Volunteers have been working hard at the new Boyne City Little League Minors ballfield, located where the former city ice skating rink used to be in preparation for this season. They have completed rebuilding the field and are in the last stages of building new dugouts and bleachers for the players and fans. If you want to see some real baseball action, come out to one of these games as the youngsters try to learn the game.

Boyne schools to ask for 3 mills in June

Boyne City School Board members approved a resolution asking voters in the school district for three additional mills for school operations at the June annual election.

The three mill increase was the result of a 27 member committee that has worked out the details on the school budget over the past several months.

It was the committee that came to the board with the recommendation that the board ask for the three mills.

They told the board that the money was needed to maintain the existing program and the three mills would allow the board to function on a "bare bones" level.

The recommendation of the Budget Planning and Curriculum Review Process Committee came after two public meetings held last week where members tried to explain where the money will be going to fund the operational needs of the district.

They said that the request was not really a total of three extra mills, explaining that included in the request was the 1.7 mills that the voters had approved for busing last year.

If that millage is included then the request really figures out to a 1.1486 mill increase. The committee recommended the board ask for the request for two years.

The elaborate presentation to the board was given by two members of the committee, John Hunt and George Britton. After listening to remarks from committee members, the board approved the request.

Superintendent Bob Nakoneczny told the school board that the committee has completed its work, the administration has completed its input and both agree they have a request the school system can live with.

"It is going to be up to the community to decide what type of program they want for their children," Nakoneczny told the board, "I can only administer a program they want."

Committee member Hunt told the board that if the community wants a visionary program, they will have to come up with even bigger millage requests. He said the committee discussed many options and plans, but the one presented to the board was the consensus of the entire group. He said not everybody was satisfied with the plan, some wanting more, others wanting less, but all finally agreed this plan was the best for the continuing education of the children.

Nakoneczny told board members that without the millage, the community and the administrative staff will have a difficult time deciding what programs would have to be cut.

Karl Waldner, representing a group he calls the "Leash Your School Board" committee, asked board members to sign a contract between themselves and his group that would require board members to go into teacher contract negotiations and require the board members to ask the teachers and administration to accept contracts at exactly the same amount, less that which the union groups are asking for. In other words he is saying, if the union asks for a 5.6% increase, then the board should ask for a 5.6% decrease in salaries, and hold the line.

If possible, ask for fringe benefit reductions. Then give the bargaining group time to consider acceptance of the lesser offer. He wanted the board to assume strike conditions if they get no answers from the bargaining group at the end of the time limit.

He also wanted them to extend the lesser offer into the second and third year of the contractual period.

He suggested that if the group did not accept the offer, to hire new people at the minimum offered to strikers or even less if not evenly qualified.

Waldner asked the board to accept a second task which would have the school district reduce operating millage by one mill, beginning in 1991, regardless of the savings resulting from the first task for the rest of the time the board member is in office.

He also asked for a third task, asking no millage proposals or extra millage proposals be asked while they are in office.

For signing the contract, the board members must conform to all of the tasks the LYSB group decides, or sign a letter of resignation from the board if they fail to perform any of the conditions of this agreement.

The last paragraph of the contract calls for Waldner, as the acting agent of the LYSB, to be paid.

After reading the proposed contract, several school board members expressed disapproval with the ideas, saying it would limit the board and would give Waldner an open hand to control the wishes of the school district and not the people elected by the community. One board member showed her distaste for the contract by ripping it up in front of Waldner.

In other action, the board opened the bids for the proposed asbestos abatement program and found they were about $10,000 over the cost estimate the firm they had contracted with to work out the bid had said they would be. The board will be meeting with the firm to decide what will be the next step.

The board took no action on a contract with the MJK Architectural firm, set a "Truth In Taxation Hearing" for May 22, appointed election inspectors and other election matters and passed a revised resolution that will enable them to use funds from the bonding issue to pay for the asbestos abatement program and purchase computers for the high school.

They then accepted letters of retirement from Leta Erber and Caroline McCleary.

They then agreed to accept student teachers with Central Michigan University, saying that it was good to be able to contribute to education through helping student teachers learn the skills necessary to become better teachers.

