Special Use Ordinance gets first reading in BC

After two tablings, and a third after it went back to the planning commissioners for approval of changes, the Boyne City Commissioners approved the first reading of an adoption of an amendment that would "legalize" non-conforming uses in about 24 locations throughout the city.

The changes in the zoning rules will allow a presently zoned non-conforming business to be able to rebuild if destroyed by fire or some other reason, be allowed to expand one time to provide additional parking or some other use on land they presently control, or allow another less intensive use of the structure.

When the matter first appeared before the commissioners, they asked that several questions be added to the zoning change, changes that caused the proposed amendment to go back to the planning body for their approval.

That was done last month and was sent back to the commission for their final okay.

The first reading of the amendment was approved quickly by the commissioners at their noon meeting Tuesday. A second reading of the rule will be made in four weeks after which it will be added to the zoning ordinance.

The new rule has several requirements for a use to be changed, including several hearings by the planners and a hearing by the city commission before the change would be allowed.

Also included in the wording is the expansion of a business. An example might be a business that has a small structure which inder to be sold, would require additional parking areas. If the owner of the non-conforming use has additional property under his control, he could add that property to the non-conforming use proper-

Morgridge honored for excellence

Robert Morgridge, Boyne City High School teacher, is the 1989 winner of the Ferris Lewis Award for Excellence in Teaching Michigan History, the Historical Society of Michigan announced from its headquarters in Ann Arbor.

The award will be presented Thursday, May 25, Education Day of Michigan Week 1989, at ceremonies beginning at 11:00 a.m. in the Council Chambers of the Lansing City Hall, across from the State Capitol. Michigan Week Chairman James Warner and Lansing Mayor Terry McCane will preside over the program. The Lewis Award will be presented to Morgridge by Historical Society of Michigan President John Logie, of Grand Rapids.

Morgridge is the eighth winner of this prize presented annually by the Society and Hillsdale Educational Publishers, Hillsdale. According to Thomas L. Jones, the Society's executive director, the award is named after the late Ferris Lewis, a leading expert on Michigan History, author of a respected text on the subject, whose education career included distinguished service at Henry Ford Community College, Dearborn.

Morgridge, a graduate of Michigan State University, has taught in Boyne City since 1967. Working closely with the Boyne City Historical Society, he developed a very special course on local history, according to David McConnell, president of Hillsdale Educational Publishers, the award co-sponsor. "Bob's students earn credit for attending historical society meetings, and often are called on to make presentations to the members. His collection of maps and old photographs aid the in-class learning experience. His students have even published two books under his guidance." Morgridge was Boyne City's teacher of the year in 1987.

With veterans of both the V.F.W. and the American Legion standing at attention, Boyne City remembered the veterans who served our country from this area during ceremonies held Memorial Day. The veterans honored those who served so that our country could continue enjoying the freedoms we have today.

***

This Sunday, as part of the worship services, the Boyne City United Methodists will have an Historical Plaque recognition signifying their inclusion as a historical building by the State of Michigan. The ceremonies will begin with the worship service at 11 a.m.

It was mistaken identity when the City of East Jordan said that Keith Pattenaude, 303 Williams was on the list of those not in conformance with the ordinance covering junk in yards. The record stands corrected in the city and he is off the hook as his yard is not included in the list of homes that need cleaning up.

With a salute from the Drill Team, and the playing of taps, the ceremonies ended with a large crowd on hand observing.

Both veterans groups walked through the arches as they marched from the American Legion Hall at the corner of Lake and Main Streets to the Veterans' Memorial Park for the ceremony.

Jottings

BY JIM SILBAR

So, what kind of a weekend did you have? Was it filled with lots of activities?

There are plenty of things that could have been done over the long weekend that unofficially opens the summer season. I even saw some people riding a watersled in the still cold waters of Lake Charlevoix.

I also saw many people enjoying a fine breakfast at the Boyne City High School from the Boosters.

But, I enjoyed working on the lawn and the garden, trying to get it ready for spring planting. I even went out and bought some plants.

But the boss said that the garden site needed leveling out before I could plant anything, and that the seeds I had intended to use probably wouldn't germinate, so the garden will have to wait one more weekend.

This week I will go out and find new seeds to plant.

Like trying to start the county folks thinking more about moving the county offices over to Boyne City which is in the middle of the county.

Of course, that is after I get the county to agree to give up Beaver Island. That would have to happen first, as the county officials have said with the island, Charlevoix is the center of the county.

So, I am proposing that they make a trade to Emmet County, which has a higher population base and can offer the island more as far as services go, and take in Resort and the southern half of Bear Creek and Springvale Townships.

