

Divers retrieve crashed airplane

Divers and volunteers worked through Sunday to raise the airplane that was involved in a tragic crash into Lake Charlevoix during the Red Fox Regatta held over the Labor Day Weekend. They raised the plane to the surface with airbags under the wings and over the engine. Once on top of the water, they slowly pulled the plane to Boyne City where it was loaded onto a truck for hauling to the airport. The diving crew was contracted by RMJ of Ludington by the insurance carrier for the plane. It was removed to an airport hangar where officials from the Federal Aviation Administration and the National Transportation Safety Board will be determining the cause of the crash.

Large crowd urges school to start buses

Facing an angry crowd for the second time in a week, new superintendent Bob Nakoneczny heard the complaints of residents who want busing returned to the Boyne City Schools.

After voters last June did not approve the levy issue, the school board had no choice but to eliminate busing for children in order to try to keep the school budget from going too far into the red. State law requires the school system to operate at a breakeven point as a minimum.

Nakoneczny listened to parents and residents at a meeting held last Wednesday that was called by a group of residents who want the busing put back into the budget.

For two hours Nakoneczny listened to the complaints and finally told the community in the almost filled bleachers on one side of the gym, what they wanted to hear, he was the new man in town, and he has not had a chance to develop a new school budget, or work with the present budget to see where the money was going.

He promised the people, that no matter what the outcome of the election next Monday, he would get the people involved in the budget developing process so they could see where the money was being spent.

He faced much the same during a public hearing Monday that was part of the monthly school board meeting.

Carl Dulin, one of the group who had asked for a special meeting last week that was turned into an informational hearing, asked the board if they have received their annual audit back from the auditors as a budget is only a financial tool. He told the board that it is time for the school district to live within its budget.

Dulin asked the board to consider a resolution that would put busing back prior to the election. His request was not followed through by the board.

Several other parents spoke on the issue, mostly condemning the school board for their actions in not putting the buses back on the road.

When school board members had a chance to speak, only two did speak to explain the reasons why and try to answer some of the questions the parents had asked.

Board president Richard May told the audience the board, after losing a millage request that would have added millage enough to pay for busing, listened to a group of voters who asked the busing issue be separated from the educational part of the operational millage. They thought the "shopping list" approach would allow the schools to win an election that would keep the operational millage.

The board then pared the list down to those items that would maintain the educational level of the schools, and the busing issue was listed separately for the June election. In that election, an operational issue was approved, but the busing issue was defeated. The board felt they had no choice but follow the wishes of the voters and eliminate busing.

May also told the audience, another part of the problem is the growth of the student level within the school district. He said the system has had 160 students added in grades K through 4 over the past several years which required added staff.

He also said the school district has not asked the voters to approve additional millage since 1980 and the school system has used its savings to pay for the increase in costs of operation.

Nakoneczny also told the crowd at the hearing Monday what he intends to do with the budget. He said that even if the busing issue passes, the school system will still be in the red and will have to find areas within the budget that could be cut in order to make the budget balance.

Several school board members cautioned the crowd that if the issue fails, there still will be no busing because of the deficit and they should not expect to see the board or the administration be able to find money for busing out of the general operational funds that are committed to educational needs.

Former school board member Bill Christensen asked the board to consider that the operational funds are designated also. He said that, like the busing issue, the funds that were approved by the voters last June are committed to providing and maintaining the present educational level and should not be tampered with in order to find money for busing.

The board has taken no action concerning the busing issue and is waiting for the outcome of the election next Monday before deciding what they can or will be able to do.

They said if the issue passes, the buses would roll on the Wednesday or Thursday after the election. Board members expressed hope they will be able to

Several hundred parents and interested residents started without buses and parents have had to of the Boyne City School District came out to hear bring students to the three area schools. Many ex-what the school board was planning to do about pressed their views on the matter, like Betty John-providing buses for the transportation of the neck, as members of the board and the audience children to and from the school. The school system listened.

City okays sewer, water changes

Boyne City Commissioners approved several revisions in previously approved infrastructure contracts that will allow the city to pave more streets, add additional sewer and water lines, and in general rebuild the city so there won't be problems for many years.

Approved were change work orders on two contracts totaling $195,800.