East Jordan asks voters to support 4.2 mills

East Jordan will have three proposals on the ballot for their annual June school election; two covering millage increases while the third will ask voters to override the Headlee Amendment tax limitations for the 1989 tax collections.

The proposals specifically ask for a 3.95 mill increase for operations over the next two years, a special .25 mill increase so the school system can purchase computers and vocational equipment for four years and the override.

The board then accepted a contribution from the East Jordan

Masonic Lodge Number 379 in the amount of $10,500 which would be used to set up a trust of which the annual interest on the principal would be used to fund annual scholarships to graduating seniors. Presenting the contribution was Keith Annear, a local Mason.

The board then approved joining the Straits Area Community Education Consortium for the 1989-90 fiscal year.

They also approved the bid of the Michigan Association of School Boards Employers Group Pool-Fund Program for Property-Casualty insurance and fleet coverage for the 1989-90 school year at a cost of $28,390.

In other action, the board approved the appointment of Dennis Snarey as the high school cross country coach, granted a child care leave of absence to Peg Myers for one year and accepted the resignation of Junior Primary Teacher Judi Moore.

The board then set a Wednesday, May 24th meeting as the date for a special recognition ceremony for 80 students in the school system who scored perfect 100 percent scores in the Michigan Educational Assessment Program tests that were taken by all fourth, seventh and tenth graders last fall.

Mushroom weekend starts madness

It looks like the Professional Class may be open to anybody who wants to enter, said one observer as preparations for the National Mushroom Hunting Championships were fired up this week.

Of course it all depends on the weather as to how many more mushrooms will be found this weekend when over 100 contestants are expected to participate and determine the national champions.

Entry forms for the mushroom hunt are available from the Chamber of Commerce or will be available at the sign-up booth early Saturday morning at Veterans Memorial Park.

The contest is just one of the many activities being planned by the Boyne Valley Lions Club and the Chamber of Commerce who are sponsoring the eventful weekend.

The carnival will open up on Friday and many are trying to buy reduced price advance tickets at an area merchants prior to the opening. A list of merchants who have tickets available is included in this year's edition of the Morel Madness tabloid included with this newspaper.

The contestants will parade through town before being taken Carnival workers from Schmidt Amusement set up the first ride in preparation of the National Mushroom Hunting Championships that will be held this weekend. Advance tickets to the carnival are on sale at various locations around town.

Jottings

BY JIM SILBAR

"All you folks need up there," said one of the people who patented the way to grow morel mushrooms, "is a lot of rain about the weekend before."

Okay, I said, and we got some rain, some snow, and some other stuff falling out of the sky last weekend.

Not enough to satisfy those with the mushroom urge, as the expert said it would have been nice to have about four to six inches of rain, but I was satisfied to get what we got. I didn't even mind the cold and the snow that went along with it.

When I first came to a mushroom weekend, people used to say, well, the carnival is in town, it means we will be getting rain this weekend.

But, several years ago, the Lions changed carnival firms and we have had pleasant weekends for the mushroom festival ever since. I am hoping we get a lot of rain during the week, followed by a warm sun and temperatures on Friday.

That is supposed to make those morels pop out of the forest floor. I hope so, since I intend on doing a little mushroomin' myself, and I need all the help I can get in searching for them.

I figure that if we get a lot of rain, with a lot of heat, those little things will become big enough for me to see even though they are probably underfoot.

The last time I went hunting, they were more underfoot than in the mushroom bag. I bet I left a few hundred just sitting in the woods waiting for someone else walking in my footsteps to pick. That is my kind of luck.

The one thing I know about mushroom hunting is that I can get real lost.

Sure, I know the territory, I know that there are roads every mile around me where I hunt, but I usually get so enthralled with the hunt that I forget to look where I am going and where I have been.

Now most would say that is nothing new, I am usually lost anyway.

But it becomes somewhat embarrassing to say I don't know where I am and I don't know where I parked the car.

The last time I looked, I think it was just over a couple of hills on the left.

So I try to go out hunting with someone who really has a sense of the woods. Someone who can find their way back to the car so we can get back to reality.

