Big Fourth of July activities planned by BC & EJ

Both Boyne City and East Jordan will be celebrating the Fourth with plenty of activities to keep visitors and locals entertained for days, according to the flyers each city is distributing.

News Briefs

Charlevoix County will be receiving $31,500 for the expansion of the township park, and $26,200 for the purchase of land on Deer Lake in Wilson Township for a new township park, according to Senator Mitch Irwin. The announcement came as part of the projects being funded by the Natural Resources Trust Fund which gets its money from drilling rights and oil production facilities across the state. "As our population grows in northern Michigan, these acquisitions become even more important as we search for additional recreational opportunities and work to protect our valuable wetland," Irwin said. Fourteen projects totaling $20 million were funded in this recent release of funds.

Bed and Breakfasts will be given a boost when Governor Blanchard signs into law a package of bills designed to reduce the regulatory burden on them. Blanchard said that is was another way to saying yes to Michigan's small businesses. Currently, Bed and Breakfast establishments fall under the same rules as hotels and motels and require large expenditures of funds to bring them under state health and construction codes. Those B and B's having less than eight sleeping rooms will have to meet the same codes as home construction and be subject to health department inspections.

Boyer's new bath house will be opened by the Fourth of July, according to city officials. The restroom facility is located at the new Peninsula Beach.

In Boyne City, the big event as always will be the fireworks display to be held at Veterans Park about 10:30 p.m. But before that, it will be an event-filled day starting early in the morning with the annual Independence Day Run starting at 8:30 a.m. from the park.

Then at 9 a.m., the Waterside Art and Craft Fair will start along with concession stands being put on by the P.M. Lions Club and the Boyne City Eagles.

The annual parade will be starting at 10:30 a.m. and is expected to have many entries this year, including, if they capture him, a Windigo.

After the parade, there will be demonstrations of gymnastics by the Boyne Area Gymnasts, the Rotary Chicken Bar-B-Que, and the Boyne Valley Garden Club Pie Sale will get underway.

XI Gamma Sorority will be holding a "Money Hunt" for those six-years-and-under at the park and the first annual Boyne City Nursery School Gringo Chili Cook-off will be started.

Then at 1:00 p.m., out in Horton Bay, one of the world's most unique parades will form up and walk through town. The parade features many floats and activities that raise a few laughs. This year, the parade was lengthened to accommodate more spectators and spread the crowds out. The parade will start at the Horton Bay Road and go through town to end up at the Methodist Church.

Back in Boyne, the band concerts will begin at the park, leading up to the annual frog jumping contest held on the street in front of the Tannery.

Over in East Jordan, the fun starts on Thursday with the auditions to a lip sync contest at the high school.

Friday will see an Anything That Floats Parade in the Tourist Park Area along with a penny arcade for the kids.

At noon, a pizza eating contest, sponsored by Our Place, will get underway at the Pavillion.

Then at 4 p.m. will be the first of parades for the area when the annual youth parade gets started. They will form up at Carey's Market and walk through town to the GAR Park. Then at 7 p.m. bingo will start at the American Legion while an hour later, a teen dance will begin at the Civic Center.

Saturday will see canoe races on the Jordan starting at Webster Bridge and ending at Memorial Park about 10:30 a.m. At the time of the canoes finishing, an art show will be starting at the park and run all day.

A Jet Ski Race will start at 10 a.m. with over 100 professional racers competing in the "South Arm Challenge".

Stunt flying will be one of the afternoon highlights as Don Ziegler will perform over the lake prior to the parade.

Then at 4 p.m. the Grand Parade will start.

After the parade will be the band concerts in the Memorial Park.

About 10:30 p.m. their fireworks display will be held.

Sunday will see the finals of the lip sync contest, a water skiing show and a teen dance.

Boyne has Windigo too?

Perhaps Horton Bay is not the only place with a "Windigo" creature, according to Len Neeb and Chris Bandy, two Boyne City residents who took polaroid pictures of the creature somewhere near Avalanche Preserve Monday night.

The two were walking in the woods when they saw the beast, described by Bandy as being about seven feet tall. Neeb took two pictures of the animal, which looks like a very tall ape family creature.

