

First morel mushroom of season reported

It is a sure sign of spring in northern Michigan when Fred Sadowski brings in the first morel mushrooms he found Tuesday afternoon. He said he found them after deciding to look at his log splitter but opted for a trek in the woods to his favorite early mushroom patch. He also says these were found in a mess of poplar trees on the south side of a slope. Other than that, he kept his patch a secret while he showed off the two morels. Both were a little bit young as most still think it is too early for them. The National Mushroom Hunting Championships are only three weeks away.

Bonnie Thomas congratulates Mike Burr on his new appointment to replace her as East Jordan City Council member. Thomas resigned in order to move to Colorado.

32 more low income units OK'd

Boyne City will be getting another 32 units of low income housing as the city's planning board approved the site plans for an additional building to be constructed this year at the Parkview Apartment complex on Division Street.

The site plan was approved pending the developers, the Brooks-Dietz Development Company, complete plans that would control the water runoff problems with the neighbors.

The last spring meltdown saw some problems with water flowing from the apartments across neighbors yards about eight inches deep. The neighbors said this water problem has occurred since the first units were constructed several years ago and is getting worse as they continue to develop.

The plans being discussed include larger retention areas and berms to try to control the water flow and direct it in a different path. All other conditions required by the planning body have been met by the developers.

Planned will be another building with 16 one bedroom and 16 two-bedroom apartments. Ac-ording to the developer, this will be the last building constructed on the site giving them a total of 96 units.

In other action, the board briefly discussed a letter from Wade-Trim/Impact concerning an evaluation the board had asked to have done covering the city's comprehensive plan and the zoning ordinance.

The board members decided to study the letters and discuss it fully at the May meeting of the planner board.

They also heard a short report from board member Chris Bandy on the possible architectural style the planners have been trying to decide for the city.

Bandy said he talked with Don Glowinski concerning the ideas and they will be preparing a brochure covering the modern Victorian style that may be incorporated into their buildings around town. The two said that was the proper term, rather than "turn-of-the-century" or "old Victorian."

Bandy said that they hope to have materials soon for the planners to look over.

Boyne Falls to seek renewal, not new additional millage

Boyne Falls Schools will be defying a popular decision of other school districts as more and more of them are asking for increased millage to operate the schools. Boyne Falls, on the other hand, said they are going to try to hold the line and use fund equity.

They decided that action when they approved a resolution that will ask voters to approve a renewal of the present 2.5 mills for three years.

According to the board president, Bill Cousineau, the using of the fund equity will cut the fund almost in half over the three years but he, along with other board members, thought it was better not to ask for additional new millage to fund the school.

Superintendent Chuck Smith said that costs are going up, he tentatively figures about 5.7 percent over this year's school budget if the school runs the same level of program.

He told board members that he and the Budget and Finance Committee will be starting to go into the budget process line by line later this week and he will be able to tell more accurately what kind of increase will be necessary for the budget.

The school board is considering making some changes in the high school curriculum reflecting some new rules that the State Board of Education is requesting. The school will be restructuring several classes in the history and geography areas and teaching some additional sections in order to allow the school to meet the state recommendations.

They are also looking at increasing the number of graduation credits for the students or setting up an early program for those who have earned all the credits needed for graduation so they could go to college or some full-time employment prior to graduation.

In other action, the board set up a special meeting to look at the bid openings for the new school addition.

They agreed to sell the portable classroom for $8,001 to the Montessori School in Suttons Bay with the removal of the portable to be around May 30th. The board discussed whether or not that may interfere with the

EJ has first look at zoning ord.

East Jordan planning commissioners had their first look at a proposed 135-page zoning ordinance at their regular meeting Thursday, April 13.

Planning consultant Robert Hotaling, of Robert Hotaling Associates in Haslett, presented the proposed ordinance which he began working on in July 1988, starting with an in-depth field survey and analyses of soil types and wetlands to help determine the best land uses.

His plan includes the creation of a new zoning district called RA, a single family residential district proposed for northern and northeastern sections where existing lots are larger than those required by R-1 single family residential zoning. Hotaling said making this area RA would assure the continuation of the same character and density with new construction.

His plan also eliminated the R-2 category, which allows a mixture of single family and two family homes in the same districts. He said he found particular problems with conversion of single family homes into two family homes.

"This is not consistent with good zoning," he said, pointing out that duplexes should be considered multiple family. Although his plan did not include a duplex zoning category, he suggested making an accurate survey of existing duplexes and putting them in a special district. "But don't continue the mix," he said.

His plan made no changes in R-2A single family residential, R-3 multiple family residential and R-4 mobile home park residential.

The plan expands regulations for off-street parking, signs, site plan reviews and administrative enforcement. It also creates a planned unit development district to permit greater flexibility and more creative design than possible under conventional zoning regulations.

Of the proposed zoning ordinance, Superintendent Mike Dionne said, "We are making gains toward getting to the end goal of a master plan."