The first contract change work order involves changes in the estimated pipe that was found after work started and was needed once the workmen were in the ground. In some cases additional pipe was needed to replace bad lines for several hundred feet. Other lines were larger or smaller than thought and needed to be sized appropriately for the future.

Other changes included the laying of pipe in sand or on stone when the ground would not support the pipe. Additional paving is also included in the contract change because of the additional work.

The other work order change was on the third contract let by the city and involves sewer main reconstruction on Pine Street from Mud Lake west to mid-block between Grant and East Streets.

Sutliff is head of the transportation committee for the county. Others looking on included Michigan Department of Transportation officials as well as other county commissioners and road commission officials.

"After a while, you don't even know it's there." David Cardin, a British visitor to Michigan, was talking about the conversion to the metric system, something his countrymen went through several years ago. As they can and often do, no doubt the British endured the change with a stiff upper lip, a quality Americans admire in them but show little interest in imitating. On the metrics issue, they'll not likely make an exception either. Americans have had opportunities to "go metric" starting about two centuries ago and they've not cared to do so and that's that, or so they thought.

Thomas Jefferson, third President of the United States as well as a Founding Father, proposed that the young nation switch from the British system of measurement to the metric not long after the French introduced the new system in 1790. He got little support, though. Americans were too attached to a system that includes among its basics, the foot equated to 12 inches which, legend has it, came from when King John of Magna Carta stamped his foot on the ground and decreed that, henceforth, the length the imprint would be the foot's official measurement.

In the latter half of the 20th century when most industrialized nations had changed or were changing to the metric system, various United States Congressmen pushed for laws to make the U.S. do the same. Finally, in 1975, the Metrics Conversion Act was passed. The Act didn't force U.S. businesses to convert but said it would be grand if they chose to. Grand or not, most chose not to.

As of August 24, 1988, when the President signed the Omnibus Trade and Competitiveness Act, businesses must choose to by 1992 or not get in on any Federal Government contracts. The Act was hailed by many as a step forward for America, but few knew that it contained this provision, nor were they meant to. August being such a horridly hot month in Washington already, Congressmen didn't want to hear from irate constituents whose protest would heat up the place even more.

So now it's here and it does make sense, especially for Americans who want to sell goods to foreign countries, which most do. The easier and sometimes the only way to do business abroad is to use their system of measurement. Then there's the trade deficit situation. The more goods American can sell overseas, the more the trade deficit goes down.

Why have Americans resisted metrics? Industry has because it means expensive retooling and relabeling when consumers want no part of the results. To consumers, metrics means unfamiliar names and unwieldy conversions with decimal points. King John's foot becomes .3048 meters, a kilogram equals 2.2 pounds and a gallon is 3.785 liters. Plain awkward is what it is. Fahrenheit's normal body temperature of 98.6 degrees does convert to a whole number in Celsius, 37 degrees, but bright spots such as this are rare.

Americans will have to accept metrics this time around on the basis of patriotism, competitiveness and above all, necessity. But they don't have to follow Cardin's parting advice: "Try to think of it as a friendly sort of thing." In time, Americans will adjust, but they'll more likely do it by complaining loudly than by quietly meditating on the amiableness of metrics.

The Positive Side

"Attack the problem, not the person."

Jottings

I said something stupid the other night. I said that I am beginning to think people do not read.

I should have said people do not believe what they read, or just don't want to take the time to read.

Like the years before television came onto the scene. People read their daily newspaper, their weekly hometown newspaper, their news magazine, their latest issue of a monthly magazine or some short version of all of it.

Those that do want to read are invariably those of us over the age of forty.

Those under that magic age rely more on television and radio for the information they figure they will need to survive in the world of today.

Those of us who do read, and there are thousands of us, still read like we were taught by our teachers way back in third or fourth grade.

We were taught the only way to form ideas into thoughts was by reading. Reading everything we could get our hands on.

Only in that way could we begin to understand what was going on and the why.

The why some piece of legislation was passed. The why the schools need more money, the why the city has to rebuild instead of repair water lines.

Or why Boyne City isn't within the state school aid formula so they can receive money to help educate while East Jordan is in formula and does.

