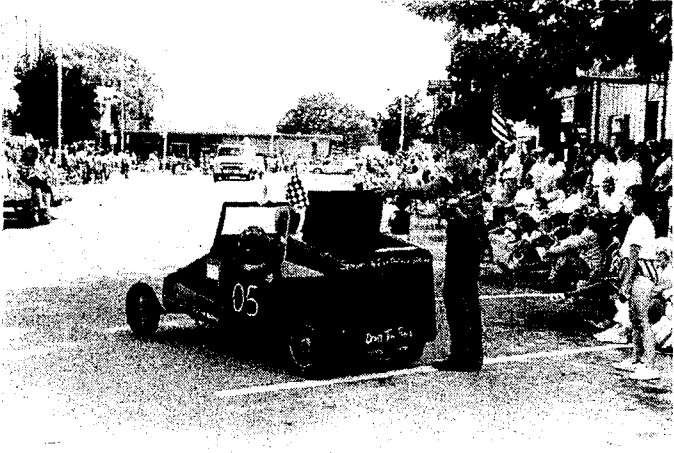

A burst of balloons announced the opening of the East Jordan Freedom Festival Parade.

Dynamite the Clown and assistant delighted the crowd along the parade route with his high jinks.

Prior to the parade members of the East Jordan Senior Center chorus entertained in front of City Hall.

He almost made the entire parade route, but this super-duper race car pooped out and couldn't restart, just before the reviewing stand.

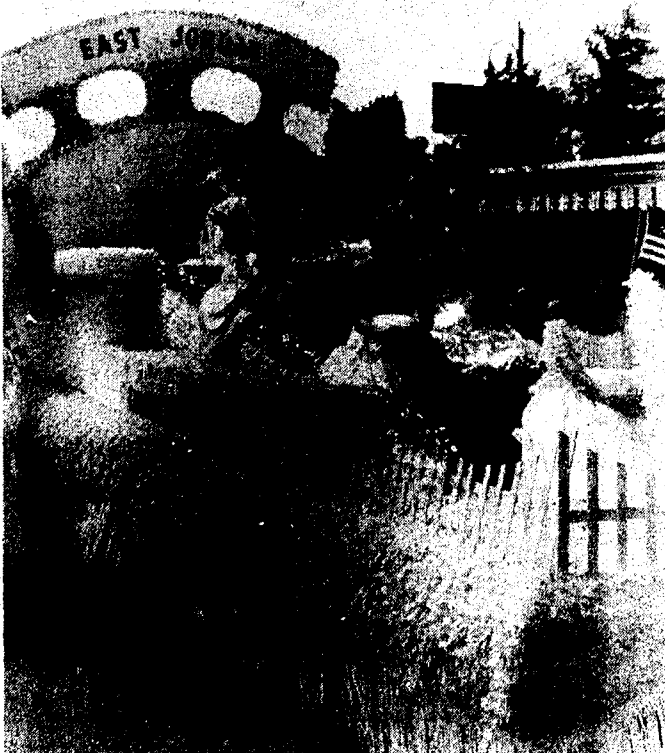

Lt. Governor Martha Griffiths enjoyed her short visit as Grand Marshal of the East Jordan parade.

This bagpipe regiment came from Sault Ste. Marie, Ontario.

The Queen's Court had a pleasurable ride on East Jordan's Chamber of Commerce float.
