The ski racks were brimming with skis over the holiday weekend at Boyne Mountain as thousands of skiers came up north for the winter experience. This unidentified lady found one of her skis on this rack and left to find the other on another rack that was as full as this one.

Boyne clamps down on neon sign ordinance

Boyne City has decided they will start enforcing one of their newest ordinances, covering neon signs, after they authorized City Attorney Bill McTaggart to start the process of suing the company involved.

The ordinance, passed last year says that neon signs are not allowed within the city if they do not have some sort of covering. The signs installed in the new Sharky's Party Store, have not complied with the ordinance says City Manager Randy Frykberg.

He said he has been negotiating with the owner for the past month about the signs, and has told him that they would either have to come down or come into compliance with the ordinance. So far, the owner has done nothing, he added.

The city informed the owner the first of December that he had 30 days in which to bring the signs into compliance and that notice ran out the first of the year. With the city commission authorizing the attorney, the process of enforcing the ordinance will be started.

Frykberg said he also had a request for an open neon sign that would be added on the outside of the building, another sign that is not allowed under the new ordinance.

All of the neon signs presently within the city comply under a grandfather clause. The ordinance was created after members of the planning board objected to open neon signs on the outside of the Water Street Mall and wrote a change in the ordinance to not allow any more.

The action came during the first meeting of the year for the city, the Tuesday noon meeting.

The other action item will allow the city to collect one half of the annual school taxes for city residents when they send out tax notices for the summer levy.

The city has taken this action since 1984 for the school system.

The city is the only governmental unit collecting summer school taxes for the system and by doing so, allows the schools to borrow less money than would be necessary to start the school year in the fall.

The city does include a waiver agreement on interest collected and will be paying the school taxes to the school every ten working days.

Commissioner Steve Moody

said it will now be up to the school system to accept or deny the collection agreement. It is expected the school system will accept the agreement as they have done so in the past.

News Briefs

With an elegant display of antique toys and Christmas ornaments, the Busy Bridge Antiques and Gifts Shop won the 1988 East Jordan Chamber of Commerce Merchants' Christmas Window Decorating Trophy. The award was made during the Christmas holidays.

With the first major snowfall, Boyne City's new superintendent Bill Nakoneczny said he had some qualms about closing the schools, only because he had a hard time driving home the night before. He ended up getting up early in the morning, and calling a few people who have had experience with snowfalls like the 12 inches that fell on Monday. They all said there were no problems. He then thought, if the others had no problem, then he would not call off the school day. He thought that the 12 inches of snow, if he were still downstate, would close the schools for the day at least. It is just one of the things he is getting used to, moving into Boyne City.

Over 200 people took advantage of the new warming house at Avalanche Preserve during the Christmas weekend, with most being sledders using the hill, said city officials. The growth of the enlarged skating rink has also brought out skaters while the cross-country trails are being utilized daily, they continued. The rink is open for skating daily while the sledding and cross-country trails are available during the daylight hours only.

With the recent snowfall, Boyne City residents are warned that they should not be plowing or pushing snow out into the street when they clear their driveways. The city said they will be enforcing the rule that prohibits dumping of snow into the street.

With its belly plow working, workers from Boyne City spent full time clearing roads and streets of the over 12 inches of snow that fell on the city Monday. While city crews were clearing streets, county crews were doing the same so that nobody would be snowed in for the first work day after the holiday. All roads were cleared by late Tuesday, say the city and county officials. The snow was the first major fall of the winter season and as usual, comes only when most vacationers have to drive back to work downstate or around the county.

Carter's starts Community Cash program

Carter's Food Center has joined with the other fourteen stores within the chain to offer a new program to the Boyne City area starting this week, said Mike Finkbeiner, store manager.

The new program will be offering Community Cash dollars in return for sales receipts and is designed to return cash to the community for groups, or organizations that are nonprofit.

Finkbeiner said that Jeffrey Erno will be the local coordinator for the program and those groups who are interested in determining the eligibility of their group should contact him at the store.

Erno will be handling the tabulation of the cash register receipt tapes when the groups bring them into the store. He will also be presenting the Community Cash benefits.

