Boyne says no to sewer, water outside city

Boyne City commissioners went on record at the Tuesday noon meeting telling Wilson Township officials that there is no plan to provide water or sewer services to any major development outside of the city limits.

The resolution was approved after Steve Moody presented it to the commission saying that he felt the city should let the township know the city has not made any plans to permit the sewer or water work be done to allow a developer presently involved with trying to get a project approved outside the city limits on Hull Street in Wilson Township.

Moody felt "It is only fair to let the township know our feelings now." He added later that within the city there were many residents presently not being served and he felt the city should serve those within the city first.

The developer is planning a 160 to 180 unit development on lands that will not pass the County Health Departments requirement for sewers and was hoping to ask the city for permission to use the city sewer system. He was to pay all costs to use the city's services.

Moody stated that he was not against the project, but wanted to express the concerns of the residents who had just voted for infrastructure repairs so the city water and sewer could be extended to those within the city.

He mentioned that if the developer wants annexation to the city, and gets the approval of the voters if a vote is needed, then offering sewer and water services would be another matter.

In other action, the city approved hiring the Granger Engineering firm of Gaylord to oversee, inspect and provide material testing for the proposed infrastructure work that will be done this fall. The agreement was asked because the commissioners wanted to have all work done engineered and done properly under the guidance of an engineer.

There were plenty of visitors to the Cornell University and U.S. Navy training vessel when it visited Boyne City Monday. The boat, a 51 foot Morgan Out Islander was once seized as part of a drug arrest and was given by the government to the school to be used as a Navy ROTC training vessel by the students going through the program. Fourteen sailors were aboard including two women. From Boyne City, they left to sail to Mackinac Island after giving tours through the boat all day Monday. The boat also took part in the Tall Ship show that was held on Grand Traverse Bay during the Governors Convention.

Evangeline Twp hears lake management proposal

Evangeline Township Board members were one of the first to hear about the proposed Lake Charlevoix Management Plan Monday night at their monthly meeting when County Planner Larry Sullivan made a presentation he is making to all townships on the lake.

The plan was formulated by a special committee under the auspices of the county planning board that has been meeting over the past several years and have developed a draft form that may be up for further work or approval by the county planners.

Sullivan presented the plan, showing the township trustees some of the highlights and explained what the management group was trying to do to help protect the interests of the lake within the county.

With charts and graphs, he explained to the board how the density of boats on the lake was determined and what the total density may be at some time in the future. He outlined a plan that would help in the eventual control of boats on the lake, although he said that presently, the lake over the 4th of July weekend was only being utilized at one-third of the capacity the group has determined to be the maximum boats the lake can hold.

Sullivan also showed what a two inch rainfall can do to the watershed, and through soil determinations, showed how much water the system of soils can hold. He said that many areas of the lake would be suitable for development, while the many

