Boyer City repeats as CEEP is awarded

Boyer City was recertified as a Community of Economic Excellence during special ceremonies held in Lansing Monday. The community first received the award last year for the work done to encourage manufacturing plants to join the community.

Attending the ceremonies Monday were city commissioners Thelma Behling, Bill Grimm and Sandra Stanley. Also attending was City Manager Randy Frykberg, Richard Beagle from the Antrim-Charlevoix Growth Alliance, George Granger from Granger Engineering, Sue Hobbs from the city offices and Gloria Anderson representing the Chamber of Commerce.

The award ceremonies marked the fourth year of honoring communities throughout the state for the work they have done or are doing to improve their economic development programs.

Governor James Blanchard spoke at the dinner and told the eight communities honored this year that "each has done an outstanding job of forming cooperative, broad-based organizations to achieve economic success in their own local areas. They represent the best planning and action among communities across our state.

Receiving 1988 Overall Excellence Awards along with Boyer City were the communities of Zeeland, Hillman, Frankenmuth, Tecumseh, Greenville, Kalamazoo and Portage. Also honored were the counties of Manistee, Berrien and Muskegon.

The CEEP awards were created in 1983 by Governor Blanchard to recognize individuals and communities which play a unique role in economic development, such as identifying and fostering potential entrepreneurs, building and capitalizing on a community's strength to increase economic opportunities and jobs, responding to the current needs of area businesses and attracting new ventures.

Last year, when the city was first awarded the CEEP prize, the sign signifying the award was removed from the city limits. When accepting the award for the city, Thelma Behling remarked that each community should be aware of all of

Planners look at proposed McIntyre Marina development

Plans for converting the McIntyre Marina on Glenwood Beach to a potential eight unit condominium project were unveiled Monday night at the monthly Boyer City Planning Board meeting.

The plans, prepared by architect Jack Begrow, show two four unit buildings on the site which will include the three lots of the marina and one additional lot which is presently a house owned by the marina.

No action was taken by the planners as the developers, the marina owners, were looking for suggestions as to the feasibility of the project.

The developers have met with neighbors to try to explain what could be done with property, and the neighbors have also attended a meeting where their suggestions were presented back to the developers.

The proposed project shows eight slips to be available to owners of the condo units, each about 60 feet in length.

The marina has been operating under a special use non-conforming permit since the city started the zoning rules. It has been a marina for many years and was once the site for a long pier constructed during the lumbering days.

An attempt several years ago to expand the marina operation was met with opposition by the neighbors and a mistake in building the new dock at that time caused the Department of Natural Resources and the Corps of Engineers to ask that the dock be removed.

The dock was then damaged by ice over the winter, and this last summer the marina was only open for limited usage.

The developers were told by the planners that the idea was better than what was presently on the site, but would need special rules in order to comply with zoning laws.

The developers were asked to provide to the city a cost estimate for city water and sewer that would have to be borne by the developers and that infrastructure work could be added to by the city in order to let additional homes come into the system.

The developers would only have to pay for the cost of providing service for their eight units. If the city agrees to enlarge the system, a special assessment district may have to be set up to allow other homeowners along Michigan Avenue to join in the system.

The developers were told by the county that the sewer idea would be good, and would help eliminate septic tank problems along the area. There is even a chance that homes along Glenwood Beach, and in Evangeline Township, could be added to the city's system.

All those details would have to be worked out by the developer before coming to the planning board for a site plan review.

The planners are also concerned the property in question is too small for the present Planned Residential District rules, and another ordinance would have to be developed in order to allow small parcels of land under five acres to be developed within the city.

That possibility was raised by City Attorney Bill McFagart, who has been trying to have the city develop ordinances that would cover smaller parcels.

If the ordinances and the sewer, water problems could be worked out, the developers will come before the December meeting for the site plan review.

Planning board member Dale Parsons said a new rule for small tracts could open a new can of worms, citing another project which was turned down recently

The Boyer City School buses are running for the first time since the school year started. According to school principals, there were no major problems getting the children used to which bus to take home. The bus in this picture dropped the children off at the elementary school Tuesday morning with one bus following another into the unloading area. The buses were allowed to run after voters approved a 1.2 millage request last week. The children didn't seem to mind coming to school by a different means, some said they enjoy riding the bus.

Boyer Falls finalizes school plans

Boyer Falls School Board members gave their approval to part of the final plans for the new addition they will be constructing over the summer to the school building.

Voters recently approved the addition of four classrooms to the elementary side of the building and the enlarging of the school gymnasium.

They learned approximate costs for each portion of the project from their architectural firm, D.E.M. of Gaylord. The architect explained that the reason for doing the cost estimates was to make sure the project was in line with the money that was available to expend. He said that if the estimates were not in line, the board would have to make cuts in the building to keep the costs down.

There was some discussion about the bleachers that would be added, as many board members wanted more seating installed.

Another area where cost was brought up was in the boiler room area where the firm proposed a different type of system would cause problems similar to what happened to the present boiler last summer.

The estimate for the entire project came in at $599,000 or within the bounds the board set.

The board then gave approval for payment for the approximately 25 percent completion of the working drawings.

They also signed papers

Charlevoix Area Hospital Guild contributes $7,000 for eye surgery equipment

A check for $7,000 was presented to the Charlevoix Area Hospital by Guild President Virginia Rountree to be applied to the purchase of eye surgery equipment.