Erno has worked for Carter's since May of 1986 and is serving as the Dairy and Frozen Foods Manager as well as being an assistant Customer Service Manager.

He said he is looking forward to working with the community on the money making projects they can come up with, all by saving cash register receipts from Carter's.

While Carter's Food Centers have had the program for many years in other areas, this week marks the beginning of the successful program in Northern Michigan, Finkbeiner said.

If people have any questions concerning the program, they are to ask for Erno who said he will be happy to work with the groups and answer any questions they may have.

'Velveteen Rabbit' hits the road

The Boyne City High School Drama Department took its Children's Theatre production of "The Velveteen Rabbit" on the road to Charlevoix Elementary School to present the show to 600 students.

The show was presented in the gym with complete sets and sound system. As in the show in Boyne City, the players warmed up the crowd with pantomime skits involving members of the audience. The show then continued complete with lighting cues improvised to fit the auditorium.

The Boyne City students also took their show to East Jordan Elementary School to present it to 800 students. Once again in the East Jordan school one of the sets for the production had to be improvised from a set of steps already in the school. Boyne's students once again provided sound and lighting effects for the production to fit the surroundings.

As in other productions, the crowd was involved in pantomime skits before the show began.

Later Boyne's drama students will put on a production of Roger's and Hammerstein's "South Pacific" for the Michigan Interscholastic Forensic Association's Theatre festival competition and in their traditional spring production.

First draft registrants now ineligible for service

Joseph Frank, a resident and city employee of Lafayette, Louisiana, celebrates his birthday this month. By turning 26, Frank unknowingly establishes a milestone for an agency of the U.S. Government and earns himself a minor place in history.

Eight years ago, Frank was the first 18-year-old man to sign up and be processed by the Selective Service System under the continuous draft registration program. From today on, however, if Congress and the president order a return to military conscription under present law, Frank is too old to be drafted. He becomes the first man since Vietnam to pass through the full, eight-year-long period of draft eligibility without being drafted.

Names and addresses of men ages 18 through 25 are kept on file by Selective Service for use in a national emergency. If Congress reinstates the draft, men most likely to be called into military service would be those who turn 20 during that calendar year. Selective Service would first conduct a birthdate lottery to determine the order of call within that age group and then, depending upon the manpower requirements of the crisis, those men whose birthdays draw low lottery numbers would be more likely to be called.

There has not been a draft since 1973 when the U.S. switched to an all-volunteer military force. In 1975, the Selective Service System was placed in "deep standby" status and the requirement for men to register was suspended. But it wasn't long before several studies and commission reports noted that a draft would be needed again if the country ever became involved in a major conflict. They predicted it would take too long to get men registered, classified, inducted, and trained. In 1980, after the Soviet invasion of Afghanistan, President Carter revitalized the Selective Service System and reinstated the registration requirement for men. On Jan. 5, 1981, registration of 18-year-old men began again and has continued. Today, using computer technology, the System can begin issuing thousands of induction orders via Western Union "Mailgrams" in three days or less, once Congress and the president give the go-ahead.

With few exceptions, federal law requires every man to register with Selective Service within 30 days of his 18th birthday. (Men have a 60-day window in which to comply with the law: from 30 days before to 30 days after turning 18). The process is simple. Men furnish their names, addresses, and telephone and social security numbers by completing and signing a short form at any post office. A man who is out of the country around the time of his 18th birthday can register at any U.S. embassy or consular office.

Michigan's forests to be inventoried

The Michigan Society of American Foresters (MSAF) has recently announced its position concerning the re-survey or re-measurement of Michigan's forest resources. According to Russell Kidd, Communications Chair for the MSAF, actions are needed now to insure the state's forests are re-inventoried, beginning in 1991.

"By law, the U.S. Forest Service is required to periodically survey each state's forest resources," says Kidd, "which generally averages about every ten years. However, MSAF is concerned that this may not happen automatically in Michigan due to financial and political concerns within the state and federal government."

