Spring meltdown draws resident complaints

"I'm not mad," said Dave Seelye at the Tuesday noon worksession of the Boyne City Commission. "I'm furious."

Seelye was remarking about the thaw conditions that have caused flooding at his home on Park Street, as well as wash out the asphalt, conduit under his driveway and several other driveways of neighbors caused by flowing runoff of snow.

Seelye told the commissioners present at the worksession, as well as City Manager Randy Frykberg, that last year when the road was repaved, he and the head of the DPW, the contracting firm and others discussed the proper size conduit that should have been placed in the driveways to allow the water to pass through in the open ditch.

The street has an open ditch drainage system between Vogel and Groveland.

The problem arose due to the fast runoff of the melting snow Monday, which caused the ditch to overflow and run over capacity. Seelye said the water backed up into his yard and into the house.

Seelye thought the pipe that was installed was too small when it was replaced and thought the city had come to a decision to install larger pipe last year when the work was done. He said the new conduit was only 15 inches, the same as it was previously.

Somewhere between the time of the meeting with the contractor and the DPW head, he said, the decision was made to install the same size pipe.

According to City Engineer Dick Young, the consulting engineering firm told the city the 15 inch size would be adequate to handle the flow.

Because the rushing water was more than the pipe could take, the driveway was washed out Monday, and the city helped to remove other driveway conduits to help the flow. Four homes are without driveway access to their homes.

The city had hoped to install new pipe Tuesday and Wednesday to replace the pipe that they took out or was washed out. Basil Moore, the head of the DPW said the work was in process and larger pipe was called for.

Seelye replied that the problem has been going on for years and suggested the city do it right by installing conduit the length of the four homes involved and burying the pipe.

He said that with the snow from the plows filling the ditch, the ice helps to form blocks to the movement of the water. By burying the storm drain, that would help keep the water flowing.

Seelye also stated that a conduit that was supposed to be closed off coming from East Street was also flowing onto his property.

He asked the city to look into and correct both problems as soon as possible.

He was told the city was looking into the problems and will be starting to find a cure to the problem. But, he was also told the city finances may not be available to do all that is necessary.

In another matter, Jim Stackus, of the Stackus Funeral Home, asked if the two cemetery workers that were laid off last winter could be started back to work.

The city has had a policy of closing down the cemetery during the winter and not allowing burials due to the snow cover and the problem of finding the grave sites.

Stackus said that this year he has more interments than usual and was hoping to get started burying before the 15th of April when the workers are expected to be called back.

He said that the opening and closing the graves could be done

South Arm Twp cited for exceptional planning

South Arm Township was cited for exceptional planning in the latest issue of "The Link", the newsletter of the Elk River/Chain-of-Lakes watershed published by the Northwest Michigan Council of Governments.

The newsletter said the township had struggled to accommodate the growth pressures and to initiate forward thinking planning which assures resource protection and helps direct or control growth.

"South Arm Township has made use of natural rivers zoning standards to protect portions of the township," the article said, "and are reviewing their ordinances for growth management and site plan review standards."

Peggy Midener is chairperson of the planning commission which includes Kenneth Lemon, Marie Shepard, Albert C. Anderson, Neil G. Colburn and Neil A. Olstrom. Harold Pletz is supervisor.

Boyne City workers had many problems with the spring snow melt, all of which seemed to take place on one day this week. City workers are trying to see what could be done to control the water flowing down the ditch on Park Street, just one of the many areas in the city that had problems.

News Briefs

Boyne City will be paired with Charlevoix while East Jordan is paired with Utica in the upcoming Mayor Exchange Day, which is part of the annual Michigan Week. The exchanges will be made between May 19 and 27 this year with the traditional day being May 22. The pairings were announced by the Greater Michigan Foundation.

Petitions are available at school district offices for those waiting to become involved with area school boards. Boyne Falls has one seat open while Boyne City has several. East Jordan also has seats up for election. Those wishing petitions are asked to stop in and pick them up as they have to be returned shortly.

This next week we'll see very few people around the area as the annual migration to the south or other vacation places will take place. The vacation coincides with the annual school spring break. Those who are not going south, east, or west should stop in at a local merchant's place of business to help them see someone during the week.

Warnings have been placed to drivers to be on the lookout for potholes. Although the county and city crews are doing all they can to fill them up, they seem to grow almost as fast as mushrooms. Some can get quite deep in a short time and can cause needless expense to drivers if they hit them.

EJ to build ambulance garage, pave streets

Funds to build a new ambulance garage and to pave eight streets are included in the 1989/90 budget expected to be approved by East Jordan City Council Tuesday night.

Council members considered the proposed $1,008,185 general obligation budget at a public hearing scheduled after press time. The budget allowed $22,000 for the new garage, which will be built at the intersection of Maple Street and State Street.

The $155,770 budgeted for street paving is almost double last year's $83,945 budget.

