$5½ million budget OK'd by Boyne school board

Saying that the theme for this coming school year's budget was "Building our children's educational foundations for their and our tomorrows" Superintendent Bob Nakoneczny presented a balanced budget that calls for the school to have available to appropriate $5,579,146 for operation of the Boyne City schools.

The five million dollar plus budget will not all be spent, however, as the expenditures only only amount to $5,420,307 while the rest of the money available will be used to build back up the fund equity.

Nakoneczny told the board members what was in front of them for their approval was a working budget, the second that was done by the administration with the help and direction of the district wide budget planning and curriculum review committee. He said that without their support and confidence most of the curriculum improvements that are included in the budget would not have been possible. He thanked them for their many hours of work.

Nakoneczny also stated that when making comparisons between the proposed budget and what was spent last year, the public and the board would have to remember many of the items would not match-up as the school had such things as a limited amount of transportation and the administrative staff was not on board.

He said "The thrust this year will be to continue to follow the lead of our staff and community in the development of our curriculum through the leadership and direction of the Curriculum Council. They have done an excellent job thus far in setting our school district's course towards excellence."

Last year we focused on fundamentals. This school year we will continue to build upon the foundations established and will continue to strive toward keeping and building the communities confidence in their schools."

"Last year we focused on fundamentals. This school year we will continue to build upon the foundations established and will continue to strive toward keeping and building the community's confidence in their schools."

The budget shows that $5,142,572 will come from local taxes, while the state will be sending $81,079 to the district. Federal dollars coming in will amount to $130,192 while transfers and other transactions will bring another $66,464.

He said the district has about $158,839 left in unspent funds from the previous year.

On the expenditure sides of the budget, the basic programs take the largest share with $2,332,189. Employee benefits for teachers add another $433,675. Other benefits for support personnel add another $231,499 to the expenditure list.

In the debt retirement budgets, the school will be receiving $309,831 in revenue and will be spending $305,577. The debt retirement includes the paying for the school buildings, the repair bonds for the high school roof and the energy bonds the school was authorized to sell

WIAA starts airing from WIZY station

"We're on the air," said WIAA General Manager Thom Paulson last week. Although the Interlochen public radio station has been on the air for years, the signal to this area has not been very strong. Until this week, when the newest radio station, WIZY, went on the air repeating the signal of the Interlochen station.

The frequency allotted for the station is 100.0 on the FM dial. The frequency is a strong 3000 watt signal which should improve the quality and the number of listeners desiring to hear public radio in this area.

While this is a new station to add to the 29 others that are reaching listeners in this market, Paulson said that the other stations on this end of the dial are all commercial and are going to welcome the new non-commercial station.

"What we have done," he said, "is take up a frequency that some other commercial station could have used. This means that since we will not be soliciting advertising, we have filled a spot a potential competitor could have used." That, he added should make the other stations serving the area happy. The station went on the air early Sunday morning for testing, but is broadcasting the entire schedule of WIAA which includes most of the public radio and classical music material public stations are noted as carrying.

The Interlochen station purchased a new tower and installed it on Dutchman's Bay Road, about one-half mile from the towers that WKHQ and WCLX are using.

Tim Moore, the owner of WKHQ in Charlevoix said, "I am glad they are on the air. The area needs that type of radio and we were happy to have worked with them to get the station up here. It will really help out the WIAA signal in the Charlevoix and Emmet county area."

The present owner of WIZY, Gretchen Millich of Washington, D.C., signed an agreement to broadcast the WIAA signal. WIAA officials expect at some time in the future to purchase the station.

She received the rights to broadcast on that frequency several years ago from the Federal Communications Commission but until now, has not used the frequency for broadcasting.

Boyne schools to remove asphalt from MS playground

Plans for improving the middle school playground in Boyne City were presented to Boyne School Board members last Thursday, which would add considerably to the safety and use of the present playground, according to Russ Harvey, the presenter of the plan.

The playground is going to be developed in several stages, he told board members, with the first phase to include relocating the swing sets and playground equipment, adding additional basketball courts and backboards, provide a tennis/volleyball area, and add a grassed area for the playing of baseball and other sports activities.

The plan was created because of the deterioration of the playground over the years. Harvey also said that the present playground causes many problems with the students at the middle school as the larger students command the present courts and littler students don't have a chance to participate.