Top, Sheriff start rural watch program

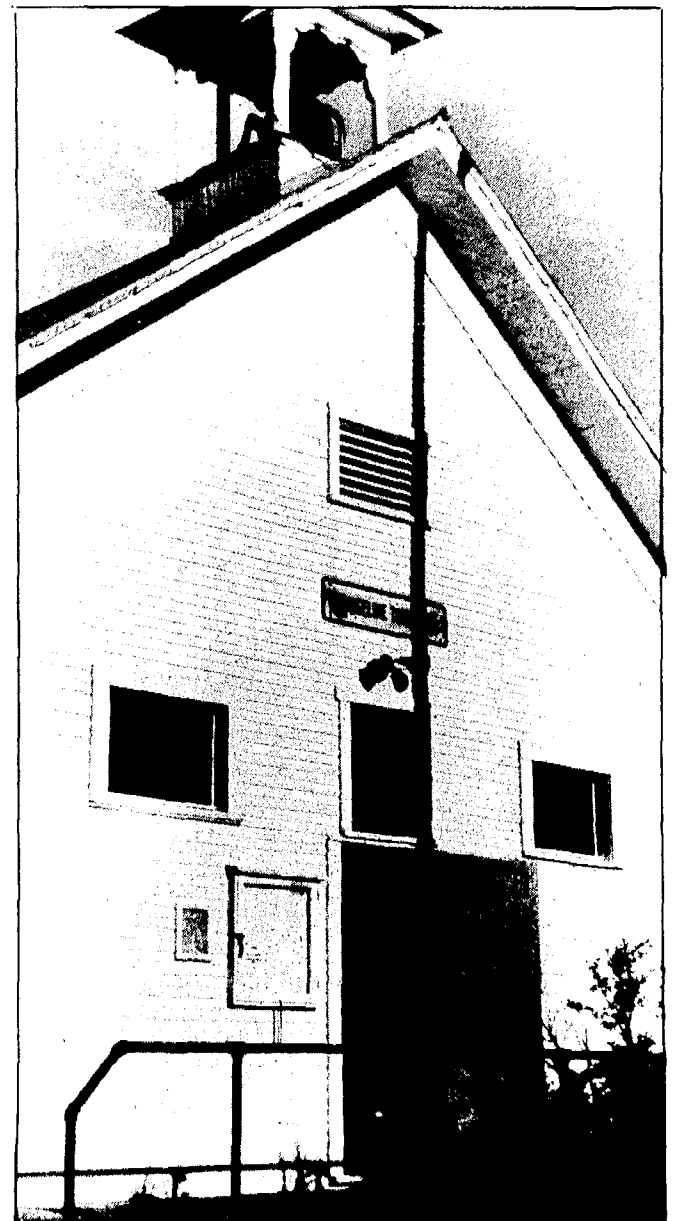

The Charlevoix County Sheriff's Department and the Top O'Michigan Electric Company have joined forces in a major effort to deter rural crime.

Under the new program, "Good Neighbor Watch," rural electric employees will use their two-way radios to report suspicious activities, crimes, accidents and other potentially dangerous situations to the Charlevoix County Sheriff's Department through the co-op dispatcher, said Sheriff George

T. Lasater.

The crime prevention program, founded by the Michigan Sheriff's Association (MSA) and the Michigan Electric Cooperative Association (MECA), was introduced Thursday at the Top O'Michigan Electric Company in Boyne City to members of the rural co-op and the Charlevoix, Antrim, Otsego, Kalkaska, and Crawford County Sheriff's Departments.

Even though Evangeline Township Supervisor Bessie Van Dorn had to stand on a chair, she wanted to be the first one to officially ring the bell at the top of the Evangeline Township Hall. The bell, which has been idle for the last 40 years, was repaired by Trustee Doug Shields at no cost to the township in about three hours. Van Dorn used the bell to call the meeting Monday night.

Jottings

BY JIM SILBAR

I think the Castle has been given a bum rap. Especially after having attended a concert at the site last weekend.

A bum rap, because over the years, the problems of developing a tourist attraction like the outdoor theater have largely disappeared as the firm that is running the operation has learned to deal with the crowds.

They also have trained the staff, and there is a lot of staff, how to and what to do as the people arrive for the show, and how to move them out after the performance is over.

They are even asking folks not to stand up on the benches. It used to be that if you wanted to see the show, you had to stand on the bench, only because the people in front were doing the same. All the way down to the first row.

Now, they are only standing and jumping. I figure that with a few more years, those with the front row seats will be sitting down so the rest of the folks won't have to stand themselves up to see what was going on on stage.

Sure, I will admit that the firm has had problems. Problems dealing with drinking, drugs, thugs and outhouses. Some as recently as last week when a small occurrence got out of hand in the media accounts.

But each problem has been tackled, and attempts in the right direction are being made by the management.

They realize that if they run a clean operation, then the people will want to come back, will bring friends and ultimately, have a good time listening to the show.

I am sure that when some of the other large outdoor operations started, they had their problems too. I can remember tremendous traffic problems near Pine Knob when they started out many years ago.