According to the MSAF, a statewide forest survey is critically needed in the early 1990s to assure continued, proper management of Michigan's forests. "The last statewide survey was done in 1980 before the rapid and sizeable expansion of forest industry during the mid-1980s in some areas of the state," states Kidd.

"The information provided by another survey will tell us how fast forests are growing, how much timber is being removed and other valuable data. This database is truly the foundation on which to plan further industrial growth, job expansion and to maintain environmental, recreational and wildlife values associated with Michigan's forests," says Kidd.

The cost to finance another forest survey has been estimated at about $5 million. The State of Michigan, the federal government and some in-kind support from forest industry are the most likely avenues for funding of this project. This will be the fifth statewide survey of Michigan's forests since 1935.

In addition, MSAF would like to see the next statewide forest survey: intensify the amount of information gathered in each survey unit of the state; improve access to computerized data by ensuring this information is stored in Michigan as well as at the North Central Forest Experiment Station in St. Paul, Minnesota; and gather additional data on privately owned forests, not presently measured in the current survey format.

Current estimates of the economic impact of the forest industry in Michigan state that over 154,000 jobs and in excess of $4 billion are supported by this industry alone. Further expansions are also possible without jeopardizing the forest resource. Thus, Michigan's forests can contribute to rural economic development and community stability.

"However timely, accurate information in the form of a statewide forest survey is needed in the early 1990s."

Jottings

BY JIM SILBAR

It seems like it happens every year. Only this year is only a couple of days old.

What seems, is that the weather, in this case snow, always seems to fall just when all the vacationers and skiers have to leave to get back to their busy world.

For many of us who live here year-around, that is good news.

We get the chance to play in the fresh stuff.

Only after we figure out a way to shovel it off the porch and out of the driveway and clear out the end of the driveway because the county or city snowplows always come after we have gotten the drive cleared.

And then we can go to work. If the snow keeps up during the workday, we can go out to the car, brush off all the white stuff and try to figure out a way to get out of the parking lot.

Sure, we get to play in the snow. Some of us get to run snowplows and have fun driving around in a fog caused by the snow coming off the end of the blade.

Some of us get to trudge out to the chairlift to clear off the chairs, clear the entryway and run the lift for those vacationers who can enjoy the skiing.

Others like myself, get all locked up in an office writing a column like this and trying to figure out how I am going to get through the 10 to 15 inches in the drive when I get home.

On to other things in life. Welcome to the 1989 year. I don't know how you spent the New Year, but I know I did not visit any of the local establishments that offer libations. I did that with the full knowledge that I knew what I was doing.

Instead, I picked the evening to hang wallpaper. It is only one of the many jobs the boss had for me to do when she decided that she did not like paint.

She purchased the wonderful stuff from a local merchant who keeps asking when are you going to hang the wallpaper? Well, now I can tell him I did hang some of it.

I have decided to quit hanging wallpaper.

I was all right until I stopped doing it to look over the work. Much to my chagrin, I discovered that the stuff has a pattern. And as usual, I did not notice it until after I had hung the difficult part.

I did not mind hanging the difficult piece, even cutting around the window and cutting out the trim, just like the boss wanted.

Until she came in to look at what I had done.

Now, I am going to have to rent a steamer to get the piece off the wall and replace it with another piece. Now I have to worry that she bought extra, otherwise the new stuff won't have the same color as the old stuff when the man or woman comes to install it.

Because I am not going to do it. Let someone else with a higher frustration level come in and hang wallpaper the way she wants it.

Got a gripe, write a letter to the editor.

Locomotive crashes were frequent along tracks bringing to Boyne City the lumber cut from the hills around town. This crash, about 1900, shows the locomotive on its side off to the right of the picture, while the rest of the train dumped load after load of lumber. Note the number of people in the picture all set to put the train back on the tracks. They were part of the over 10,000 people that lived and worked in the Boyne City area. The crash was listed as being somewhere near Boyne City.

LEFTOVERS

After the holiday season, many of us have leftovers. How are we going to use them without repetition. Many jokes have been told about leftovers. Here are a few secrets about using these foods from the refrigerator. We want to limit the number of ingredients so that there is a semblance of the original dish.