Concerning the upcoming school election to approve funding of the buses for transportation, I have a hard time understanding why some people think there is a free lunch. They seem to have figured out the school system is going to pull money out of thin air growing on the proverbial tree to pay for the Passage still means cuts

Making a recommendation for next Monday's special school board election to provide additional funds for busing could be compared to a school board member signing his own petition for recall.

If the millage issue fails, one thing is certain. There will be no busing of students at any price.

The board has said it will not be making drastic cuts into the education of the students just to provide busing and the inherent costs of that part of the program.

If the issue passes, the board will still have to figure out where they can make cuts in the total educational program as they will still be about $150,000 in the red.

The reason the board gives for the spending of the fund equity over the years, is they have not asked for millage increases from the voters since 1980, preferring to keep the budget in balance by spending the excess and using the raise in taxes caused by the increase in assessments.

Even with the increase in assessments and the eventual additional cost to taxpayers, it was still not enough to overcome the increased costs of staffing for the additional classes the growth of the community was causing.

So even if the issue passes, the school board will still have to review the budget to find areas where costs can be cut.

If the issue fails, the cuts will be drastic. And it is not the intent of the board to hurt the educational level of the curriculum they have strived to achieve over the years.

It boils down to one little fact. With the increased costs, there is not enough money to provide education and busing without the increase the voters are being asked to approve next Monday.

About the only recommendation we can make is to ask the voters to go out and vote their hearts. Whether the vote turns out yes, or no, there is still a long way for the school board to go to bring the budget back into a balanced condition.

Marshall Sayles

The modern way is to hold an election to hold another election.

A group of mumbling parents are going to march to the polls Monday and vote to continue a growing storm or to turn thumbs up in a special election that will decide if students will ride or walk to school. (Praying and saluting the flag have not been worked into this election.) "Come and get my kids" is enough to handle right now.

When I was a kid, school buses were so scarce there weren't hardly any. One walked to school or remained ignorant the rest of your life. Some of us who remained ignorant went to work, raised a family, made some money, retired and now sit around drinking coffee, wondering what all the fuss is about.

The most amazing thing I've learned from sitting and listening is that a mile was longer years ago than it is today. Not only that, but we had better teachers and worse winters; also if you got a licking at school, you got another at home. I've heard these lies so often I have come to believe them, just like the guys who are telling them.

Happy voting to the grunted and the disgruntled.

I seldom go into F.O.s these days because I'm getting too old to do much hammer and pounding. But when I do go in for a stick of wood I smile and say yes sir and no sir. I've done that ever since I read the sign that says, "Price subject to change...according to attitude of the customer."

Speaking of signs, as I just did, Henry used to have one in his station that explained a new employee policy: "Work or get fired."

And then there's a sign in town that says: "My money and my son go to U of M."

I have a sign tacked to the inside of the back door of our garage. It says "Enter only through the exit." I bought it at a Niagra Falls tourist trap many years ago when my wife and I went there to see what was so exciting about a tourist trap.

Some of the most interesting signs in Boyne City are tacked to telephone poles. I know of no other city where telephone poles are so artistically decorated.

I saw a lady at the supermarket with a sign across the front of her pure white sweater that said, "I don't do mornings." I've heard of women who don't do windows, but this morning stuff threw me.

Now, if readers have seen interesting signs and want them mentioned here, phone me up and they may be used, but only if they are of driven snow quality.

If you don't want your name used, that's okay. We'll just say name withheld by request. I have a nice pile of withheld names in the corner of the garage. Gossips who wish to come and finger them over better hurry. Winter's coming and I've got to clean out the garage so I can get my car in.

You know winter is not far off when you put your lawn mower away and the furnace kicks on.

SCHOOL LUNCHES AND SANDWICHES

From an old cookbook: "Make your sandwiches out of the golden grain garnish with the joy of the garden, and the green banks of the rippling brooks." (Watercress is nearly always served with a sandwich in England.) This book also gives:

A FEW RULES FOR SANDWICHES

Bread for sandwiches should be at least 24 hours old. Cream butter before spreading. Do not have filling too moist. If sandwiches are not to be used immediately, wrap in damp cloth and place in cool place. Parafine or wax paper helps to keep sandwiches fresh for the picnic or lunch basket.

Nearly all the sandwiches in this book were made of cooked meat, such as ham, beef or pork put through the food grinder and mixed with mayonnaise or home made salad dressing.