The new plan was wholeheartedly approved by the board members after the presentation.

The work to change the playground will be started as soon as the money is generated, much of it by donations to the school system. Harvey said they have already accumulated over $1000 for the project, thanks to donations from the P.M. Lions Club and the Rotary Club as well as others.

If enough money can be found, the first phase would start, possibly yet this summer Harvey added.

The first phase of the project calls for the removal of the present basketball nets, the repaving of an area that would then provide two basketball courts, each 50 feet by 65 feet, and the paving of the utility court, 36 feet by 78 feet.

The present asphalt would be cut and torn up and sod or grass would be started at the east end of the playground.

At some time in the future, the portable classroom would be moved to make room for the second phase of the plan which includes additional paving to make a four lane track around the outskirts of the present playground. The track would have a 300 foot straightway. Fencing would be added to allow service vehicles access to the school. While the track would not be more than paving with painted lines, it would be designed for the middle-schoolers.

Harvey said the plan would encourage multiple uses, preserve many of the present trees and add safety factors to the area.

Plans were presented showing how the Boyne Middle School playground will be remodeled. The present setting is in the solid lines while the new features were shown lighter. The plan calls for the remodeling to be done in stages as the school finds the money to do the work. Most of the asphalt will be cut and torn up to make way for grassed areas, two basketball courts and eventually a track.

Jordan River Arts Council gets building

BY LENORE BECHTEL

The key to the former Jordan Valley District Library building on East Jordan's Main Street changed hands Monday, June 26, as Jordan River Arts Council took a 3-year lease on the building.

Representing the arts council, John Richter presented Bob Herbon, president of the district library board, with a silver dollar, framed with a statement commemorating the occasion. The library board is leasing the building to the arts council for one dollar a year.

The 3-year lease is effective from June 1, 1989, to May 31, 1992, and the arts council will have the first option of renewal.

Richter said council members and volunteers will be working to get the building ready for occupancy. The council plans to offer traveling art exhibits in the building and to offer a wide variety of classes and workshops.

In May of 1988 when the library board offered a lease to an organization dedicated to the arts, Jordan River Arts Council was officially formed as an incorporated, tax-exempt organization. Bylaws requiring a 21-member board were adopted.

In spite of operating without a building, the council has offered several performing arts events in East Jordan, Mancelona and Bellaire, including a spring series and an upcoming series of free shows in parks.

Jottings

BY JIM SILBAR

The air was heavy with the smell of sulphur, and black powder. Every now and then a brilliant flash of light would make my eyes move. I almost felt like I should be hitting the deck when I saw those things. At the same time, I would hear a whistling noise almost every second.

But heck, I was only walking through the crowd at the Boyne City and East Jordan fireworks displays over the weekend.

I used to think fireworks were neat, especially when I was a kid shooting them off.

But now I am thinking the only fireworks that are neat, are the ones set off by the fire department or some professional company.

All the others are illegal. In fact, anything that goes up in the air is against the law.

But walking through the crowds you would never know it. It seems that every year, some people come up with some way to fire off a lot of bottle rockets, Roman candles, and even some aerial skyrockets.

They must all make trips to where they are legal to buy them and then they seem to all head to Boyne City and East Jordan to set them off.

In a crowd. Now I don't mind a few bottle rockets, I even marvel at the power these small things have. And I have shot off my share during my lifetime.

But I was never as thoughtless as some of the people I saw shooting them off in the crowds.

While most seem to go up in the air, you can never be absolutely sure they will do just that.

I can see some day, one of those things going off in a straight line about two feet off the ground.

And headed straight towards some innocent child whose parents brought them down to see the big fireworks display.

I sometimes wish our police departments had a staff of about a hundred or so officers who could go through the crowds and not just collect any that are found, but nail the inconsiderate to the ground with 45 inch spikes through the hands.

You would think those shooting off fireworks would be respectful of what they are playing with.

But, we humans seem to take a lot for granted — like fireworks that always go up in the air. Or don't have enough power to blow someone's hand off.

Yes, the newspapers seem to get filled with fireworks accidents about this time of the year.

And all of them could be eliminated.

First, that firecracker that was set off in a crowd, throws pieces of paper and clay when it goes off. That could hit someone in the eye or someplace else that could cause a permanent injury.