I wonder if that idea could fly? According to history, though, the folks who lived on the island back during the "King's" days, did not get along very well with the mainland folks.

A battle, if it could be called that, happened on the shores of the present day channel, as the mainlanders tried to eliminate some of the problems of those folks from the island.

Now, that is history, but some of the folks on the island still like to keep away from the folks on the mainland. The only ties they may have are those of the government services the county provides.

Also in history, I think both the Resort and Bear Creek Townships may have belonged to Charlevoix County.

Or else Charlevoix County once belonged to Emmet County.

And both once belonged to the county seat of Mackinac which was headquartered on Mackinac Island.

But that was back in the days even before the word lumber was discovered in this area, and shortly after the revolution.

Another seed that should be planted, is getting another bridge across the Boyne River somewhere about the city limits of town on the east side.

We could bill it as another "by-pass" and maybe get some federal funding to get it constructed. The job would have to be done by someone other than the MDOT people — they can't seem to find their way to completing any project without the expense of studies to expand the costs.

And they have a hard time completing projects already on the books. Just look at how many years they have been spending money working on a simple repaving project of Boyne Avenue.

It's no wonder the Zilwaukee Bridge cost so much.

Perhaps the reason why the MDOT folks have such a hard time finding and doing the work is that the politicians who ultimately control the state, have not given the MDOT people the priority list.

They should be spending some time, about a couple of weeks, working up a list of roads that could be fixed, and give them money to get the projects done.

Also, we should plant a seed about getting those politicians to write a new law that, when and if they grant some additional money to schools, they should do it on a per pupil basis and not take into consideration the school aid formula. They should also write a permanent tax relief into the law that would create a base of the present assessments we are paying presently, and make it so that assessment could not go up from this point on until the house or property is sold.

It sounds a little like the thing out in California, which seems to have been able to live without increased taxes caused by rising property values.

One more seed should be planted that would allow those in the seasonal business arena to be able to pay more for their employees. That could be done by the elimination of some of the taxes that those businesses have to pay. The tax money could go to the employee instead of the state.

If this keeps up, I would have a whole row of ideas that need to get planted in politicians minds.

I think we should add an overdose of nitrogen to make sure some of these things grow.

But, probably they will grow just like my garden does, with a few useful plants and a whole lot of weeds.

That is what happens to ideas. The weeds come in from all sides to take over the plot.

We just need someone to continually pluck out the weeds so we can continue to produce good crops of ideas.

Marshall Sayles

Someone left the barnyard gate open. When the horse saw it he reared back on his hind legs, gave a giant snort and dashed down the road, dragging this column behind him. It was retrieved by the street cleaner who handed it to the editor. So here it is: * * *

Being the spitting image of a Charlevoix county resident, I found myself shopping in Petoskey. And while walking down the street I became cranky and out of sorts. Which surprised me. All was well in my sick department when I arrived.

So I went into the emergency entrance of the nearest sick station asking for a fixer-upper who specialized in cranky people. As luck would have it, there was one playing tick-tack-toe with a woman wearing a white hat.

He pressed a cold stethoscope to my troubled stomach and a funny thing happened. It spoke to him. He fussed a little, trying to interpret the language.

"Why is it," he asked, "that you Boyne City people have so much stomach trouble?"

"It all started years ago," I said. "Charlevoix stole the court house from Boyne City and our people have had stomach trouble ever since."

"It helps to know these things," he said.

"For your information, Doctor, how am I?"

He said I had so many brains they were spilling over into my stomach, which seemed to have a peculiar language of its own. However, I would be able to function in a foggy existence as long as there was a drop of ink in my quiver.

Puffed to the hilt with such a positive diagnosis, I suddenly snapped well.

Leaving the office I saw a lady holding her stomach. "Could she possibly have a talking stomach like mine?" I asked. "Heavens no," he said. "Women have more control over their intelligence than men. They always keep their brains where they belong."

"But, doctor, you said....."

"I can't stand here talking to you," he said. "I've got another patient down the hall and if I don't see him soon he is liable to get well."

Now, if you will hold on for a moment, I have another true-tongued shocker begging to escape from my weekly gunny sack of graphic accounts.

So it is with great bounding joy that I impart the following information to those who always read this column if they can.

Erratum

A misplaced comma caused the article of how much Boyne City Schools would be spending to remove and replace the asbestos within the schools in the system to be wrong.

Instead of spending $365,012, the schools will be spending only $36,501.20, a considerable savings over what we reported.