My friend, Don, says that his mother did leftovers this way: once a week she took everything in the refrigerator, dumped it into a big pot and cooked it; meat, vegetables, soup, lettuce, mashed potatoes or boiled potatoes, beans, etc. Don said that sometimes it was good!

Many times leftovers are even better than the original meal. Here is a turkey recipe that I can recommend.

DONS TURKEY SUKIYAKI
3 tablespoons oil
1 cup diced green peppers
1 cup diagonally sliced celery
1 diced green onion with tops
2 cups cooked diced turkey
¼ cup soy sauce

Heat oil in medium skillet; add vegetables. Cook, stirring over medium heat 5 minutes or until vegetables are tender but not mushy. Add turkey and soy sauce; stir until mixed and heated through.

Serve on piping hot rice. Makes four to six servings. Don added mushrooms (sliced fresh ones) and bean sprouts.

EGG ROLLS
When we make egg rolls it is necessary to have all of the ingredients prepared before starting the cooking process. You can use your choice of fillings such as little shrimp, spinach, etc. Don used these vegetables:

2 small zucchini
1 small carrot
About 4 large mushrooms
Always a little onion
1 small can of water chestnuts, chopped

A few bean sprouts
All of the vegetables except the bean sprouts and the water chestnuts can be shredded in a food processor or by hand.

Another variation of vegetables could be:
1 can Chinese vegetables, chopped

Season your vegetables to taste. Don used black bean sauce, oyster sauce, and a dash of soy sauce, all from bottles or jars. Stir fry in small batches about 2 minutes then mix all of the above in a skillet. Stir well and simmer about 2 minutes more then set aside in a colander to drain. For this stir frying Don used peanut oil.

We used a package of egg roll shells; have them at room temperature so that they separate easily. Follow the directions on the egg roll package to put about 1 tablespoon of the vegetables on the shell and roll them up envelope style and seal them with one egg beaten with about 3 tablespoons of water.

It is best to put them together just before deep frying. Don used vegetable oil for this, doing about 3 rolls at a time, while I rolled them up. Try one first to make sure that the oil is the correct temperature.

Serve these at once. If they are sealed well they will not sputter in the pan. They are delicious dipped into these sauces: we used bottled sweet and sour sauce, plum sauce and hot mustard sauce. Beforehand, you can make the hot mustard sauce by adding just enough water to dry hot mustard to make it the consistency of prepared mustard.

While the egg rolls are hot, dip them in the above sauces and enjoy.

Now, for real leftovers you will no doubt have leftover vegetables made up for the egg rolls. Just re-heat them in the microwave for lunch the next day. We served them with rice fixed this way.

SAUTEED RICE
Saute chopped onions with just a little chopped carrot for color, if you have green onions use some of the green part. When they are crispy tender, add leftover rice. Stir and heat thoroughly, add a dash of Worcestershire Sauce. Delicious!

Grandmother made bread pudding for dessert often. Home made bread makes it best. I like this special way to make this old fashioned dessert.

BUTTERS-COTCH BREAD PUDDING
3 tablespoons butter or margarine
½ cup brown sugar
¼ teaspoon baking soda
2 cups milk
Pinch of salt
2 cups stale bread cubes (about ½ inch)

Melt the butter in pan. Add sugar; heat until well blended. Dissolve soda in milk; add gradually to sugar mixture. Stir until well blended; set aside to cool. Beat eggs lightly. Add salt and cooled milk and sugar mixture. Put bread cubes into greased baking dish; pour custard over. Bake in preheated 350 degree oven about 45 minutes. Yield six servings.

FAKE TREE FIZZLES

He sprang the proposal on her unexpectedly, after they'd packed away or pitched out the Christmas season. She was shocked that this man, this epitome of honesty, should so casually suggest that they invite a pretentious upstart to be a permanent part of their home. It was as if he didn't realize that what he proposed would change their whole lives forever. He proposed that they have an artificial Christmas tree for heaven's sake - a fake tree for Christmas.

He had sound reasons for his proposal. He started with the messy needles, that being his most recent memory of the past year's tree. He recalled aloud its dribbly, declining days and how it left behind expansive footage of brown and green spines when he removed it.