To me, when the afternoon sun is slowly finding its way into the trees, the most important thing would be to find the car so I can get back to the kitchen to cook the few mushrooms I have found.

I keep hoping that someone will take pity on me and drop me off a few pounds of morels, but I also know that if that happens, there will be a few inches of snow someplace where it never should be. And the place will be frozen over.

I guess that is one of the problems of work. I just don't get out into the woods enough to get my eyesight keen enough to recognize where I am going or coming, let alone trying to see one of the little morels I usually don't find.

So I am going to go out with the mushroomers again this weekend, cover the same ground they do, only at a more leisurely pace, enjoy the blooming of the trilliums or some other flowers I have to look up in the book, and see if I can spot enough to make a meal.

Better yet, I think I will pick a bunch of fiddlehead ferns and leeks. Those I can find.

Remembrances

If you thought life in the woods as a lumberman was tough, then this picture of a set up for dinner for the lumberman at the Cobb-Mitchell Lumber Camp which was by Springville back in 1922 shows that the lumberjacks did have to have some "upbringing" into the finer aspects of life. The cooks and helpers had the tables set with real china.

although the plates and cups are upside down to keep the dirt and dust off them while awaiting the crews to come in from the woods. Joe Locke Superintendent of the camp is flanked by the cooks and kitchen crews in one of the last camps in the area.

By postcard, phone and tongue I've learned that these offerings are often read in Detroit, Flint, Lansing, Grand Rapids and the far reaches of Horton Bay.

Some report giggling until they lost control of themselves, wondering how I developed the art of stirring so much rice without it sticking to the pan.

That kind of talk made my head swell up as large as a pumpkin; and it stayed there until my wife described the condition of a pumpkin in May.

Other readers have worked their comments into a boo because I haven't made them giggle one gig.

Therefore, I shall now attempt to satisfy both sides. It is a ticklish business because the last time I tried it, the chipmunks held a rather noisy mass meeting in our back yard.

Do you suppose that Ronald Reagan and George Bush have a skeleton in the White House closet and are using Ollie North to prevent it from rattling?

Is your boy up all night and a washout in the morning? I used to be like that, but now that I am a senior citizen, neither night nor morning has anything to do with it.

If Boyne City and the county were to repair all the potholes in the roads, much of the daily excitement would be missing from our lives.

He: Why don't you tell the truth in your columns?

Me: And take all the charm out of them?

He: Don't you know that trying to become famous with a small town newspaper column is like trying to out-kick a mule?

Me: Mules played out in Boyne City when you were grass knee to a high hopper.

He: Why do you always say stuff like that?

Me: I'm the victim of fat mosquitoes and social security and my tongue slips a cog whenever I talk to your ilk.

He: What's wrong with my ilk?

Me: It's as useless as a relative.

He: I shall ignore that and ask again why you don't work the truth into your writing?

Me: The truth can start scandals and pit man against woman.

He: You are going to explain that, of course.

Me: Well, to start with, many wives, like cucumbers, are picked by chance.

He: Stop right there. Name one Boyne City wife who was picked by chance.

Me: I have no intention of being done in before my readers are tired of me.

He: How come you are so smart?

Me: I spent 60 years shaking the tree of intelligence, filling my basket.

He: Peck or bushel?

Me: The size of the container should never exceed the circumference of the head.

He: I have a strange feeling that this is one column that may get you into hot water.

Me: Yes, I have a sinking feeling that my entire cranberry crop is going to sour on the vine.

The Boyne City School Board would like to publicly thank the members of the Budget Planning and Curriculum Review Committee and Sub Committee for the great amount of work they have done.

Keeping current on which foods are good for me and which aren't has been a time-consuming task. I can't complain, though, because my taste buds have helped a lot. They've accepted most of the healthy stuff I've given them including mostly imitation sour cream and cholesterol free, 100 percent genuine fake meat sausage and rejected only one category, fish. But this I blame on their first encounter with sea food, cod liver oil, which no self respecting taste bud would go for. This cooperation between what I eat and my taste buds may not last though because the latest research is changing views on even very recent diet directives and I'm afraid that when I switch food again, I'll get rebellious buds.