This donation brings the total raised by the Guild this year to $8,844. The funds represent proceeds from The Showcase Gift Shop at the hospital, annual gift and baked goods sales, and patient TV rental fees. Richard L. Krueger, hospital administrator, said, "We thank all the members of the Guild who worked so hard throughout the year to raise this fine contribution. Each one should be proud of the part they played in making a new service such as eye surgery possible."

The hospital spent over $32,000 to equip the operating room for eye surgery. The addition of two ophthalmologists to the hospital staff made this new service possible.

The Guild volunteers are men and women who together contribute over 6,000 hours of service each year in patient care areas, hospital staff support, and fund-raising. A portion of their funds go toward scholarships for medical careers.

Etchings and aquatints by late John Davies at Art Tree

Limited edition etchings and aquatints by the late John Davies are presently on exhibition in the Art Tree Sales Gallery.

Davies' daughter, Betty Hubbard of Boyne City, collected the works for the special exhibition and sale, which continues through Saturday, Nov. 19.

Although he died in 1965, Davies is still remembered for his role in developing serigraphy as a fine art.

The native Scot studied art at the Paisley Art Academy near Glasgow in Scotland, and continued to pursue painting and graphic media after he came to Flint in 1922. He was a founder of the Flint Institute of Arts, where he taught, and later became president of the Michigan Association of Print Makers.

During the 1930s, he was supervisor for the Flint W.P.A.

project, part of the federally sponsored art program that produced some of the country's most significant historical works.

He exhibited nationally, and had several one-man shows in the mid-Michigan area. He was the recipient of the Hal Smith Etching Award bestowed by the Detroit Institute of Arts.

In the Art Tree's special exhibition are a series of eight etchings Davies produced of Mackinac Island scenes, and a suite of etchings of the Michigan State University campus he completed in 1965. Several large aquatints printed from multiple plates are also available.

The Art Tree Sales Gallery is located in the McCune Arts Center, corner of Mitchell and Division Streets, downtown Petoskey.

Jottings

Now that the deer hunting stories are filtering in to the coffee shops, I started to wonder if these guys really did go hunting, or if they are just plain bad shots.

Not all of them, only those who said they took a shot or two at a deer and missed it.

It made me start wondering if they might have chosen the wrong kind of weapon to use when they went deer hunting.

I even told one "hunter" that he was definitely using the wrong kind of weapon. He should not have been out hunting with a rifle, he should have used his car.

It seems that he has been very successful hitting deer with his car over the years, and he was also very unsuccessful using his rifle.

So I started to think about how we could start up a special deer hunting season for those venison hunters who could not find a deer during the bow or rifle seasons.

I was talking with Reg Sharkey, our newest and only outdoors writer, about the new season, and even he said he would like doing a story about it.

I proposed that the new season be held just before the bow season, only the only weapon that could be used would be an automobile or truck.

Reg suggested that the car could be allowed to have a spear installed on it so the deer would stay with the vehicle.

My mind went further. I thought that if a spear was installed, it could keep the deer from falling along side of the road and getting all dirty from the road gravel and other stuff along the roadside.

I also thought that if a deer were hit just right, the animal could be self gutted. And it might be cooled down enough so that when the driver arrived at home, all he would have to do would be to hang it up so the neighbors could see it.

That thought brought up the old "points" system big city drivers appear to use when driving around the cities. They "earn" points for how many drivers they scare off the roads, pedestrians afraid to get off the sidewalks and other things.

We could authorize "points" for how the deer was picked off.

For instance, if the deer just ran onto the road in front of a car, that would be worth only two points. If the driver had to take evasive action and still hit the poor animal, another two points would be added.

If the driver has to chase down the deer, it may be worth several more points.

If the deer were a "bambi", then points would be deducted. Only full grown bucks and does would count for points.

The maximum points allowed would be 10. Then the driver could say, if they hit a doe, she was a "ten." Only if the buck were hit with a "gut" shot, would that person be allowed to say it was an eight or nine pointer.

Bonus points could be arranged for the amount of damage done to the person's car. Damages over $1,000 would earn two points, $2,000 or more would be worth three points.

The most points you could possibly earn would be 14.

That way you could say in the coffee shops around town, you got yourself a 14 point buck or doe.

Even without having the horns.

Remembrances

Boyne City's tannery looked like this as you drove down Front Street back in the fifties when the plant was still producing shoe leather for the industry. The road in front of the plant shows an almost narrow path compared to the new road that is now Front Street in front of the Harborage Condominiums.

Marshall Sayles

Summer's three alarm fire and humidity clasped hands and rolled off the log, dead to the world until next strawberry season. So now I am making arrangements for a long, cold winter. I do this by looking out the window and wringing my hands.

I did not feel chipper today and I was afraid it might be the Lord punishing me for past sins, sins I can't even remember, or wouldn't remember if someone were to point them out. I always lose my memory when my past sins are pointed out. Don't laugh. How would you like your past sins to appear at the end of a pointed forefinger?

I asked a friend about this and he said he didn't have a past. Another told me that he had held off sinning and planned to do some after he had retired. A woman worked her mouth into the conversation saying that it was her belief that no one lives without sinning. This was news to me and upsetting to the man who had held off.

As the talk went on I discovered that I was as innocent as the average man, woman and babe. My past sins held little meaning and I was free from all that guilt I had piled up after voting for that other guy.