NMH sponsors Children's 'Come and See' during Hospital Week

Approximately 500 area first grade students received a close look at various departments of Northern Michigan Hospitals recently during Hospital Week. The annual Children's Come and See, sponsored by the Northern Michigan Hospitals Auxiliary, is an opportunity for area children to become acquainted with several departments in the hospital. This was the first year the tours included Pediatrics, where the students participated with staff nurses in a mock surgery. "The role playing was designed to give the children a positive experience with the hospital and staff in case they ever have to make a hospital stay," according to Jan Fish, NMH Volunteer Coordinator.

The students also toured Radiology where they are introduced to "Mr. Bones", a real human skeleton, and where they viewed X-rays.

They visited the cast room where they experimented with various casts, slings, and splints.

The excitement of sitting inside an ambulance with all its tubes, bottles, and equipment topped off the thrill of the Come and See experience.

Each child left with memorabilia provided by the Auxiliary including cast room samples, balloons, stickers and specially designed coloring books explaining hospital care.

This was the 15th year the auxiliary has provided the tours.

"Every year the program expands, with more and more schools requesting to be involved," Fish said.

The tours are scheduled over a period of four days, and usually last for an hour and a half.

"It takes 40-50 auxiliary members to organize and guide the tours, as well as the hospital staff who participate. They all do an excellent job providing these children with an opportunity to discover how a hospital functions," Fish commented.

For more information on this or other Auxiliary activities, call Fish at 348-4568.

ty on a one time basis.

The classification of non-conforming would also be changed to special use at that time.

The city planners have tried to eliminate non-conforming uses in compliance with state wishes for zoning. A change to special use would allow the business to remain, but under the new classification.

When the second reading is made in four weeks, the amendment will become law.

The city also approved a transfer of funds from the water/wastewater fund to the general fund in order to pay back to the general fund the money that was borrowed from it to buy back the Farm Home Administration bond that provided the money to build the sewer treatment facility several years ago.

When the city agreed to buy back the bond from the government, it borrowed the funds so they could take advantage of a discount being offered by the government.

Due to a mistake in the wording, the payback of the "borrowed" money from one fund to another was not included in the wording of the motion which allowed the buyback at a discount.

The new motion will allow the funds to be paid back to the general fund over a period of time.

The first payback was about $50,000 which will be taken out of the water/wastewater fund and transferred to the general fund.

The commissioners then had an opportunity to look at the new booklet which was prepared by the planners with the help of Don Glowinski, a local architect giving some possible guidelines for those who may wish to remodel a house or build something new.

The guidelines are only suggestions according to City Manager Randy Frykberg. The commissioners wanted to be sure the suggested architectural ideas are not rules which must be complied with when projects come in front of the planning body.

"I don't want to see the planners having any more tools they can use for authority," said Commissioner Theima Behling. Her remark was seconded by Commissioner Steve Moody who also wanted to make sure the proposed guidelines are just that.

In other items that came in front of the commissioners, Andy Andrick asked what happened to the idea of merchants installing flags in front of their businesses. He asked that the city engineer prepare a plan to install pipes that would be in the sidewalk in front of the stores so the store could put up the flags.

He said this idea was discussed last year and that the merchants have purchased 16 flags but could not put them up because the city has not provided ground sockets for them.

City Maintenance Head Butch Erber was asked to work with the group to get the holes drilled through the sidewalk in order to have the flags up for the Fourth of July.

Andrick also asked if the veterans' groups could bring in topsoil and seed for the area of the Veterans Park they use for the Memorial Day services. He said

Not since Robert Browning's "The Pied Piper of Hamelin", and 18th century tale about rats being charmed by a piper's music into dancing smack into a river to drown, has an imaginative idea for knocking off rats come along; not until Doug Crump that is. This New Zealander recently worked out a way whereby rats expire by being scared to death. A splendid idea indeed but it does appear to have a few possible glitches.

Crump and fellow scientists have concocted chemicals that smell like that of animals that prey on rats, exact kind unspecified. (The unnamed predators likely include The Wizard of Oz heroine Dorothy's "Lions and tigers and bears, oh my!" though.) In any case, when the chemicals are laid down in rat-infested areas, the rats drop dead, presumably from terror.

Crump admits that he hasn't seen rats fall from fatal fear in chemically treated spots. Still, he's convinced that they have because the rodent population has drastically decreased in those areas.

Assuming that the lowered rat population means that many rats died there suddenly, were they given extensive autopsies to rule out plugged arteries as the cause of same? Cholesterol clogging the arteries is a big thing in this country now, but New Zealanders may not be on the lookout for it. If these rats, a species not known for discriminating appetites, were for some reason treated to high fat content garbage, they could easily have died from diet not dread.

Then too, there's no way of knowing if the cause of the rat population slide was due entirely to deaths. The dead rats could have been only the most cowardly, the rest having the gumption to move on to more soothing smelling spots.