Take the matter of desserts. My taste buds have long known that they're delicious but frivolous and now know they're dangerous as well. The flavor enhancing fats in rich desserts combined with sugar raise bad cholesterol levels mightily.

Recently though Australian researchers suggested that when we want dessert, we may truly need it. Faster than all other food, sugar increases the serotonin in our system, serotonin being the soother of anxiety and frustration.

As for the dangerous fats like butter in fluffy chocolate cake, nutritionists have largely and successfully replaced them with safe vegetable oils. The altered dessert won't make us any lighter on the scale or in appearance either, but we'll be happy while hippy.

Then there's beef. My taste buds have learned to prefer chicken, but nutritionists say that it's nonsense for doctors to brand beef as bad. Beef has essential iron that women especially need and it's a kind that can't be found in a bottle (vitamin bottle, that is). So no booing at beef anymore, taste buds.

In addition, a recent study showed that when mice were fed a diet of cheeseburgers, the food inhibited certain cancers. Come home to McDonald's again.

As for beverages, last week a doctor came out and said he'd seen no study that absolutely proved coffee raises blood pressure. He doesn't advise drinking it all day, but when a craving for it comes, indulge in a cup. Of course if it comes late evening, one may have to count leaping sheep, but at least the blood pressure will stay grounded.

Now for what's called the wonder cleaner upper of our wayward eating habits, oat bran. Aside from now commanding a hefty price, it's proved to be a wimp. It takes 12 oat bran muffins per day to keep our arteries flowing freely. My taste buds say oat bran's okay but not 12 muffins a day okay.

These are just a few of the things I've read about the fragmented food front. Some days I'd like to get in bed and lie there with some books, water (bottled of course) and a box of soda crackers (but not Nabisco brand because they've some dangerous ingredient in them) until what I'm supposed to eat is settled on. But I don't dare. No doubt research has shown or soon will that lying in bed for more than 12 hours at a stretch weakens the heart. I've been eating to keep strong. Besides, my taste buds deserve better than soda crackers.

Still, the crackers might prove so boring that the buds will receive whatever comes next, more fat or more fake, with vigor and grace.

out to a special hunting ground somewhere in the area. Last year the qualifying tournament was held in Chandler Township while the finals were held in the Jordan Valley forest.

In the afternoon, after the hunt, quite a few activities will be taking place at a tent next to One Water Street. A special Waterfront Walk is offered that will include prizes for those entering.

A Mushroom Gab will be held at the Wolverine Dilworth starting at 3 p.m. for all those wishing to talk about the Saturday hunt or previous hunts.

Several mushroom dinners will be featured at service clubs in the area Saturday night, while the local bars will be ready for the parties.

Sunday morning will see the finalists off for their second 90 minute picking session and the determination of winners.

The winners will be honored at the One Water Street tent Sunday afternoon, according to One Water Street officials.

The members of the Fitch Dance Troupe are waiting to entertain East Jordan audiences.

Fitch Dance Troupe to perform on EJ "Arts Alive" stage Friday, May 12

BY LENORE BECHTEL
The Fitch Dance Troupe will present a fast-paced show of jazz dancing, tap dancing, toe dancing and break dancing at an upcoming Jordan River Arts Council "Arts Alive" event. Performances will be at 7 p.m. on Friday, May 12, at East Jordan High School and Saturday, May 13, at Bellaire High School. The 24-member dance troupe are students and teachers from the Kalkaska-based Fitch dance studio, which has taken most of the dancers for study and competition at New York City's Sheraton Center. Their performance will include

"Showing Out", a Broadway style, jazz number; "Phantom of the Opera", a modern ballet from the stage play of the same name, and "I Feel Pretty", a modern toe dance to music from "West Side Story". "Greased Lightning" from the movie "Grease" demonstrates dance steps from the 50s, and "Aggie" is a hand clapping, foot stompin' country tap dance. "Breakin'" will be performed by a young man who has danced on the streets of New York City with the New York City Breakers. Other tunes the troupe will tap include "Set It Out" and "Oh Yeah!" Teacher will perform a special, difficult choreography called "Teachers' Tap", and the program will conclude with "That's Dancing", with 21 girls performing in precision. Their lively show is the last of five events scheduled by the arts council in two locations. To encourage attendance by people who did not buy series tickets, low-priced single event tickets available at the door will be $10 for families, $3 for adults and $2 for seniors and students. The series has been supported by the Michigan Council for the Arts and the Cheboygan Area Arts Council.

