

Boyne Falls sets date for bonding issue

Boyne Falls voters will be asked to approve an almost million dollar bonding proposal that would allow the school district to build four classrooms, an expanded gymnasium and some other rooms at the school in a special election tentatively set for September 26th.

The school board approved the setting of the date at their meeting held last week. The amount of money that will be needed to build the addition is still not determined, according to school board president Bill Cousineau, as the first estimates from the architectural firm were about $800,000. That may be higher when final estimates are received he said.

The firm, DEM of Gaylord, has been working with the board for the past several months and has presented several possible plans for the board to look at.

The board finalized on a plan that would build four new classrooms on the elementary side of the present building, expand the present gym into a restroom area to make a full sized gym, and would build additional restrooms and storage facilities in other areas of the school.

The reason for the board looking at the expansion of the school is the continuing pressures of increased enrollment, especially in the elementary areas. Projections by school administrators show the enrollments to continue increasing.

In other action taken at the first school board meeting of the year, the board elected Bill Cousineau president, Art Sawarski vice president, Karen Seelye secretary and Dave Carson treasurer.

The board then authorized the levying of 32.97 mills — the amount agreed to at a Truth in Taxation hearing a week before.

They also accepted the resignation of Marilyn Bradford, a social studies teacher and coach who will be going to law school this fall.

They then accepted the low bid of NBD-Petoskey of 5.75 percent for the $450,000 tax anticipation note. The money will be used to provide cash flow until the school district starts receiving tax monies in February.

BC approves agreements, landfill capping to start soon

Final closure of the former Boyne City landfill is expected to get underway immediately with the city's engineering firm, Granger Engineering of Gaylord seeking bids this week to get the job started.

The grant agreement giving the city the money to close the landfill was approved at the noon Tuesday meeting along with a closure plan. Both had been worked out between city officials, Granger Engineering and the Department of Natural Resources over the past few months.

The city was formally informed they had won a grant through the Clean Michigan Fund just prior to last week's noon meeting. The city had known they were a recipient of the grant for some time but had not heard from the state until the agreement arrived by mail.

After a week of looking over the proposal, the commission agreed with all of the conditions the eight page document has and City Manager Randy Frykberg was authorized to sign it.

Commissioner Bill Grimm told the rest of the board "The city residents are taking the brunt of this, but we had no alternatives but to accept." He added that he thinks very few municipalities will be going into the landfill business to handle refuse because of the changing rules and conditions covering landfill operations.

Frykberg told the commissioners the city's cost of the closure will be around $160,000 with the city having to come up with half of the amount immediately.

He told the commissioners that the city will have to do some additional belt tightening and some of the projects that were in the works would have to be put off until the landfill costs are paid off.

The state portion of the agreement will be giving the city $490,875 as their share.

City attorney Bill McTagart said the city should be commended for accepting the responsibility for the closure of the agreement. Other commissioners have said that the townships should have shared in the cost of the closure as they allowed their residents to use the landfill when it was open.

The city closed the landfill to refuse in October, 1985 and has been trying to figure out how they could finish the capping of the landfill. Two other grant applications were denied before the present grant was accepted by the state.

The bids for the work to do the closure are expected within two weeks, and would be let for work to start shortly thereafter.

Details of the closure agreement include the picking up of solid waste and debris from the site and disposing of it in an approved area or at an approved disposal area.

The land will be sloped to less than a two percent grade and will have not less than two feet of soil compacted to a certain density. The bid will include the capping of the landfill with either clay or a membrane that will make the landfill impervious to water.

The final cover will be seeded and stabilized before the end of June 1989 and a final inspection by the state will occur not later than July 15, 1989. The engineering firm will have to provide a certified statement that the landfill was closed properly and in agreement with the closure plan.

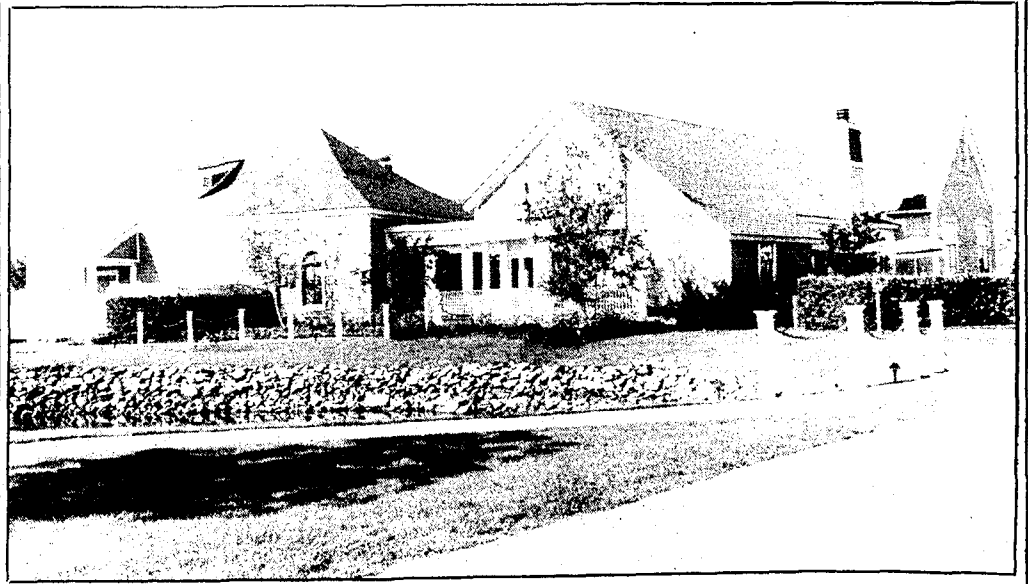

A means of venting the landfill area will have to be provided and the city will have to monitor the landfill to make sure the vegetation is growing and the cap remains.