This leads to the crux of the matter - the odor. If it terrifies the rats, how do people react to it? Of the predators of rats, none smell good to humans. Even if people left the area while the chemicals were laid on and remained away for a while afterward, would the smell stay even longer and if so, might they be a bit undone by it too?

Perhaps these drawbacks have already been addressed and taken care of somehow. The press release from Auckland, New Zealand, reporting on Crump's rat research was brief with few details included. So maybe the plan has in fact been thoroughly tested and found acceptable to all, except of course the rats.

In any event, the idea has originality going for it certainly. And since Crump doesn't seem a man who'd get ugly were he not given his due for his rat plan, likely nothing resembling the unhappy ending for the earlier unique rat rub-out in Browning's tale would occur. In that instance the piper, having successfully completed his work, was refused the promised financial recognition. Peeved about this, he piped the local kids into the side of a mountain from whence they never returned.

But just to be on the safe side, it would seem the better part of wisdom to award a Nobel or Pulitzer prize to Crump this year for a significant contribution to the welfare of mankind or whatever category the prize-givers have that covers research involving scaring rats to death.

Noon meeting

several veterans were unhappy with the park area over the weekend and wanted to do something about it.

He was told the city would be happy to allow the veterans' groups to bring in the soil and seed and suggested that the work begin after the summer season. Andrick said that would be the soonest it could be done as the groups have to earn the money it would cost.

Andrick also asked what was the status of the riverbank washout in the Old City Park. He was told that the plans have been prepared for the rebuilding of the riverbank, but the city was waiting for the funding to be approved by the state. The city has a grant in hand to do the work, but funding for the project has not been released by the state. Andrick was told that the project was projected to be completed this year, but not by the Fourth of July when the first duck race will be held as part of the activities over the Fourth.

This illustration from the guidebook covering Boyne City architecture shows a home typical of the Modern Victorian look the city planners hope builders and contractors will follow when they construct or remodel homes in Boyne City.

PICNICS

I have a couple of new map books. One shows all of the interstate highways which run north and south and the other book shows the same going east and west. These books show how to find all kinds of interesting places, which are within easy reach of the interstate exits.

PICNIC FOR TWO.

If your refrigerator is empty you can stop for a couple of submarine sandwiches, cookies, milk or soft drinks. Fruit such as apples, grapes and bananas are always enjoyed, and take along a thermos of coffee if needed.

If you have time to plan a picnic you can have a menu like the following. This is a good time to go potluck; if several people are going let everyone help.

MENU

- Campfire spaghetti of hamburgers, or both
- Hard boiled eggs or potato salad or both
- Baked beans
- made from canned beans
- Cake or cookies
- Fresh veges and fruit

I am taking it for granted that you have a cooler to keep all of these foods safe until eating time, also that you are taking a little grill with you or you find one in one of the many parks in the area.

You make this spaghetti the easy way.

- CAMPFIRE SPAGHETTI
- 2 cans (14 oz. each) spaghetti in tomato sauce with cheese (don't forget the can opener)

- 1 1/2 cups sliced pepperoni
- 1 can (about 2 oz.) sliced mushrooms, drained
- 1/4 teaspoon Italian seasoning
- Grated Parmesan cheese

In sauce pan, combine all ingredients except cheese. Heat; stir occasionally. Serve with cheese.

This cake is made for picnics; so good and easy to make, you don't need to make a separate frosting and you take it to the picnic in its own baking pan.

PICNIC CAKE

- 1/2 cup butter
- 1 1/2 cups light brown sugar

- 2 eggs
- 2 1/2 cups flour
- 1 tablespoon baking powder
- 1/2 teaspoon salt
- 1 cup milk
- 1 teaspoon vanilla

Topping for Cake

- 10 large marshmallows
  - 1/2 cup light brown sugar
  - 1/2 cup pecans, chopped coarsely
- Cream the butter well with sugar until light and fluffy. Add the eggs one at a time and beat well. Sift together the flour, baking powder and salt. Stir the dry ingredients into the creamed mixture alternately with a mixture of the milk and vanilla. Beat smooth after each addition. Grease and flour the bottom of a 9" x 9" cake pan. Pour in the batter.

Topping

Cut the marshmallows in half and arrange, round side up, on top of the batter. Bake in moderate oven 350 degrees for 50 minutes. It will shrink slightly from the sides of the pan. Cool in the pan before cutting.