East Jordan Garden Club will tour Brown's Creek

Environmental experts will lead East Jordan Garden Club members and guests on a tour of the Browns Creek area that lies between East Jordan High School and East Jordan Elementary and Middle School at 11 a.m. Monday, May 15. Phil Naegle, district conservationist for Northwest Michigan Resource Conservation and Development Council, and Rob McClellan of Tip of the Mitt Watershed Council, will explain what needs to be done to clean up and maintain the health of the creek. Naegle will suggest plantings needed to control erosion on the banks.

Participants should wear walking shoes, dress casually and comfortably and bring a bag lunch. Beverage will be provided for lunch in the community room at Jordan Valley District Library and the regular garden club meeting will be held afterwards. Peggy Midener, member of both the environmental and program committee, said the property has not been properly cared for and has suffered much of abuse from recreational vehicles ridden there. She said the garden club had tried before to get something done, but their efforts had been unsuccessful. "This time with the watershed council and people at the school interested, something positive can come from it," she said. This attempt to upgrade the area began last fall when Tip of the Mitt Watershed started a program called Adopt-a-Creek. At the initiation of the garden club, the schools adopted Browns Creek that runs in the land between them. The project has met with enthusiasm from many teachers, including eighth grade teacher, Bill Chase, who uses the area as a classroom to examine different aspects of the creek and study the water and insects. The major clean-up will be started by students on May 19, and students, parents and interested service clubs will replace the existing delapidated bridge. Local lumberman and photographer Joel Evans will record the improvements with before and after photos of the area. The garden club will help raise funds for the project, Midener said. "The school kids may have some bake sales too," she said.

"The more they participate, the more it will mean to them." She visualizes classes becoming involved in a variety of ways, perhaps with creative writing assignments to interview people who remember the creek when it was at its best. Then it contained trout — and it still may. "It is probably one of the finest school properties in the state," Midener said.

Cooking

Cherries are beautiful. "Cherries are magic; they glow." Says Deni Hooper who really knows her cherries. I wonder sometimes about the poet who wrote "Life is a bowl of cherries." He most likely was in love at the time. I believe that cherry trees always thrive in the most beautiful regions of the world. They love the cooling breezes off Lake Michigan, and they seem to be extra fond of our Northern Michigan hillsides.

I recently returned from an extended trip to California and I was thrilled with the grandeur of the mountains, deserts and the Pacific Ocean. Yet I did not see anything any more beautiful than our own cherry orchards in blossom time, harvest or in the winter when the white snow contrasts with the blue sky and lakes. No matter where I go, I think that I will always be just a little bit homesick for our Northwest Michigan area and that means cherries.

Our hotel and country inn chefs specialize in cherry recipes and then I wonder if we will ever "scrape the bottom of the barrel" when it comes to cherry recipes. This next one is new to me. I made it in a regular 10" pie pan; a deep dish cherry pie with a new way with the crust and a meringue-type cake topping.

DEEP DISH CHERRY PIE
For the crust you will need:
1 cup flour
1 tablespoon powdered sugar
1/2 cup butter or margarine
Sift together flour and powdered sugar. Cut in butter. Pat evenly over bottom and sides of a 10 in. deep dish pie pan. Bake in moderate oven 350° for 15 minutes or until lightly browned.

All you need for the cherry filling is 1 can cherry pie mix. Spread over partially baked crust and top with this

MERINGUE CAKE TOPPING
2 egg whites
1 cup sugar
1/2 cup flour
1/2 teaspoon baking powder
3 tablespoons coffee cream or half & half
1 teaspoon vanilla
1/4 cup coarsely chopped pecans
1/2 cup flaked coconut

Beat egg whites until very frothy. Gradually add sugar a little at a time and beat until stiff peaks form.