He knew that this didn't concern her much though. They'd both noticed that she'd lost any leanings toward meticulous housekeeping long ago, beginning in the days when the contents of the children's backyard sandbox were deposited as much indoors as out and growing through the years when the kitchen became a do-it-yourself, all hours snack counter for said offspring and their friends and the living room their cloakroom. So he touched lightly the neatness advantage of artificial trees.

He dove right into the aesthetic aspect though, reminding her that the Christmas trees that their son had brought them from tree-cutting farms had grown more conical, more supposedly ideal Christmas tree shaped every year. The farm owners pruned them so much that they looked less like real trees than good artificial ones did.

She remembered that he'd commented on this fact when the last tree stood in the living room and she'd said, "Uh-huh" agreeably not dreaming that her assent would return to smite her. Now that it had, and she'd had time to think about it, she had sound reasons too for quite different views on the subject.

First off, she felt that a fake tree would never fit in at their house, a homely place where people lived fully and often untidily. A mess-free tree requiring neither water nor cleaning up after would be out of place.

Besides, what would their friends think? These frank and open people might back away from them, at least over Christmas, once they saw or even just heard about their abominable tree.

On top of that, the kind of decorations they put on their Christmas tree would be all wrong on a plastic tree (or whatever fake trees were made of, a subject on which she was uninformed nor did she want to change that either). Their ornaments consisted of a few from their childhoods such as "his" and "her's" treetop angels which were displayed in alternate years.

Mostly though they had handmade ornaments the children had decorated and put together in school or Sunday school from kindergarten on. The put-together part hadn't held up well through time, but with care they'd survived year after year.

Then too, what about the pine sap smell? That could probably be bought too, in a spray can likely, and how awfully appropriate - a fake tree sprayed with fake scent.

So there they were, each seeing the matter differently. A difference in viewpoint they'd long noted was the case with them and they'd compromised accordingly. This time though when the subject came up again she'd state reasonably and calmly that an artificial tree would come into their house over her dead body. A fake tree for Christmas, indeed.

Blue jays best foresters?

Competition for Smokey the Bear? Blue jays may be nature's best foresters. According to National Wildlife magazine, blue jays collect and cache a vast number of nuts, many of which are not recovered and germinate into trees. Some scientists have begun to wonder if jays could be put to work reclaiming strip-mined land or other barren areas. Researchers soon will be plowing on state forest land in Iowa, to test whether the birds can be roped into forestry.

FISHING FESTIVALS FLOURISH

MICHIGAN FISHING FANCIERS this season can participate in a flood of fishing fests throughout the state. Besides toting warm clothes, spoons, jigs and bobbers to the family derbies, AAA Michigan reminds anglers to take the following "ice advice" on safety:

- Three inches of ice thickness may be safe on a pond but can be dangerous on a moving stream or in the Great Lakes. Use caution on bodies of water with strong currents.
- Use an ice spud as a walking staff on unfamiliar ice to test thickness. An ice spud is made by welding a large chisel to a 4½-foot pipe handle. If ice appears unsafe, a test hole should be made to reveal exact thickness.
- Avoid ice that is dark, discolored, porous, spongy or carries water.
- Children on ice should always be accompanied by an adult.

Boyne Ramblers runners up in Christmas tourney

Take Johannesburg but lose to Bellaire

BY SCOTT KNIPE

Boyne City's basketball squad was not idle during the Christmas break. Thursday and Friday of last week they were part of a four team tournament held in Bellaire, and finished as runners up by losing to Bellaire in the finals.

Thursday the first game of the evening took place between Bellaire and Ellsworth. Bellaire easily won that contest, advancing to the finals. After that game Boyne City met on the court with Johannesburg, a team that drew local attention recently by beating Forest Area 123-33. The Ramblers were faced with a tough defensive assignment, as three of Jo-burgs senior starters had career scoring in the thousand point range.