Heavens, how I used to worry about my past sins. But now I am smart and realize they don't amount to a bill of heens.

Wife: You've got to throw some of those old shoes away. You never wear them and they are just taking up space in the closet.

Me: I can't do that. I have had those shoes for years. They are so worn and out of date they aren't worth throwing away.

Remember when the three R's got you a basic education? I can't recall when it changed, but today it's the two R's and a C: Readin', writin' and computin'. My education is flawed because I can't compute worth a hoot.

A friend my age lost three jobs because he couldn't compute. The last I heard he was in Cross Village trying to sell plastic wigwags.

I think it is a shame that computers have forced us of the government cheese set to continue receiving government cheese.

I dislike this time of year when so many things are over with. The only things we have to look forward to are Thanksgiving, Christmas, three feet of snow, New Years, a headache, a stack of bills and three months of the blahs. Disliking the blahs of February is one of my two worst failings. The other one is no ones business. I am one of the few people in Boyne City with only two worst failings.

Most people have several worst failings and they won't even share one of them with us as I have done here in an honesty seldom seen among those with worst failings.

A man said to me the other day: "The more I get to know you the less intelligent you seemed to be when I didn't know you at all. (I am going to end this column and try to figure that one out.)"

NUTS

In many recipes we see the words (nuts optional) and one can be sure that the results will be better flavor and texture if they are used. This is the nutting season, they are about to fall off the trees in our area. Some of my friends put them in their driveways and drive over them to remove the outer covering. By holiday time they are ready to be cracked to pick out the nut meats. What a chore it used to be. All kinds of nutmeats are on our grocer's shelves and they are all commercially picked and shelled for us. How lucky can we get!

Black walnuts and white walnuts or butternuts grow in our woods and along the highways in our area and hickory trees grow in the southern part of Michigan. We have beechnuts which are fun to gather, though a lot of labor to shell even a small amount, the flavor is worth the try, however. Chestnut trees are making a comeback after having been destroyed some years ago by a fungus. Michigan chestnuts are being sent to other states now for re-planting.

The thin shelled English walnuts were imported by our ancestors and are so very popular because they are easy to crack. They have been grown commercially since Roman times. Our pecans grow naturally in the Mississippi valley from Iowa southward. Texas is the largest producer of pecans; up to 95,000,000 pounds a year.

Nuts are probably one of the most ancient of all foods. They were used extensively by our native Americans. There are many references to them in the Bible. Appetizers in Old Testament times were salted almonds or other nuts and cheese eaten with pieces of bread dipped in wine. At the end of the meal would be a variety of dried fruits with honey, nuts or melons.

A few years ago the ladies of the church where my friend Lillian attends put out a cookbook called "Islanders Cook for Company." I am happy that I have met a number of the terrific cooks who put this book together, and have watched the progress of their beautiful church being built on Hilton Head Island. Every year they have their fall festival and bazaar that is attended by literally thousands of people. The following recipes are popular items in their festival booths.

My friend Joyce who once gave me so many delicious recipes said that she always added a few more nut meats than the recipe called for, which makes "good-better." This next recipe does not tell how many nuts to use, however, more would be better!

Here is Kay Baldwin's HUNGARIAN POUND CAKE
1 lb. whipped margarine
1 lb. confectioners' sugar
6 eggs
3 cups all-purpose flour (unsifted)

1 tsp. vanilla
Cinnamon
Granulated sugar
Nuts, chopped
Reserve enough margarine to grease sides and bottom of Bundt or angel cake pan. Sprinkle cinnamon and sugar on sides; nuts in the bottom. Cream margarine and sugar; add eggs, one at a time, beating well after each addition. Add flour and vanilla. Mix well and bake at 350 degrees for one hour and 15 minutes. May be frozen, even refrozen; great with ice cream and sauces. Kay says that frostings may be used but she prefers only a dusting of confectioners' sugar.

This next recipe would be a popular item at any bazaar booth.

HOLIDAY NUTS
2 1/2 cups pecans
2 egg whites, beaten
1 cup sugar
Pinch of salt
1 stick margarine, melted
Beat egg whites until stiff but not dry. Gradually add sugar and salt; stir in pecans. Spread on a greased cookie sheet. Dribble margarine over all. Bake in 325 degree oven for 30 minutes, stirring every ten minutes. Makes a nice gift.

Then we have those cans and packages of mixed nuts, a wonderful combination of several kinds. I recently acquired these appetizer recipes at a microwave class.

SPICED NUTS AND RAISINS
2 tablespoons butter or margarine
2 tablespoons confectioners' sugar
1/2 teaspoon onion or garlic powder
1/2 teaspoon ground red pepper
1/2 teaspoon ground ginger
4 cups (1 lb.) mixed nuts
1 cup raisins
1-melt butter in a 1 cup glass measure in microwave about 30 seconds at high. Add sugar, onion powder, red pepper and ginger. Stir well.

2-put nuts into a 1 qt. glass casserole. Pour butter mixture over nuts and mix well. Cook uncovered in microwave oven 7 to 10 minutes on high, or until hot; stir once. Cool, stirring frequently. Stir in raisins until well mixed. Makes 5 cups.