The city currently has no master plan, regulating zoning from a map last updated in 1976. Clerk Kathy O'Rear said she had been unable to find previous zoning maps in the city files.

Hotaling said the procedure the commission is taking — considering a new zoning ordinance before a master plan — is the correct way to arrive at a realistic, rather than abstract, master plan. He pointed out that zoning cannot be retroactive, but must go forward from the day

BC United Methodist to present workshop

"New Horizons" is a series of workshops designed for parents in Blended Families, which will begin Monday, April 24 at 7:00 p.m. at the United Methodist Church in Boyne City.

A "blended family" is any family in which one or both parents have a child or children through a previous marriage or relationship. In today's society the number of blended families is ever increasing. People are finding themselves in new family structures which often cause confusion and a sense of isolation. The need to discover avenues for the healthy restructuring of family life in the challenging situation of a blended family cannot be underestimated.

"New Horizons," a six session program, is designed to provide an open and safe environment where parents may learn about the dynamics of blended family parenting, and where they can begin to find support and acceptance as persons competent to bring the new family toward health and wholeness.

The various sessions will explore such issues and the uniqueness of the blended family, myths and realities of remarried families, building healthy family patterns, goal setting and discipline, improving communications, and creating new traditions. Some of the workshop sessions will include activities for children in these new family structures.

Advance registration is requested, and a nominal fee is charged for materials and registration expenses. For further information, contact Rev. Michael T. Conklin at the Boyne City United Methodist Church, 582-9776 or 582-7672. Registration is limited to twenty (20) adults.

Let's all plant trees!

Have you ever sat under or admired a lovely tree and wondered who planted it? - and then asked your self who is planting the trees of the future? Maybe it should be you!!!

Gardeners of today owe it to future generations to plant trees. There are many good reasons to plant trees. They give beauty to a community and home grounds, beauty for all to see. They cool the home and yard. A mature tree has a cooling capacity equivalent to ten room size air conditioners. Trees screen out uninteresting views and act as sound barriers. Trees are a fine remembrance to a loved one or friend. Most important of all, trees take in carbon dioxide and through the process of photosynthesis, respire oxygen. This combats the greenhouse effect that is threatening our environment. Trees are vital to all of us.

The Boyne Valley Garden Club is offering 5 to 6 foot flowering crabapple trees for $9 each. Information on the tree sale can be obtained from Lois Pollock 582-2747 or Jackie Arman 549-2764. This variety will bear white blossoms edged in pink. Blooming time is early May. Trees are shipped bare root and arrangements will be made for distribution from Boyne Avenue Greenhouse when they arrive.

The best time to plant a tree was fifty years ago - the next best time is NOW. Arbor Day will be celebrated the last Thursday in April. This would be an appropriate time to place an order for a lovely flowering tree that will bring joy for years to come.

Jottings

BY JIM SILBAR

As I was driving home from a meeting, I saw a gaggle of geese heading north, so I guess spring is really here. Also the ice of Lake Charlevoix has disappeared into the shorelines or has disappeared into the waves.

All this means my arms are going to be hurting for a few weeks as I try to get the yard raked up and some of the other household chores I have been putting off done. I already have some blisters from the short time I worked out in the yard last weekend.

I am just about to make a full commitment to becoming a champion, world class, professional procrastinator.

Somehow, sitting in front of television watching almost anything seems to be a better reason not to get into the yard work.

All I can say though, is that if I don't do it, it doesn't get done (unless the wife thinks it will be done and forces the issue).

I want to take my time when I am working on things, just a part of being a professional, so I can enjoy what is not getting done.

But one of the things a professional has to develop is taking the verbal abuse from other members of the family to get the work going. I know a couple of people who are better than me in doing that and one of these days, I am going to ask them how they do it so I can learn the ways of the real professionals I sometimes see lounging around here in the city.

Of course if I lived out in the country I could just say I am going off to rake the woods and walk about a mile into them to find a neat place to lay down and take a nap. Sometimes I envy those who do that.

Most of the time those that live in the country can find even more things that have to be done as compared to some of the cityfolk. It seems that when you live on a farm, the work is never done.

And I don't envy those folks. They have a hard life trying to keep up with the cityfolk. Especially when they get up at the crack of dawn to start their day.

Heck, they have usually finished more things by the time I want to get my first cup of coffee than I can think of doing during the day.