Now, for a little more modern touch...

TOMATO CHEESE SPREAD

1-10 oz. can tomato soup, condensed, canned.
1 1/2 cups process cheddar cheese
1/3 cup dill relish, well drained

Heat undiluted soup to simmering. Reduce heat. Add cheese and stir until melted. Add relish and chill. Serve as a spread for crackers or as a sandwich filling.

It seems that children with their lunch boxes or dinner pails as we called them are things of the past. Nearly all schools have cafeterias where the children have a very good choice of foods. These hot lunches are very diversified, the children really have a choice and the meals are a bargain.

However, many people are still brown bagging it to offices, factories and construction places. Men are still taking their man-sized lunches with thermos bottles of coffee to work. The men in my family like sliced roast turkey or roast beef best. They also take salad or cottage cheese from the deli and fruit, all in a cooler, of course.

Many places of business now are providing their employees with microwave ovens. More than half of the U.S. employees now have access to one in the workplace. This puts an entirely different picture of our brown bag lunches of tuna, peanut butter and lunch meat sandwiches, with maybe a small dish of cottage cheese or yogurt.

Left over soups and stews can be put in microsafe jars and heated up for lunch. I know a fisherman who comes to work with his leftover fish that he caught and cooked the night before. Sometimes he has enough to zap in the microwave for his friends' lunch as well.

Try this. You can toast an extra slice of bread or two in the morning, butter and put in a slice or two of cheese, wrap it up and take it to work. Place in a napkin and zap about 30 seconds for a hot cheese sandwich.

Or start with a piece of toast for this:

OPEN FACED

HOT BOLOGNA SANDWICH
1 slice of bread toasted
1 tablespoon mayonnaise
1 slice bologna
1 teaspoon mustard
2 slices tomato
2 slices cheese

Start with the toast and pile on all of the above ingredients with cheese on top. Place on a napkin and microwave 35 seconds to 1 minute to melt the cheese and heat the bologna. Let set a minute before biting into it — it could be very hot.

Our current generation of children have become salad lovers. They like our modern salads with cheese, slices of meat, croutons and lots of lettuce and their favorite dressings. Our fast food places realize this and are offering delicious salads to go. Also this generation loves white milk. It is not just something that they must drink; they are on the "milk kick". I am delighted with the foods that my grandchildren are eating, and I am happy to find that most schools offer salads like this with their school lunches.

Then last night, while visiting with the Traverse City Senior Citizens, we were discussing about some old-timers who ate their bread, meat, and potatoes with pie for dessert and maybe, even for breakfast; who never became obese and lived to be ninety. This made me so very hungry for a good piece of apple pie, thinking how good it tasted so many years ago in my dinner pail. I just might bake one.

Here is a tip from Dorothy Goodwin's honey recipes. "For apple pie sweeten with 1/2 cup honey mixed with 1 tablespoon tapioca in place of flour; mix with the apples and flavor with cinnamon. I will just have to try it!"

With the addition of several housing units in the West Michigan Avenue area, it was decided to eliminate an inverted siphon underneath a storm sewer drain. The change will allow the city to eliminate frequent cleaning of the siphon and help reduce maintenance costs. They will also be adding six new sewer service leads when it was found that three houses were being served by only a three inch sewer for three of the houses and a four inch sewer for four additional homes. The minimum size for sewer leads is six inches per home using present standards.

The cost for that change is $20,800.

Student writes in support of busing busing students is ludicrous.

Editor:
I would like to write in support of the Boyne City Board of Education. I am a senior in Boyne City and would first like to say that, contrary to many allegations, I can read, write, and spell. I am, in fact, vying for a National Merit Scholarship. Obviously the value of our teachers and the education that they provide has been highly underrated. To take money from the teaching staff to pay for

Many voters in Boyne City are angry that there will be no busing for their children during the first two weeks of school. What these same voters fail to realize is that they themselves defeated the transportation issue when given the opportunity to support it. Another common accusation is that the board of education has somehow tricked the public by separating transportation from other operational millage. It must, however, be recalled that after an earlier millage defeat, voters asked the school board to give them a choice of issues as opposed to a lump sum. The board graciously complied. To accuse them of trickery for this is highly unfair.