6 large servings

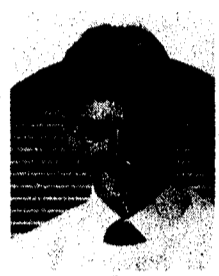

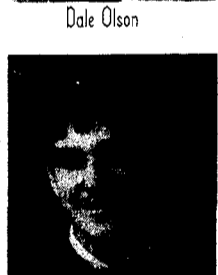

We had a picnic similar to this one on the Lake Michigan dunes near Mackinac City, using a large boulder for our table. One does not soon forget such gorgeous scenery and the memory of our food stays with us, though it was quite ordinary picnic fare. Be sure to include a jar of your favorite pickles. Pickled beets, green onions and early garden radishes are pretty on the picnic plates.

Do not worry if everything does not come out perfect where the food is concerned. Now when I look back through the years, I am so amused thinking of the time that someone had to go back home for the hot dogs, and the person who was to bring the beans did not turn up. "Where are the beans" was the cry. Then there was the time that the bees (I think they were yellow jackets that can really sting) attacked our orange punch.

Be sure to stay long enough to see one of those beautiful sunsets, and a perfect ending is sitting around the campfire after dark; a time to tell stories and the singing of the old songs.

Gov. Blanchard starts Youth Corps tree planting project

Governor James J. Blanchard and Detroit Tigers Manager Sparky Anderson recently kicked off a major effort to beautify and improve the environmental quality of Michigan by helping to plant the first of more than 50,000 trees to be planted along highways this summer by the Michigan Youth Corps.

"This landscaping is part of an intensive effort to make our highways impressive ports of entry for our communities. Future visitors will be greeted by impressive tree and wildflower plantings which show the pride we have in our state," the Governor said.

The Michigan Youth Corps, the nation's largest and most successful summer youth employment program, will provide jobs for 20,000 unemployed young adults this summer. Now in its seventh year, more than 130,000 young men and women will have received job skills and resume-building Youth Corps experience by fall 1989.

Governor Blanchard, Youth Corps and Department of Labor Director Betty Howe and Department of Transportation Director James Pitz joined more than 250 Youth Corps workers who were to plant 10,000 Austrian pines at five sites along the Ford Expressway (I-94), Traverse City, and Clare to Mackinac (US-27 and I-75). Also included in the effort are anti-litter campaigns, trash pick-up and other roadside beautification efforts.

"This tree planting initiative will do more than beautify our state," the Governor said. "It also will help to alleviate, in a small way, the global warming, or greenhouse effect, that threatens our environment."

Governor Blanchard said the Youth Corps continues to meet the needs of Michigan's unemployed young men and women by providing job experience coupled with valuable community service.

"Although the Youth Corps is open to any 18 to 21 year old who is without a job and is willing to work, 47 percent of Youth Corps workers are from families earning less than $15,000 a year. Each summer the program provides hope and opportunity for our youth," the Governor said.

Pollster Louis Harris has learned some important things about our Youth Corps graduates: 95 percent said they learned valuable team-building skills; 96 percent said the Youth Corps prepared them for future employment and 95 percent appreciated the useful community work performed by the corps."

The Youth Corps helps participants complete their education and provides work experience in jobs ranging from construction to computers. More than 20,000 youth will hold Youth Corps jobs in 1989, the third largest year since the program began in 1983.

In 1965, the Beatles recorded 20 hit songs, an American astronaut walked in space, and Michigan motorists began to be guided by "Bring 'Em Back Alive!" traffic bulletins.

Today, you still hear Beatle tunes on the radio, space flights are almost commonplace, and AAA Michigan's "Bring 'Em Back Alive!" Holiday News Service continues to direct travelers toward safe trips. This summer AAA Michigan's 25th year of serving millions of state residents and visitors with special traffic and tourism reports heard hourly on weekends during the Memorial, Independence and Labor Day holidays.

During the 1965 debut of the service, total fatalities for the three summer holiday weekends dropped almost 20 percent from the year before.

Since 1964, total motor vehicle miles driven in Michigan has increased more than 70 percent for the three summer holidays, while the number of traffic fatalities dropped 44 percent.

Through the holiday bulletins, motorists are constantly informed of changing weather and travel patterns, construction detours and traffic tie-ups. They are advised about campsite and lodging availability, beach crowds, festivals, fishing sites, boating conditions and special events.

Each report offers drivers timely information not available elsewhere and includes such reminders as buckling up safety belts and abstaining from alcohol to help "Bring 'Em Back Alive!"

That sort of positive campaign set the tone for traffic

Michigan resident is eligible to apply. Application forms are available at schools, employment and training agencies, MESC and DSS offices, colleges and universities. All Youth Corps worksites are with non-profit agencies and units of government.