After showing the pictures to John Talboys, the Chief of Police of Boyne City, Talboys said the area where the beast was spotted has had a few phone calls concerning prowlers. When police investigated the prowler incidents, they saw large footlike tracks.

Neeb thinks he and a small group can capture the animal and has started plans to try to live-capture it. He hopes to have the creature contained in a cage by the Fourth of July so it can be displayed in the annual parade.

Neeb figures the animal is a vegetarian, as he has not spotted anything that would appear to indicate the animal is a meat eater.

Neeb also hopes, if he can capture the beast, to display it in the Horton Bay Parade, to show those residents what such a beast may look like when they capture the one that lives in the Horton Bay creek wetlands.

Neeb wasn't sure of the exact capture method, but he expressed confidence the beast will be captured by this weekend.

Neeb, Bandy and a few others started to look for the beast Tuesday night and will continue to look every available moment until it can be captured.

The two think they know where the beast nests so they will be looking in that area.

Falls approves $1 million budget

After looking over the 1987-88 school budget at an early special meeting, members of the Boyne Falls School Board approved spending almost one million dollars next year.

The actual amount is $995,857 that has been budgeted by the board with revenues being $1,078,818.

A little more than half will be spent on basic programs in the instructional area. Those include teacher salaries, books and supplies. The board projected to spend $463,750 on those items. They will also be spending $78,940 for teacher benefits, which is up about 20 percent over last year.

With the budget approved, next year the board will have a fund equity, or surplus, of almost $83,000 to cover any emergency costs that may arise.

Other budgets approved were the School Lunch Fund and the Athletic Fund.

Next year's School Lunch Fund will be short about $2,000 as the costs are expected to be in the area of $42,000, while the income for the fund is projected to be $39,951. The difference will be made up from general fund sources.

That is what the board did Monday, so this past year's lunch fund would have a zero balance. The board approved moving $3,927 from the general fund over to the hot lunch program.

Barring any donations from the Boyne Falls Polish Festival Committee or the boosters, the school will be spending $19,794 on athletics. Most of the fund is covered by transfers from the general fund as the school system

Turning over the first shovel at their rain soaked ground breaking for the new Burns Clinic is Dr. Alan Fark, one of the staff who will be headquartered in the new building. Holding the umbrellas while they watch are Bob Crumb, assistant administrator of the clinic; Tom Garlock, representing the City of Boyne City; Gene Scott, the general contractor for the building project and Daniel McDonnell, president of the board of directors for the clinic. Scott said the clinic will be completed hopefully in time for the fall color season. The present clinic is being housed in a small facility on North Lake Street.

M-75 to be widened, curbed

Boyne City will be getting approximately $2.5 million worth of road work when M-75 is curbed, guttered and repaved from the Wilson-Boyne Valley Township line to Pearl Street with three lanes for traffic, according to Fred Welch, County Road Engineer.

Welch made the announcement of that work, along with many other projects approved last week by the federal and state highway departments.

Plans for the new three-lane road, which also includes repair and repaving from the post office to Hannah Street and repaving with three foot shoulders from Hannah to 800 feet past the city limits, will be starting in the spring of 1989.

Previous plans indicated the state was not going to curb and gutter and would only repave the two lanes coming into town. Due to work of Road Commissioner John Kujawski, the curbing, guttering and the additional lane were added to the project.

Other roads being improved and funded are the new Boyne Mountain Road, projected to cost about $400,000 of which most will be paid for by the Mountain. Work is expected to begin yet this fall with final paving to be completed in the spring if work is not ready by fall.

The many-times-promised bicycle paths' shoulders will be paved this year with work expected to be completed by October 1. The bicycle paths will be funded because the state mandates that 10 percent of the transportation monies be spent on non-motorized transportation. Boyne City is hoping to connect up with the paved shoulders to bring the path into town.

Also included in the road projects announced by the road commission are the development of preliminary plans to rebuild and repave Ferry Road from Advance to Whiting Park. Then along Ferry Road from Spade Road to Barnard Road will be graded and graveled in preparation for repaving next spring.

The county will be removing and replacing two culverts on Major Road between Fraley and Springvale yet this year, according to Welch.

All of the above projects will be paid for with federal funds and total almost $800,000.