The landfill area involved contains about 23 acres.

Planners reject rezoning in north Boyne

A heavy agenda and a crowd of people faced the Boyne City Planning Board as they met Monday to decide the fate of five requests. After it was over, the crowd of people were relieved and only one of the requests was approved.

Approved was a request for a conditional use permit to allow the Boyne City Nursery to build a new facility on the corner of Kunert and Roosevelt Streets. The request was granted conditional on the group coming in with a site plan before they build.

This was the second time the nursery school has appeared in front of the board. Last year, they received conditional approval for a site on Division Street.

City Manager Randy Frykberg told the board members in the staff report that this site was better all around for the school. It addressed some of the concerns the other site may have had dealing with noise and traffic. The city staff recommended approval and the board agreed.

A request by partners Peter Donlin, Bruce Traverse and Don Keskey to rezone 21 lots in the Spring Arbor Plat of North Boyne was turned down by the board after many people in the audience disagreed with the plan.

The request would have allowed the partners to build a single multiple family residence on property they own on Lake Charlevoix.

According to the partners, they are allowed to build four duplexes on the property, but would have rather constructed one six family dwelling. They said they would only be using 25 percent of the four lots instead of See Planners Denials/Page 10

EJ OR organizes school board for '88, '89

At their organizational meeting on July 11 the East Jordan School Board selected their new officers, according to an official spokesperson.

Director of Business and Operations Ruby Dipzinski said the new positions filled were: president, Mary Jason; vice-president, Larry Chanda; secretary, Ed Drenth and the new treasurer is Herb Griffin.

The school board also accepted Gary Ciszewski and Barbara Malpass as two new board members at the organizational meeting.

The board authorized the deposit of all funds for the school district at Northwestern State Bank and also decided that all regular East Jordan School Board meetings would be held on the second Monday of each month.

The board also reviewed the standing committees and decided to make the appointment of these at their August meeting, according to Dipzinski.

At the regular meeting the East Jordan School Board accepted the resignation of the high school English and Spanish teacher, Martha Moore. "We accepted her resignation with regret," Dipzinski said.

Two teachers were hired by the school board for the upcoming school year. Todd McNitt from Grand Rapids and a Central Michigan University graduate. He will be the new Junior High Math and Science teacher. Marie Haley, originally from Boyne City and an Eastern University graduate, will be a lower elementary teacher.

Also at the meeting, child-care leave was granted for one year to 1st grade teacher, Peg Myers.

Eastern Kentucky handcrafts on display in BC

Some of the traditional handcrafts of eastern Kentucky will be shown in northern Michigan Tuesday, August 2, from 10 a.m. to 6 p.m., when Morris Fork Crafts will bring a number of its handmade quilts and other crafts to the Presbyterian Church in Boyne City for display and sale.

Morris Fork Crafts is an Appalachian cooperative supported as a mission project by the Presbyterian Church to promote traditional handcrafts of the area.

Morris Fork is located in an isolated "holler" in Breathitt County in the heart of Appalachia and Kentucky's coal mining region. Here, people live closely with their kindfolk, sharing farmwork, child care, and other family responsibilities, including teaching and learning quilting, basketmaking, woodcarving, and other crafts.

Morris Fork Crafts, as a cooperative, is encouraging greater participation in producing these handcrafts and is providing a sales outlet for them. Since Morris Fork Crafts was organized nine years ago, the number of craftsmen has grown from under 30 to over 100, and sales have grown from about $20,000 to over $90,000 a year. The craftsmen receive 80 percent of the selling price of their work.

As a Morris Fork spokesman explains it, "This supplements government assistance, the only consistent income of most of Appalachia."

While many quilts may be bought "off the line" at the August 2 showing, others may be ordered for future delivery. In this way, buyers can select their patterns, colors, and size if what they want is not shown.

Besides quilts, there will be dolls, cornshuck and wooden flowers, baskets, woodenware, clothing, furniture, and many other items for those who appreciate true Americana.

The women of the Presbyterian Church will serve a salad luncheon from 11 a.m. to 1 p.m. Tickets, at $3.50 are available at the Applebee

Coterie, 111 North Park Street, Boyne City, on the day of the showing they will be available at the church door. For further information, contact Paygi Willson at 582-9428.

The Positive Side

"The days of big opportunities are not past."

Jottings

BY JIM SILBAR

It was interesting last week as I tried to relive a little in the past by going to the Bob Dylan Concert at the Castle.

No, I wasn't a hippy yearning for the protest songs the man is known for from the sixties, and no, I wasn't there to enjoy some of the things the protest songs produced.