Police observe that half of all travelers now wear safety belts. And many drivers take a break more frequently at "Operation CARE" rest stops along Michigan freeways.

What started a quarter-century ago as a one-man operation reporting from a roadside pay phone has become a crew of 30, equipped with mobile phones, helicopters, com-

Hay, grain or silage dust can be a threat to health

People who do a lot of coughing when they are handling moldy hay, grain or silage are risking serious damage to their lungs.

The coughing is a signal that respiratory protection is necessary to help prevent development of a permanent health affliction, says Howard Doss, Michigan State University Cooperative Extension Service agricultural safety specialist.

Dust from moldy hay, grain or silage may contain fungus spores and bacteria that can be inhaled deep into the lungs and can cause "farmer's lung" or Toxic Organic Dust Syndrome (TODS).

Farmer's lung can cause permanent damage and has forced some farmers to abandon their occupation to save their lungs and lives. The disease is most common among dairy farmers and most often occurs during spring and winter, Doss says.

The disease is caused by very small spores and by-products from fungi and bacteria that grow in moldy grain, hay and silage, as well as other materials such as moldy compost, chicken feathers and chicken droppings.

Doss says that farmer's lung is most commonly an acute, short-term, flu-like illness accompanied by a cough, fever and chills, labored breathing, muscle pain and general discomfort. The symptoms of the illness can start from 4 to 8 hours after the person inhales dusts.

If this short-term illness occurs repeatedly, it can permanently damage the lungs. Lung damage may also occur slowly over time without acute symptoms but with a gradual onset of labored breathing, weight loss and increasing fatigue.

TODS resembles farmer's lung but does not produce long-term illness or cause permanent damage to the lungs. However, some people may become extremely ill with TODS and may require hospitalization. The symptoms can start from 5 to 8 hours after a person inhales dust.

"Whenever anyone is working in dusty conditions caused by moldy hay, grain or silage, he or she should wear a disposable filter make-type respirator," Doss says. "Be sure the mask is certified to protect against the contaminant present and its concentration level, and use it in accordance with all of the manufacturer's instructions and limitations."

An example of a disposable mask-type respirator used to filter out dusts and mold spores is the 3M brand 8710, which sells for about $20 for a box of 20, Doss says.

He cautions that these masks do not provide protection from the toxic gases or oxygen deficiency that can occur in silos, liquid manure storage tanks or pits, or other agricultural structures where ventilation is inadequate or where the oxygen supply may not be sufficient to support life. Among the businesses that carry dust respirator masks are Gempier's Inc., Mt. Horeb, Wis. (1-800-382-8473); Safety Services, Inc., Kalamazoo, Mich.

(1-800-632-2955); and Grainger Specialty, Safety Division, Buffalo Grove, Ill. (1-800-521-5585).

N. Lower Mich. Consortium strives to help students achieve in science, math, computer science

A project to discover ways to improve student achievement in science, mathematics, and computer science is well underway in northern Michigan.

Teachers throughout the Charlevoix-Emmet and Cheboygan-Otsego-Presque Isle Intermediate School District are identifying needs for curriculum change, more suitable professional development opportunities, better equipment, improved student achievement, and increased support from businesses and communities.

This ongoing needs assessment is the first part of a cooperative effort by members of the Northern Lower Michigan Consortium. Members include schools in five intermediate school districts, four colleges and the SEE-North (Science and Environmental Education-North) at the University of Michigan Biological Station. "We are gathering information from teachers, students, colleges, businesses, and members of our communities" said Bill Kuhn, who is coordinating the program. The information will be used to develop a 5-year plan. That plan may include the formation of science and mathematics centers, development of more useful courses and workshops, development of classroom-ready materials, and the establishment of networks through which teachers may share ideas and collectively solve problems. It might also create and extend partnerships among schools, businesses, and communities.

A Local Planning Group, made up of representatives from schools and communities, has been established and is meeting monthly to provide ownership in the project at the local level. The next step in the project is to gather information from colleges in northern Michigan. Project staff will then determine ways that colleges and schools can best work together. Further information on the program is available from Lynn Osterbeck who has been named to administer this project for the Char-Em and COP Intermediate School Districts, North Central Michigan College, and SEE-North.

Watershed Council offers nitrate testing program to sample area wells

The Tip of the Mitt Watershed Council is offering free testing of drinking water wells this summer. The testing is being performed as part of the Watershed Council's Groundwater Protection and Education Program. It is funded through a grant from the W.K. Kellogg Foundation.

The tests will look for the presence of nitrate in the water. Nitrate is a naturally occurring compound composed of nitrogen and oxygen and is one potential contaminant of groundwater. The Watershed Council has chosen to test for nitrate because: it is a common contaminant in rural areas; it can cause adverse health risks for infants and some adults who drink the water; and it is often an indicator of other contaminants. The test results will allow the identification of areas of high nitrate contamination.