Streets to be paved include 500 feet on Hillcrest, 400 on Orchard, 925 on Lakeview and 100 on Terrace, completing the paving of the Hillcrest subdivision except for one section of Terrace which deadends.

In the Christiansen's Ridge subdivision paving will include

1,275 feet on Sherman, 960 on Ontario, 950 on Huron and 400 on Lincoln. Griffin Road will also get 1,300 feet of paving.

City superintendent, Mike Dionne, said the new paving will also include curbing at intersections and corners. The city will be going out for bids soon for both new construction projects.

Approximately $10,000 less than usual was budgeted for sidewalk construction this year, city treasurer, Glendora Gettel, said. The city plans no sidewalk construction and very little repair, although it will consider requests from property owners. Sidewalk assessments require the property owner to pay 60 percent of the bill, while the city pays 40 percent.

The general tax fund millage of 14.1 for 1988 will increase to 14.6, Gettel said, explaining that the street debt fund of '86 last year

BY JIM SILBAR

With the sudden outbreak of spring during the past few days, many residents are reporting they have seen the first robin. Evidently, the first robin has been flying all over town as we have had many calls from residents throughout the city.

The robin may be the first harbinger of spring to most of the folks, but to me, the real harbinger is seeing the first fly.

It seems they hibernate somehow and with the outbreak of mild temperatures, seem to hatch out. I have always thought they all just died off shortly around the first frost, but I guess the eggs and other parts of their life stages just become dormant to await the spring.

One thing about flies this time of the year is that if you swat one of them, then statistically, you have eliminated several thousand.

Now that is something I can do. And hopefully, there are a few others who would participate in the same thing.

I am glad I don't live on Mackinac Island, as I understand the flies up there have a different breeding style and are harder to eliminate. Or at least that is what I was led to believe some years ago when they sent out press releases saying that they are determined to figure out a way to control the insect.

Control is probably the best word to use as those little creatures have spent many years trying to get in my food when I eat out on the deck.

This year, I have been thinking of getting one of those electric lights that attract the bugs and zap them into the nether world.

I only wish that I worked at some place like Dow Chemical so I could come up with a safe, ecologically responsible, environmentally safe chemical that would put the fly problem somewhere behind us.

I have also wanted to come up with some chemical that could

Says family reunions are a precious memory

Editor:

With the recent death of my dear aunt, Rea Rae Saxton, I get a renewed warmth from the memories of our latest family reunion. Many of us could not make it to Rea's funeral, but we're all so happy we had the chance to be with her and her family during our reunion.

It was early July and family members were gathering from all over the country to reunite and strengthen the ties that bind us. We chose East Jordan to meet since that is where our grandparents had raised their six children.

East Jordan and vicinity is a wonderful place to celebrate a family reunion. For a small town, it has an enormous array of activities for all ages. We thought finding sleeping accommodations would be difficult, but were pleasantly surprised.

Our reunion picnic was at Whiting County Park, which has excellent accommodations for a reunion of just about any size. A caterer was hired which cost less than $15 per adult for a great meal with lots of variety.

People were asked in advance to bring family heirlooms, genealogy notes and family trees for our Memorabilia Table. A video tape was put together with old and new family photos with old audio tapes played in the background. The eldest family member gave a very touching speech on his earliest memories of the family and family milestones.

We hired an area photographer to take a photo of all 54 who attended. What a cherished picture that has been for all of us.

Games of softball, volley ball, water balloons and lawn darts were enjoyed. We even rented a number of canoes to go down the spectacular Jordan River.

We all met at the annual Fourth of July Parade clad in our matching "Saxton Reunion" tee shirts. I found such a sense of togetherness there, all enjoying this favorite event.

One morning we had a brunch; another we had a prayer service near our grandparents' graves. One night we got together for desserts and a sing-along; another was a pre-fireworks dinner.

We even elected a committee to set a date and plan the next reunion.

After five days of family gatherings and lots of hugs, kisses and jokes, we left with our hearts filled with close thoughts of one another.

After reading this commentary, I hope that the "wheels" in your head are turning which is the first step toward a memorable gathering of the generations. Life is just too short and unpredictable as the Saxtons have recently seen and felt with our loss of Rea Rae, and family is too important to put off seeing them for another year.

Happy Reunion Planning!

I recently received my 1989 assessment from Bay Township with an increase of 42%. As 80 plus % of our taxes goes to the Boyne City School District, what is the school district doing with all these monies received from assessment increases each year?

Wendell Willis brought in this picture showing the accepted means of travel back before the automobile took over the roads in Charlevoix County. This buggy was used to come into town for shopping and other occasions by his uncle, Tom Willis, and his grandfather, John Willis. The picture was taken about the turn of the century, Wendell said, somewhere around Horton Bay.