And I can remember reading the reports the sheriff made after each Castle performance. It was almost a joke in the office to see how many people were busted or reprimanded for not following sanitary rules.

Sure, some of the ideas the Sheriff has asked the Castle folks to do have been done, and others that would cost untold thousands haven't. Those can wait, I figure, until the promoters learn a little more and have more money to work with so some of the things could be done.

But, like the concerts themselves, the performers are brought in to do a show, and I am somewhat thankful that someone is willing to spend the money for the guarantees necessary to bring some top ranked performers to this area.

It helps make our location a little more rounded as far as the "quality of life" idea that many keep talking about happen.

Sure, it would be nicer if the sound wasn't blasting out, but sometimes you need that much sound to have the band heard over the crowd cheering and yelling.

those in the cheaper seats on the manmade hill have the right to hear the music, too. And those that live near the theater, also have a right to peace and quiet. Somewhere the two will work things out a little better.

I often wonder though, if those who are complaining would do the same if the Guy Lombardo Orchestra played an evening at the Castle.

We could auld lang syne all the way to town.

Thoughts while waiting for our wild blackberries to turn from green to red to black:

I was buying a pair of shoes the other day. "This pair hurts my feet," I said to the clerk.

"Don't worry," he said. "You'll be able to get them on after you have worn them for a while."

A young fellow told me the other day that he found it quite exciting to be left alone, especially when his girl friend was with him.

I have tried several times to learn to play the guitar. I've never been able to get with it. I think it's because I don't have the hair for it.

President Reagan told the press all he knew about the arms for hostage deal. It took up five minutes of his afternoon nap. Personally I think the arms deal and all that stuff is as disgusting as a batch of wild raspberry jelly that won't gel.

Coming home from town the other day I could not find my wife. I looked everywhere, upstairs, downstairs and in the ladies' chamber. Wow! That's the last time I'll do that.

A recent discussion centered around the old controversy that man sprang from monkeys. I do not remember springing from a monkey. But I do recall that when I was on the foolish side of 20, I sprang from a woman who threatened to tell my parents.

A friend of mine said his wife was having trouble with the mirror in the bathroom. When he asked her what was wrong she said they were not making mirrors like they did when she was a girl.

Ronald Reagan has been the head man for nearly eight years and he still has not done a thing about that great volume of typographical errors called the dollar bill.

How much do you get paid for saying that column in the paper? Oh, I get by.

That's terrible. What do you mean? Things have gotten pretty bad when you have to be foolish to make a living.

I may be wrongly knifed for saying certain things in this column. I hope not. I have found upon occasion that it's disturbing enough to be rightly knifed.

That's it. I'm going out to check the progress of our wild blackberries, pricklers and all.

Trying to understand Washingtonese

Editor

Well, they have done it again. Those two jokers that used to work in the White House office of the National Security Council have coined yet another flowery phrase that stumps my powers of understanding. Col. North that gung-ho, red blooded, self-proclaimed all American hero says the reason he and his boss Admiral Poindexter lied to everybody and their brothers, including both houses of Congress, cabinet heads, the American people and even to each other, was to furnish the President of the United States with something called plausible deniability about their shenanigans in the Iran-Contra scam. I am still struggling with the last bit of rhetorical double-talk the Washington boys threw at us (selective candor) and now we have to deal with this little gem of ambiguity. Come on now, can't any of you out there tell me just what in heck they are talking about?

I expect perhaps that the extra hot summer must be affecting all those witnesses we have been watching and listening to lately during the Iran-Contra hearings. They seem to be suffering from loss of memory and a bad case of confusion between the truth and out-right lies. They also have had problems with the shredding and burning of office papers and keeping tabs on the millions and millions of dollars from the sale of arms to Iran. Even the fifth amendment and immunity can't white wash this one. The question that comes to mind of course is how in the world could these wonderful heroes of ours promote democracy anywhere using the very same tactics that all dictators use to grab power? All the while thumbing their noses at the democratic process that is sponsoring them and the people that are paying the bills? Maybe some of enthusiastic Reaganites can answer me that one too. Care to try?