And the bottle rockets could

Erratum

Due to the constant deadline pressures, a cutline in last week's paper, saying Jerry Van Treese gave $3,000 to Boyne City Ambulance Heart Start Fund, was incomplete. Van Treese was representing the Boyne Area United Way in his capacity as president.

blow up in the bottle, spreading glass shrapnel for some distances from where it was lit off.

Possibly the big problems with all of the fireworks, including those sparklers, is that they are in essence, a controlled burn.

Some, like firecrackers burn real fast, with the fast burning causing gases which in turn, cause the noise.

Some burn slow, relatively speaking, and the escaping gases cause the device to go up in the air as the gases push it.

Still other just burn really slow, like sparklers. Slow enough to get a piece of wire red hot, a fast enough to cause a major burn on a human body when it touches the skin.

And the people who throw them are just throwing a red hot burning wire all over the park.

After they go out, I would hate to play in the park, or even work as the wires seem to be everywhere. Clogging up the mowers, causing injuries to bare footed children and adults, and are just too hard to find by the clean-up crews the next day.

That is why I was surprised and happy to see some company come up with what I call a sensible alternative.

That alternative is a flashlight with a bunch of plastic strnads that emits light out of the ends of the strand. The darned thing looks like a sparkler, acts like a sparkler and is a whole lot safer.

I applaud that particular company who thought it up and wish I could get the franchise 'cause I think it would be something millionaires are made from.

For the rest of the illegal fireworks, I wish all those who insist on firing them off, get smart enough to care about some of the others who may be seated nearby who don't want a trip to the nearest hospital to get a burn or something major taken care of.

Now if we could just find a way to make some noise on the Fourth without the use of fire, I think it would be great.

I remember talking with a promoter of rock shows several years ago who said he would get the greatest pleasure if he could book something like the Detroit Symphony in to a place like the Castle.

He quickly reminded me that if he did, he would go broke faster than a hot riff on a rockstar's guitar.

His dream was reinforced the other day when he booked to play at the Castle, a rock singer who happens to sing some songs with a religious bent.

The crowds, the same people who said put some good music acts on the stage, stayed away in droves. Whether or not he lost money on the concert is immaterial.

What it really did was cause his dream to fade away a little longer as he has said he can't afford to bring acts to this area that all of the family could attend without being offended.

He said he will have to be shown that "good" acts can draw the numbers needed to support good music.

Until that time, we will have to be content to have acts booked that only a teenager can stand.

But, if the people would support the good programs, that will change.

FIFTY YEARS OF ROTTEN ADVICE

While Marshall is in the hospital recovering from an appendectomy performed last week, we bring you one of his 1979 columns gleaned from our files.

"Don't eat those they'll make you sick!"

That was the advice given to me when I was picking cherries, in a nearby orchard to earn enough money to return to junior high school in the fall. The cherries had been sprayed with Paris green to kill the bugs or something.

I ate them anyway. One for my lug and one for my mouth, and I never got sick.

"You can't go swimming you just ate your dinner. If you go swimming on a full stomach, you'll get cramps."

I went anyway. Dove in, splashed and yelled in glee. No cramps.

"Come in out of the night air. You'll catch your death of cold."

I ran around the yard, fought with other kids, and layed on the wet grass to watch the stars fall. No catching cold.

"Don't put those cherries in your ice cream. You'll get sick as a dog."

The cherries went into the ice cream and I downed the whole thing. The next day I felt as fit as a fiddle.

"You boys and girls come out from behind that barn and stop that this minute. You'll go blind."

Instead of going blind our eyesight improved immeasurably.

"Look what you're feeding that kid! Beans, potatoes, bread.

All that starch will have an effect on him when he's older."

Ha! I grew up as abnormal as the best of them.

"My God, look what he's doing. He's putting his tongue on that cold railroad track. Hey, you! Stop that. Your tongue will stick to the track and you'll never get it off."

I licked the frost off the track and then stuck my tongue out wriggling it. The railroad track was still on the ground.

"Don't eat those green crabapples, you'll get terrible stomach cramps."

I ate four or five green apples.