Work is also being done in

BC lets bid for 1st phase

Boyne City Commissioners let the first bid for work to be done on the aging infrastructure improvements at their meeting Tuesday and according to several commissioners, the bid quotations look very good.

Winning the bid to do the work in the first phase, which includes sliplining the sewer main on North Lake Street and installing new water mains on several other streets, was the C.H. Smith Company of Charlevoix and Boyne City. Smith's bid was $216,565, less than half of what three other companies bid for the same projects.

Cost estimates for this phase of construction were estimated to be about $600,000 if new construction were used. By sliplining, a 10-inch plastic liner will be pushed or pulled into the existing 12-inch sewer line.

Engineers figure the smaller size will still be able to handle the sewage flow as the friction of the smaller main will be less, allowing the water to flow easier.

Also included in the bid will be the installation of new six-inch waterlines for parts of East, North, Second and South Streets. An eight-inch watermain will be installed on Lake Street and some other minor water relocation will be done by the city crews.

An eight-inch sewer main will be installed along North Lake Street on the east side of the road and the homes and businesses will be connected to the new main, which will not be as deep as the present 12-inch main.

The 12-inch main is about 20 to 25 feet below the surface and much of it is under water, which meant the bids from other com-

A "Late Bloomer" Maybe? I've always marveled at those who step right along through life quickly and confidently choosing from its many offerings with nary a hint of a bobble or a wobble. I marvel because quite some distance lies between them and me who, if report cards were given to adults grading them on mature behavior traits, would get a C- in decision-making ability. And the remarks section of my card would show such phrases as "Is easily distracted" and "Doesn't attend to the matter at hand" or simply "Can't keep her eye on the ball".

The big decisions I do fine with. I have no trouble deciding where I want to go, which roads to take to get there and even when and where and how much money to spend along the way. But when it comes to the small incidentals that pop up along the journey, I'm a bundle of indecision, especially with the choices that involve size and color.

I ran into the color problem again just yesterday. My husband, Bob, and I decided that what the big west window in the living room needed was a venetian blind. So we hied ourselves off to a store that sells such things, armed with the window's measurements and a firm commitment to the color—white. No problem there. The blinds came in white, in fact, five shades of white.

I saw immediately, though, that there was only one true white among them. But one of the other shades caught my eye, the dirty creamy color that venetian blinds all used to be painted when they were rigid wooden slats instead of bendy metal strips.

The color brought back places in my childhood where I'd first known venetian blinds—our doddering dentist's office, the big front window of Liberty State Bank and half a dozen others. And it occurred to me that this color would be kind of nice, for old time's sake. The salesman saw me pause at the color strip and said that it was a mighty popular color choice. I smiled and nodded.

Then I pulled myself back to the present and considered the fact that the old venetian blind color would probably clash with our new beige drapes. And I picked the true white.

I run into the same indecision thing in the grocery store, particularly in the produce department. In the warm months, potatoes do me in. We eat more mashed potatoes than any other kind. So I usually pick the bags with the big ones, the teensy ones taking forever to peel.

But potato salad, which takes small potatoes, goes well with summer days. So a mixed bag has possibilities. On the other hand, I haven't made the salad much since Bob went on the low cholesterol diet due to the eggs in it. But I could make it more often if I cut back on the eggs, perked up the taste with more pickle chunks. Whatever I decide mostly ultimately depends on the day's temperature.

Picking out bags of carrots and apples involves mental gymnastics too. But two examples should be quite sufficient.

I comfort myself that maturity isn't supposed to come in one fell swoop and maybe this aspect of mine will yet develop. But viewing the matter from the far side of 50, I feel that either I'm never going to develop it or that I'll be such a "late bloomer" that I'll be too old to care.

Jottings

BY JIM SILBAR

According to past history, this town is supposed to burst open this weekend, the Fourth of July weekend, but nobody remembered to tell the folks who are supposed to do the bursting.

They appeared mysteriously in the north country this past weekend and almost every place that served food, served drinks, or had something going on was busier than all those ants I had Joe Blossom take care of for me recently.

Someone told me they counted lots of expensive-type cars parked along the sides of the street. They quit after reaching ten inside of a short block.