What I wanted to see was how a sixties type performer handles the crowds of the eighties.

I imagined that perhaps half of the crowd in attendance had never heard of the "good ol' days" of the protest period when the youth of America was trying to sing out for personal freedoms.

But, when I looked the crowd over, I would estimate about half were my age or slightly less and were there possibly for the same reasons I was. To hear one of the leaders of the sixties continue on.

I will say that I was impressed with the opening act, called Alarm, for the type of music they were playing. It fit the present style of today and did not reflect what was to follow. The English band set me and the crowd into thinking they were a good band and enjoyed entertaining the crowd.

But Dylan was another story. I think the man just needed the money. His performance was not what I would call one of the best. He had little rapor with the audience, hardly speaking in-between songs. It seemed that if he were singing from memory, he was just putting in his time until the manager collected the money from the promoter.

His hour and a half performance was just that, a performance.

Maybe I expected a little more from the man, who has turned into an almost gray haired tone poet. Some of the songs he performed I remembered well and others were just past songs. He did a few numbers from his latest album, but not enough to continue to draw fans.

That was one of the things about real performers. Like Sinatra and others of his stature. They continued to draw fans to his music, his styling of a song, and his rendition of new material. Because of that, he continues to sell out where ever he goes.

With Dylan, as I looked over the small crowd, I could not sense that ideal.

Maybe I am just starting to show my age. And my lack of concern about protest performers from the past trying to make it today. ***

Onto better things. This is the era of things growing on peoples lawns.

Signs. As people are seëming to line up behind their favorite politician, more and more yard signs are growing on the lawns of the community.

The most hotly contested races must be the sheriff's and the probate's races just due to the large number of things that pass for political statements these days.

I have almost made up my mind to vote for the person who spends the least on yard signs. So I guess that means I will only vote in those contests where their is no contest.

But it won't be any fun. After all, half the fun of campaigning is to see what the other guy is doing to attract your vote. If you haven't been visited at the door by some candidate, I am sure you will within the next few days.

All in all, I am looking forward to the race for the votes just to see who will be able to do the same thing all over in October.

The 10th Annual Boyne City Independence Day Race is over, and it was a rousing success. I'd like to thank all the people who helped out - Phil Johnson, Von Seamon, Donna Moll, Gary Mellon, Kyrstin Omiatek, Ruthann Knysz, Jamie Lindsay, Edythe Fuller and Andy Place - all of whom got up extra early to help set up the course and register runners. Thanks to Jim Howell who called 1 mile times, and to Jim and Sue Douglas, Erika Omiatek and Hillary Lutze who staffed the aid stations on a hot morning. Thanks to Mark Muniak, Arleen Kuhn, Russ Fuller and Judy Hubble, who helped at the finish. Thanks to the Bread Box Bakery for their generous donation of pop for the racers.

The time and effort all of these people contributed on a busy holiday is greatly appreciated. It made our race an exciting event!

Give us your poor....

We all know that the first requisite of a political candidate is to get on television and promise to do something for the poor people. They seem to say that the rich are nasty and if elected we will help the poor.

Well, I read somewhere, perhaps during my Sunday School days, that the poor will always be with us. Every national candidate you hear today seems to be staking his political life on that statement.

We have eight electrical wall plugs in every room in our house. Most of them are covered by furniture so we can't get at them. It's the second most common puzzlement in our modern way of living, right next to leaving your car outside because the garage is so full of stuff you can't get it in.

It always makes me mad when someone takes my picture and it looks exactly like me, warts and all.

Like most everyone else I have to take the bitter with the sweet. But it seems to me that the bitter too often beats the sweet three times out of five. Somehow the sweet just doesn't seem to have the strength to crowd out the bitter.

The other day one of life's bitters stepped to the front, taking over. We had gone into the store to make a couple of purchases. Nothing bitter about that.

Not until we discovered they had played a dirty trick on us. They had lowered the prices on lots of things we didn't need at all.

At home, with three bags full, I announced that we were not going into that store again until they raised their prices to where they belonged.

What a bitter day. My wife thought otherwise.

As I write this I'm beginning to think that a husband's bitter should harmonize with a wife's sweet, shifting marriage from a ho-hum give and take existence to an outright hilarious affair. I mean, just so long as the price is right.

The above is in direct contrast to the time I went into a hardware to buy a couple of batteries for our radio. They didn't have the right size. In looking around I found that even the stuff I didn't need cost too much.

Sometimes I get to thinking that no one reads this column and all that I'm doing is yelling down a well.

Sometimes I get to thinking that no one reads this column and all that I'm doing is yelling down a well.

Now that I am getting older I hope that when my summons comes, St. Peter will amend the rules and admit a man from Boyne City.

North Point fundraising passes $100,000 mark

FINGER FOODS
Sometimes I think that we are reverting back to the cave man's style when it comes to eating, and in many ways it seems like a good idea. I love our casual, easy, healthful and delicious life style with our food. What we call finger foods were common for the early settlers of our country, though they did make many soups and stews.