The Ramblers came out intent on winning, but lacking a certain amount of intensity. The game they played was less than perfect, marred by twenty-two turnovers, poor rebounding, and unexceptional shooting. Nonetheless, their determination and hustle threw their opponents off enough to allow Boyne a half-time lead of eight points, 32-24, after having been tied at 14-14 in the first quarter. In the third period, the Ramblers were plagued with fouls and couldn't find a rhythm. Jo-burg fought back, made up the Rambler's eight point margin, and took a three point lead going into the fourth, 40-43.

Now looking from behind, the Ramblers went to their big men in the final quarter. Eric Smith, Scott Knipe, and Keith Harvey combined for 12 under the basket, and Mark Harris delivered a three-pointer and two last minute free throws to boost Boyne to a four point victory, 58-54. Eric Smith led the Ramblers offensively with 20 points, followed by Keith Harvey with 10, Mark Harris with 9, Scott Snyder with 8, and Scott Knipe with 7. Wayne Avery and Scott Hammontree each added 2 points.

Less than a day later the Ramblers took the court again, this time against Bellaire. Bellaire had the obvious advantage of being at home, and were primed to win their own tournament. Boyne went in with the intentions of spoiling it for them, but were unable to, as Bellaire found a hot hand in several players. They jumped out to an early 10-21 lead over the Ramblers and kept a six point margin at the half, 32-28. Bellaire's outside shooting killed Boyne. For the entire evening Bellaire canned six three-pointers, while the Ramblers so far have only one on the entire season.

In the second half Boyne tried to get things rolling their way, and on several occasions they fought back to within a bucket. But just as they had gotten back within striking distance their composure would flag and the home team would capitalize upon it. At the end of the third, Bellaire maintained a five point lead, 46-51. Several times in the fourth quarter the Ramblers, led by Eric Smith once again, attempted to get back in the game, but Bellaire effectively neutralized any height advantage the Ramblers had and held onto their safe lead. The last minute was a drawn out sixty seconds as Boyne would intentionally foul Bellaire to gain possession of the ball, and then would throw up desperation three-point shots, missing the mark by scant inches, and missing their opportunity to win the ball game. Bellaire won, 65-71.

Smith led the Rambler scorers again with 22 points. Wayne

Eric Smith is turning out to be a real point producer for Boyne City. This picture from the game against Charlevoix in December, shows off his form in putting another two points on the scoreboard. Against Jo-Burg, he hit for 12 points, and in the game with Bellaire he had 22 points for his contribution to the team trying to win the Christmas tournament against the hosts.

Avery was the only other Rambler in double figures, scoring 10.

Harvey added 9, Harris 8, Hammontree 7, Snyder 6, and Knipe

So far a whooping success

BY REG SHARKEY
North America's tallest bird, the stately white, marked with black whooping crane, with its 7-foot wingspan, is getting an additional hand in its struggle for survival, thanks to Representative Bob Davis, U.S. Congressman from Michigan's 11th District.

The history of the majestic whooper is another sad episode of man's inconsideration in sharing or preserving the habitat that certain species need in order to survive.

By 1937 only 15 birds were left from once large flocks that numbered into the hundreds, nesting on prairie wetlands from Illinois to North Dakota. But by the late 1800s whoopers had abandoned their historic homelands due to wetland drainage, farming, land settlement and shooting, retreating to wintering grounds on the Texas coast to make their last stand.

But, then, due to pressure from ornithologists, bird lovers and environmentalists the U.S. government established the 47,200 acre Aransas National Wildlife Refuge near Austwell, Texas, giving strict legal protection to these last birds.

Extensive publicity given the birds along their migratory route also gave the picturesque birds hundreds of protecting eyes.

In the interim time the nesting grounds of the last remaining flock, through intensive aerial search, was traced to Wood Buffalo National Park, Northwest Territories, near Canada's Arctic Circle, some 2,400 miles from the Texas wintering grounds.

With protection and focus on the well-being of the whoopers, the Texas wintering birds totaled 70 adults and 6 young by the spring of 1980. Now there was hope for survival of whoopers.

But due to the restricted wintering and nesting habitats it was realized that disease, polluted water, or natural disasters could wipe out the small flock.