Ten expensive cars in a block, I guess, could be an indication of how far Boyne City has come in the few short years since the road downtown was rebuilt. The indication might be true if this weekend we see 10 cars of the expensive variety inside of a half-a-block.

East Jordan is starting to move also. As I drove through the town last weekend, I saw many out working or enjoying their boats at the new marina. I wish Boyne City could have a municipal marina like that one to go along with the private one down the beach.

All we would have to do is sign up for one of those grants, and work like mad to get it after a few years of trying. Just like East Jordan.

Gee, it seems nice to have East Jordan have something over Boyne City for a change.

Writing about boats and water make me want to ask if anyone around Boyne really thought enough to send a letter to the Star of Charlevoix folks to see if they would want to have the Star of Boyne instead.

I am sure there may be enough folks around here who would be willing to donate money to build a dock that would be big enough for a boat of that size.

Or a boat that would be about 200 feet long and would make stops at many ports around the big lake.

I read recently, I think it was in the Free Press, about a boat that is a miniature cruise ship making stops at many ports up and down the east coast.

That sort of concept could work in the Great Lakes, even though the idea is not a new one.

I remember as a kid spending summer vacations in the Holland area, of seeing one of the last cruise ships to work the Great Lakes. I think it was the South American but it could have been the North.

The boat was tied up somewhere around Black Lake on the Holland side, just rusting and taking up space until someone sent it out to the scrap yard. I wonder what really became of that boat?

For those who may want to enter the risky business of cruise liners, of mini-liners as they are called, let me suggest an itinerary.

Starting at Chicago, take one day to cruise up to Milwaukee, then over to Saugatuck or Holland. Then a couple of days to come into Charlevoix, maybe come all the way to Boyne City and finally get to Mackinac Island.

From there, a short three-day cruise through the North Channel and down to the Tawas area. From there, a short cruise to Bay City.

Spend another three days and cruise to Detroit via several ports in Canada and the U.S. with stops at Port Huron and Sarnia.

From Detroit, cruise down to Cedar Pointe, over to Cleveland and then through the Welland Canal with stops maybe in Buffalo.

Then on to Toronto, Montreal and Quebec and out into the big wide river stopping somewhere just short of the ocean.

Then, as captain, you could turn the boat around and come back the same way, only this time, go up the St. Mary's and over to Duluth and Superior.