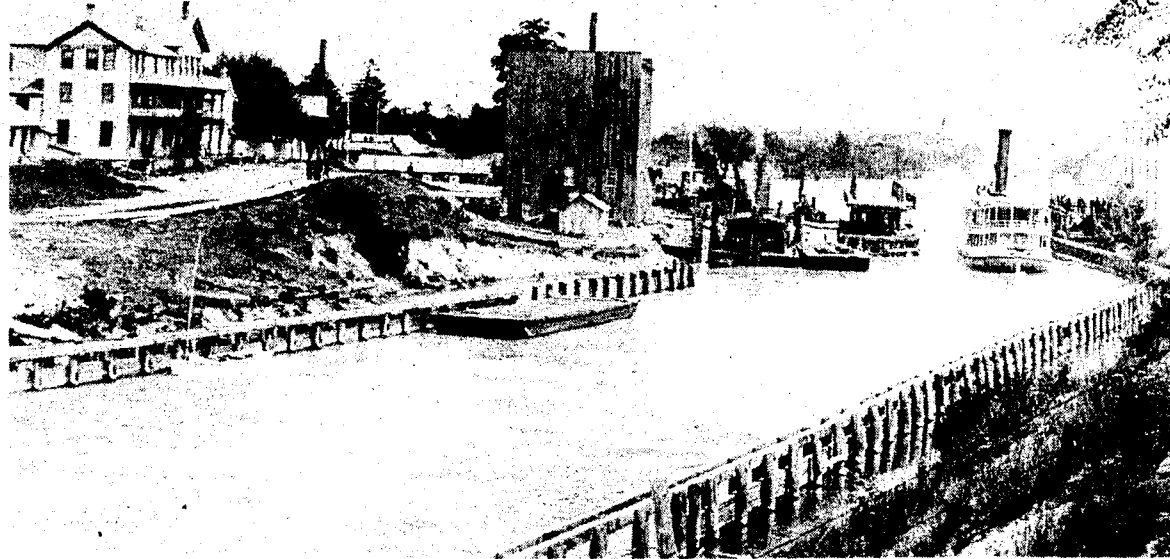

Those are the kind of people we should have thousands of around here.

Second thought, those workaholics can just keep on working, I'll take the kind of people we already have and leave those workers out in the fields working.

That is another reason why I want to become a world class procrastinator.

So I can look at the workers with some kind of thrill, knowing that they are getting their work done.

A chat with E. Sayles

Editor:

It is time for another chat with our man about town. I asked him what George Bush's lips were saying these days. He flew into a spasm of plain and fancy cussing that would put an old time Spanish sea captain to shame. I got him quieted down a bit and continued the questions.

M.A.T.: Bush's sanctimonious pleadings for more morality and ethics in our public officials is nothing short of bald faced hypocrisy.

Me: How so?
M.A.T.: Of all the places in Washington that need a good cleansing and a new set of morals it has got to be the oval office. His pious mumblings should be put to work right there.

Me: You sound pretty upset with our new president. Lets cool it for a minute and get at some other things that puzzle me.

M.A.T.: O.K. What's first?
ME: What about the drug problem?

M.A.T.: The American people have no bigger enemy on the face of this earth than this drug problem. Reagan allowed it to flourish and grow for eight years trying to get the drug producing countries to help him bash the Nicaraguans. He only succeeded in increasing the problem many fold. Florida has a billion dollar citrus industry and a ten billion dollar a year drug industry. Other states have the same problem. Bush's drug Czar Bennett makes a lot of noise but little else. We need action.

Me: You are right but will we get it?

M.A.T.: I doubt it. There is a lot of money involved and politicians and money are not a mix to be trusted. We need to wage an all out war on it.

Me: Well how about Ollie North these days?

M.A.T.: I told you some time ago what would happen if he went to trial and I was 100% right too. I said that when he caught his first glimpse of a prison bar in his future he would sing like a canary. He did. He hung the big lie right around Reagan's and Bush's necks. They kept telling him what a great American hero he was to just keep his mouth shut about how things really were. But Ollie saw those bars in his future and started to have some misgivings about the glories of a jail cell. The people on the jury could have a better sense of what is right or wrong than either Ollie or Reagan, Bush or the rest of his superiors do.

Me: What will happen now?

M.A.T.: Not much. The real culprits in this scam were Reagan, Bush, Meese, Shultz, Weinberger, Casey and a few others. North is guilty all right but more for following illegal orders than anything else. They are willing to let him take the fall and they'll leave him out there twisting in the wind while they mouth their inanities about truth, honor, morals and integrity.

Me: We are about out of space.

Our friends in Lansing are setting up nights making quite a noise with their majestic power and favor as they attempt to further oppress us with an increase in state sales taxes.

Here's one plan that's been dragged out into the open:

If we, who have half a brain and no water on the knee at all, agree to a sales tax hike, we will not have to pay for any increased valuation of our property. At least not until our house is sold, flattened by a tornado or burns down.

After this has happened and we have paid all the accumulated back taxes and are perhaps broke, the higher sales tax will continue even though our property is no longer ours.

Under this plan those fortunate enough not to own property in the first place will go scott free, except for that raise in state sales taxes, which seems to be what is really wanted, with that property stuff attached to blinders on a horse.

We, who are half asleep, are told that this plan will pinch the taxpayer less and at the same time create more money for support of our state schools. Here's where we remember that lottery-school guff and now must take time out to laugh to stop from crying.

It is the belief of Michigan's angry majority that our Lansing friends can no longer oppress us unless they come up with and I'm going to stay there.

He: Ok, get it over with so we can enjoy the rest of this column.