But wait, its not only in D.C. that the heat has gotten to the people. Right up there in Harbor Springs its effect is being felt too. They have a handwriting expert up that way that claims Col. North and Ronald Reagan are sure enough great American Heroes and as such should be honored by one and all. I think she should be advised that sometimes the right hand knows not what the left one is up to thus letting all kinds of mischief slip by her and foul up her analysis. There also dwells up there a man that thinks contributing to a fund to pay North's lawyer would be a real neat idea. Now this good old boy has sure been out in the sun for too long. He should seek shade immediately or risk complete melt down. I don't know if Harbor Springs is proud of these two or not but I am sure glad they don't live in my hometown.

Lawrence Paternoster, an exchange student from Belgium, took a short time from one of her frequent bicycle trips around the area to pose for this picture. She is staying at the Katie and Bob Bobowski residence during her five week stay here in the US and is enjoying the experience.

Lions exchange student enjoying short Boyne City, United States visit

Although her stay in Boyne City was relatively short, Lawrence Paternoster will be taking back several memories of Boyne City and Charlevoix County. She will be leaving August 15, after a five week stay at the home of Katie and Bob Bobowski on M-75 South.

Paternoster is one of about nine students who are participating in the Lions Club International Youth Exchange who have come to Michigan for a five week stay from their native country, Belgium.

All of the students are between the ages of 15 and 20, Lawrence is 19, and all have paid for their flight over to the U.S. and back. While here they are staying at homes of Lions Club members.

According to District Governor Roy Bruneel, there is very little cost involved for the hosting families and they are always on the lookout for families that may wish to host an exchange student for the short period of time.

Bruneel also said it was difficult for the Lions to find Americans who want to become exchange students and go overseas.

But to Lawrence, that was not a concern as she said she was worried about an interview, thinking the reporter would ask all kinds of questions about her native land. She even brought books she could show someone about her nation.

She is from Charleroi, a medium sized town near the French border. The area is similar weatherwise to Charlevoix County, although it is a coal mining district.

She arrived three weeks ago, landing in Detroit. She says she was amazed at the number of blacks she saw working in the area. She was also amazed at the size of the city and the buildings. Everything was larger than what she thought or was used to in Belgium, or any of the other countries she has visited. Those included Turkey, Egypt, Israel, Malta and Yugoslavia.

Like most students who grow up in Europe, she can speak three languages, English, French and a little German. Of the three, she says she prefers English because she wants to learn how it is used here in America.

Her goal is to go back to school and get a degree in Hotel, Restaurant Management. She anticipates a two year program when she gets back this fall.

While she is here in Boyne City as the guest of the Bobowski's, she has seen many sights the average tourist doesn't get a chance to see. She rides her bicycle everyday, looking at the flora and fauna next to the roads she travels. She has also participated in the Boyne City Swim School and is thinking about joining the annual swim across the lake in a couple of weeks.

The family has taken her on many trips in the area, going to Mackinac Island, where she bought some fudge, as well as other attractions in the area.

She says she is a snow skier, and wishes she could come back for a few runs on Boyne Mountain. But, since that was not possible this summer, she is planning on going to a Detroit Tigers baseball game and a trip through Greenfield Village soon.

She loves traveling and discovering other ways of life, she says, and being a 19 year-old, she will have plenty of life to see.

The Bobowski's will be missing her when she goes back as they jokingly say she had to do the washing and dishes while she was here in order to pay for the stay. That wasn't really the case, but she did wash a few dishes and do a few loads of laundry while she was here...in between riding her bike and swimming and taking trips, and talking to groups, and even getting set up for a blind date with one of the local fellows.

MSHDA sets new limits for home loans

New purchase price limits for homes financed in the Michigan Mortgage credit certificate program have been announced by the federal government, the head of the Michigan State Housing Development Authority (MSHDA) said today.

Terrence R. Duvernay said the new limits will take effect for mortgage loan commitments issued after August 9, 1987.