According to "Commonwealth History of Mass." by A.B. Hart from 1630 to 1689. "The serving of meals was relatively simple. Forks were not in use until the later part of the century, so food was held where possible in the hands. Spoons and knives were in use but instead of plates, wooden trenchers were used, being shared by two persons. Families and guests did not use individual drinking cups; all drinking from the same cup or tankard."

I am glad that is not necessary for us to go that far back—our casual style at the dinner or picnic table is all for fun, even for the host and hostess. My granddaughter, Barbie, gave a delightful party in honor of a family member's birthday. It was a perfect menu for a hungry crowd.

BARBIE'S MENU

- A choice of beverages
- Nachos with a Cheese Dip
- Sloppy Joes
- Fruit Salad
- Pasta Salad

Birthday cake with pink champagne for toasts
This delicious food was served buffet style on pretty paper plates and the only reason for a fork or spoon was the two salads. Everyone made his own sloppy joes and sat where he pleased.

This started me thinking, "Just what are finger foods?" What a list! Tacos, pita and regular sandwiches, all kinds of fresh fruits and vegetables cut into convenient sizes and shapes served with a dip, hard-boiled eggs, devilled eggs, pickles, olives, cheese with crackers and whole apples, pears, plums, grapes, peaches, not to mention celery, carrot strips, green onions, radishes and nuts. How about those delicious sugar peas, eaten raw? Then there are all kinds of breads, rolls, canapes, hors d'oeuvres.

Home grown corn on the cob and fried chicken are both perfect finger foods and of course pizzas. Here is one to make at home—a delightful family or company meal.

- DEEP DISH COTTAGE PIZZA
- 1 (13 1/4 oz) pkg. hot roll mix
- 1/2 lb. bulk hot Italian sausage
- 1 clove garlic, finely chopped
- 1 (16 oz) container cottage cheese
- 1 (12 oz.) can tomato paste
- 1/2 cup chopped onion
- 1 teaspoon oregano leaves
- 1 teaspoon salt
- 1/2 cup chopped green pepper
- 1/2 cup grated of Parmesan and Romano cheeses, each

Prepare hot roll mix and let it rise as package directs. Press into bottom and sides of greased 15 by 10 inch jellyroll pan. Preheat oven to 375°. In skillet brown sausage and garlic, drain. In medium bowl, combine cottage cheese, tomato paste, onion, oregano and salt. Spread on prepared dough. Sprinkle with sausage and green pepper. Top with grated cheeses. Let rise 30 minutes. Bake 20 to 30 minutes. Refrigerate leftovers if you have any.

And speaking of bread, try this for an old-time flavor; great with dips, spreads or just butter and jelly.

PUFFY FRIED BREAD

- 4 cups flour
- 1 1/4 teaspoon salt
- 3 tablespoons sugar
- 3 teaspoon baking powder
- 3 tablespoons shortening
- Milk (about 1 1/4 cups)
- Salad oil for frying

Sift flour, measure and sift again with salt, baking powder and sugar. Cut in shortening and add milk to make a soft dough, just firm enough to roll. Cover bowl and let stand for 30 to 60 minutes; then roll 1/4 inch thick on lightly floured board and cut into diamond shaped pieces. Heat about 1 inch of oil in a frying pan to 370° to 380°. Add a few pieces at a time, then turn at once so they puff evenly. Then turn back to brown both sides. Drain on paper towels. Serve with butter. Makes 4 doz.

How I love it when they garnish our plates with those huge, bright red strawberries at our favorite restaurant. They look like a bouquet of flowers when served on a leaf of chard or curly endive; and better yet we love those chocolate dipped strawberries; a perfect ending for a very special meal.

CHOCOLATE DIPPED STRAWBERRIES

Make them the easy way in the microwave. Just melt a 6 oz. package of real semi-sweet chocolate bits in a small glass bowl on DEFROST in the microwave. Stir. Dip your choice strawberries (with hulls on) into the melted chocolate partially covering each berry. Put on waxed paper or serve immediately.

Here is another easy dip for strawberries or other fresh fruit. CREAM CHEESE AND MARSHMALLOW DIP

- 1 - 8 oz. pkg. cream cheese
- 1 - 7 oz. jar marshmallow creme

Combine marshmallow creme with the cream cheese; mix until well blended. Serve with strawberries.
You can even make S'mores at home using your microwave. 8 graham cracker rectangles 1 1/8 oz. milk chocolate candy bars 4 marshmallows

Top 4 graham crackers with 1/2 candy bar and 1 marshmallow each. Cover with remaining crackers, wrap individually in paper napkin or towel.
Arrange cookies on a glass tray with the seam side of the napkin or towel down.
Microwave on HIGH for 2 minutes. Let stand 2 minutes before unwrapping and serving. Makes 4 cookies.

Fundraising to preserve North Point, a unique natural area near Charlevoix, reached a major milestone during the closing week of 1987 as the total cash donations and pledges to the project surpassed the $100,000 mark. According to Tom Bailey, Executive Director of the Little Traverse Conservancy and North Point Project Coordinator, passing the six-figure mark was made possible because of the support the project has among people in the Charlevoix area.