SPICED TOASTY NUTS
2 tablespoons butter or margarine
1 tablespoon sugar
1 teaspoon garlic salt
1/2 teaspoon curry powder
1/2 teaspoon cinnamon
4 cups mixed nuts
1-melt butter in a 1 cup glass measure in microwave oven about 30 seconds at high. Add sugar, garlic salt, curry powder and cinnamon; stir well.
2-Put nuts into a 1 qt. glass casserole. Pour butter mixture over nuts and mix well. Cook uncovered in microwave 6 or 7 minutes at high, or until hot; stir once. Cool, stirring frequently. 4 cups.

There will be a Development Screening Clinic for all children who will be entering kindergarten in the fall of 1990. This clinic is sponsored by the Charlevoix-Emmet Intermediate School District. The purpose of this clinic is to provide parents information regarding normal child development, an opportunity to interact with parents of other three year old children, and to have your child informally screened to identify any potential learning difficulties which may arise during the school years. This is a free service with appointments made on a first come, first served basis.

Boyne City 7th, 8th graders to participate in talent search

Mrs. Barbara Martin, Boyne City Middle School Counselor, announced recently that 14 Boyne City Middle School seventh and eighth graders plan to participate in this year's Center for Talent Development/Midwest Talent Search program. Sponsored by Northwestern University, Evanston, Illinois, the CTD/MTS program has three main objectives:

Identification: The Center seeks to identify seventh and eighth grade students who are highly able in mathematical and verbal areas through a two-step testing process involving previously administered standardized achievement tests and an out-of-level aptitude test, the Scholastic Aptitude Test (SAT).

Development: Following the identification process, the Center seeks to facilitate students' special talents. This may involve matching aptitude levels in mathematics and/or verbal areas with appropriate coursework at Northwestern University or other educational institutions.

Consultation: Through the use of special programs, services, workshops and materials for educational personnel and parents, the program seeks to disseminate information and provide assistance to individuals working with highly able students.

Students qualify to become part of this program by having scored at the 95th percentile or better on a nationally normed standardized achievement test in the mathematics, verbal, or composite categories. Participation begins by first applying to be included in CTD/MTS and taking the Scholastic Aptitude Test (SAT) in January. Prior to the SAT, students participate in an area-wide workshop to familiarize them with this type of testing and to practice test-taking skills and strategies. This early identification of abilities can allow teachers and counselors to help students plan to use their talents appropriately during their remaining school years.

For a quick picker upper, rise to your feet. That will do it, speed your thinking right up according to Dr. Max Vercruyssen. He's done experiments based on the theory that standing stimulates the brain centers related to reaction time and his results show that people standing up think measurably faster. Not all of us do, though. Not me. Still I figure if I expand on this theory, I can shape it for my use too. I've not succeeded in attempts so far, but I expect to.

Vercruyssen, an associate professor of human factors at the University of Southern California, found that when people stand up, especially old people and the "relatively unfit" (whoever they may be), they can process information 5 percent to 20 percent faster. This also holds true for anyone with a difficult task to do.

Casting aside the "old" category and the poor dears labeled "relatively unfit", I figure I'm a tough task performer by virtue of having to do several jobs regularly that involve making hard choices; grocery shopping for instance.

Every Friday I make the major food choices for the following week and, while I weigh the possibilities standing up, my performance shows no sign of quick thinking. In fact, anyone watching me would think that I show no more mental grit than a geranium, which might mean that I really belong in that "relatively unfit" category, but I hope not.

At any rate, I do the least well in the meat department. I shop armed with a list. Somehow, though, each week I end up checking all the poultry, beef and ham selections pondering each as to price per pound, estimate of bone weight if any, amount of cholesterol lurking in the flesh and how I feel at the moment about featuring each kind at the dinner table for as many meals as it takes for two people to polish it off in a timely fashion. Turkey, reasonable in price, must be served almost nightly in order to gallop through it before it starts tasting funny, while low fat ham needn't be rushed through but is more expensive, cholesterol laden and yummy.

Clearly I need to either follow my list, which history shows won't likely occur, or my reaction centers need more stimulation to quicken them. I figure that some unobtrusive exercising while shopping should rev up those centers nicely.

First I considered low jumping. When I tried it out at home, though, tried for springy little jumps, the dishes rattled on the shelves and I panted noticeably.

Then I tried rising up on my toes repeatedly for a time. It went quietly enough, but I didn't feel that I jostled my reaction centers sufficiently to signal them to work faster.

Then I went to moving my head as if to exercise a stiff neck. That could have done the trick, rolling those centers around, but a glimpse of myself in action in the mirror made me think again about being lumped with the "relatively unfit".

Despite these failed attempts, I look forward to Friday, when I'll shop with a Reader's Digest in my purse. I figure I've been overloading my reaction centers with too much too quickly and I'll need to take a mind break from comparative shopping while they process all the information I'll have fed them. So I'll stand in front of the liver, which reasonable people don't buy anyway, and have a quick read. Even if this doesn't speed up the shopping, I'll catch some bright moments in the Digest pages which will lighten my day in either case.

Consumers starts winter protection plan for citizens

Consumers Power Company is alerting senior citizen and low income customers that they can sign up for the Winter Protection Plan, which reduces electric and natural gas bills during the coming months of high energy demand. Under the plan, actual costs are then paid during the remainder of the year when energy demand is lower.

The Winter Protection Plan assures participants of continued heat and electricity service during December, January, February and March. The program is administered by Consumers Power and was initiated by the Michigan Public Service Commission in 1981.