"The Michigan Mortgage continues to be an excellent way for young families, especially first-time homebuyers, to purchase a house," Duvernay said. "The credit certificates lower the cost of the buyer's mortgage interest by as much as 2.5 percentage points, and that makes the financing much more affordable for families just getting started."

In Charlevoix County, the maximum sales price for a new house will be $71,060. For existing homes, the sales price limit will be $54,890.

Income limits are unchanged, at $30,000 for buyers of new houses and $28,000 for buyers of existing homes.

Gov. James J. Blanchard launched the program in April 1986 as the first full-service mortgage credit certificate (MCC) program in the country.

Duvernay said approximately 1,000 families already have bought homes through the Michigan Mortgage, and that another 3,600 can be assisted in 1987 and 1988.

MCCs provide homebuyers with a federal income tax credit that gives them more money to qualify for a mortgage loan and to make monthly house payments. The amount of the credit is based on 20 percent of the annual interest paid on the loan.

Participating lenders set their own interest rates, loan terms and down payment requirements; the cash flow from the MCC has the effect of reducing the homebuyer's interest rate by up to 2.5 percentage points.

Duvernay said a typical buyer in the Michigan Mortgage program has an annual income of $22,600 and is purchasing a home costing approximately $43,000.

MSHDA's funds are derived from the sale or allocation of mortgage revenue bonds, not from state tax dollars.

For more information on the Michigan Mortgage credit certificates, contact (517) 335-2039.

In Charlevoix County, the lending institutions taking applications for the Michigan Mortgage credit certificates: First Federal of Michigan, First Financial Mortgage Company, Lanbrecht Company, Northwestern Savings and Loan Association, Old Kent Bank of Petoskey.

Wetlands hearing looking for citizen input

The Wetlands Permit Process Review Committee has scheduled a public hearing to provide an opportunity for citizens to express their view points on Michigan's wetlands program.

The public hearing will be held August 21, 1987, at 9 a.m., in the Law Building Auditorium, just west of the State Capitol, Lansing.

The Committee was established this summer by Department of Natural Resources Director Gordon E. Guyer. Its charge is to review the wetlands permitting process and report back with recommendations by October 15.

The Committee has met for the first time and begun discussions of the issues they will be addressing over the summer. Two additional members have joined the Committee.

The two members are: Prentiss M. Brown III, Mackinac County Prosecuting Attorney and Ann Smith of Petoskey.

Members of the public are urged to submit information to the Committee by attending the public hearing or submitting their views in writing to Greg Lyman, Assistant to the Director, Michigan Department of Natural Resources, P.O. Box 30028, Lansing, MI 48909.

It was hoped that the city could have an engineer on staff before the work was started but according to City Manager Randy Frykberg, it doesn't look like a city engineer will be on staff until late fall as he is still doing interviews. The work for the Lake Street sewer is supposed to start after the Labor Day weekend.

wetlands along the shore would not, because of their soil types.

Sullivan is presenting the plan to the townships so that when the county starts holding public hearings on the proposed plans, officials will have some knowledge of what the committee has been spending the last few years developing.

Sullivan said the county is planning on holding the hearings in September at three sites around the county.

After the presentation, Sullivan fielded questions from the audience and heard a suggestion from Trustee Bruce Janssen, who asked the county to consider writing enforcement procedures into the plan.

In other action, the township hopefully settled several zoning violation problems that they have been struggling with for the last two months.

Randy Kruzel, who had parked a mobile home on land that he owns for repair, was given two more weeks to complete the repairs and move the home. He suggested everything will be done within that time span.

Jerry Matts also appeared in front of the board as he was cited for doing repairs and selling parts from automobiles on his property. After showing the trustees a plan, he left with the board in agreement.

Other problems included the Boyne City Landfill, which has become an ongoing concern of the township and one which they will continue to pressure Boyne City to get capped.

They delayed making a purchase of a snowblower for the township along with a tape recorder. The board had been asked to purchase a recorder so that meetings could be taped. The one brought to the meeting, it was decided, was not exactly what they were looking for, and asked to see what other recorders were available.