"The preservation of North Point is going to happen because the people want it to happen," Bailey said. Citing support from business, industry, environmental groups, professionals, resorters and local year-round residents, Bailey indicated that support for the project is "virtually universal. The fact that the $100,000 mark has been passed after only two months of systematic fundraising is evidence of that support," he said.

The $100,000 figure represents one-third of the $300,000 the Conservancy hopes to raise from the local community. When a $400,000 grant requested from the State Natural Resources Trust Fund is added, the total project cost of $700,000 is reached. A decision from the Natural Resources Trust Fund Board on the $400,000 request is expected on January 6, 1988. Bailey indicates outstanding natural characteristics of the property and the projected local participation. "Local support means a lot to the Board," Bailey said, "and especially when an area as special as North Point is involved." Other significant factors the board will consider include the presence of three threatened plant species and the fragile nature of great lakes sand dunes, Bailey added.

Parents can ensure youngsters coping with heat

Parents play a critical role in helping young children survive hot weather. Children out in the hot sun can be easily distracted by other children and play activities and can experience heat distress before they even realize what's happening.

According to Jean Brown, Michigan State University Extension human development specialist, it's up to parents to monitor their child's activities during this unusually hot weather and to make sure that they are properly clothed, fed and supervised to prevent heat exhaustion.

Make sure that children wear light, loose-fitting, dry clothing made of a fiber such as cotton that absorbs sweat and wicks it away from the body, she says. If you have an infant, leave off their plastic or rubber pants as much as possible. If you have toddlers and you don't mind, let them run around the privacy of the yard without clothes. If your child is going to be in the sun, it's important to remember to apply a high SPF sunscreen to protect them from the sun's rays.

If you have an infant in a crib or a small child in a stroller, be sure shade and ventilation are adequate. Check the child's skin occasionally to make sure it's cool.

Encourage activities that will cool youngsters down, Brown says, such as splashing in a tub or wading pool or running through the sprinkler (if your community permits sprinkling). You may find that your child doesn't want to nap during the hot part of the day, but you should encourage rest times in shady spots, under a tree or on a breezy porch. Have the child listen to a story or play a board game. Sometimes such quieting activities will encourage sleep.

Children tend to have picky appetites during the hot weather. Be prepared for it and don't force them to eat. Keep their meals light and encourage nutritious snacks between meals. Keep candy and ice cream to a minimum. Brown suggests. Instead, encourage them to eat fruit or homemade frozen fruit juice bars. Serve water or lightly sweetened fruit-flavored beverages such as lemonade instead of relying on soft drinks for fluids.

Never, under any circumstances or for any reason whatsoever, leave children in a locked, parked car. The internal temperature in a parked car, even with the windows cracked, can rise to over 100 degrees in a matter of minutes.

After the two puny spells of dribbling that tried to pass themselves off as rain on a recent Sunday afternoon, my daughter, Emily, said, "Why don't you write an 'Atta Boy!' column for the rain like the one you did for the sun?" It sounded like a reasonable idea then and, after consideration, it still does and so this is, with reservations.

To review the column written two and a half years ago when the sun was doing as poorly as the rain is doing this summer, I suggested declaring as a national holiday, Sun Appreciation Day. I figured that this would give the sun what maybe it felt that it lacked, a pat on the back, to get it to working more regularly. I also made other suggestions for showing the sun appreciation including hauling the clouds out of the way for a few days to make the sun's work easier, a project to be financed by the sale of buttons. The buttons were to be big, yellow ones with the slogan, Sun, You're Fun!, printed on them in blue lettering.

Such positive attention for the sun I consider appropriate, especially around these parts where the sun is not noted for overplaying. Granted, it may seem as though it is this summer but it's not that the sun is overacting. Rather, it's the rain that is underacting, a turnaround in the usual conditions.

Normally precipitation falls off some in summer but it's gone too far this year. That is except to those people who get a little funny in the head after more than two rainy days strung together. Psychologists, by the way, advise these people to take up boat building as a means of keeping their hands and minds occupied during dreary days.

Anyway, back to the crux of the matter—the problem with rain. Unlike the sun, the rain tends not to know when to quit once it gets started. So giving it carte blanche, no strings attached, as I gave the sun would be too much.

I'd rule out a national holiday in its honor as sending too hearty an encouraging signal to the rain. Ditto for a special song and an exercise record featuring it, things I suggested by way of honoring the sun. As for the slogan and buttons, they could serve a useful purpose with the right message on them.

A few come to mind right off: Rain. You're No Pain, Sometimes; Go Ahead And Rain On The Plain, But Not Too Much; Rain, You're Fine, As Long As You Don't Get Out Of Line. The buttons could be as big as the ones for the sun but grey with green lettering and a wide, red border to caution the rain against acting excessively. Turning its watering business into swamp making as it's been known to do in the past, fits into that category.

The proceeds from the sale of the buttons could be passed out in grants to scientists willing to research not only how to get the rain started when needed but how to get it stopped when it's not, the latter being as important as the former.

This is it, Emily, the closest I can come to an "Atta Boy" essay for the rain. I know that the rain's needed and I hope it comes soon and in sufficient quantities to do some good. I hope not too sufficient, though, because I'm too hot to even think about working on my raft.