Me: I'll chop it off with this: A Democrat told me that the Republican Party is sort of a conspiracy against the rest of the country.

He: Thank goodness. Now tell us about the time you made an empty gunny sack stand up.

Me: No, no. That's old hat. But

I will tell you about the church lady who called yesterday to discuss some of the subjects written about in these offerings. Before hanging up she warned me to flee from the wicked.

He: What did you have to say to that?

Me: I told her in no way was I going to leave Boyne City.

He: I liked you better when you were talking politics.

Journalist Dianne Murray named manager of public relations for Northern Michigan Hospitals

Dianne C. Murray, a reporter who has experience with medical issues, has become Northern Michigan Hospitals' (NMH) Manager of Public Relations. Her appointment was announced by Kathleen LaGreca Reibling, Director of Marketing and Public Affairs.

Ms. Murray, 31, assumes responsibility for all publications produced by the 299-bed regional referral hospital and its affiliated organizations, and for all contact with the news media. I'm here to tell the hospital's story, to make people aware of what we do, why we do it, and how we do it. As I have done in the past, I'll do my best to make people understand that what we do is important to them. One of my goals is to facilitate the communication of NMH medical and scientific information between physicians, the public and the media," Ms. Murray said.

For eight years, Ms. Murray was a staff writer for the Petoskey News Review. During the last five years, she primarily reported on medical, government and environmental issues. Several of her articles won state or national awards. Before moving to the Petoskey paper, she was a news editor for more than a year with the Charlevoix County Press. She earned a Bachelor of Arts in Journalism at Michigan State University after beginning her studies at the University of Michigan, Dearborn.

Swan Valley dock may be extended

Boaters gassing up at Swan Valley Marina this summer may find the gas pumps closer to access in Lake Charlevoix's South Arm.

Gary Roberts, the marina's owner, has filed for a permit from the Department of Natural Resources to extend the marina's 115-foot dock with an additional 25 feet of dockage. The two existing pumps would be moved to the end of the new addition, which would be built with metal supports and decking.

The addition, which would be installed every spring and taken out every fall, would create 10 additional slips which could accommodate two boats on either side. To prevent swaying, both the pier and slips would be anchored to the bottom of the walkway with cable. Even with the additional 25 feet, the dock would extend in the lake no further than some other docks in the same vicinity, South Arm Township Supervisor Harold Pletz told the township board.

The board went on record at their Wednesday, April 12 meeting as registering no objection to the marina's permit application.

The DNR's procedure is to notify neighboring property owners and relevant governing boards of permit applications. If any objections are voiced, a public hearing is scheduled. If no objections are voiced, the DNR makes the decision without a public hearing.

Making presentations about the student leadership forum to the East Jordan Board of Education were (from left) Heidi Grant and Amy Drenth. Lori Chanda spoke to the board about the conference.

Students enlighten EJ board about Leadership Forum

BY LENORE BECHTEL

Success, teenage suicide, teenage sexuality, discrimination, peer pressure, career choices, managing stress—all are topics that can be bothersome to high school students.

Dealing with death, school rivalry, building self confidence, helping friends in trouble, handling annoying teachers—the list of problems teenagers may face goes on and on.

Three East Jordan teenagers told the East Jordan Board of Education Tuesday about a forum designed to help them cope. Introduced by Tom Sheridan, student leadership forum advisor, Heidi Gaunt, Lori Chanda and Amy Drenth explained the high school's involvement with the forum.

Gaunt told about the high school's recent hosting of two intermediate school districts for a forum that began with problems, partially caused by school rivalry, but ended in peace. "A couple of arguments got cooled off quickly," she said, "and we overcame our differences and learned a lot... It was a challenge to get everyone to agree on the issues."

The more than 400 students from 22 school districts attended the forum were very complimentary of the high school building, Gaunt said, thanking the board for allowing the school to be the site.

Chanda said after students participated in information seminars, they then divided into discussion groups. "There are no adults in the discussion groups," she said, "and more emotions and feelings are let out. There's so much enthusiasm—it's just great!"

She said the forums provided a good opportunity to meet people from other schools.

Drenth said the forum's success encouraged attending East Jordan students to want to sponsor a forum for their own school. "We want to show what a benefit a forum can be," she said. "We're working for something that will be helpful for our friends and classmates."

She said the local forum scheduled for May 10 would feature topics, including boy-girl relationships, AIDS awareness, cliques and building self confidence.

The three young women's presentations were well received by the board, who thanked them for being fine examples of the area's young people.

Video rental store wants EJ corner location

A special use permit may allow a video rental store to occupy a former gas station at the intersection of M-32 and M-66 in East Jordan.

David Scheppe asked the East Jordan Planning Commission to grant the permit for the non-conforming property. He said the business would allow no parking on the south side, which is M-32, but would have parking on the west side, which is M-66.

He said he would like a decorative canvas awning, in place of a sign, for his business' name, Horizon Video.