What they are getting away with on TV these nights! It's so far out I'm worried. Now Michigan's obscenity laws have begun to scare me. Each night along about ten o'clock I am afraid the cops will come by our house and arrest our television set.

***

That strange gloom you saw covering Boyne City's horizon in the day time lately and that tremulous heart-broken yell you've been hearing were caused by the paying of my property taxes.

***

A man stopped me on the street to ask if I thought he could get a permit to build an apartment building on the north shore of Lake Charlevoix.

"I don't have anything to do with that stuff," I said.

"Oh, excuse me," he said. "You looked so tense and worried I thought perhaps you might be a member of the city council."

"No, no," I said. "I am a member of the city's Historical Commission. We don't fuss around with the present or monkey with the future. We drag history out of the past so folks can have a look at what their ancestors got away with."

"You sound like a smart alec to me," the man said.

"Yes I am," I said. "It helps me lead a normal life since I quit smoking and drinking."

***

The older I get the more things I do not wish to do. But there aren't enough hours in the day not to do them.

***

I put twenty cents into the newspaper box, but the glass door would not open. I hit the change return button. Nothing happened; then I hit the side, using the words I seldom spout. My twenty cents fell into the return slot along with an additional thirty cents.

I tried again with my twenty cents, but it was returned without allowing the door to open.

I looked around to see if anyone was watching. Then I thought: If I were to put that extra thirty cents back into the box, it would foul up the next guy who came along to buy a paper. So I put the thirty cents into my pocket.

It gave me a good feeling to know that I had saved someone a lot of trouble.

***

A reader called the other day to tell me that I was all wet about George Bush. He said President Bush would make the most outstanding president this country has ever seen.

Boy, did that upset me! I got so angry my oven over-heated and I had to rush outdoors and fan it cold.

I've been to the hospital so many times within the past few years the doctors are now telling me that living is dangerous to my health.

Ever since spring sprung, I go outdoors one button lower.

Antoinettes hope for rebirth of Anishinabe traditions

by Gail Ware Ware-withal

BY LENORE BECHTEL

Native Americans are not now and never have been like the stereotyped Indians portrayed in movies, novels and even history books. Gigi and Stan Antoine have a mission to spread the real truth about the race's heritage, not only to America's dominant society (as they refer to non-Indians), but to their own people.

"Some of our people believe what they were taught," Gigi Antoine said. "They believe they were pagans and bad, and they still feel that inside. They don't know what a great society we had - they just believe what the non-Indians told them."

For such people the Antoinettes want to see a rebirth of Anishinabe traditions. Anishinabe, meaning "original people" is the term Native Americans historically called themselves. Only for purposes of communication do the Antoinettes use the label "Indian," a term mistakenly applied to their race by Columbus, who thought he had reached India when landing on American shores.

"We want to let the dominant society see who we really are, not what they have read in history books and what they've thought all their lives," Gigi Antoine said. "We want to dispel the myths and stereotypes and be able to live together peacefully."

Stan Antoine's heritage in East Jordan dates back to many years before early white settlers arrived in the territory. He is full-blooded Odawa, great-great-great-great-grandson of Cobmoosa (Flat River), the last great traditional ogema (respected leader), and a descendent of Nawequageezhig (Noon-day).

As Geshikung and ogema to his people, he earned a place of respect in the recently published "Michigan - A Professional Photographic Salute," where he is pictured in full ceremonial chief attire.

He points out that the term "chief" is a misnomer. Native American leaders did not dictate to their people, but governed through a council of leaders.

"Indians are individuals - every one of them," he said. "When you see them on TV, they're always in a band. But that's not the way it was. Every one of them thought for themselves, and that's the way they do to this day."

Antoine's Charlevoix County ancestry began when Cobmoosa's son, Otuan, was given the responsibility in the 1700s of taking care of Lake Charlevoix and the land surrounding it.

Ottawa, the more familiar tribal designation, is a bastardization of Odawa, which means trader. Likewise, Antoine got his name from a mispronunciation of Cobmoosa's son's name, Otuan, which means traveling person.

The ancestral property consisted of all of Lake Charlevoix, then known to the Anishinabe as Zhingiwak Beeng Ahkeh, and 50 to 60 miles inland, including the cities of Charlevoix, East Jordan and Boyne City.

Antoine explains that land was not owned by anyone. Their people's belief was that people cannot own land, just as they cannot own the air or water. In their early culture people had only the right to care for these things.

When settlers arrived around Lake Charlevoix, the Anishinabe caretakers did not fight them. Because the land did not belong to anyone, they felt they could share it. Antoine's family kept trying to take care of the land, but it became impossible. Eventually they and their people pushed away.

Gigi Antoine said what happened in the Burt Lake area, where many Anishinabe eventually bought and owned land, was typical.

"The Indians weren't educated in the non-Indian way," she said.

Gigi and Stan Antoine, a/k/a Geshikung, respected Odawa leader.