So intensive projects to increase whoopers was undertaken. With two eggs being the norm for nesting pairs single eggs were taken from the clutch and incubated artificially. This made sense for under normal conditions only one chick usually survives to the juvenile stage.

Beginning in 1975, at the Patuxent Wildlife Research Center of the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service, Maryland, where much of the whooper restoration work has taken place, Dr. Rod Drevin took surplus eggs from captive whoopers and substituted them in the nests of wild greater sandhill cranes. The project was successful.

Now similar work will be carried out at the Seney Refuge in Michigan's Upper Peninsula where sandhill cranes have been nesting for many years.

Through the efforts of the Michigan United Conservation Clubs (MUCC), Rep. Davis was alerted to the fact that the Okefenokee Wildlife Refuge in Georgia, and the Kissimmee Prairie in Florida were vying for available monies to make the study possible.

But Davis was successful in convincing the U.S. Fish and Wildlife Service, through advice by Dr. Lawrence Walkinshaw, authority on cranes, that Seney was the most ideal site to carry out the continued research and ongoing restoration of the majestic whoopers to viable populations.

What could be more inspirational and heart-warming than being able to go up to Seney a few years from now and watch the graceful and fascinating dance of courting whoopers.

Addendum: This column was inspired by Mrs. Stan McRae of Mackinaw City who sent me a card reminding me that she, and her husband Stan (the big fellow that portrays Paul Bunyon at the big Fort Michilmackinac bust each year in early summer) had invited me to go with them to Seney to watch the courting dance of the returning sandhill cranes, which I missed. Have a date for next spring. If so will try to visit with Dr. Urbanek who will carry on the whooper-sandhill crane experiments.

Representative Bob Davis was instrumental in getting wildlife habitat areas designated for the black whooping crane.

Sand dune purchase completed—North Point now public property

The 27 acres of sand dunes and scenic forests with 2,800 feet of frontage on Lake Michigan known as North Point became public property today. Closing on the sale of the property to Charlevoix Township, which will maintain the property as a public nature preserve, took place at the First State Bank of Charlevoix.

The closing represents the climax of a year-long effort to raise nearly $300,000 from local sources to match a $400,000 grant from the Michigan Natural Resources Trust Fund. Spearheaded by the Little Traverse Conservancy, the fundraising effort succeeded, resulting in the closing today.

Conservancy officials offered special thanks to the First State Bank of Charlevoix for helping to overcome some last-minute hitches in the purchase.

"Procedural changes in the method of payment by the Department of Natural Resources for the Natural Resources Trust Fund suddenly made it necessary for us to borrow the $400,000 for a short time until a reimbursement can be authorized," said Conservancy Executive Director Tom Bailey. "It could have been a real problem, but First State Bank of Charlevoix stepped in to help."

Bailey also praised the efforts of Charlevoix attorney Tom Pointner of Simpson and Moran, who drew up the legal papers making the loan possible. "This has been a community project all the way," Bailey said, "and the help given to the project at the end reinforces that."

Without the help of the bank and Pointner, Bailey said, the closing would have been delayed until 1989 costing up to $20,000 in additional taxes, option costs, and other expenses.

A formal dedication ceremony is planned for spring or summer. "We want to be sure to thank everybody who helped to preserve North Point," Bailey said, "and the dedication will be a great occasion on which to do that." Many people were involved, he said, including the business community, which donated over $97,000 of the total, year-round and seasonal residents, and many local organizations and service clubs.

"This community should be very proud of what has been accomplished by everyone working together," he said. "North Point now belongs to all and, more importantly, will one day belong to our children and theirs."

Project aims to reduce seniors' risks of fires

The risk of burn injury increases markedly after age 70. Upon reaching this age women are at a greater risk of suffering a burn injury than at any time since they were age 10. Even more alarming is the severity of the injury: The average size burn to those over age 70 is 26% of the total body area (tba) as opposed to 21% for others burned; risk of death increases from 11% to 49%. Seniors are in the hospital longer, and have less success with rehabilitation. The cost of caring for one major burn injury over 25% tba (physician and hospital fees for the initial hospitalization) is $100,000. Also seniors have a 49% greater risk of dying in a home fire. The National Institute for Burn Medicine (NIBM), in 1983, developed a program targeted at this problem. NIBM works closely with firefighters in the community to conduct Burn Protection for seniors. Over the last five years 10,152 people over age 60 across Michigan have received this training.