Superintendent Mike Dionne said it is the responsibility of the owner/operator in that building to keep cables at the gravel passway that angles between M-32 and M-66 to prevent drivers from using it as a shortcut.

Scheppe suggested the possibility of installing permanent posts to eliminate the problem of the cables being removed.

Commissioners scheduled a special meeting and public hearing, which is required by ordinance, for 5 p.m. Thursday, April 27, to consider the issue.

The bid was $4,351 higher than the second highest bid.

The board also recognized the students who scored 100 percent on the recent M.E.A.P. tests given by the state.

Brad Moody represented the fourth grade while P.J. Leazier, Tammy Goff and Danny Matelski were 100 percenters from the seventh grade. Tracy Danbert was the only 100 percenter from the 10th grade. The students were given certificates from the state.

It's a fact - more Spam is consumed in Hawaii than anywhere else. It's also true that the residents of Salt Lake City buy more bubble gum and Cracker Jack than those in any other city. These regional preferences and others like them show up in "The Old Farmer's 1989 Almanac". Clearly this information won't change the face of the world nor is it brand new, the 197th edition of the Almanac having been available for months. Still, in April, when the weather has trouble identifying with spring more than fleetingly, it's worth reviewing to divert one's attention from the disappointing doings outdoors.

Not only are local tastes reported, but solutions to common problems like warts are given. The first wart remedy, buying a nickel's worth of candy and gobbling it all down, sounds easy enough until one considers the difficulty in finding a store that has any candy for that price. Maybe simpler, it's suggested that one rub the warts with dandelion juice, or with a dead man's spit. The Almanac points out though that in time warts go away without any treatment, which is a good thing because the solutions range from odd to downright tough. (A dead man giving spit, even for such a worthy cause, would be very hard to find, one would think.)

Of special interest to the housekeeper, the powerful cleaning possibilities for vinegar are explored. It's cited as useful for cleaning almost everything but teeth. (It wouldn't hurt though while one has the bottle out to try it anyway.)

According to the Almanac, molasses in cooking is almost as versatile as vinegar for cleaning. It can be used in a variety of dishes, scrambled eggs included.

On the subject of food, should one have a taste for good old-fashioned hardtack, the recipe is given on page 211. From the ingredients, it sounds like it tastes which should please those who like this sort of thing.

The Almanac doesn't skimp on advertisements either. Besides such diverse items as salves and choir robes, many self-help ads are featured. One can learn a new trade, make gallons of money at home using the instructional material offered. There are manuals for making wooden toys or clocks or decorative ducks. Much easier though, one can order three "genuine" rabbits feet (a green one representing money, a red one for love and a white for "Great good luck") for only $5.98 plus $1.00 handling charges. "Personal Wealth and Happiness" are contained right in the feet, so once delivered, all the patron need do is sit back, hang on and enjoy.

The dates and places for grand pet races appear in the Almanac too. On the Fourth of July the folks in Frankfort, Kentucky, celebrate the birth of the nation with an earthworm race. Quite a claim to fame for Frankfort, this race, but Michiganians can take pride in the fact that right here in Grand Rapids the most Campbell's mushroom soup is sold, which shows their good taste, indeed far superior to that of Texans. Dallas holds the record for the most canned spinach sold.

Wading about in these kinds of facts should tide a body over until the weather gets over its identity crisis and becomes all out spring.

(The Almanac shows the usual almanac stuff - weather forecasts month by month, changes in the tides and moon and festival days, both religious and otherwise, too.)

South Arm Township Board approves budget

South Arm Township Board approved a $130,544 budget for the 1989/90 fiscal year — $217 less than the township's 1988/89 budget.

Salaries for supervisor Harold Pletz, clerk Anne Olstrom and treasurer Lucille Malpass remained at $3,800 — the same these positions were paid the last two years.

However, trustees Neil Olstrom and Thora Kotowich received a $400 boost from $1,500 to $1,900. Salaries for the planning commission and zoning administration remained the same, while those for the board of review were up slightly and the board of appeals down slightly.

The township will continue to pay $9,000 to the East Jordan

Fire Department and $1,000 to Banks Township for fire protection, as well as $4,500 to the East Jordan Ambulance Department. Another $5,000 is budgeted for the construction of dry hydrants, hydrants with hook-ups for pumps to draw water via underground pipes from a nearby body of water.

the ordinance is approved. He said the clerk's office should be the only source for the legal zoning map, along with all official records, with the zoning administrator assisting in keeping the map up to date.

Asked by Commissioner Don Skinkle to clarify zoning rights versus property owners' rights, Hotaling said, "The final question is 'what makes most sense for the public health, safety and welfare?'"

He said since zoning was established by a 1926 court case, public police power has been considered superior to the property owners' wishes. The public agency's police power must be reasonable, and if property owners feel zoning has damaged their property value, they can sue for redress.

"We live by law," he said. "Any culture that doesn't fit in trouble. Zoning is a law." He pointed out that junk yards and landfills would spring up indiscriminately without zoning.