"They couldn't conceive of owning land, for one thing, and they had no conception whatsoever of taxes."

Their property went on the tax rolls, and other people bought it.

"We try to forget the bad things," she said. "People shouldn't feel guilty for things they know happened way back then. It wasn't the people. It was the government. They didn't understand our spirituality, and they wanted to impose their society on us. As people came and they needed more land, the government couldn't take it from the Indians without having an excuse. They told the common people, 'They're savages, they'll scalp you. They don't believe in God.' People were afraid. Naturally, they almost annihilated us."

Stan Antoine said, "Manifest destiny - that's what they called it. It was politics and power."

Antoine refuses to dwell on anything negative, refusing to talk about the era during which Indian children were taken from their homes and put in boarding schools to learn the white man's ways.

He prefers to talk about the rebirth of the values and culture of his ancestors. As a Catholic, he finds traditional spirituality along the same line as Bible history and the belief in both the Christian God and the Great Spirit (Geahzha Monda) compatible.

"An Indian believes he is not worthy to talk to the Great Spirit directly," he said. "No matter how holy we think we are, we're small."

He recalled that when he was a young boy, he never knew his grandfathers, but he and his brother used to hang around an old man for hours. When the man made the two young boys toad stabbers, they took them and pretended they'd chased toads.

They invented a story about how they had captured a toad that circled around them and then turned on them.

"He was real interested," Antoine recalled. "His eyes went into half squints until he couldn't stand it. He fell back and laughed and laughed and hugged us. This was our grandfather."

Parents taught their children to call the old man "grandfather," he explained. "This was to teach us the love for Geahzha Monada - to show us He loves us too."

Like many young people, Antoine would not listen to his elders as he grew older. Now he wishes he had. What he and his wife, who is one-quarter Oneida Iroquois and three-quarters French, have learned about their heritage is the result of listening to stories passed down through the generations. With the permission of the elders she's talked to, Gigi Antoine is now writing much of the history. It was not written before because there has been no written language.

Neither of the Antoinettes grew up knowing the languages of their people. Both started learning Odawa and pursuing the details of their heritage twenty years ago.

In her job as project director of Title V for Indian Education programs, Gigi Antoine's passes the pride of her people on to Native American students, trying to raise their self images, which in turn helps them do better in school.

She also teaches a high school and adult class called "People of the Three Fires," referring to the Ottawa, Potawatomi and Ojibway of Michigan. She welcomes non-Indians to the class.

According to the 1980 census, 3,800 Native Americans live in Charlevoix and Emmet County out of 60,000 throughout Michigan. The Antoinettes contend that because the 1990 census will be conducted by the Michigan Council on Indian Affairs with Indian surveyors, the number will increase dramatically.

"Our people don't relate well with non-Indians because of mistrust from the past," she said.

The Antoinettes want that misunderstanding - which often goes two ways - changed, and they think education is the key.

Her efforts to improve relations between whites and the Anishinabe received recognition by earning her spot in the 17th edition of "Who's Who of American Women," to be released next month.

"Once you understand something, you no longer fear it," Gigi Antoine said. "We're really proud that this (East Jordan) and surrounding communities have looked upon us in a positive way."

I've been thinking a lot about mice lately. Not the brown field mice that often take up residence in our utility room and stay until we discover them and change their address. I mean laboratory mice that I've not seen but know something about, about their diet anyway. I know that they've dined on apples, and I wish they hadn't because the combination of mice and apples has not worked out well for either the mice or for avid apple eaters.

Take the case of mice munching on apples when the fruit that they ate was loaded with daminozide, a chemical marketed as Alar. It's a growth regulator which when sprayed on apples heightens their color, makes their flesh firmer, keeps them from rotting very rapidly and from dropping to the ground when they mature. Alar-laced apples gave the mice cancer.

In 1985, consumer advocate Ralph Nader heard about apples being sprayed with Alar, about mice feeling poorly after eating apples laced with it and also that Alar sprayed on apples doesn't stay on the surface where it can be washed off but dives right into the apples' flesh. All fired up, he broadcast his findings and outraged citizens responded by badgering apple growers about using Alar. As a result, the number of apple growers who used it, about 40 percent, dropped to about 5 percent.

Fast forward to February, 1989, when the TV show "Sixty Minutes" featured a report issued by the Natural Resources Defense Council which warned that children face "intolerable risks" from eating fruits and vegetables sprayed with chemicals. Alar was singled out as being especially dangerous. The widespread frenzy over this report caused the Environmental Protection Agency, the outfit in charge of regulating things like Alar, to come out shortly afterward and state that it was removing the chemical from the market place.

The EPA was all set to do that back in '85 when the first furor broke out, but a scientific advisory panel said that the "dangerous" label was based on faulty research data. So the EPA ordered Uniroyal Chemical Co. Inc., manufacturers of Alar, to thoroughly test the chemical for safety instead.