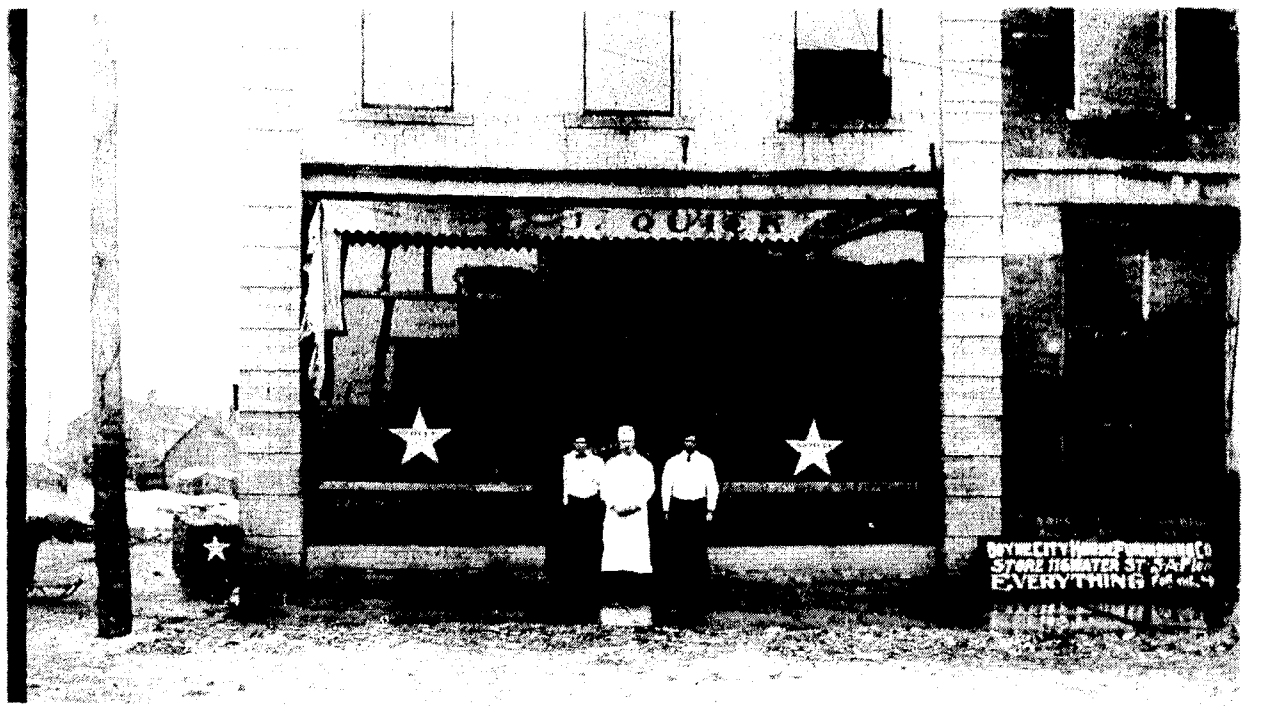

Each trip would work out to about a three- or four-day trip so you could get the tourists on long and short weekends.

Maybe the idea isn't feasible, but I'll bet before long someone will be trying it as the tourism thing is growing every day around here.

Probably won't cost over a couple of million to get the thing started, providing you could find a boat that would work.

Ahh, such things as dreams.

Remembrances

Perhaps one of the top spots for eating in Boyne City back about the turn of the century was at the Star Restaurant, although today, few can remember where in town it was located. Some think it was on North Lake Street, while others said it was located where the Dairy Queen sits today. Either way, it marked the beginnings of some great restaurants in town. This picture was sent in to us by Mrs. A. E. Loughry, a long time resident of Boyne City.

Marshall Sayles

What happened 211 years ago? Don't look it up, I'll tell you. A bunch of hot headed bellyachers signed a declaration and, with fists in the air, sent the bulletin off to that wicked king of England. The evil king had been squeezing the juice from their very lives, liberty and pursuit of happiness. People like Thomas Jefferson, Ben Franklin and old George yelled, "Enough is enough!" Pat Henry sprang from his seat shouting, "Give me liberty or wring my neck!" Others shot their mouths off, but history only wanted certain ones remembered.

dling around ain't acceptable if you are going to run for office.)

Now, the children of that disgruntled crew back there 211 years ago, are preparing again to celebrate their actions. Saturday is the big day, July 4th. Our independence will be glorified in all fifty states and territories including Boyne Falls.

Marchers will march, flags will wave, parades will parade, drinkers will drink and freedom's racket will be heard throughout the land.

But yet there is a pit in this cherry pie. Over the years we have piled up so much freedom we will soon have to think of more intelligent ways to wrestle with it.

I hope the reader will pardon me. All I wanted to say was that Saturday will be the 4th of July, Independence Day. It wasn't my intention to re-write the history book and throw it at you.

Column ender: I'm told that in Boyne City the secret of operating an efficient city commission is known only to those who have never been a member.

It should be top of the 'list'

Editor: May 30th, I wrote the City Manager Randy Frykberg, Ph.D. a letter concerning brush that is a traffic hazard at the SW intersection of W. Division and Hull Streets.

The brush continues to flourish, the traffic hazard grows. Unofficially, I heard the project had been put "on the list." It would seem that traffic hazards would head up some kind of priority list, possibly next to burning buildings or sink holes in the streets or even increased salaries for all hands. Maybe the City's insurance carrier would be interested concerning the management of traffic hazards.

A. G. Smith, B.S.

Troopers out in force over Fourth

According to State Police Director, Col. Rich Davis, state troopers will be out in force this Fourth of July holiday weekend to help prevent highway traffic accidents.

Davis said, "We've planned for an additional 1600 patrol hours as part of Operation C.A.R.E."

Over the holiday period, troopers will be paying special attention to violations that cause accidents such as drunk driving, improper lane use, speeding, following too closely, failure to use signals, and especially safety belt violations. The holiday runs from 6 p.m., Thursday, July 2, to 11:59 p.m., Sunday, July 5.