The final analysis must indicate that the school board has the best interests of students at heart. They have repeatedly scheduled millage elections to give voters another chance to support issues that were important. The board has no legal responsibility to hold another election on the transportation issue at all. They scheduled another one because they care about the students. I can only urge people who feel that the situation is unfair, to support the millage and to try to work with the board and not against it.

Sincerely,
Brian D. Ledahl

Says problems of schools caused by unions

Editor:
An open letter to Boyne City School District voters

Monday night's School Board meeting was noteworthy. There was a very large turnout and the crowd was emotionally involved.

To start off, Mr. Richard May, the board president, asked for a show of hands from those who wished to address the board. At least a dozen citizens responded and spoke. Most of the people talked against more millage and for an immediate resumption of busing. Each of these attacks on school board policies and priorities was greeted with loud applause. Those few who spoke for the millage proposal also got loud applause.

Then Superintendent Nakoneczny had his way. He pleaded the case for quality education with all the trimmings but, he also pledged his efforts to seek out and cut the fat in the budget. Although on the job only eight days, he had done some homework and the audience responded well to him.

Unfortunately, amid all the emotion and rhetoric, the basic realities of the situation were not addressed. First, the Boyne City School System's financial problem came about because a succession of school boards lost control of their budget to the unions. The present problem peaked when the board negotiated wage increases they could not afford. Now, they must come to the voters to ask for money to get the children to the teachers.

There is a second reality that must be faced. Regardless of who or why, what is done is done and it can't be undone. There just isn't time for either negative recriminations nor positive creative solutions to the problems facing us. Our schools must continue to function and the students must be able to get there. In short, we must vote YES for the busing millage.

However, having voted YES next Monday, we must continue to be as concerned as we were last Monday. Keep up the pressure on the board by all means, but also stand ready to back them in future negotiations and changes in operating procedure. And start now to find candidates to support for the next school board election. It is awfully hard to put much blame on a board when few people are willing to serve.

Above all, remember that what is actually at stake here is who is going to run the Boyne City schools - a locally elected school board or the teachers' union. Either way, the taxpayers foot the bill. It is up to the citizens to turn today's concern into a continuing commitment for our children's future.

Sincerely,
Ira W. Breneman

Urges NO vote on busing

It is in this shoddy manner that school districts grow into ever bigger (citizen/taxpayer smothering) dinosaurs. While "education" gets worse.

Read what the constitution of the state of Michigan quietly mentions regarding the value and order of education:

"Religion, morality and knowledge being necessary to good government and the happiness of mankind, SCHOOLS AND THE MEANS OF EDUCATION SHALL FOREVER BE ENCOURAGED."

Article VIII, Section One.

My capitals and italics.

The Boyne City School Board is discouraging educational means with their no busing policy. They have quite deliberately decided to ignore the highest law in the state.

The board argues that the district voters mandated the no busing business. Sounds like word merchant's reasoning to me — and we do have one as president of the board.

To ruthlessly blame the voters for the school board's own shortcomings is lousy tactics and appalling management methodology. No matter who does it.

So, what can be done about it?

Two immediate practical remedies come to mind. A court injunction, based on the above constitutional section, demanding stoppage to games playing and pronto release of the available hoarded busing money, and the recall of all board members who may, by law, be so dismissed; with a hope for the best with the new board. Meanwhile, do vote NO to unnecessary operating millage. Don't let a money bloated school system swell ever more.

And, please, don't let the school connected cabal vote it in for themselves.

Reg Sharkey's Northern Journal

Reg reminisces on golden days of waterfowl hunting

BY REG SHARKEY

About the time I was a stripling lad, old enough to tote a gun and use it properly, most males who hunted weren't considered in the top echelon of society. If you were an avid hunter, especially of waterfowl, spending all the time you could — including Sundays — at the sport, you were called a hunting bum who "wasn't ever goin' to amount to much."

Of course, that didn't go for the elite club hunter who, all duded up, went to vast marshes to kill as many ducks as possible. Game Wardens had a hard time penetrating club property to nab well-heeled violators.

But the poor man in overalls, patched up hip boots, weather-battered decoys and mongrel retriever, wasn't given the same respect or consideration as his well-heeled counterpart.

Be that what it may, times have changed since those zenith days of waterfowling, sadly for the worse.