The Watershed Council will enter the test data into a computer using a digitizer. The computer will then produce maps of nitrate levels in groundwater. The Watershed Council will provide the maps to the public, local governmental officials, and resource planners along with recommendations for dealing with problem areas, if any are found. Individual names of all well-owners will be kept confidential.

Nitrate contamination can be caused by a number of human activities. These include malfunctioning or poorly-sited septic systems, animal wastes, and the improper use of fertilizers. Nitrate is extremely soluble and can move easily through the soil into the drinking water supply.

A total of 2,500 wells will be tested throughout the Watershed Council's service area of Emmet, Charlevoix, and Cheboygan counties. Of these, 1,400 will be randomly selected to ensure that they are evenly distributed throughout the area. Names of home-owners have been selected from the tax records. Watershed Council staff and volunteers are now calling these homeowners to ask if they would like a free well-water test. An additional 500 tests will be performed for Watershed Council members and the general public on a first-come basis. The remaining 600 tests will be reserved for future intensive sampling in selected areas.

The testing program will begin in May and will continue through the summer. The highest levels of contamination usually occur in the spring when rain and snowmelt cause greater groundwater movement. Because of this, and because only a limited number of tests will be offered in each area, the Watershed Council urges you to contact them immediately if you are interested in having your well tested. Doug Fuller, Water Quality Technician, is coordinating the testing program and can schedule the test. For further information, call 616-347-1181.

The Tip of the Mitt Watershed Council is a non-profit environmental organization whose goal is the protection of water quality in Northern Michigan.

Michigan tourists to go on the road again

What goes up, and up some more, year after year? Michigan tourism statistics, AAA Michigan reports.

The 15 million-member organization expects all tourism activities this Memorial Day weekend to go up 5% from last year. Motorists will log more than 900 million miles around the state during the 78-hour holiday period (May 26-29), also up 5% from last Memorial Day.

AAA Michigan Touring Manager Brian Potter reports a brisk upturn in requests for maps to Traverse City, the Mackinac Bridge and "any place with a beach or golf course."

Another boom season is anticipated by the Michigan Travel Bureau, which reports a record $15.8 billion spent here last year, up 7% from 1987 and producing $730 million in tax revenue.

State motorists who take trips over the coming holiday will pay about 20 cents more per gallon for gasoline than a year ago. And nearly 40% of service stations surveyed by AAA Michigan said they will close part of the weekend. Nonetheless, motorists should find an adequate supply.

The holiday officially begins at 6 p.m. Friday, May 26, and ends at midnight Monday, May 29.

To keep throngs of motorists moving safely, Michigan State Police troopers will work 1,665 hours of overtime this holiday, compared with 1,500 hours of extra duty last year.

Hourly reports on road conditions and special events will be broadcast by AAA Michigan's "Bring 'Em Back Alive!" Holiday News Service over 150 radio stations around the state for a 25th consecutive summer. During this quarter-century, summer holiday traffic deaths in the state have declined 44% while travel increased more than 70%.

AAA Michigan urges motorists to buckle their safety belts and abstain from alcohol. Of 21 persons who died on the roads during the Memorial Day weekend last year, police found that alcohol was a factor in 13 deaths. Also, of 18 victims who had safety belts available, 13 were not buckled up.

Nature from your backdoor

BY GLENN R. DUDDERAR

Often when people enjoy seeing something in nature, they want it to stay just the way it is so they can enjoy it again and again.

With living communities, however, often the only way to keep them the same is temporarily to change them.

Remember when the wildfires were raging in Yellowstone National Park and the debate was going on over whether to let the fires burn or try to control them? The argument for letting the fires burn was that it would clear out aging forestland and renew the forest and wildlife habitat. Without that renewal, the character of the forest and its wildlife would change. To keep it the same, then, would require a seemingly drastic short-term change.

Something similar happens in Michigan, though on a much smaller scale, every spring. Temporary wetlands, ponds and puddles in March, April and May host a fascinating array of wildlife ranging in size from nearly microscopic invertebrates to ducks.

One of the most obvious of the smaller creatures in spring ponds are fairy shrimp, also known as "sea monkeys". These shrimplike invertebrates become very abundant starting soon after the ice melts in March. By May, they may be as long as two inches. Then the ponds dry up in early summer and they're gone until the next spring.