Over 50 Operation C.A.R.E. volunteer groups are cooperating with the effort. Volunteers will be conducting safety breaks at rest areas and roadside parks throughout the state. Motorists are encouraged to take a break from driving,

It isn't often you will find an elephant begging donuts, but this one from the circus that appeared in East Jordan last week came to Boyne City to try to create some interest in the show. He was fed a few donuts at the Bread Basket where he finished off the meal with a bit of red maple from one of the trees along the street.

cooperation with the townships, Welch continued, saying that roads have been paved in Wilson Township on Anderson Road at a cost of $55,000. Another $75,000 was spent in Eveline Township, along with $14,000 in Evangeline Township on Pinehurst Shores. Work in Hayes Township includes triple sealing on Burnett Road, Addis and Padgett and North Shore Drive in Melrose Township, graveling Addis Road in Boyne Valley Township, graveling and upgrading Springbrook from Thumb Lake Road to DeNise, depending on obtaining right-of-way. Grading, graveling and blacktopping will be done on Dietze Road from the Boyne City-East Jordan Road to one mile east with both Wilson and Boyne Valley sharing costs; and grading and graveling Church Road from Zenith Heights to the east end in Bay Township.

panies were higher as they did not know what to expect. C. H. Smith has worked with the city enough to know what some of the problems may be, according to Clerk Tom Garlock, consequently their bid was lower.

If the bids come in like this first phase, the city expects to be able to save almost a million dollars which the city commission may use elsewhere or reduce the amount of money being bonded.

This first phase of rebuilding the infrastructure is one of six bids the city expects to let including the repaving of streets. The first phase does not include the repaving of Lake Street. That bid will be let shortly, according to Garlock.

The only problem with the start of construction is that the newly hired city engineer was supposed to oversee the construction but he recently accepted a new job as an assistant county engineer back in the Upper Peninsula and will be leaving before the project can start.

Accordingly, the city commission agreed to allow construction to begin as soon as there is engineering representation to oversee the projects. The city expects to hire a new engineer to replace the present one shortly, but he may not be able to be on staff when construction is to start.

In other action, the commissioners purchased a new hot patcher trailer for doing road repairs to replace the one presently being used by the city crews. The cost was $5,985 and will be paid for out of the rotating motor pool funds.

The commissioners expected when construction was expected to start on the new museum and were told the bids were being studied to see if changes in the footings would make the building costs a little cheaper. The city is looking at having a floating foundation instead of 42-inch footings for the addition to the city hall.

When asked if Alice Street would be paved this summer, the commission was told property owners along the street are being asked to contribute 50 percent of the project cost. When they agree, the project will be included with other work around the city.

Garlock announced the new beach house at the Peninsula Beach will be open this weekend, while the city offices will be closed on Friday because of the holiday.

Commissioners asked the city to look into the costs of an underground sprinkling system for Veterans Park after hearing complaints about the brown grass.

only generates about $4,500 in revenues from the sports program it offers. Last year, donations purchased a new scoreboard and uniforms for the teams.

All of the budget approved Monday will be subject to review and amendment as the year goes on and the new superintendent comes on stream.

Board members also approved the holding of an election for the Char-Em School District. The district is trying again to get millage passed that would allow them to continue to offer the programs for the schools. This request would be for less than what voters in many districts of the Intermediate School District turned down several months ago. The board will be asking approval for four hundredths of a mill less this time in the hopes it will be passed. State laws prohibit the ISD to ask for the same thing in another election.

In the early meeting held to have a Truth-In-Taxation hearing, the board heard arguments to raise the millage in order to comply with what was voted upon. The hearing, caused by the Headlee Amendment, would have caused the board to lose .1187 mills of revenue because of the district having a 4.2 percent increase in property values. It means the board will get $3,275 more this year. Board members will act upon the request at the July meeting.

Wildcats take 1st place in senior league

BY SCOTT KNIPE

With only one game left to play, the final results of the Baseball Senior Leagues can be tallied.

The Boyne City Wildcats have taken first place with only one defeat, that one coming from the East Jordan Galmores.

Finishing second were the BC Astros with four losses, and three of those at the hands of the Wildcats.