"Simply owning property is not a vested right," he said, "but owning a grocery store on that property is a vested right."

The purpose of zoning, he said, is to get all properties to conform.

Dionne said the planning commission will need several meetings to consider the proposed ordinance before recommending any action.

SALADS

April is here, and we are thinking of salads. I believe that it must be an inherited age-old longing for fresh vegetables when our land is suddenly turning to delicate shades of green. Even if we get one more coating of snow over April's touch of green, we know that it is temporary and they say that an April snow is beneficial to crops.

This is the first year that I have been able to view the changing seasons from my patio at the foot of Avalanche Overlook in Boyne City and I am thrilled. Now, I know what the Psalmist meant when he sang, "I will lift up mine eyes unto the hills, from whence cometh my strength." The birds that I have fed surviving the winter storms and everything is starting to grow again. We can dream of those fresh vegetables growing in our gardens; though I no longer have a garden I can still glory in those beautiful seed catalogs.

It seems that anything goes in salads any more. I believe that we have learned some of this at our restaurant salad bars. There are salads for every occasion. The first one is a meal in itself. I chose this at Sipples Restaurant in Clearwater, Fla. where we had a get-together of old friends.

GARDEN PASTA SALAD

For each serving, put on a large plate
1-A layer of lettuce leaves
2- Chopped head lettuce
3- Chunks of ham and chicken breasts, about 1/4" in size
4- Chunks of white cheese
5- About 1/2 cup of cooked pasta shells or corkscrews

Then pour Italian dressing over all and garnish with quartered red ripe tomatoes.

Cornbread and bran muffins were served with this salad. A luncheon to remember!

This salad could be used as a side salad for dinner if you use smaller amounts and serve on a salad plate.

My friend and neighbor, Amy Courtney, brought in a serving of the next salad for my dinner recently, and I have made it a few times because I received a small blender for Christmas which chops the carrots fine. It is Amy's salad dressing that makes this salad so very special for me.

AMY'S CARROT AND RAISIN SALAD

For each cup of grated carrots: Add 1 large or 2 small apples peeled and diced, 1 small can of pineapple chunks, drained, 1/4 cup raisins; or more if you like Salad Dressing

Mix 1/2 cup canned cold-slaw dressing with mayonnaise to taste, about 2 tablespoons.

Stir into the carrot salad. It's okay to let it chill for awhile before serving. It will brighten up any dinner.

This next salad is a more exotic dish; serve it for a special luncheon or for a leisurely family meal. They will want to try it with different condiments.

INDIAN STYLE APPLE SALAD

For 6 servings you will need:
1 quart shredded head lettuce
3 golden delicious apples
1 (8 oz.) pkg. imitation crab or regular crab canned or frozen.

Condiments such as salted peanuts, toasted sesame seeds or sunflower seeds, raisins, chutney or chopped hard-cooked egg.

Put lettuce into a chilled salad bowl. Cut apples in quarters, core and slice thinly. Arrange apples and crab over lettuce. Toss with curry dressing.

CURRY DRESSING

1/2 cup vegetable oil
1/2 cup white vinegar
1/2 teaspoon curry powder
1/2 teaspoon onion powder
1/2 teaspoon white pepper
Dash of Cayenne (Watch it, not too much.)

Combine oil, vinegar, curry powder, onion powder, white pepper and cayenne. Mix. Let it stand one hour or longer to blend the flavors. Makes 1 1/2 cups.

Arrange the dishes of condiments around this salad and toss (if you are good at it) at the table.

Here is a little hint. When serving your chicken, egg, ham or tuna salad, put it on top of a rice cake. You will enjoy the crispy contrast to these salads and the rice cake adds only 35 calories a serving.

Boyne City's Cheri Leach named Teacher of Year

BY LENORE BECHTEL
A Boyne City Middle School science teacher who expands her students' education beyond the classroom to the community has been named teacher of the year.

Cheri Leach was awarded the honor as outstanding educator in the Charlevoix-Emmet Intermediate School District at an awards banquet Tuesday at Lena's Wine Cellar. The award was presented by the Beta Omega chapter of Delta Kappa Gamma, an international society for women educators.

The recent recognition for Leach's unusual dedication to science and students is far from the first time the unusually inspired teacher has been in the news.

and her husband, Timothy, were recently selected to be foster parents to a capuchin monkey who will later be trained to be a paraplegic's assistant. They were among 200 chosen from more than 3,000 applicants to humanize a monkey (of the organ grinder-type variety) until it is old enough to be trained to turn on lights, answer doors, get food out of a refrigerator and perform the other endless tasks with which a paraplegic needs help.

The training is offered at Boston University through a program called "Helping Hands", which turns monkeys into paraplegics' helpers, just as the leader dog program trains dogs to help the blind.

"The monkeys have to be two to three years old before they can be trained," Leach explained. "Until then they have to be treated like a child and be part of a family so they'll know how to act around people."