CONCERN
It was concern that led Robert Hoffman to become a foster parent to ten young people, while raising four children of his own as well. It is the same sense of concern—for youth, for the elderly, for the community and for justice—that will make him an excellent Probate Court judge for Charlevoix and Emmet Counties.

The way it was and the way it is

BY REG SHARKEY

It was in the era of the Great Depression. Wall Street and nature had conspired to deal the American people a double whammy.

About the time I was a gangly teenager living in the sleepy postera lumbering town of Big Rapids.

Times were tough and in my junior high school year my father passed away.

Then along with the stock market crash drought hit the country. Out west the heat became oppressive. Grain farmers and cattle ranchers prayed for rain that never came. The fierce heat seared the land and coupled with a relentless westerly wind the topsoil was swept away. Huge billowing clouds of dust arose into the atmosphere, drifting eastward, obliterating the sun until every state to the Atlantic seaboard felt and saw the results of nature's tantrum.

Around my small world of Mecosta County drought was also prevalent. Farmers were hard hit. Crops and pastures withered. Already hard hit by the country's financial condition many farmers faced ruin and bank foreclosures.

Graduating from high school in June of 1931, things looked bleak for me. Unlike today, readily available scholarships didn't exist at that time, and if they did, the few that were available were subject to favoritism, going to youngsters from prominent families, and not to any poor boy hankering for a higher education.

But then my mother married a string butcher and meat market proprietor. So I became employed in the various activities connected with the business. And the market was flooded with cattle, cattle that lacked pasture. Desperate farmers sold cattle for a song.

I remember my stepdad buying eleven head of cattle from deacon calves to a two year old steer for $100.

Fortunate in having a slaughter house set in a creek water course that afforded pasture for fattening gaunt cattle, we made out alright, even with hamburg selling 3 lbs. for a quarter.

But it was pathetic to see hard-working farmers capitulate to the terrible drought, following their western brethren into a hopeless future.

We've had drought years since those terrible days that have been recorded in print and song. To wit: Johnny Ray and his off key singing of the ballad "Rain when you're gonna rain again rain, make the rivers deep again rain rain?"

As I write this copy on this Sunday afternoon a gentle rain has begun for which I am thankful, and as I turn my face skyward I'll say: "Send it down Lord, we can't come up after it."

Grayling Milltown Festival July 28, 29

It should not be a surprise in late July if a visitor to the Grayling area observes many individuals walking around in early 20th century clothing, because the area's Milltown Festival is based on the lumbering days and the style of garment is the normal costume for the affair.

The annual celebration begins on July 28 with Heritage Day when the locals and many participating visitors dress in the old-fashioned costumes for a stroll down Michigan Avenue. Also headlined for that day are children's games, sprint canoe races, the Artrain, ice cream social and a street dance.

On July 29 the world famous Budweiser AuSable International Canoe Marathon will pit racers in the grueling 240 mile jaunt from Grayling to Oscoda. The race is likened to the effort put forth if a person were to shovel coal over his shoulder for 14 hours straight. The event begins this year at 9 p.m. but day long entertainment is on tap so visitors will come early to the center of town.

Children's canoe races head the day's program along with the opening of the Arts and Crafts Show. Many day long demonstrations and sales are also featured.

Hot weather care of your pets

Almost everyone who owns a pet has commented that the pet's behavior is most human at times. But when it comes to hot weather survival, our pets really are like humans.

Overheating or heatstroke is the most dangerous heat-related problem treated by veterinarians, says Hugh T. Fauser, Holt veterinarian. Symptoms of heatstroke in your pet include excessive panting, lethargy, weakness and eventual collapse.

Dogs with long, heavy coats, overweight dogs, elderly dogs and breeds with extremely short or pug noses are more susceptible to heatstroke than others.

Cats tend to be less susceptible to heatstroke because they tend to be less active during the hottest part of the day.

You can prevent heatstroke in your pet by observing a few simple precautions. Make sure your pet has access to shade and plenty of cool drinking water. Don't exercise your dog on hot, humid days. Never leave a pet in your car on a hot day. Even with the windows cracked down, the internal temperature can rise to 120 degrees or higher in minutes.

If you suspect your pet is suffering from heatstroke, you need to act quickly. First get it to a cool place, such as an air-conditioned building or a basement. Encourage it to drink cold water. If possible, check its temperature with a rectal thermometer. If the pet's temperature is 104 degrees or below, these steps will usually cool it sufficiently so it can recover. If its temperature is above 104 degrees, cool the animal with a cool water bath and call your veterinarian.

Another problem to watch for in hot weather occurs when an animal is wounded. Be alert for any wounds or moist sores. They can become infested with fly maggots in a matter of hours, leading to severe skin damage and infections. Keep all wounds and sores clean and dry and keep the animal indoors until it starts to heal.

Animals, like people, have a harder time dealing with the heat when they are overweight. Keeping your animal in shape should be a year-round objective that will pay off during the hot summer months.

Hot weather breeds hot tempers

Hot weather can be as stressful for families as major problems such as illness or lack of money. When the weather heats up, so can our tempers, says Jeanne Brown, Michigan State University Cooperative Extension Service human development specialist.