Sift together flour and baking powder and fold into meringue mixture, alternating with cream. Fold in vanilla, nuts and coconut. Do not beat.

Turn out over top of cherries. If desired, arrange a crown of candied cherries and chopped pecans over the meringue.

Bake in moderate oven 350° for about 30 minutes. Do not over-bake. I baked mine 45 minutes for a golden brown and the top baked too hard, however, it was very tasty and my friends loved it.

I can always find delicious easy-to-make recipes in my "Cooking By Touch" book. Here is a

CHERRY DELIGHT
4 oz. margarine, room temperature
1 cup sugar
1 cup crushed pretzels
2 (8 oz.) packages newfchatel cheese
2 (8 oz.) containers non-dairy whipped topping
1 (21 oz.) can cherry pie filling
1-Mix together margarine, sugar and 1/4 cup pretzels. Press into a 9 x 13 inch pan.
2-In a large bowl mix together Neufchatel cheese and 1 container non-dairy whipped topping. Spread over pretzel layer.
3-Spread cherry filling over and top with remaining container of non-dairy topping. Sprinkle remaining 1/3 cup of pretzels on top.
4-Chill in refrigerator for about 3 hours before serving.

Then there are these recipes for Deni Hooper's "Magic Cherry." Maybe you have some frozen sweet cherries in your freezer, what a delicious dessert they make.

FRESH SWEET CHERRIES FROZEN
They are a real gourmet treat. Beware of too many too fast or you will regret it. But a few at a time will please wonderfully as dessert, snack or garnish. Freeze unpitted with stem if you like for a mid-winter treat.

You could dip them in this
CHOCOLATE DIPPED CHERRIES
8 oz. semi-sweet chocolate
Heat over hot water until partially melted. Remove from heat. Stir until melted. When cool to the touch dip the cold cherries in the chocolate. Place on waxed paper to harden.

If you have Deni's cherry compote in the refrigerator, you will have a delicious colorful dessert on hand. It keeps well but just might not last long when your friends get a sample of this
CHERRY COMPOTE

1 (21 oz.) can red tart cherry pie filling
1 (15 1/2 oz) can pineapple chunks with syrup
1 cup dried apricots
2 1/2 cups water
3/4 teaspoon cinnamon
Place together undrained in 3 qt. casserole and bake at 350° for 1 1/2 hours.

I am happy to see some new cherry products on our market shelves. I like the canned cherry applesauce. It is delicious with a dish of cottage cheese. Black sweet cherry pie filling is another goodie. So let's indulge and brighten up these winter days.

Looking over the letter that told Boyne City School Superintendent Bob Nakoneczny the school system was being given two donations in order to buy computers similar to the one behind him, Nakoneczny was all smiles, thanks to the anonymous donors who gave the school system $10,000.

Boyne City school system has a wish list

Even though the Boyne City School System has a "wish list" about a mile long, board members were pleased when Superintendent Bob Nakoneczny told them the school system was given a donation of $5,000 from a resident of the community with a matching $5,000 donation from a major corporation. Both asked to remain anonymous and both asked that the money be used to purchase computers for the students.

The only limitation on the money is that the computers be purchased from a company that offers a substantial price reduction when used for educational purposes.

Nakoneczny is now faced with a problem of deciding which computer firm should get the business. He said the money would purchase about four or five computers, depending on how they are constructed.

Nakoneczny also said that additional monies have been donated to the school district, about $1,000 in total and the aspect of more coming in is very high.

BC sells land, settles dual claims

Boyne City Commissioners settled one outstanding land disagreement at the Tuesday noon meeting by agreeing to sell off some of the acreage near the city gravel pit that has the city and another party claiming title to the land.

The sale, culminated the ongoing ownership problem between Dr. Thomas and the city. Thomas claimed when he purchased the property recently, that he had title to the land and was given title insurance stating that fact.

The city, on the other hand, also had title to the property through the state when it gave the city the property through a gift as part of some tax reverted lands back in the forties.

When Thomas first brought the matter to the city in order to clear up the title, he was willing to purchase the city's claim for the appraised value of $5,000. When the city turned down the offer and proposed to sell him a portion of the property instead, he increased his offer to $6,000 for that share of the land. The city again turned down the offer, saying that the city may have some use for the property in the future.