A closer look may reveal tiny tadpole shrimp and clam shrimp. I'll never forget my first experience as a city boy finding what appeared to be miniature clams no bigger than my little fingernail in the puddles in a rutted dirt road one spring. I was amazed to find these tiny clamlike organisms several miles from the nearest major body of water. (Later I found the same creatures high in the Blue Ridge Mountains.)

These same ponds and wetlands are very important to tree frogs, toads and salamanders because they mate and lay their eggs in the water and the eggs hatch and develop there.

The survival of these small animals depends not only on the ponds' being there in the spring, but also on its drying up in the summer.

Some species that lay their eggs there are so well adapted to the wet and dry cycle of these temporary wetlands that their eggs may require the drying of the pond. Without it they don't survive.

All of the creatures that make use of temporary wetlands and ponds would be in trouble of another sort if those ponds became permanent. If water was present all year round, these areas would support aquatic predators such as water boatmen, damselflies and dragonflies, and fish. These could greatly reduce or even eliminate many of the other puddle dwellers.

If you want a demonstration of the abundance of life in these short-term wetlands, all you need to do is scoop up a jar full of water on a warm May day and examine it in good light. You'll probably see water fleas, aquatic mites and, with a little luck, some fairy or tadpole shrimp. Swish a large aquarium net through the water, and especially through any flooded grass, and you're sure to catch some of these creatures. Collect some of the bottom and you may scoop up some clam shrimp, too.

Bring some pond water indoors, put it in an aquarium, give it some light and let it warm up, and you'll see an impressive concentration of plant and animal life.

Of course, you don't have to do this to appreciate the population explosion going on in a nearby pond. Simply step outdoors on any mild May evening and you'll hear the frogs. The spring peepers are the earliest. They usually begin their spring song of "peep, peep, peep" in March or early April in southern Michigan. The chorus frogs chime in next. The most distinctive of these produces a rising trill that sounds like a fingernail running along the teeth of a plastic comb. Listen closely and you might hear the "chuck, chuck, chuck" of the tree frog. A little later, you can make out the constant trill of the common toad.

Much of the frog chorus on these spring nights comes from these vernal ponds. If these ponds existed all year round, predators would eliminate many of the frog and toad tadpoles.

The principle of changing to stay the same is true of many of the things we enjoy in nature — meadows, wetlands and forests. Periodic disturbance keeps them from evolving into something else. We don't have to have a forest fire to see this principle in action. We can see it in the vernal ponds that are part of nature from your backdoor.

Requiem for a friend

BY REG SHARKEY

I witnessed the death of a towering maple that already was a quarter of a century old when General George Armstrong Custer met his death on the Little Bighorn battling the Sioux under the leadership of Sitting Bull in the summer of 1876.

This venerable stalwart, according to the growth rings, had erupted through the forest mold around the year 1752, about a decade before our country was torn apart by the beginning of the Civil War.

Then, too, it must have been a mere sapling when the lumber barons made their devastating sweeps through the virgin stands of Michigan's vast forest lands.

Growth rings attested to the years of good and bad growth, closely spaced rings denoting adverse years of drought and temperature fluctuations, while more widely-spaced rings indicated opportune growing conditions, especially when rain was prevalent.

In 1928-30 the rings indicated very little growth. Could this have been indicative of the Dust Storm years when drought was prevalent over much of the land; when people as well as animal and plant life felt the tantrums of a ram-paging nature?

This 50-foot maple made a picturesque backdrop for our cedar-sided, ranch type home built on a bluff overlooking Crooked Lake.

But more importantly it was a resting and staging area for a myriad of wildlife. Birds from chickadees to a hunting goshawk perched on its widespread limbs; the seed eaters to ease the nearby bird feeders, and the raptor to launch a strike on an unsuspecting quarry.

Mother raccoons brought their broods to feed on handouts, then shepherded their charges to horizontal limbs where they would sleep away the day.

Flying squirrels used it nightly as a launching pad, flinging themselves from lofty heights to land with a thump near a feeder full of sunflower seeds.

Squirrels, too, scampered about its crown to harvest the hundreds of winged seeds before they broke loose and propelled to the ground.

We'll miss the muted roar of a winter storm racing through its stalwart limbs. We'll miss the beauty of bursting buds when spring comes again.

But its time had come. Unable to cope with an unvarnished disease, be it some sort of fungal epizotic, or possibly the results of acid rain, I signed its death warrant.

As I watched the tree removers expertly lopping off limbs, beginning at the crown, shearing them one-by-one, until only the spar (trunk) stood naked and silent. Then I witnessed the final coup de grace when the roar of the chain saw finally brought it crashing to the ground, and I swear I heard a final groan from the fallen woodland patriarch.

Now only a stump remains: a silent reminder that no earthly life is eternal.