Thank God I have memories of those golden days of duck hunting: Frosty, rosey-hued mornings, the swish of myriads of waterfowl overhead, the whining of a trembling retriever, eager to pick up dead or crippled ducks from the icy waters.

When the light was good enough to shoot you started working your call, hoping a flight of mallards, pintails, or other good eatin' ducks would circle the decoys, turn into the wind, set their wings and prepare to land. Then it was stand up, establish a lead and squeeze off a shot, or two, if you had a classic double barrel; and you'd tell your dog, "fetch," pointing towards the downed ducks. It was a pleasure to see the dog work, and you'd help him locate a cripple trying to escape, with hand signals, right or left. And when the dog came in to present his retrieve, a word of praise and a pat on the head for his good work, then it was settle down until the next flight of ducks looked the decoys over.

Yes, it was so worthwhile those days when all you had to lay on the line in cold cash for the right to hunt waterfowl was a dollar — and now waterfowl stamps! You could establish a permanent blind, put out your blocks (decoys) and leave them there for the season. No daily repetition of picking up wet icy decoys when a nor'wester was blowing. And you could bag 25 ducks a day along with six geese. Only wood ducks were excluded.

Most waterfowlers that I knew didn't bother much with what they called "junk ducks": golden eyes, buffle heads, mergansers and most diving ducks, exceptions being the canvasbacks, red heads and blue bills (scaups).

Now what are you entitled to for the money you lay out in a license fee, and stamps that cost a small fortune? To wit: first you have to have a hunting license, $9.85 (resident); then you have to have a Michigan Duck Stamp $3.85, and then a Federal Stamp, $10, which totes up to $23.70. But hold on. Now you can't use lead shot shells on waterfowl. So you are forced to buy steel shot at around $10 per box for 12 gauge.

Now after you've floated a loan for the above, what are entitled to? Relatively speaking, not very much.

Nowadays, you have to guage your bag by the point system. When you arrive at 100 points, you're through for the day. This is the way it goes: black ducks and hen mallards, 100 points; Redhead, wood ducks and hooded mergansers, 70 points; drake mallards, pintail, ring-necked, oldsquaw, scoter, ruddy duck, goldeneye, bufflehead and all other ducks not listed, 35 points; baldpate, blue-winged teal, green-winged teal, gadwall, shoveller, scaup, common and redbreasted mergansers, 20 points. No open season on the good eaten' canvasbacks, once a dominate species, now on the verge of extinction. Canada geese, two per day, and blue, snows, white-front and Ross geese five per day, Canadas included.

Then, too, if you have a permanent blind on public waters, you had better have your name on it in legible lettering, and whoever occupies it first has the right to its use. And you have to pick up your decoys at the end of the day. No leaving them out overnight.

And not only that, but every few days you have to start and quit hunting at different times by the clock.

To top it all off hunting today calls for special clothes and paraphernalia or you're not in the swim, unlike the oldtimers who wore the crummiest work clothes they could lay their hands on.