Uniroyal's researchers found that children would have to drink 19,000 quarts of apple juice a day to get as much Alar as the mice that developed cancer got. Clearly kids couldn't drink that much and even if they aimed to, apple juice wouldn't tempt them to so overindulge - Cherry Coke maybe but not apple juice.

That's the story on Alar complete with happy ending, I guess. Certainly without the slightest risk, it lets children know the joy of eating apples and I am happy for them, being a one and sometimes two-a-day apple eater myself. I wonder though if a touch of Alar might not be a good thing for us more mature folks - enhance our fading color, firm up sagging flesh, keep us from falling down and falling apart.

As for the mice, they really ought to be taken off the apple detail. In a previously reported experiment involving mice and apples in Denmark, mice ate red apple skins and got cancer from them, for heaven's sake. So better they move on to testing other things - dog food for instance. I doubt that they'll get cancer from that since it's all they eat at our house and our mice are absolutely thriving.

BC School may use bond money for capital improvements

Boyer City School Board members learned, at a special meeting held Monday, that the school has a verbal approval that will allow the school system to spend some of the bond money left over and not used for re-roofing the high school.

The approval, given by State Supervisor of School Bond Loan Programs in Lansing, Richard Kelley, was conditional on the school system submitting all of the proper paperwork. Boyne Superintendent Bob Nakoneczny told the board the paperwork was going out this week.

The board has been looking at ways to eliminate asbestos in the schools and to purchase some badly needed computers for the administration office for the past several months. The using of bond money was one idea that was discussed for possible approval.

According to Nakoneczny, the fund balance in the bond account is $136,237.50 as of last Friday. The board hopes to get written permission to use about $75,000 to pay for the capital improvements.

Specifically, the school system is planning on spending about $45,000 for computers and programs for the business office to replace a bookkeeping machine that is close to breaking down and would cause major amounts of money to repair.

Another $30,000 is going to be spent to remove asbestos from the middle and high school so the school system complies with the new federal laws covering asbestos.

In using the funds, the board gave their approval to spend the money after the state has okayed the school using a portion for those improvements.

Nakoneczny said that fund has no outstanding bills yet to be paid, saying he approved the releasing of funds to E.&V. Construction and to M.J.K. Architects. Those were the last bills the school owed on the roof. The school had been holding back on releasing the funds until it was sure that all work had been completed according to the contracts.

The board also approved the posting of a new position for a part-time transportation supervisor.

The new position was deemed necessary in order to keep former transportation supervisor Vic Ayres. Ayres will become a full-time mechanic within the system and will not have the responsibility of being supervisor after someone is hired to fill the position.

The cost of the new position will be about the same, as Ayres will not have the overtime every day and will be able to get more accomplished in maintaining the bus system.

The school administration is hoping that one of the present bus drivers will step forward to fill the position.

The restructuring of the transportation department will see a part-time supervisor working about five hours a day for approximately 200 days a year.

Because of the union contracts, the cost to the schools would be about the same, Nakoneczny told the board.

It is hoped the position will be filled as soon as possible, Nakoneczny said, so the new person can learn what has to be done on a daily basis.

EJ mayor position, four council seats up for grabs

Nominating petitions are available at East Jordan City Hall for persons wanting to run for mayor or city council in the August 8 primary.

Because the mayor's term is for only one year, the position is open every year. Mayor Russell Peck ran unopposed in the 1988 election. Three of the six council seats (one in each of the city's three wards) come up for election each year, with terms being for two years. The expired terms this year are seats held by Russ Gee, First ward; Dave Waldron, second ward, and Ellen Cihak, third ward.

The year remaining in the vacant seat created by Bonnie Thomas' resignation will also be up for grabs. Council is expected to appoint a replacement when her resignation becomes effective April 5, but the position must be filed by voters' choice at the next election.

Nominating petitions for mayor must have signatures of 25 registered voters, and petitions for council members must have 10 signatures. Clerk Kathy O'Rear suggests obtaining more than the required signatures in case any prove to be invalid.

Petitions must be filed at city hall by 4 p.m. Tuesday, June 20. The primary, scheduled for August 8, is held only if there are more than two candidates for one position. Election day is November 7. The deadline for registering to vote is 30 days prior to the election.

SOUPS

"Soup's On", is a welcome summons to the table these late winter days. Spring seems slow in arriving and we feel the need for an old fashioned robust meal of soup and cornbread. Try this sausage soup. This is just the kind of soup that grandmother would have made, though she probably made her own soup stock and did not bother to put in two different colors of noodles. She would go down to the basement or root cellar for her potatoes, carrots, onions, cabbage and a quart can of her home canned tomatoes.