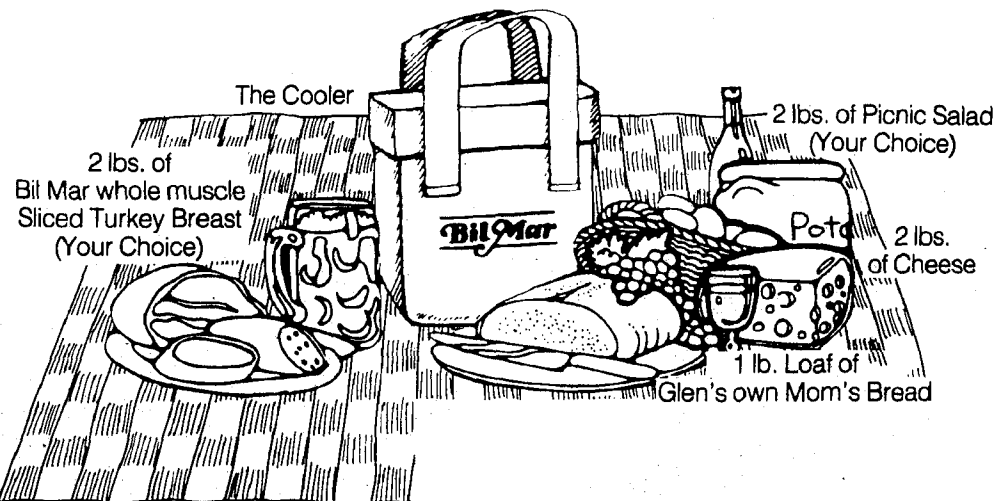

No stomach cramps.

I took the shots, two days later, I damned near died.

Poet Wooten brings unusual show to parks

People who think they don't like poetry invariably change their minds when they hear Terry Wooten recite. Wooten, who believes that poems are written to be heard, not read silently from a book, has an oral repertoire that brings poetry alive for listeners of all ages.

"Poetry and Whimsy" will be the theme of the program he's offering for Jordan River Arts Council at 7 p.m. Thursday, July 6, at Old City Park in Boyne City, and Friday, July 7, at East Jordan Memorial Park.

Wooten is good enough at what he does to earn his living as a poet, taking selections of Michigan folklore, poems of the Old West and Indian and Chinese translations to schools throughout the state.

His recitations are sprinkled with his own poetic creations, along with works of poets such as Ezra Pound, Robert Frost, Walt Whitman and the late Max Ellison, Michigan's own traveling folk poet, with whom Wooten apprenticed for five years.

His repertoire ranges from Jim Harrison's "I Owe the Dentist $900", Ogden Nash's "Custard the Dragon" and Woody Guthrie's "Riot on the Picket Line" to Chaucer's "The Prologue", Emily Dickinson's "A Bird" and Edna St. Vincent Millay's "The Buck In the Snow".

Wooten built and hosts the Stone Circle, on his farm outside Kewadin north of Elk Rapids, holding audience participation recitations starting at sunset every summer Saturday. His books of poems include "Got in an Argument Over Harmony", "The 45th Parallel", "Okeh" and "Words Wild With Bloom".

His Boyne City performance is funded by the Michigan Council for the Humanities, and his East Jordan performance by the Michigan Council for the Arts Touring Arts Agency.

Other events in the Jordan River Arts Council summer series of free shows will be:

*"Contemporary Folk Music" with Patty Clark and Blue Circle on Friday, July 14, at Mancelona's Palmer Park and Saturday, July 15, at East Jordan Memorial Park.

*"Clogging in Concert" with Peace Meal String Band and The Stepp Sisters on Friday, July 21, at East Jordan Memorial Park.

*"Hulas and Hoopla" with Pua Lei Dancers and Crazy Richard the Madd Juggler on Saturday, July 29, at East Jordan Memorial Park.

EJ writer's comedy on Old Town stage

What happens when a fun-loving, unorthodox hypnotist tries to help a man who thinks he's invisible, a punk rock singer who thinks she's being poisoned and an inept beauty whose greatest talent is enticing ogle? Then what happens when a scandal magazine reporter threatens to expose all?

The answer is the plot to Lenore Bechtel's two-act comedy, "Hocus-Pocus", that was read Wednesday, July 5, at Old Town Playhouse's studio theatre in Traverse City.