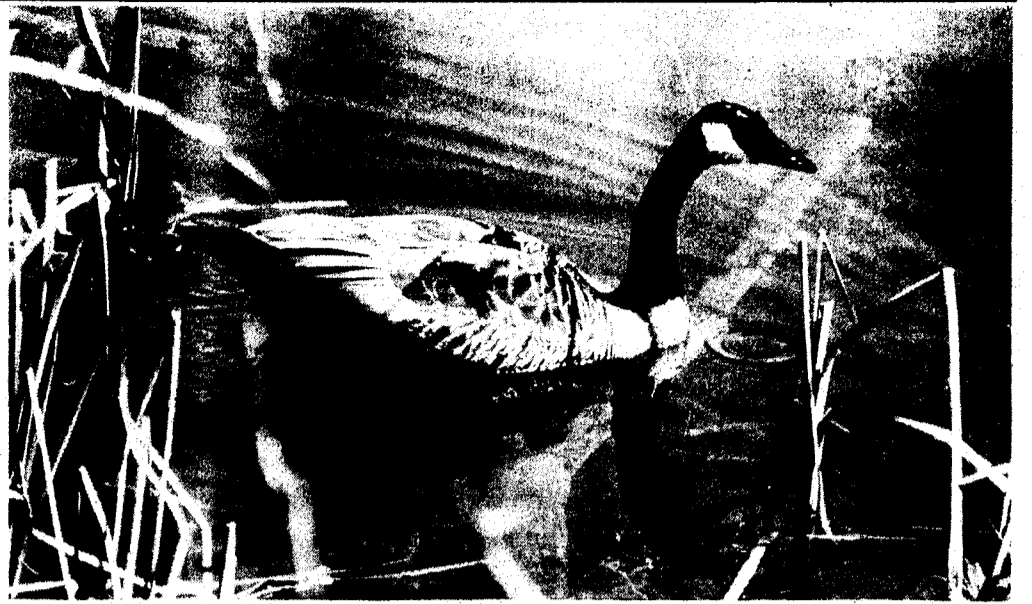

And if you don't have a master's degree in Duckology, able to identify flying ducks from every angle possible, better save your money and time, reading about duck hunting in the good ol' days in way back issues of Outdoor Life and the likes. Fines for shooting the wrong duck, or ducks, can put a real crimp in your budget.

As a departing three-shot salvo to the high cost of waterfowling: Stamp money that's supposed to go for improving duck hunting isn't doing much good; and that goes for all the money raised by Ducks Unlimited. In spite of money raised for improving waterfowl habitat, decreased bag limits seem to be the only visible panacea. It just isn't going to do much good.

With the duck factory pot holes of the prairie states being slowly, but surely, plowed into oblivion by subsidized grain farmers the future of ducks and waterfowling looks dim indeed. And that goes for the insatiable appetite of developers for ringing every body of water, no matter how small with condos and the likes, often inching into potholes and wetlands.

And with the added influx of people to occupy those developments, comes the demand for more water for human consumption. In some of the western states, water for crop irrigation, lawn and golf course watering, consumption, and other uses, is taxing and reducing some natural waterways to mere trickles from their original state, and waterfowl suffer. Much of the remaining water bodies are being befouled with chemicals, oil spills and the likes, taking a toll on waterfowl, especially during migration when there are concentrations of resting and feeding birds.

If my boy had been living today, would I get him interested in duck hunting? Hardly.

The beautiful Canada goose, loved by birders and hunters, need clean water, too.

Boyne girls drop openers

BY SCOTT KNIPE

Boyne City's varsity girls' basketball team began their season last week with two close losses, one to the Charlevoix Rayders, the second to the East Jordan Red Devils.

Tuesday found the Ramblers an intra county rival Charlevoix. Coach Russ Harvey chose to start a primarily young lineup, including two sophomores, and they may have been part of the reason for a slow first quarter start, 7-13 in the Rayders favor. Harvey, however, maintained an alternating rotation, keeping his players on the court fresh, and in this manner the Ramblers stormed back to tie Charlevoix at the half, 16-16, allowing the Rayders only three points in the entire quarter.

Harvey's strategy continued to work throughout the third period as Boyne jumped to a two point lead, 27-25 at the end of that stanza. This lead they upped to three points before things turned for the worse.

About halfway through the fourth quarter, Tysh Crozier, one of Boyne's top most defensive players, was called for her fifth foul. Her frustrated actions following that call garnered her a technical foul, and while coach Harvey was discussing the matter with a referee, a second technical was called, this one on him.

Charlevoix shot five freethrows and regained possession of the ball, and out of the whole fiasco they managed to earn only two points, leaving Boyne in the lead. More importantly however, was the fact that they had switched the momentum to their favor. In the last few minutes of the game the Rayders spent more time on the foul stripe than on any other part of the court, and they made good on nearly every freethrow attempt — something they had not been doing earlier on in the evening. When the final buzzer rang Boyne was down six, 37-43, and watched the first game of the season, one that should have been theirs, slip through their hands.

High scorer for the night was Mindy Stadt with 10 points, followed by sophomores Dawn Archambault and Kristin Harvey with 7 and 6 points respectively. Other contributors were Tysh Crozier, Nancy McCullough, and Amy Weeks all scored four points, and Trisha Fanning had two points. Top defender of the night was Archambault with 13 rebounds and a pair of steals.

After watching the beginning of the game, it's finale was a blown out parody of what should have happened, the Ramblers losing 48-60.