Hot weather depletes us physically, emotionally and mentally. Tempers flare easily, nerves become frayed and patience runs out quickly. We lack the stamina to deal with routine daily problems.

As our bodies become physiologically stressed, we may find our thought processes becoming muddled. We don't communicate well to people who don't have the patience to listen well. Spouses can get angry with each other over trivial issues, and parents and children can easily end up in shouting matches.

The first step in coping with this situation, Brown says, is to realize what's happening. The second step is to make changes in our behavior and environment that will enable us to cope with the overheated situation.

The first thing to do, she says, is to make sure the physical environment is as comfortable as it can be, given the temperature. If you don't have air conditioning, you can temporarily escape to an air-conditioned mall, library or movie theater. This will help in the short run, but you will eventually have to come home.

Look around your house to see where a strategically placed fan will increase air flow. Lower blinds or shades against the morning and afternoon sun. If you have a yard with trees, try moving out into the shade and breeze.

Second, make sure your clothing is comfortable, loose-fitting and made of natural fibers such as cotton which will absorb perspiration and wick it away from the skin.

Plan simple and light meals that don't require heating up the kitchen. Have plenty of cool fluids around for family members to drink, including ice water and fruit juices.

Give yourself permission to slow down. Reducing your expectations and activity level may be the most important coping strategy you can employ, Brown says. It's OK not to vacuum or do laundry when it's 98 in the shade. Try to adopt the tropical attitude of resting during the hottest part of the day.

Finally, try to improve your communication as simple as your clothing and meals, Brown suggests. This is not the time to find fault with your spouse or children or to initiate serious discussions. Postpone making important decisions or having serious discussions unless they're absolutely necessary.

Remember that the hot weather will eventually pass and the issues can be addressed when the weather and tempers have cooled down.

DNR bans use of off-road vehicles on state land

Director David F. Hales of the Department of Natural Resources today banned the use of off road vehicles on state owned land in the Upper Peninsula and extended a ban on camp and cookfires to include supervised state parks and campgrounds in the U.P. Only portable gas stoves and bottled gas grills may be used in those areas affected by the bans.

These two new forest fire prevention efforts were also instituted in Hiawatha National Forest by Forest Supervisor Ken Holtje. Hales also announced no permission would be given to hold any type of off road vehicle rallies or events on any state owned land in either the Upper or the northern Lower Peninsula.

A Governor's proclamation banning open burning remains in effect statewide. Campfires in containers and campfire rings will still be allowed in supervised campgrounds and state parks in the Lower Peninsula.

Hales said the cooperation by members of the public has been tremendous and no doubt has prevented a major catastrophic wildfire. "I am extremely impressed with the response by the public to these emergency measures," Hales said, "and I know we can count on continued vigilance and adherence to these new regulations."

Hales noted that even with the good cooperation so far, the extreme fire danger continues as the worst drought in Michigan's history shows no sign of abating. "This past weekend was extremely difficult and dangerous, perhaps the worst since the start of the drought. We lost another 700 acres," Hales explained, "including several structures. We have to increase our vigilance." Hales said off road vehicles have been the cause of several fires and warned there would be increased patrols and enforcement efforts to insure compliance with state law which requires approved spark arrestor mufflers on all off road vehicles. "We intend to strengthen our patrols and the public should know that anyone who is responsible for starting a fire will be held liable for the suppression costs," Hales explained, "We intend to prosecute to the fullest extent any violation of these emergency measures."

The bans include all open burning of flammable materials including debris, brush, leaves, rubbish, grass stumps, crops or crop residue, stubble and refuse on adjacent to forest or grass lands; fireworks of any kind on or adjacent to forest or grass lands, except those conducted under state permit; all pipe, cigar and cigarette smoking except at places of habitation, authorized campgrounds or in an automobile or truck.

Planners denial

50 percent of each one.

The planners heard many in the audience say that the rezoning, if allowed, would be considered spot zoning and the residents of the area did want to change the present R-2 single family district.

They were also told that if the site was approved, the city may be facing many similar requests along with waterfront. Frykberg told the planners they should decide whether the property should be R-2 or R-3 multiple family before looking at the use proposed.

The feeling of many of the audience was the city should put a cap on rezoning requests along the lakefront as it would, as Larry Martin suggested, "open a can of worms. Everyone will want to rezone to build condos."

Other opinions suggested the proposed project would create additional dust and dirt, increased traffic flow in the residential area and would create sight barriers for those wanting to see the lake.

After the public input, the planners went through the criteria for making a zoning change. Item after item on the list was answered against the rezoning. The planners then voted to deny the request.

The partners, builders of the three section condominium off Michigan Street in North Boyne, seemed to accept the denial, but the same group threatened to sue the city some years ago when they wanted to build the three units.

Since that time, the city has a masterplan in effect and feels that if the group wants to sue, they will have firm grounds to defend because of the masterplan and the other items needed to protect the citizens and residents.

Two requests were tabled by the board after they found they did not have all of the information needed to make the decision.

The first request was to give a conditional use permit to Kerry and Randy Kruzel for a two-family dwelling in an R-2 district. The house is presently used as a two family dwelling at 709 Jersey Street but it lacks the required amount of square footage to become a two-family residence.