Last week the Astros started it off with a sound victory over the East Jordan Plastics, 30-9. Chris Johnson went the distance for the Astros, giving up only seven hits and striking out eleven. Batting for the Astros Stacey Ernest had 2 singles and an inside-the-park home run, Wayne Avery had a single and a triple, Jim Abney a single and a triple, and Dean Alger had a single and a double.

Friday night, things changed for the Astros as they faced the Wildcats.

The Astros led the game 12-6 going into the sixth inning, but the Wildcats rallied, bringing in seven runs. The Wildcats held the Astros in the seventh inning, allowing no runs to come in, and in fact, the farthest they let an Astro get was second base where he was put out by a ball hit to second. Shawn Vondra hit the winning run for the Wildcats.

Coach Robert Towne was not available to supply statistics for the Wildcats' last week, but they had defeated the East Jordan Pharmacy and then lost their only game this season to the Galmores from EJ.

Woodlot can provide long term income

Farmers will find that a woodlot is more profitable in the long-run if it is incorporated as part of a farm enterprise rather than if the timber is sold for a quick financial fix.

"This type of sale happens every day."

Before selling, Koelling recommends that farmers hire a professional forester to assess the woodlot and recommend a management program for future development. The forester's recommendations will likely include selling the mature "ripe" trees, and setting up a management program that includes the removal of unproductive trees to provide room for future growth.

"Farmers, as a way of economic survival, should not look at their woodlots as a one-time mineable resource that will be logged off and then forgotten," says Melvin Koelling, Michigan State University resource specialist. "Farmers should look at what can be done to manage this resource so it provides them an income, not only for today but also in the future."

With the help of a forester, the farmer will know how many board feet are in the trees to be sold, and the value of the timber. This helps the farmer negotiate a fair price.

Koelling explains that there are many Michigan farmers who sold complete harvest rights to their woodlots as a quick financial fix. While the on-the-spot cash offer from a logger may sound attractive, if farmers don't know the true value of the timber, they may end up selling it for a fraction of its worth.

After making the decision to sell mature trees from a woodlot, Koelling recommends that the farmer request sealed bids from several loggers. This often results in higher returns for the trees sold. To protect the woodlot for future growth, the farmer should have a well-written contract that spells out exactly what trees are to be removed and who will be responsible for clean up after the logging operation is complete. A sample timber-sale contract is available from Cooperative Extension Service offices.

"Farmers will know exactly how many bushels of corn are in a bin and what the market price is before they sell, but they are willing to sell a woodlot without ever knowing what the value of the timber is," Koelling says.

Most woodlots in the state are not properly managed and produce only about one-third of their potential, Koelling says. In southern Michigan, a woodlot has the potential to produce 300 board feet per acre annually, but most are producing about 100 board feet. Based on a harvest every 5 years, a woodlot producing 300 board feet annually can provide farmers with an additional $60 per acre of yearly income, depending on the species harvested.

Properly managed woodlots are not as vulnerable to market fluctuations as agriculture land, Koelling says. Farmland prices have declined rapidly in the last several years while woodlots have held their own or actually increased in value.

Children sat in awe as sparks flew and loud cracks were heard during the demonstration of electrical power put on by Top O' Michigan crew workers. The reason for the demonstration was to teach children during the last days of school how dangerous electricity can be if it is not used right.

Elementary students end learning about electricity

In anticipation of summer, Top O' Michigan Rural Electric Company appeared at Boyne City Middle School for their 3rd annual electrical safety demonstration to the 8th grade class. Students were reminded that even activities such as kite-flying, target practice (at insulators), tree climbing, swimming, golfing, playing the radio or blow drying hair can be dangerous if done near high tension power lines, during electrical storms or in the bathtub.

Terms like circuit breakers, fuses, short circuits, volts, amperes and transformers were explained and demonstrated using Top O' Michigan's portable electrical safety set-up.

It was emphasized that a person is in trouble if they become the link between electricity and the ground; electricity always follows the path of least resistance. The procedure to follow if one encounters a live wire, the reason birds can sit on high-tension lines and the danger of using an electrical current near water were also discussed.

By the end of the session, students had had a good review of the electricity unit they had studied earlier in the year and had been made conscious of the great benefits that come from electricity as well as the dangers such electricity can have.