Senior citizens, age 65 and older, and low-income customers on the plan make monthly payments in the winter equal to a portion of their actual bill, plus a partial payment of any outstanding energy bill debt, in exchange for protection from electric shutoff. The balance of the payment is made up during the remainder of the year.

In addition to the Winter Protection Plan, Consumers Power offers a number of other payment assistance programs including ones aimed at helping short-term and long-term unemployed customers. People can obtain more information on these programs by calling their local Consumers Power office, either listed in the phone book or on their energy bill.

on the north side of town that asked for a condominium project along Michigan Avenue near Maple Shores.

If the proposed changes were enacted, Parsons and others on the board may see a lot of potential projects within the city.

In an earlier portion of the meeting, Parsons and other members of the board discussed whether or not the planners should ask the city to spend up to $250 for review of the city's comprehensive plan.

Parsons thinks the plan should be reviewed every so often to determine if the city is moving in the direction the plan is suggesting. If changes are made, he said they should be done to ensure the city moves in the right direction.

Board member Bill Casper, after reading the comprehensive plan, said he didn't think the city needed to review the plan.

Making the suggestion for allowing the Wade-Trim/Impact company to review the plan for a total of five hours, the planners agreed to ask the city to spend the money.

If approved by the city commission, the company would point out areas needing updating and they would then provide a cost for doing the work.

In other action, the planners approved the rezoning of 16 plus acres of property located behind the Harborage Marina facility on Division Street from the residential classification to General Commercial/Industrial.

The planners, after hearing a request from Walt Coyle who was acting on behalf of Mary Clippard, decided in favor of the change. It was noted the property is along side of the County Road Commission Gravel Pit and the marina and is more conducive to a general business classification than the present zoning of residential.

The change will now go in front of the city commissioners for approval. An additional request for the property, to have about four acres rezoned to R-3 multiple was withdrawn by Coyle after the board had some questions.

Two other requests, one to approve a site plan for a new hangar at the airport and the other to allow a six year tax abatement were tabled when the people concerned with the projects did not show up for the meeting.

The planning board also re-elected Marty Paul to be chairman, Leigh Woodbury to be vice-chairman and Trudy Clark to be secretary for another year.

Says thanks for approval

Editor:
To the Citizens of Boyne City Public Schools:

On November 14, 1988, the voters of Boyne City approved a millage request. On the surface it was to reinstate busing for the remainder of the 1988-89 school year. Beneath the surface the approval has provided the possibility of continued life to many fine educational programs. Programs that will affect the lives of many children for years to come. As a school district, we thank you...as parents and guardians, we thank you...and as superintendent, I thank you. Thank you all for your support, your confidence and caring for the children of the community.

We do not take your support lightly! We, as a school district, want to continue to earn your respect. We want to continue to build on the confidence you have shown in us. We want your input in setting the direction you desire for your children, your grandchildren and the children of the school district. We need, however, your involvement in establishing what you wish our children's educational program to be.

To the members of the community who voted in opposition to the millage increase...we understand! We all too well understand the financial burden of increased taxes. To this end, we pledge community involvement in the curriculum planning and budget planning processes. We make this pledge so that current and future programs and requests will be reviewed by the community, understood by the community, and supported by the community.

We also pledge openness! Along with being open, we request that we be allowed to make mistakes. No one is perfect! We will make mistakes in the future, along with doing things right. They will not be hidden! They will be acknowledged and corrected. We do however ask your patience...for our hearts might be in the right place, but sometimes our heads are not.

One of our local news reporters asked, "how do you feel now that the millage has passed?" A simple question...not a simple answer! With the community's increased confidence comes an increased awareness of what needs to be accomplished. An increased feeling of responsibility for the educational future of each and every child in the school district. An increased commitment to continue to build community pride in Boyne City for their schools...a hope for the children. Thank you!

Sincerely,

allowing for the transfer of property from the school to the village which will allow for the building of the new classrooms. The classrooms were sited in the road easement and required the school to trade a similar amount of property with the village on the other side of the road.

The board then approved a contract with Northern Insulation to remove the asbestos insulation in the school boiler room. The cost of the project which will bring the school in compliance with federal regulations was $6,900.

It may be less, as the contract calls for the replacement of insulation, but the architect suggested not to have the insulation replaced since the boiler will be changed anyway for the new addition. He said the cost of insulating the piping would be included in the new construction.

The board is also going to take a look at the hot lunch program at the next meeting and may have to raise rates. Superintendent Charles Smith told the board that the number of students eating hot lunches was up, along with costs. He said they are presently breaking even on milk prices, but due to larger portions for the high school and middle school eaters, that part of the program is losing money.

The board then discussed the investing of school funds and will allow the superintendent to place them in amounts over $100,000 if necessary. They decided to allow the funds to be placed in the institution offering the highest interest.

They then discussed whether or not the school system should

Legionnaires observe 68th anniversary with dinner

Legionnaires of Ernest Peterson Post 228, observed their 68th anniversary, as guests of the auxiliary, at a dinner held in their honor at the Legion Hall in Boyne City, November 17th. A social hour preceded a bountiful buffet dinner of ham and country-fried chicken and was enjoyed by members of both organizations.

The program that followed was presented by Clara Davis, Auxiliary President and Walter Stahl, American Legion Commander. Introduced to the group were two new members, Harriet Mason and Irene Brannon. She then expressed her thanks to the auxiliary for having achieved 100% of their 1989 membership quota.