Neighbors also filed complaints about the rezoning and asked that it be denied. The planners decided to table when they could not learn how long the dwelling has been used as a two family building. The owners were to come back to the board next month with all of the information.

The other matter tabled was a request to build a new hangar at the airport. Planners decided they wanted the airport board to present them with a master plan before granting any more requests for site plan reviews.

The proposal to close and vacate a portion of Oak Street was also denied by the planners after it was determined that several utility easements are on the road.

The planners then went to the ballots to determine the winners of the Marvin Loding Community Pride awards and determined that the Mellon residence should be honored for the residential division, Stafford's One Water Street for the business section and Control Engineering for the industrial Classification.

The Beaver Island Historical Society will hold its 9th Annual Museum Week from July 18-23. Designed to acquaint both islanders and summer residents with the cultural, political, and natural history of the island, Museum Week will also present a daily program for children. Highlights will include a live reptile show, a field trip with CMU biologists, and workshops with artists/teachers from the Beaver Island Arts Project.

The live reptile show, which inaugurates Museum Week for the children, will be held Monday afternoon, July 18, at the Community School. Adults accompanied by children will be welcome, too. In the evening, all ages will enjoy the music of island musicians on the porch of the Museum. Featured will be Claudia Schmidt, formerly of Lake Wobegon and now of Beaver Island, and Terri Bussey of the Inter-Tribal Council.

Tuesday afternoon, CMU biologists will conduct a children's field trip to island animal habitats. For adults, a house tour of places of historical significance will be held from 11-3 p.m.; in the evening, Dr. Donald P. Heldman, archeologist for the Michilimackinac State Park in Mackinaw City, will lecture on Beaver Island's newly discovered archeological site and its significance to the history of North America. He will be introduced by Terri Bussey, the discoverer of the site.

Since 1988 is the 150th anniversary of the birth of the island's beloved "doctor," Protar, the Historical Society will celebrate this event with an Open House at his home on both Wednesday and Friday afternoons. On Friday evening, Antje Price, Protar biographer, will discuss his life and legend and her final conclusions as to his identity.

This year's annual CMU lecture will be given Wednesday evening by the Biological Station's director, Dr. Jim Gillingham, on the tuatara. Dr. Gillingham, affectionately known on island as the "snakeman," researched this rare reptile last winter in New Zealand. He promises slides and videotapes of the tuatara's strange habits and sex life.

Of special interest to the children will be Friday's workshops by Josh Broder and Pat Hough, island summer residents from New York City, who are conducting the Beaver Island Arts Project. Partially funded by the Michigan Council for the Arts, the project emphasizes the use of various art forms to increase self-knowledge and expression. On Friday morning, Broder will have an acting workshop for children 12 and under; Hough will lead a sketching workshop in the afternoon for the same age group.

Beaver Island Historical Society holding Museum Week

As in other years, island artists and craftspeople will exhibit and demonstrate their special skills from Wednesday through Saturday afternoons. Children will enjoy a pet show and treasure hunt on Wednesday and Thursday, and Museum Week will end with a square dance for all on Saturday night. Beaver Island can be reached by ferryboat twice daily from Charlevoix or by Island Airways from Traverse City, Harbor Springs, Pellston, and Charlevoix. For more information, call the Beaver Island Information Center: 448-2502.

Construction zone accidents show increase

While traffic accidents on the whole increased 3.5 percent from 1985 to 1986, construction zone accidents increased 33 percent. Fatal traffic accidents only increased 3.9 percent in 1986 but fatal construction zone accidents increased 59 percent. In 1986, the last year for which these Michigan State Police figures are available, there were 7,136 accidents in construction zones, 22 resulted in fatalities and 1,990 involved injuries. Overall 23 people were killed, an increase of 52 percent from the 11 killed in construction zone accidents in 1985, and 2,913 injured, and increase of 25 percent from the 2,179 injured in 1985.

The State Police figures also show that most of the accidents occur within moving traffic both travelling in the same direction, or when one vehicle is parked. The leading contributing circumstances to the accidents are that of following too close and being unable to stop; failing to yield the right of way and/or disregarding traffic control; and driving left of center or improper overtaking or lane usage. Seventy-six percent of the accidents were with passenger cars on dry surfaces during daylight.

"These figures demonstrate to the Michigan Road Builders Association", according to Executive Director Lawrence W. Martin, "that motorists need to be cautious and drive carefully in highway construction zones. In the past we have stressed the need to drive carefully for the safety of construction workers. There also needs to be concern for the safety of the driver and their passengers. Of the 22 individuals killed in 1986, 10 were drivers and another five were their passengers. For their own safety and for those travelling with them, we urge motorists to be extra cautious when they see the construction cones, barriers, and signs."

The Michigan Road Builders Association also indicates that motorists are likely to see an increased number of lane restrictions and/or detours as a result of more road construction underway to preserve our existing system.

Contractors, again this year, will be working on maintaining accurate and adequate signing and safety devices to direct and warn motorists of construction zones. Martin adds "It's a two way street. Contractors will do all they can to make these areas safe but we need motorists to be aware of this danger and drive carefully."