WINTER SAUSAGE SOUP
2 to 3 lbs. Polish sausage or Italian sausage, parboiled and sliced
1 medium onion, chopped
1 cup sliced carrots
1 (28 oz.) can whole tomatoes
1 cup chopped celery
3 potatoes, peeled and cubed
1/2 cup green egg noodles, cooked
1/2 cup white egg noodles, cooked
7 to 8 cups rich beef stock (I used the canned beef broth)
1 clove garlic (optional)
1 teaspoon brown sugar
Salt and pepper to taste
3 cups shredded cabbage
Garnish with 1 tablespoon freshly grated Parmesan cheese per serving.
Serves 8.

In a large soup-pot, brown sausage. Drain off all fat. Add remaining soup ingredients except cabbage being careful with salt and pepper because sausage varies in seasonings. Bring to a boil, lower heat, cover and simmer one hour. Add cabbage and cook for 15 minutes. Adjust seasonings and serve with the

Parmesan cheese.

Cornbread is all one needs to complete the menu for a hearty soup meal. This recipe adds cheese, corn and chilies to old-fashioned cornbread. On my trip to Monterey, California this winter, I learned that Monterey Jack cheese originated on the old Molera Ranch in 1892. It was first made in a simple keg with a heavy board pressed down by the top of a jack. The name Monterey Jack has lasted through the years.

CHEESE AND CHILES CORNBREAD

2 eggs, lightly beaten
1 cup plain yogurt
1/4 cup melted butter or margarine, slightly cooled
1 cup cornmeal
1 teaspoon salt
1 teaspoon baking powder
1 teaspoon baking soda
1 cup grated Monterey Jack cheese
1 cup canned cream-style corn
1/2 cup minced green onions, using a little of the green
1 (4 oz.) can green chilies, using your favorite mild or hot varieties.
Heat oven to 400 degrees. Whisk together eggs, yogurt and butter in a medium bowl. Add dry ingredients and mix until just well blended. Add remaining ingredients and mix well. Pour into greased 10 inch heavy skillet and bake 40 minutes. This cornbread is hearty fare, not the light fluffy kind as you see it does not call for white flour.

Desserts are good with a soup meal, and your family will welcome Deni Hooper's...

CHERRY NOW COBBLER
1 pkg. cherry muffin mix

Cooking

1 (21 oz.) can cherry pie filling
1 tsp. almond extract
Heat the pie filling, almond extract and the cherries from the muffin mix package in a 9" square pan. Prepare the muffin mix as directed on the box and spread on the hot cherries. Bake at 375° to 400° F. until golden brown, about 20 minutes.

One more recipe. I made this today. It is easy to make, can be made in less than an hour all together and uses staples that most likely are on your cupboard shelves.

CHEESY VEGETABLE SOUP

2 cups diced potatoes
1 1/2 cups chopped celery
2 cups water
6 chicken bouillon cubes
1/2 cup all-purpose flour
2 cups milk
1 tsp. dry mustard
1/8 tsp. cayenne pepper
3 cups (12 oz.) shredded Cheddar cheese
1/2 cup beer (optional)
In a large saucepan, combine vegetables, water and bouillon. Bring to a boil, reduce heat, cover and simmer for 30 minutes or until vegetables are tender. Place flour in a small bowl, gradually add milk and blend until smooth. Gradually add to the vegetable mixture, stirring constantly. Add mustard, cayenne pepper and cheese. Continue to stir until cheese is melted. Add beer if desired. Serve immediately. Serves 8.

I made one-half of the above recipe, it served two with some left over. I like to experiment so I added a little bit of chopped green chilies to suit my taste. It was very good.

New Bear Clan Council formed in East Jordan

BY LENORE BECHTEL

A newly organized Bear Clan Council will soon be bringing old-style guidance and a rebirth of culture, spirituality and traditions to area Native Americans. Gigi and Stan Antoine announced Saturday that they have applied through Michigan Indian Legal Services for incorporation of a non-profit organization that will promote and preserve for all Anishinabe their identity, self-worth, determination and social and personal self-sufficiency, including the holding of property for such purposes.