Commander Stahl paid tribute to Warren Davis and congratulated him for all his 40 years of dedicated service to the organization and on behalf of the post presented him with a fully paid-up life membership. In responding Davis thanked the post for the honor bestowed upon him and congratulated both the legionnaires and auxiliary for their civic endeavors and tremendous record of service to God and Country.

Ernest Peterson Post was founded in 1920 with 15 chartered members, all veterans of World War I. The post was named for Ernest Peterson, the first veteran from Boyne City to lose his life during that conflict. Since, membership to the American Legion is open to veterans of the three other wars of this century, World War 2, Korean War and the Vietnam War, Boyne Area Veterans are encouraged to join and may do so by contacting any legionnaire or inquiring at the American Legion Hall, 302 S. # Turkeys survive but need help

BY REG SHARKEY

Shortly after the first Pilgrim put a foot down on Plymouth Rock, Thomas Morton of Massachusetts wrote, "turkies there are, which divers times in great flocks have sallied by our door, and then a gunne, being commonly in a redness, salutes them with such courtesie, as makes them take a turne in the Cooke room."

In recorded writings it is said the Plymouth settlers enjoyed hunting turkeys. There were flocks of a hundred or more; and some accordingly mentioned record gobblers going at 60 pounds.

Without a doubt, on that first Thanksgiving the festive board was graced with a turkey. Hence the tradition has continued to this day.

Most of us are familiar with the domesticated barnyard bird that ends up stuffed, trussed and consumed on that day of thanks.

Nevertheless, these succulent birds are one and the same as the wild variety, except for some physical changes, such as slight difference in the coloring of the bronze variety, and, of course, the striking difference of the pure white ones.

How the turkey ended up in farm yards and recently in turkey "factories" that turn out thousands for the festive board is indeed interesting.

Long before Columbus set foot in the Americas, the Aztecs of Mexico had tamed wild turkeys. Then in the early sixteenth century the Conquistadores brought the turkey back to Spain. Sometime later European immigrants brought the bird back to the New World.

Without a doubt, wild turkeys of those early days were "sitting ducks" for hunters. With their matchlock firearms, ignited with a match touched to a string fuse, it took forever and a day before the clumsy blunderbuss fired a round of shot at the unmoving turkeys. A far cry from today's wily toms that require patience and expertise in calling them into shot-gun range.

But with the press of civilization, the wild turkey flocks were decimated by over-hunting, indiscriminate timbering, wild fires and overall destruction of turkey habitat.

And so it was that in the early 1930s only 20,000 remained. It was then that concerned outdoorsmen and environmentalists banded together to bring the wild turkey back from the brink of extinction.

The National Wild Turkey Federation, along with its many affiliated chapters, have spark-plugged the effort to make the grand bird available to hunters as well as to people who enjoy seeing wildlife.

And the efforts of those dedicated individuals has paid off. Today we have an estimated 3.8 million turkeys in 49 states.

Right here in Michigan we have an increasing number of birds. The Department of Natural Resources has worked diligently with local Wild Turkey Federation members to increase the birds state wide. This year's preliminary count in hunting areas was over 30,000 turkeys.

In this area the Traverse Bay Wild Turkey Federation aids the DNR in trapping and distributing turkeys to new areas. And they pay out money to plant corn for winter feeding, and keeping an eye on wintering flocks. Those efforts have paid off with a spring gobbler season with a limited number of permits are issued in designated areas.

Long live the wild turkey and the efforts to sustain them.

These turkeys survived Thursday Thanksgiving. They are getting ready to survive the winter.

Watercraft fees raised for 1989 season

Watercraft owners whose registrations expire on December 31 will be receiving renewal notices next week that reflect an increase in registration fees. The fee increases, which are being phased in over three years, are the result of Public Act 56 of 1988 signed into law last March.

While the Secretary of State will be collecting the fees which are expected to generate $8.1 million over the next three years, the revenue will be used to fund programs administered by the Department of Natural Resources. Specifically:

- 33.5 percent will be placed in the Michigan Harbor Development Fund for a public/private program to develop new marinas around the state;
- 17.5 percent will be placed in the Michigan State Waterways Fund for harbor development, maintenance of existing harbors, and grants to local governments to develop harbor marinas; and,
- 49 percent will be placed in the Marine Safety Fund for waterway enforcement activities and water safety education programs.

The only new fee created by Public Act 56 is a $4.50 non-motorized canoe registration fee. All watercraft registrations are issued for a three-year period.

In addition to raising watercraft registration fees, the new law makes it easier for individuals purchasing watercraft from a dealer to operate their craft immediately. Beginning January 1, 1989, watercraft dealers have the option of issuing 15-day temporary registrations in the same manner that automobile dealers do for vehicles they sell. The temporary registration will allow the new owner to use the watercraft while the dealer applies for the title and registration at a Secretary of State branch office. This will be particularly beneficial for individuals who take possession of their watercraft on a holiday weekend when branch offices are traditionally closed.

The first level of fee increases will apply to the 147,415 watercraft whose registrations expire on December 31, 1988. Those fees are in effect regardless of when the registration is renewed. Ultimately, the fee increases listed below will affect the 684,836 watercraft registered in Michigan.