Thursday stars were Tysh Crozier with 15 points and Dawn Archambault with 13. Harvey followed up with 8 points, Stadt racked up 5, Weeks had 4, and McCullough knocked down 3. Deserving just as much mention as the offense though are the defensive champs. Dawn Archambault dominated the boards with 11 rebounds, backed up strongly by Crozier and Harvey, who each had 10 rebounds and a steal apiece. Stadt, who plays away from the basket most of the time, capitalized on 6 rebounds and 3 steals.

Boyne opens up the second week of the season with Vanderbilt, a new team added to Boyne's schedule since their newly acquired independency.

It wasn't a group of girls jumping for joy, but a loose ball during the Boyne City - East Jordan game Thursday night. After leading, the Boyne City girls managed to lose to the intercounty rival Red Devils, 48 to 60.

JV girls dominate county rivals

BY SCOTT KNIPE

Boyne seems to be blessed with talent from the underclassmen, and this year's jvs have already begun to prove it. After starting off their season last Tuesday by embarrassing Charlevoix, they turned around and did a job on East Jordan.

Things didn't look so well for the Ramblers in the first quarter of their first game in Charlevoix, but the same could be said for the Rayders, as the first quarter score ended in a hardly applaudable 2-3 ratio, the Rayders on top. By the end of the second quarter, though, we began to see who the truly superior team was. Boyne played an intense, run-and-gun style game while Charlevoix couldn't penetrate the Rambler defense. At the half, the score was 16-6, and had the Rayders realized they were doomed to score only another six points in the game, maybe they would have gone home.

Each team scored four points in the third, and really things weren't too dim yet, but with the luck they'd been having with the Rambler defense they should've realized they weren't going to get any better.

In the final quarter the Ramblers unleashed an incredible offensive attack. At the seeking hands of Crissy Gervasi and Kim Stadt, Boyne could steal the ball and have it upcourt before Charlevoix could put it on the floor. In these eight minutes the Rayders scored 2 points, the Ramblers 18, largely on account of fastbreaks. The game ended 38-12.

High scorer for the Ramblers was Kris Crozier with 11 points, followed by Crissy Gervasi with 8 points. April Silbar and Christina May had 6 apiece, Kim Stadt added 5, and Aulani Kuheana contributed 2. Boyne's top defender was Crissy Gervasi, who racked up 7 rebounds and an incredible 14 steals. Crashing the boards was April Silbar who hustled her way to 12 rebounds and 2 steals. Kris Crozier backed up her high scoring honor with 10 rebounds and 2 steals.

Boyne started out promising in the first quarter of their game against the Red Devils, as they jumped out to a quick lead, 11-0 in the first quarter. Boyne kept a substantial lead going into the second half, but East Jordan capitalized on the Rambler turnovers to bring themselves a little closer to Boyne.

The Ramblers weren't to be denied though, and won the game handily, 41-23. Crissy Gervasi was high scorer with 20 points. Kris Crozier followed with 8 points, Kim Stadt contributed 6, Christina May 5, and April Silbar 2. Crissy Gervasi also excelled defensively with 11 rebounds and 13 steals.

Boyne's jvs, combining hustle and teamwork, are out to prove themselves to be one of the top teams in the north, and so far they're doing a good job of it. This week they'll try to extend their winning streak as they face off against Vanderbilt and Cheboygan.

Mindy Stadt (14) lets loose with a two pointer during the game last week with Charlevoix. Charlevoix ended up winning the contest although the Boyne Jayvee team beat the Rayders in their game.

I was torn between 5-speed or automatic, not where to get the loan.

Then I made the right move and chose NBD.

"When I saw this car, I knew I had to have it. I can't honestly say I gave too much thought about where to get the loan. I thought all there was to choosing a car loan was finding the lowest rate. Good thing Mom was along. She set me straight and sent me to NBD.

"They explained that there were other things to consider, such as the length of the term and fixed or variable rates. Most of all, they made it clear they really wanted to help me get my car.

"Well, I got my car. And I got a great feeling about NBD. Which is why I decided to do all my banking there.

"I made the right move."

Today, you have more banking choices than ever. At NBD, we have to be better to earn your business. Make the right move, and make NBD your first choice for a car loan—for all your financial needs.