Now, under a grant awarded to the Michigan Office of Service to the Aging, (OSA) working in collaboration with NIBM will train 200 firefighters on the special needs of older adult burn victims. The grant will also fund fire prevention training for Shelter Advisors, who will then educate over 800 older citizens across Michigan. According to OSA Director Olivia P. Maynard, the $114,000 in funds from the Federal Administration on Aging of the Department of Health and Human Services will provide for 17-month state-wide, fire-prevention, community education project. In addition; project costs of $48,000 are being funded by the state and $21,965 by NIBM. The project is a collaborative effort of the state's expanded health promotion coalition established under the Administration on Aging/Public Health Service national initiative on health promotion for older people.

The expanded coalition includes representatives of the Michigan State Fire Marshall and Fire Fighters Training Council and the 14 statewide Area Agencies on Aging. The NIBM headquartered in Ann Arbor will provide expertise in fire prevention education, professional training, and research.

The project will provide fire prevention and burn safety instruction and guidance to older adults through improved community education materials, public service announcements, and related health promotion materials. The training of fire fighters will focus on the immediate response requirements of older burn victims and the role of firefighters as fire prevention educators. In addition, the project will address guidelines and policy development to assist older adults in home fire safety modifications.

The National Institute for Burn Medicine, a 501 (c) (3) agency, was founded in 1968 by Dr. Irving Feller, also founder of the University of Michigan Burn Center. NIBM's goal is to resolve the burn problem through education, research and prevention. If you are interested in a burn prevention program, please call or write: The National Institute for Burn Medicine, 909 East Ann Street, Ann Arbor, MI 48104, 313-769-9000.

Business

Christmas week that starts off the winter season got underway.

Most of the businesses said they expected the numbers to turn out better than last year as it seemed to them that there were more skiers coming into the area than ever.

While some responded to having a rather slow start to the week, they all agreed that by the end the business was great.

In the meantime, businesses that do not cater to skiers were closed during the prime time that skiers would shop.

Ski figures from Boyne Mountain showed that the number of skiers held their own and may be slightly higher than last year.

It was almost the same for the East Jordan businesses who cater to the snowmobiler trade. The limited amount of snow did not seem to deter the snowmobilers from coming to the area, and plenty of machines were seen at either end of the Jordan Valley Trail.

1988 firearm deer season sets record

The 1988 firearm deer hunting season set a new harvest record of 289,000 deer, exceeding last year's take of 257,360. Poor weather during much of the season held the harvest below the expected take of 321,000 deer.

Tests conducted by the Michigan Department of Public Health at the highway deer biological stations showed no "ixodesticks" (lyme disease carrying ticks) were found on the 4,157 deer examined.

"This confirms our belief that there is little, if any, danger of contracting lyme disease during deer hunting season," said Dr. Stephen M. Schmitt, Department of Natural Resources (DNR) Wildlife Veterinarian.

Overall, there were more firearm hunters this year, and hunter attitude was excellent, despite the bad weather.

Deer were in excellent shape and will be entering the winter in a healthy condition, in spite of this year's severe drought.

"We are very pleased with the hunters' success," said Director David F. Hales, of the DNR. "The deer hunting season is far from over, and we are certain the economic benefit to local communities and to the State of Michigan will be significant."

Archery deer hunting season began again December 1 and will end January 1, and the muzzleloading season is December 2 through 11 in the Upper Peninsula and from December 9 through 18 in the Lower Peninsula. About 50,000 archers and 100,000 muzzleloaders are expected to participate in the December seasons.

Hunting pressure was lighter during firearm season on public lands than last year, and about the same on private lands. Antler development was very good — many 1½-year olds had six- and eight-point racks.

Thirty-six injuries, compared to 33 in 1987, occurred during the firearm deer hunting season; three additional accidents resulted in fatalities, down substantially from six in 1987.