The new monkey in the Leach family will join a menagerie of animals, fish and fowl which spend the school year in Leach's cluttered classroom and the summer months in the family's home outside East Jordan.

Most of the impressive collection exists either because of gifts from people throughout the community or from Michigan Department of Education grants.

The collection began with a 1985/86 school year grant which supplied Leach's classroom with animals that most children fear, including a boa constrictor, tarantula, piranhas, hamsters and rats. The purpose, Leach explained, was so students would learn not to be afraid of them. Since the students now call the creatures pet names like Toby Tarantula and Boa Regard, the purpose would appear to have been accomplished.

Leach had hoped that the original grant would also purchase some kind of bird, but the money didn't stretch that far. Never mind that. Someone always seems to come through when Leach wants something to expand her students' horizons. This time it was a caretaker at Park of the Pines, a nearby church camp, who donated a dove.

"It took a year to find another one," Leach recalled, "but by now we have had 20 offspring. It's fun for kids to watch them grow up in the classroom." Students named the pair of doves Peaches and Cream, anointing their babies with monikers like Ice, Sugar and Nutmeg.

The multiple supply of doves, however, brought its own problems, leading to Leach's Adopt-A-Dove program, which allows students to take a dove home for nine weeks.

"I was skeptical at first," Leach admitted, "but I didn't want to have to feed the doves to the snakes." Fortunately, she sometimes has even more requests to take home doves than she has doves to send, and the snakes have had to be satisfied with other foodstuff.

A 1986/87 grant purchased a 50-gallon mini-reef in a salt water tank, along with its stock of sea urchins, peppermint shrimp, queen conch, anemones, fire worms and sea apples.

"It shows how plants and animals are interdependent so students can understand food chains," Leach said. Her enthusiasm borders on fervor as she explains how all energy comes originally from the sun, and plants take it in and make it into food, which animals have to eat to stay alive.

Cheri Leach is right at home among the clutter and clatter of her busy science classroom.

Students have already harvested from the reef ten different kinds of plants, which they've traded at pet stores for other classroom acquisitions.

The 87/88 grant purchased an incubator and brooder to keep baby chicks warm. "We've incubated chicken eggs, turkey eggs, pheasants, quail — whatever we can get our hands on," Leach said. "We get to study embryos as they are developing and compare species of birds as they hatch."

The birds' chirps cannot keep up with the more than 100 words that Buddy, the parrot, has mastered, along with her (they think she's a she) ability to bark like a dog, beep like a microwave and meow like a cat.

Nor can they compete with the bush babies, a pair of primitive monkeys who were advertised in the Detroit Free Press for $650, complete with cage. Sympathetic to Leach's longing to give the couple a home in her classroom, community education director Shelly Martin solicited donations

What words of wisdom do you have for us today?

M.A.T.: Someone should tell the Bush people that truth is not the enemy. This period of time during the 1980s in our history will surely go down as "The Reign of the Hypocrits". I'll be back.

Officials at Boyne Mountain Resort located in Boyne Falls have announced an unusual weekend promotion designed to allow guests to participate in all three activities.

For $50 per person per day, double occupancy, guests will receive a ski lift ticket, 18 holes of golf with cart on the world-class Alpine course, a night's lodging and unlimited tennis on championship courts.

"It's rare when we can offer good skiing at the same time that we open our golf facilities," said Art Tebo, Boyne USA managing director.

"Conceivably, a guest could ski in the morning, golf in the afternoon and play tennis in the evening...all for one special price," Tebo said.

Boyne Mountain reported a 40-inch base on its Victor Aurora and Hemlock ski slopes on April 11, and the Alpine golf course is in good, playable condition.

The resort plans to offer the $50 rate on weekends only through May 8, and advises guests to call ahead for weather and snow reports.

Boyne Mountain is the last remaining lower peninsula ski resort to remain open.

For more information, contact Boyne Mountain, Boyne Falls, Mich. 48713 or call 800-632-7174 (Mich. only) or 616-549-2441.

The huffin' little puffin

BY REG SHARKEY

The puffin, a little sea bird of the North Atlantic, has been reinstated in a nesting colony on an island off the coast of Maine.

For years these small birds summered on some of Maine's coastal islands. But then, not too long ago, they disappeared from their usual haunts and ornithologists and environmentalists became concerned, wondering what had happened to the once abundant birds.

Reading everything I could about the fascinating puffin, I decided to carve its likeness out of a piece of native white cedar given to me a few years ago by George Kopp, all-knowing amateur botanist, now deceased.

In the process of carving I continued to research the life style of the bird, also called the Atlantic puffin; sea parrot; bottle nose; Labrador auk, or tamny morie.

A word picture of the common puffin goes thusly: Length around 12 inches; wingspan 21-24 inches; short, stocky; upper parts black; cheeks white; white below and has a large triangular-shaped bill which in the breeding season is bright reddish orange at tip half with a yellow-bordered patch of blue at the rear half which probably accounts for its sea parrot moniker; and after breeding season some of the horny plates of the bill are shed and they become drab nondescript avians.