With the exception of non-motorized canoes, the new law does not affect those vessels which have traditionally been exempt from registration fees. Those include watercraft owned by a resident of another country, registered in another country but operated temporarily on Michigan waters; vessels owned by the U.S. government for public service; lifeboats of registered vessels; all-terrain vehicles not used as a vessel; and, rafts, sailboards, surfboards or swim floats.

Young urged to consider fish career

Young people who enjoy fish, wildlife and outdoor activities are obvious candidates for careers in fisheries and wildlife.

But these fields are so varied and the jobs so diverse that people with a wide range of interests and aptitudes are needed.

"Fisheries and wildlife particularly needs people with strong math and statistics skills who are knowledgeable about computers," says Shari McCarty,

Extension 4-H youth specialist in the Michigan State University Department of Fisheries and Wildlife. "Fisheries and wildlife is basically applied ecology, and it relies heavily on these and other biological skills."

Many of the jobs in fisheries and wildlife entail field work in the out-of-doors. Fisheries and wildlife graduates may be involved in fish stocking efforts, population studies, resource management, habitat management and endangered species preservation, to name a few areas.

Education; public information and journalism; youth programming with 4-H schools or nature centers; and employment with state and federal government agencies, local development and environmental organizations, and planning commissions offer other career options.

These and other jobs may take someone to the farthest reaches of the Upper Peninsula or to downtown Flint, McCarty says. Outside Michigan, opportunities exist from Alaska to Rocky Mountain wilderness areas to Washington, D.C.

"Within fisheries and wildlife, the public dimension -

Rep. Ralph Ostling

103rd District - Vice Chair of House Appropriations

A MESSAGE TO THE VOTERS OF THE 103rd DISTRICT:

To those of you who gave me your vote of confidence and supported my re-election to again serve as your State Representative, I am very grateful.

During the past sixteen years, I feel many accomplishments have been made to benefit the people residing in the northern counties which encompass the 103rd District. Too numerous to outline, there were many important projects and programs approved for funding by the State. Hundreds of constituents were helped with personal problems by my office. While I am proud of this record, I continually strive to improve it and do more on behalf of the citizens of northern Michigan.

While I have never made any campaign promises I'm not sure can be carried out, I do promise to serve the next two years to the best of my ability.

Again, thank you for your support.

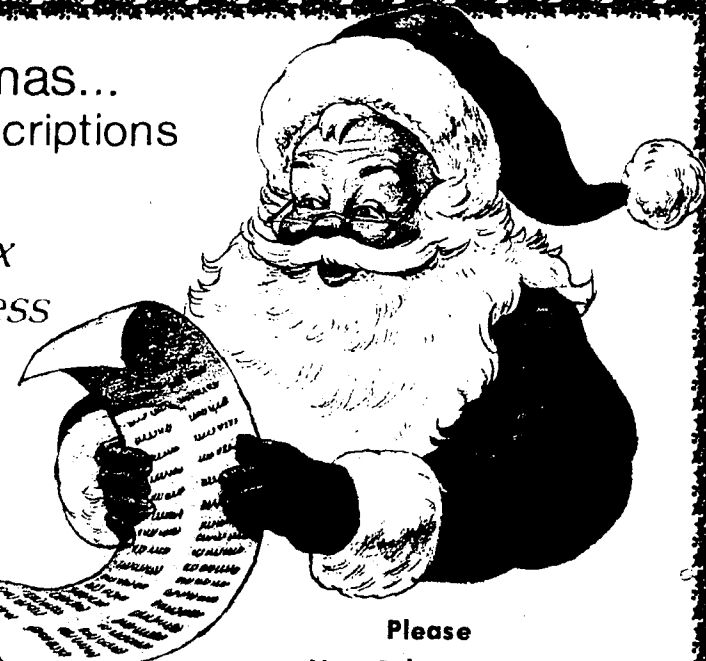

Sincerely,

educational and governmental - has grown a great deal in recent years," McCarty says. "Even in the most biological of positions, most of the work you do involves people, whether you're working as a fisheries economist, as a consultant to a private organization or as an employee of a governmental agency."
Entry-level jobs in fisheries and wildlife are often temporary or seasonal, McCarty notes, but students who do well in these jobs, and in internships while still students, usually find they open doors to permanent employment.
"We think our internship program is an exciting opportunity for students to get experience doing real fisheries and wildlife work," McCarty says. "About 20 juniors and seniors each year get to work with researchers, resource managers, educators and others. It's a chance to find out if they really like the work and it often leads to graduate school or future employment."
McCarty notes that fisheries and wildlife jobs rarely appear in the classified ads, but that doesn't mean the jobs aren't there.
"Our department subscribes to several job listing services," she notes, "so our students have access to information on where the jobs are."
"The important thing is for students to get into something they are good at and enjoy doing," she sums up. "After all, we spend more of our waking hours and more years of our lives working than doing anything else - why not do what you want to do?"
For more information on the fisheries and wildlife major at MSU, contact the chairperson, Department of Fisheries and Wildlife, Michigan State University, East Lansing, MI 48824.