Anishinabe, meaning "original people" is the term historically used by Native Americans to refer to themselves. Other incorporators who joined the Antoines in ratifying clan by-laws Sunday were their son, Stanley Antoine Jr., Cindy S. Williams, Donald L. Williams, Guy R. Williams, Tina M. Williams, Jackie J. Jenkins and Sherry J. Fiedorek. Ratification took place on Easter Sunday to symbolize a new beginning. The Antoines, who recently resigned from the board of the Anishinabe Inter-Tribal Council, said the scope of the new clan will be extended. Although the clan council will be new, its concept will be as old as the original Odawa, who jointly cared for all children in their clan. Children called all women "Mother", whether they were an aunt, grandmother or another child's older sister. "Clan means family, and it will be governed in the traditional manner," said Gigi Antoine, who had served as executive director of the Inter-Tribal Council. "It will not govern, but guide, our people." "Traditionally women pick the leaders, who are males," she said. "They nurture and teach them, stand behind them in council and make sure these leaders are good, constructive in conversation and decisions." Although the board of directors will be limited to members of the Kiskakons, a name which refers to the Bear, the council will service all Native American people in northwestern lower Michigan and expects to draw people from all over the United States to its first powwow in 1990. The Antoines liken their decision to disassociate themselves from the Anishinabe Inter-Tribal Council to the growth of a tree. When they resigned from the board, so did four other members of the seven-person board: Guy Williams, Louise Kane, and Joseph and Karen Mitchell. "The seed was put in the ground eight years ago, and it grew strong, traditional, spiritual," Gigi Antoine said. "This year a new branch came out - probably two years ago it started - and the branch died. So if we cut it off, the tree will stay strong." The Antoines will not be associated with this year's Day of the Eagle powwow, which since 1982 has become an East Jordan annual tradition, last year drawing as many as 500 participants and 5,000 spectators. The powwow is funded with a $12,000 grant from the Michigan Council of the Arts. Stan Antoine said, "We still have the spirit. The tree is still there, but the branch is cut off." See feature on the Antoines on another page.

Charlevoix County makes reciprocal agreement with neighboring counties regarding refuse disposal

Charlevoix County will allow Antrim, Crawford, Emmet, Presque Isle and Otsego Counties to bring their refuse to the Cedar Ridge landfill, located near Ironton, provided each county has complied with reciprocal agreements so that Charlevoix County residents can send their refuse into these counties if need be. The agreement was reached during an almost three hour meeting last Thursday night of the Charlevoix County Solid Waste Disposal Planning Committee. The committee members finally accepted as final a draft proposal they have been trying to work out for the past two years.

struction materials, within a certain period of time in order for them to continue to bring their refuse to the Charlevoix County site. They will also have until January 1, 1990, to sign an agreement specifying they will meet the conditions outlined. Some of the conditions and suggestions of the plan have drawn complaints during the time it took to evolve the plan, but most have been satisfied by the final agreement. The waste management plan calls for suggestions that waste generated by residences be separated into recyclable materials at some point in the future, and that wastes from the area be included, based on the ability to recycle and or compost. The plan leaves options open for recycling and composting facilities in the future. Other minor changes in the accepted plan include the correcting of typographical errors, the enlargement of the size of the East Jordan Iron Works site, the changing of dates of the agreements to coincide with the present conditions, and the updating of the list of companies that are providing waste collection services.

The reciprocating counties will have to have disposal sites for class II, residential garbage, and class III, brush and con-

Engaged? Making wedding plans?

The Press would like to print your announcement and picture

The Charlevoix County Press publishes engagement and wedding announcements without charge. Pictures are welcomed, but we do suggest a few guidelines. Good quality black and white photographs, either of the couple or bride-elect are preferred. All photographs are kept on file in the Press office and may be picked up at any time following publication. Those pictures not picked up after six months will be discarded. Wedding and engagement announcement forms are available at our office or will be mailed upon request and the receipt of a self-addressed stamped envelope. While we try to publish each announcement the week that we receive it (and in the case of weddings, the first publication date following the ceremony), space constraints sometimes force us to delay the printing of the announcement for one or two weeks. Therefore, we ask that information be received at least two weeks before the intended publication so that we might better plan for its publication. We will not accept wedding announcements received more than four weeks after the wedding.

Clearing out the gutters on Lake Street near Michigan Avenue seemed to help the flow of water coming from the hills above the lake.

Keeping a catch basin clear of debris occupied the city worker Monday, as he tried to keep up with the melt-off of about two feet of snow due to the 70 degree weather Monday.

He also asked why the policy of closing in the winter was continued. He would like to be able to bury people year-around as other cemeteries allow in the area.

Members of the commission heard the argument and took no action. They did have a review of several areas of the proposed budget, led by Frykberg.

Reg Sharkey's Northern Journal

Scourge of the Great Lakes making a comeback

BY REG SHARKEY

The other day I toiled over to Charlevoix to visit with Myrl Keller, fisheries biologist in charge of the Great Lakes Fisheries Station.

I've known Keller ever since my tour of duty with the DNR Fisheries Division brought me in contact with him, and now in my retirement.

As far as I'm concerned Keller is tops in knowledge of what is going on in our Great Lakes fisheries.

But now Keller is concerned about the future of sport fishing in the Great Lakes, especially Lake Michigan.

Most everyone who fishes Lake Michigan is familiar with the tremendous success in bringing back the lake trout from the brink of extinction (of which I had a hand in the late 50s and early 60s); and the phenomenal success of the salmon (coho and chinook) introduction into the Great Lakes.

Part of the success was due to the control of the parasitic, eel-like salt water invader, the sea lamprey that sucks the vital fluids from the fish it attacks.