Several weeks ago, Thomas contacted the city through a friend asking the matter be settled out of court. He increased his offer for the portion of the property to $8,000.

The city appraiser had said the property would be worth about $7,500 in a few years.

The city commissioners agreed to sell the property for the $8,000 with the provision that if Thomas desires to vacate a portion of the undeveloped street that is included in the parcel, he would have to bear all costs for the closure.

In other action, the commissioners heard a presentation from John Scott, representing the Rural Housing Corporation who said the company has been looking at Boyne City as a possible place to build a 24 unit senior housing project.

One of the sites being looked at is on the corner of Jersey and Jefferson streets.

Scott told the commissioners the project may be as much as 24 months away from getting approvals from the Farm-Home agency which has to give their approval for the project.

The senior housing development would have rents in the area of $240 to $260 per month and would include heat, he said, and that possibly some rent subsidies may be available.

He said the city was being

Bats can be our friends

How many myths have you heard about bats? That they fly into your hair? That they have rabies?

Truth is, bats have absolutely no interest in human hair, and they are no more prone to rabies than a cat or a dog. In fact, bats are excellent mosquito killers. Consider: an average bat catches and eats 900 insects per hour, 3,000 insects per night! That's 3,000 less bugs to bother us! And yet humans continue to mistrust bats.

The Petoskey Regional Audubon Society is meeting on May 18 to explore the world of the bat at the 4-H Center, Fairgrounds, Charlevoix Avenue, Petoskey, May 18, 7:30 p.m.

The speaker will be Ed Poropat, naturalist from Ontario, Canada, who will demonstrate with live bats their sonar flying ability, as well as dispel many of the common myths surrounding our only flying mammal.

looked at as a possible site because of research the home office of the corporation had done down in Lansing. He also said the company is in the process of developing or has developed sites in many other cities in northern Michigan.

His contention that the project was needed, according to the company's research brought some concerns from the City Housing Director Todd Sorenson. Sorenson said the need for senior housing was slim, as the current senior housing has only a ten person waiting list. Sorenson also said the other housing projects in town have only recently reached 100 percent occupancy. He suggested that when the additional 32 units of the Brooks-Deitze project get built this summer, there may be an excess of housing available.

Sorenson told Scott and the members of the commission that the need for housing is in the area of family type homes. He thought that three or four bedroom homes were needed now, and more would be needed in the future. He said the city has a waiting list of over 30 families wanting housing like that.

Scott told the city that he would try to get a copy of the research his firm has done to the city to have them look it over and see where the housing pressure may come in the future.

What Scott wanted was a letter from the city supporting the project but the commissioners failed to take any action at this time preferring to take a look at the research the firm has done.

The commissioners started the noon meeting off with a presentation of a $1,000 donation from United Technologies to help the city find money to purchase a heart monitoring system that is needed in the city ambulances. The city has asked for donations from people to try to find the money for the machines.

The machines are needed, City Manager Randy Frykberg said, because Boyne City is one of the few ambulance departments that do not have such equipment. He said Northern Michigan Hospitals have asked the city to get such a machine.

Nord Schroeder, one of the ambulance crew said that now, when a heart machine is needed, they have to call another ambulance.

Boyer sends group to county to air complaints

Boyer City will be sending over to Charlevoix County a strong contingent of city officials wishing to express their displeasure over the county planning commission's denial of a request that would have provided the city with grant money which it would use to develop additional boat slips at the city marina.

The city learned of the denial after the regional zoning authority notified the city that they would also have to turn down approval for the proposed additional boat slips.

The problems arose when the county planning board, without notifying the city that they were going to discuss the proposed marina expansion, started a discussion at the regular monthly meeting held last Thursday.

The county planners left the approval of the marina development up to their executive board after they could not reach a decision. The executive board then decided that additional slips and the other work that is proposed for the city was not in the best interests of the county planning body's lake management plan.

They then turned down the request and set a letter of disapproval to other authorities in the chain that will have to okay the project.

Their denial meant that others would have to deny and that, in turn, means the city will have a hard time getting the grant money that is needed for the project.