They agreed to have the township hall chimney inspected and discussed the cost of fencing around the township cemetery.

for the time involved, and if the new city engineer comes on board, the contract will stop. The agreement was set at a cost not to exceed $23,000 for the $1.1 million part of the project.

Frykberg told the Commissioners that a meeting was held between the Harborage developers and the area residents concerning the dust problems and that rapid action was and is being taken.

Linda Christensen then presented plaques to the city and the police department thanking them for the work they did during the Great American Lock-up which was held last June.

Christensen also introduced the new president of the Mens' Slo-pitch league who in turn gave the city, along with Christensen, another $1500 to help pay for the installation of lighting at Rotary Park.

If one wanted to make it sound grand, one could call it a lawn party. But if you wanted to get closer to the spirit of the thing, you'd call it a backyard party although, strictly speaking, it wasn't, what with guests milling around out front as well as in the back. The host, though, who should know, said it was a bash. Furthermore, he pointed out that it was his 6th Annual Bash. He also said that it was a great party, except for one thing.

He talked about it the following afternoon after all the scattered remnants of revelry had been transferred from the grounds into three huge trash bags. He and the half a dozen members of the clean-up crew had dropped down on the grass or draped themselves in various positions on the picnic tables. They gazed for a time at the bright blue sky and then got down to the business at hand, the post-mortem of the party.

All agreed that everyone had a good time, or seemed to anyway. Certainly they couldn't help but enjoy the music. The neighborhood musicians had never sounded better - nor louder - thanks to their new amplifying gear.

A gratifying number of people turned out for the event too. The party watchers estimated that at the peak time, which they figured came around 11 o'clock, the crowd numbered nearly 100. And therein lay the problem.

"The bash that peaks at 11, lasts till 7." The host spoke in a slow singsong. Then he acknowledged that it wasn't quite that late, or early.

He had gone into the affair tired, having spent all his spare time for a couple of weeks working on the yard and getting the food and drink arrangements made. So he wasn't in top form and ready and willing to deal with guests in the middle of the night.

And he hadn't counted on it. The bash was supposed to start at noon. And some avid volleyball players, of which he was one, had assembled and were in action by mid-afternoon. So that came off as planned. But then, in line with a trend that started several years ago, more and more people arrived later and later in the evening. And so, of course, they stayed later, later than he planned. Why?

The backyard loungers explored the question. First of all, they agreed that no one likes to be the first, or among the first arrivals. So, maybe more people were delaying longer in order to make absolutely sure that they didn't come too early.

Then there was the matter of some people being constitutionally unable to arrive anywhere any time but late. They were born that way and didn't seem capable of changing any more than "night" people can change into "day" people, which might well be another reason for the late arrivals. Maybe, unbeknownst to the host, every year he was inviting more and more "night" people, or "late" people.

So what could be done about it? Short of cutting off the beer at 11 when the band stopped playing, which was rejected as chintzy and Unamerican, nothing. It was a pure and simple case of "that's the way it is." You just accept it. It only comes once a year after all. Besides, like the folks in "Carousel" sang after their clam-bake, everyone, even the tired host, "had a real good time."

"Good Neighbor Watch will supplement the efforts of other successful community programs, such as the 'Eyes and Ears' program of Consumers Power Co. and Detroit Edison," said the Sheriff.

"The difference," he said, "is that this program will focus specifically on the rural areas of Charlevoix County, which are patrolled primarily by sheriff department deputies."

Raymond Kuhl, general manager of MECA, said this program will eventually be coordinated with sheriff departments in 51 Michigan counties.

"The rural electric co-ops are pleased to participate in this program as a community service," Kuhl said. "Because their crews travel hundreds of miles through rural areas every day, they can be an extremely helpful resource for law enforcement."

Co-op employees are not authorized to pursue or apprehend a suspicious person, but are trained to observe and report suspicious behavior, according to Sheriff George T. Lasater.