For years, now deceased biologists, Dr. Vern Applegate, pioneered methods of lamprey control, and I had the privilege of working with Applegate off and on for short periods, which leads me to the concern of fisheries workers, especially Keller.

Sea lampreys are making a strong comeback in the Great Lakes due to ineffective, but largely insufficient control methods.

In a mid-January meeting, members and delegates to the Great Lakes Fishery Commission heard some bad news as far as lamprey control is concerned.

Monies budgeted for lamprey control on Lakes Michigan, Huron and Ontario will be cut 40% beginning in 1990.

What will the impact of that budget cut mean by the year 2000?

Sea lamprey abundance will double. Trout and salmon abundance will decline by 50%, with whitefish and chubs stocks also declining by a similar percentage. Yellow perch and forage fish will also decline.

What will this mean to the fisheries industries?

Sportfishing industry expenditures will decline by $552 million annually.

Annual commercial fishing losses will approximate $135 million.

Total loss of regional economic activity will approximate $1.4 billion annually.

Restoration of native lake trout will not be achieved.

Economic dislocation will occur in communities dependent upon those fisheries.

Total regional tourism infrastructure will be seriously threatened.

Local, state, federal and private investments will be lost.

Approximately 84,000 worker years of employment are involved in the sport (75,000) and commercial (9,000) fishing industries. Forty percent (33,600) of these may be lost.

So there you have it. Not a pretty picture; not a rosy forecast for those who enjoy fishing the Great Lakes for pleasure or for those who make their living from it, wholly or partially.

Believe me, it's not too early for those whose lives will be affected by this potential disaster to start whispering, loud and clear, in the ears of the politicians who represent them both on state and federal levels.

There are just too many pork barrel projects being financed nowadays, especially on the federal level to put this need for action in the same barrel.

Addendum: I intend to write a story on the "Lost Battalion" of lake trout brood stock, finally located at the Charlevoix Great Lakes Fisheries Station at a later date.

The sea lamprey is staging a comeback in the Great Lakes, and especially in Lake Michigan, largely due to ineffective but largely insufficient control measures.

Carter selected for volleyball team, will compete in Germany

Sandra Carter, 17, of East Jordan, Michigan, has been selected as a member of the Sport For Understanding volleyball team traveling to Germany this summer. Carter attends Michigan Lutheran Seminary in Saginaw.

Carter and 13 other team members were selected from throughout the United States. The team will be hosted by the TV Allotting club near Munich, West Germany, under an agreement between SFU and the German Volleyball Federation.

Sport For Understanding participants and their volunteer coaches live with the host families during their stay, experiencing the country's life firsthand while bettering their sports skills. Sport participation — training and competition — is usually scheduled daily; the remaining time is spent sight-seeing and with the host families.

This summer, SFU will organize some 60 teams in more than 20 different sports to travel abroad to destinations in Europe, Asia and the Pacific, and Latin America. To qualify, players must be ages 14-19, be active in their chosen sport, and have a GPA of at least 2.0. The SFU program is for athletes of average or better skills and focuses on using sport as the vehicle for cultural learning. The program emphasizes sportsmanship and host family living.

SFU is a program of Youth For Understanding, Inc., one of the largest non-profit international student exchange organizations. YFU has exchanged more than 130,000 students in the last 36 years and maintains 13 offices in the U.S. and 26 countries around the world.

For further information on the wide variety of programs offered by Sport For Understanding, write to Sport For Understanding, 3501 Newark Street, N.W., Washington, D.C. 20016.

DNR seeks land available for public acquisition

The Michigan Department of Natural Resources (DNR) and the Michigan Natural Resources Trust Fund Board are interested in learning about land that is available for public acquisition.

The Michigan Natural Resources Trust Fund program, administered by the DNR, provides funds to the Department and local units of government for the acquisition of land for public recreation or resource protection purposes.

"We are looking for lands that will provide access to Michigan's water resources, particularly the Great Lakes," said DNR Director David F. Hales, "as well as lands that have outstanding natural features in need of protection."

The Department is also interested in acquiring land in southern Michigan that would provide quality outdoor recreation opportunities.

Through this program, any individual — not just a landowner — can identify and nominate parcels of land for public acquisition.

"The nomination process has proved to be a successful feature of the Trust Fund program since its inception," O.J. Scherschlight, Recreation Division Chief said.

"It provides a method through which private individuals may notify the DNR of quality recreation lands or resources available for public acquisition."

Last year, $17.5 million was approved by the Trust Fund Board toward land acquisitions, several of which resulted from the nomination of land by private individuals. However, the Department is limited to paying fair market value, as determined by an appraisal.

Nomination forms are available by contacting the DNR's Recreation Division, Grants Management Branch, P.O. Box 30028, Lansing 48909; 517-373-1660.

Nominations received prior to April 1, in any year, will be considered for grant funding in that year's grant cycle.