The nesting habits of the puffin are unusual and interesting.

From wintering far out at sea, they arrive at their staging areas in early spring, congregating in huge, dense rafts below islands or cliffs where courtship and pairing takes place.

Once bonded, the pair begin to burrow in loose soil at cliff tops or on islands. The male does most of the digging using his heavy parrot-like bill as a pickaxe, then using his webbed feet and sharp claws to throw the soil backward from the burrow. Grass feathers, seaweeds and other debris is carried to the end of the burrow. Finally the female lays one egg. Both sexes take part in incubation. They develop incubating patches under the wings. The large egg must be tucked under a wing and the body is leaned against the side of the burrow in order to complete incubation. About forty-two days after the incubation process begins the chick hatches and the hurricane task of feeding the ever hungry chick begins.

For forty days the parent birds make their buzzy, bullet-like flights out to sea to fish, bringing back small fish, especially the small smelt-like capelin. Up to twenty fish can be captured and held in the large adaptable bill at one time.

It is said a chick will eat its own weight in fish in a day, consuming some 2,000 while in the burrow, for the 40 days it is fed. Then the chick is abandoned, staying in the burrow fasting for another week then flutters to the sea to begin its struggle to adulthood.

In the puffin's diet, especially the chicks, lay part of the clue to its disappearance from Maine coastal waters.

For years those waters held enormous populations of the capelin, the smelt-like fish high in oil content that puffins seemed to thrive on.

Then commercial overfishing and unknown natural causes brought about the death of puffin chicks so dependent on the oil rich capelin.

That's when biologists and ornithologists became concerned.

Capelin fishing was curtailed and biologists went to existing puffin nesting colonies in the far North Atlantic, collecting puffin chicks from burrows after abandonment by their parents. Bringing them back to a coastal Maine island they were put into man-made burrows where they remained until hunger urged them to go to sea for food.

Then before the spring nesting season, it was hoped that the chicks that had survived to adulthood would come back to the island from their northern winter-time haunts.

Even dummy adult puffins were created (not as elaborate as the one I carved) and placed in strategic places, hopefully to decoy bonded pairs to "come home" to nest. And it worked.

Every time I look at my carved puffin I am reminded of man's inconsideration to his wild brethren. But in this case, a wrong was righted.

Aquarium brightens BC Middle School corridor

Community donations combined with a Michigan Department of Education grant have added an aesthetic touch to a teaching tool that brightens a Boyne City Middle School corridor.

The grant purchased a 90-gallon fish tank for nature photographer Timothy Leach to use with his adult education science students, who study at night in a classroom used by science teacher Cheri Leach's students during the day.

Pursuing the possibility of installing the tank to be enjoyed from the corridor outside her classroom, Cheri Leach discovered an abundance of generosity from helpful donors.

O.D. Sayles donated the time and materials to construct a hole in the wall, supporting the upper wall with a lintel.

Jim Milks pulled old wiring from the wall and installed the eight outlets needed for pumps and lights.

Andy Poineau donated wood, and custodians Dave Dipzinski and Earl Bennett cut it to shape and made the frame.

from businesses to make their purchase possible.

Now Sam and Emma have a monkey son named Chester and are expecting their second baby this fall.

The latest classroom addition — a 90-gallon aquarium for studying local fish — came courtesy of a grant awarded for Timothy Leach's adult education students, who share the same classroom. (See sidebar and photo).

The excitement Leach brings to her seventh grade life science students and eight grade physical science students extends far beyond her very exciting classroom. This past fall twelve talented students had weekly field and work trips to Industrial Magnetics Inc., a local manufacturer. Ken Robinson, head of the company's research and development department, helped them design and build a machine that demonstrates as many industrial magnetic applications as possible. The innovative students constructed a continuous action type contraption to remove paperclips from sawdust.

Thinking ahead to future students, Leach required that the model be designed to fit into a classroom cabinet. She also had a video tape made of the different construction stages to use as a Moore's Hardware donated plexiglas, stain, screws and the miscellaneous items needed to finish the project.

Sportfisherman donated perch, catfish, sucker and crayfish to stock the tank. Both of the Leaches' classes will go on collecting trips to find even more local fish specimen.

The project once again gave credence to a sentiment that's become more than just lip service in this area: In Boyne City, education is everybody's business.

teaching aid. The Boyne City School Board had an opportunity to see the video at their January 9 meeting, and a news story about the program was featured on Friday's WWTW news on channels 9 and 10.

Another learning experience she has planned for her kids is to get them involved in a water quality testing project in cooperation with Tip of the Mitt Watershed Council and See North.

Leach taught from 1969 to 1978 in Coldwater and Parma, coming to Boyne City in 1983. She and her husband have two sons, Thor and Tarn, who are tenth and sixth graders attending East Jordan schools.

She recently received a National Science Foundation grant which will pay for 10 hours tuition at the Douglas Lake University of Michigan Biological Station, where she will be project assistant this summer.