All students came away with a good healthy respect for electricity and ready for a safe and fun summer.

County Crop Walk planned

Saturday morning, September 19 is the date for the 1987 Charlevoix County CROP WALK and plans are underway to exceed last year's $5,290 net income, which was one of the highest returns in the state for a county of its size. The Christian Rural Overseas Program (CROP) uses the funds collected not only to provide emergency food to the world's hungry, but they now include a program outreach in refugee resettlement; advocacy for the poor and global education to help people help themselves.

There is an urgent need for people to work on this year's planning committee. Anyone who is willing to assist the hungry and poor in this way is urged to come to the next meeting of the group on July 7th, 7:30 P.M. at the First Presbyterian Church, Williams Street, East Jordan.

Sponsored by 32 member denominations of the Church World Service and Church Women United, the program started with 283 box cars of farm produce donated by farmers and others and destined for the hungry overseas. It was first run by the Michigan Farm Bureau and many farmers are still actively involved. Since that time, more than $8 million dollars have been raised in Michigan and the program has been expanded to include assistance to the poor in this country in emergencies. It also tries to assist the world's poverty stricken and hungry to dig wells and improve their farm practices so that they can aid their situations by self-help.

State Director David Bower congratulated those who took part in last year's WALK but pointed to the great need and urgency that still exists when he expressed the hope that even more people would take part this year.

More information about the event can be obtained from the Rev. Philip Schairbaum at 547-5803; the Rev. Michael Conklin at 582-7672; or Mary Glenna Malpass, 536-2505.

Sesqui, sunshine highlight travel this week

Statewide Sesquicentennial celebrations and continued hot weather should help boost Fourth of July travel 6 percent over last year and contribute to a record-setting $8.7 billion summer tourism season, reports AAA Michigan.

"Bolstered by one of the best Memorial Day holidays ever, the summer started strongly and should continue that way through Labor Day," said AAA Michigan Touring Manager James Drury.

Overall, the State Travel Bureau expects a record $14.5 billion in tourism revenues to be generated this year, up 6 percent over the record $13.7 billion produced in 1986. About 60 percent of that revenue is collected during the summer travel season, which is extended this year because Labor Day is on Sept. 7.

Motorists are expected to travel a record 870 million miles during the 78-hour holiday period, a 5 percent jump over the 830 million miles traveled during the 1986 holiday, according to the Michigan Department of Transportation. The holiday officially runs from 6 p.m. Thursday (July 2) to midnight Sunday (July 5).

A key ingredient to a successful July 4 is the large number of holiday celebrations scheduled, including Detroit's International Freedom Festival, the start of Traverse City's Cherry Festival, Bay City's Fireworks Festival and Mackinac Island's Stone Skipping Contest.

Hot weather through much of June has helped push state park campground reservations 16 percent ahead of last year at this time with record mid-June use at some facilities. Last July 4 holiday, 42 of 43 Lower Peninsula state parks filled at least one night and similar use is expected this year.

Reservations at private campgrounds are up over last year and many southern Michigan facilities are booked for the July 4 weekend. Sites are available in the central and northern sections of the state, but reservations are recommended.

Among the attractions reporting strong attendance increases so far this year are Greenfield Village in Dearborn and Mackinac Island, both up 20 percent and the Gerald Ford Presidential Museum in Grand Rapids, up nearly 12 percent. Mackinac Bridge crossings are up more than 10 percent.

Other key indicators show AAA travel routing requests are up nearly 12 percent to Lower Peninsula destinations and more than 4 percent to the Upper Peninsula over this time last year.

Motorists will find gasoline prices about 2 cents per gallon higher than this time last year with self-serve no-lead along main state highways selling for an average 96.4 cents per gallon.

During last year's 78-hour July 4 holiday, 23 persons died on Michigan roads. More than 50 percent of the fatal accidents involved alcohol. Of the 18 victims who had safety belts available, only four were buckled up.

For the 23rd year, AAA's "Bring 'Em Back Alive!" Holiday News Service will provide hourly traffic and tourism reports to more than 140 Michigan radio stations. Bulletins will be broadcast from 3 p.m. Thursday, July 2 through 11 p.m. Sunday, July 5.