Recently, more opportunities for full-time and temporary employment have been available in fisheries than in wildlife, and McCarty expects this to continue for at least the next several years. Even so, 90 to 100 percent of MSU fisheries and wildlife graduates are placed, either in permanent or temporary jobs or graduate school. Many students go right into a master's degree program in fisheries and wildlife, she notes, while others gain work experience before pursuing a graduate degree.
Someone looking seriously toward a fisheries or wildlife career needs to take as much high school English, science (including biology) and math as possible, McCarty suggests. Computer know-how is a big plus, as are good interpersonal and communication skills.
At MSU, students choose from fisheries, wildlife and field natural history options. In each of these, the coursework emphasizes biology, zoology, entomology and other sciences, math and computer science, and communications. Advanced courses for juniors and seniors teach students to integrate what they have learned into fish and wildlife biology and management.
"The hiring outlook for our graduates is better now than it has been in the past five to 10 years," McCarty observes. "Minorities are especially in demand. We have many more jobs earmarked for minorities than we have minority students to fill them."

East Jordan takes District championships

BY PAMBURR
 "Call it nerves, call it pressure, but just call it sweet," said Coach Steve Hines as his East Jordan Red Devils had just captured its second district title in a row. It was exciting and pressure-packed, but when the dust had cleared, East Jordan in overtime had beaten host Harbor Springs, 52-43.

Regulation play ended all tied up at 41, but the overtime belonged to East Jordan 11-2.

East Jordan scored five quick points in the first 23 seconds and the final outcome was never in doubt. The Red Devils went on to score the first eleven points and all that was left then was to celebrate.

The first quarter ended with Harbor Springs up by three points 10-7. East Jordan came roaring back to start the second quarter with eight straight points before Harbor picked up its game and stopped them to lead at the half 24-21.

 The end of the third quarter showed Harbor Springs up by one point 31-30. The second half was nip and tuck all the way with neither team able to open up a margin of more than four points. Late in the game with the score tied up at 39, neither team could capitalize on each others missed baskets, but with 45 seconds left, Jill Burt found Buffy Kooyer open for an easy layup, putting the Devils up by two.

The East Jordan crowd raised the roof with excitement, but it didn't last long. With 21 seconds left, Becky Holladay of Harbor sank a basket with 17 seconds left to send the game into overtime. Nineteen seconds into overtime, Buffy Kooyer again scored, but was fouled on the shot, converting the free throw and that was all. East Jordan needed to pick up the momentum and bring the championship home to East Jordan.

Coach Hines said "We just couldn't seem to get things going until we went into overtime."

The Devils had three players in double figures lead by Jill Burt, with 19, Buffy Kooyer 14, and Sara Chase with 10.

East Jordan scored 20 field goals, and sank 12 of 20 from the free throw line.

East Jordan will now advance to regional competition at Gaylord on November 29, to play the winner of the Roscommon District.

East Jordan defeated the Hurons of Rogers City Friday night 77-49, to advance to the finals. The Devils shot 49% from the floor with Jill Burt scoring 38 points, missing Kristy Miller's school record of last year by one point. Along with her 38 points, Jill sank 10 of 15 from the line and had five steals.

The Devils broke out to a 7-0 lead with Burt scoring the first nine points of the game. The lead extended to fourteen points at the half with Dia Jones sinking a three pointer at the buzzer.

Scoring for the Lady Devils were Burt with 38 points, Dia Jones with 11 and Buffy Kooyer with eight. Sara Chase led the team with 10 assists and only one turnover.

On the boards Burt also led the team with 16 rebounds and Buffy Kooyer pulling down eight.

East Jordan had 31 field goals, one three pointer and sank 14 of 30 from the line. The Hurons had 18 field goals, four three pointers, and sank nine of 24 from the line.

Boyerne loses in 1st game

BY SCOTT KNIPE
 Boyne City's Rambler girls wrapped up their season last week. Tuesday they defeated the Harbor Springs Rams in a close contest, 39-35. Thursday, Boyne was in Harbor for district tournaments and lost to Rogers City 34-52.

When Boyne hosted the Rams, they were fighting for a win to wrap up their regular season, and to set them in a good mind frame for the district competition. It was a hard fought game between two roughly equal opponents, but Boyne's home court advantage gave them the edge. Tysh Crozier led the Rambler's offensive drive, scoring 17. Dawn Archambault contributed six, Mindy Stadt, Amy Weeks, and Nancy McCullough each had four, and Toni Toton and Kristen Harvey each added two apiece.

In Harbor, against Rogers, Boyne simply could not establish any momentum. They fell behind, and saw themselves farther back as the game progressed. The only Rambler in double figures was Tysh Crozier, with 11. Stadt had eight, McCullough six, Harvey four, Crissy Gervasi contributed another four and Stacy McGeorge had one.

It was not a happy way to end a season. At times the team faltered, and just couldn't come up with the final effort it took to win. But overall, the Lady Ramblers have no reason for disappointment.

Falls fell in close District game

BY BECKY HAUSLER
 Boyne Falls played the classic final game last Thursday night at Vanderbilt. During the last half no more than four points separated the teams playing in the class D tournaments.

The score during the first quarter was 5-9. At the half it was 14-18, Vanderbilt ahead. The score was 28-26, in the third quarter, Boyne Falls leading, and when the clock ran out, the score was tied 42-42. In the one quarter of overtime Boyne scored only two points and Vanderbilt scored eight to win the game 44-50.

High scorer for Boyne Falls was Karen Bearss with 19, followed by Nikki Kerridge and Michelle Cousineau with seven points each, Missy Massey with six, JoAnn Bearss with three, and Ellen Reynolds with two points.

Top scorers for Vanderbilt were Aimee Hash with 14, Missy Evans and Donna O'Rourke each with 11, and Idamary Bunker with 10 points.