The city fathers will be expressing their displeasure of the county planning action at the regular monthly meeting of the County Commission.

One of the major points of contention the city will use in its arguments against the county planners is that the Lake Management Plan was never adopted by the city, let alone the County Commissioners. Since it was not adopted by either, then the plan should have no effect on what is currently proposed.

The city will also tell the county commissioners that the city has been working on marina expansion for the past five years, long before the county planners even thought of starting a committee to try to develop a lake management plan.

The issue was brought to the county planners as part of an A-95 review, which is needed for state approval before funds are released to the project. That request for approval was eventually denied by the executive committee consisting of Larry Levensgood, County Planner Larry Sullivan and two others.

Levensgood said the proposed marina was not included in Lake Management plan and should have been when the plan was created. He said the drafting process for the lake management plan asked for input from the area but no one has mentioned the expansion of the marina.

Steve Moody, a Boyne City Commissioner, took out a recent brochure done for the county that has a picture of the Round Lake Harbor showing it full of boats. Moody said that the expansion of 12 slips at Boyne City would not mean lake use like that of the picture of Charlevoix.

While the denials have not completely killed the possibility of a grant, it has added a roadblock to the granting process, Frykberg said. He hopes the traveling commissioners and supporters will cause the planners to change their minds about the project.

One other city commissioner asked if the planning body or if the county commissioners were running the county. He said he always thought the planning body served under the commissioners, not over them.

Char-Em presents workshop May 18

Charlevoix-Emmet Intermediate School District is presenting a workshop entitled "Bringing Out the Best". It will be held in the Conference Room at the Service Center on Mercer Rd. in Charlevoix on Thursday, May 18, 1989, at 7 p.m. The program is open to all parents and teachers.

Topics will include an introduction to how we learn and process information. All of us, parents, children, teachers alike have a preferred way of gathering and maintaining information. You will take a "test" to see how you personally learn and then you can take that information home to use for the rest of the family. It is important to know that everyone does NOT learn information in the same way. Once you realize that, it makes helping your children learn much easier.

Also, a discussion of how the "experts" identify abilities and talents will be held. Parents are good at recognizing their children's strong points and need then to create a nurturing environment which will allow each child to maximize his/her potential.

Self-esteem in children seems to be a key element in successful performance at school and elsewhere. Information will also be given to help parents/teachers to develop a positive atmosphere, one of the essential ingredients which will allow these young people to feel good about themselves.

There will be practical information, guided discussion, bibliographies, and hand-outs to help everyone to "bring out the best."

Presenter for the workshop will be Kathy Martinczek, Consultant for Gifted and Talented. For further information, call Char-Em ISD, 547-9947.

Former Charlevoix resident new golf coach at Siena Heights College

Adrian resident Randy S. Faust is the new varsity golf coach at Siena Heights College. The college has been planning a varsity golf program for some time now, according to Athletic Director Fred Smith.

"We're looking forward to Randy as coach and to the new program," said Smith. "He has the experience to create the type of program we want at the college and to help the individual athletes reach their potentials."

Faust has participated in golf by playing in high school, college and in tournaments and has also taught golf. He golfed for three years at Adrian College from which he received in 1978 his bachelor of science in elementary education, minoring in mathematics and physical education. In 1977 his Adrian College team was MIAA Champions.

Faust went to Charlevoix High School in Charlevoix, Michigan, where he golfed for one year. He also taught golf for the city of Charlevoix.

In tournament action, Faust placed as Club Champion of the Lenawee Country Club in 1987 and 1988 and placed as runner-up in 1986. In Toledo District Match-Play, he advanced to the quarterfinals in 1985 and to the semifinals in 1988.

"I am pleased to be the coach of the Siena Heights golf team," said Faust, "Hopefully in the near future, we will build a program representative of the other programs here at Siena Heights."

Boyer City School Board Members gave out six retirement awards at their meeting Monday night. Accepting were two of the staff, Irvin "Shorty" Smith who has taught in the system for the past 25 years and Herm Beyer, a 13 year veteran of the schools. Presenting the awards were Thelma Behling and Dr. Bob Nakoneczny.