A cast of five men and five women read the play written by Bechtel, an East Jordaner who drew upon seven years' experience as a hypnosis program developer to plot the light-hearted comedy. Andrew Inman was director of the staged reading, followed by comments from two adjudicators and discussion from an audience forum.

Bechtel said because most movie and television portrayals demonstrate hypnosis inaccurately, she set out to write a play that would show the truth about how hypnosis works. The techniques used in the play by the main character, hypnotist Joshua Hope, include actual trance inductions and properly worded suggestions to affect behavior changes upon the recipients.

In "Hocus-Pocus", however, some of Joshua's suggestions backfire, resulting in a mess he must untangle to save his reputation.

Bechtel is a free lance writer and an award-winning journalist. She has been a teacher, a behavior counselor, a public relations consultant and a reporter for several newspapers. Most recently she is the East Jordan correspondent for Charlevoix County Press.

Navy Seaman Apprentice Ronald D. Cook, son of Michael D. and Helen M. Cook of East Jordan, recently participated in the New York City Fleet Week while serving aboard the frigate USS W.S. Sims, homeported in Mayport, Fla.

New York City Fleet Week is an annual celebration established by the state of New York in recognition of the U.S. Navy.

This year the event coincided with the bicentennial celebration of the inauguration of this country's first president. The celebration involved 11 Atlantic Fleet ships including two Coast Guard Cutters and over 3,000 visitors and New Yorkers.

The events included a parade formation of the ships, reenlistments aboard ship and in the Statue of Liberty, open house ship's visits, a commanding officer's reception, boat races, the Staten Island Pier Dedication, the future home of the USS Iowa Battle Group and an Anchor's Aweigh dinner dance.

A 1987 graduate of East Jordan High School, he joined the Navy in July 1987.

Budget

As in all budgets, the numbers are subject to change as the year develops.

In additional board action taken at the special meeting held June 28, the board authorized some year end adjustments to the budget, approved the purchase of custodial supplies, okayed the change in the insurance carrier of the workman's compensation insurance to the Michigan Association of School Boards Sep-Sig pool, and purchased a security system for the rooms containing computer equipment.

They also approved the hiring of Football Coach Jack Gebauer who will also become the middle school Resource Room head and a Special Education instructor.

They hired Pamela Cashen to help out in the administrative office and hired on a full-time basis, Glenda Craine, as the secretary for the high school.

They then set July 10 as the time of the first meeting for the new school year where they will elect new officers.

The board then discussed some of the goals they would like to complete next year.

Playground

Harvey said one area of the present facility has only had a base asphalt coat and has not seen any attention for the last 20 some odd years that he could think of.

Superintendent Bob Nakoneczny said the plan was just great, he had created a committee to look into the athletic facilities and this was the first plan the group had worked on developing.

With the board approval, the school system for the first time has a plan of attack that they will have to follow in order to develop the area.

Harvey said the committee will be purchasing the backboards for the courts and he has volunteers to install them as soon as the area is ready.

Those groups wishing to donate to the project are asked to contact the middle school principal's office or the school administrative office.

Meggison was chosen from among all the sailors assigned to the command, and was cited for his outstanding performance of duty, proficiency, leadership, initiative and military bearing.

Engaged? Making wedding plans?

The Press would like to print your announcement and picture

The Charlevoix County Press publishes engagement and wedding announcements without charge.

Pictures are welcomed, but we do suggest a few guidelines. Good quality black and white photographs, either of the couple or bride-elect are preferred. All photographs are kept on file in the Press office and may be picked up at any time following publication. Those pictures not picked up after six months will be discarded.

Wedding and engagement announcement forms are available at our office or will be mailed upon request and the receipt of a self-addressed stamped envelope.

While we try to publish each announcement the week that we receive it (and in the case of weddings, the first publication date following the ceremony), space constraints sometimes force us to delay the printing of the announcement for one or two weeks. Therefore, we ask that information be received at least two weeks before the intended publication so that we might better plan for its publication.

We will not accept wedding announcements received more than four weeks after the wedding.

"All I Ever Really Needed to Know I Learned in Kindergarten" is the long title for a short essay Unitarian minister Robert Fulghum presented to his Seattle congregation one Sunday morning. In scarcely more than 300 words he covered several lessons taught in that first classroom plus a few he learned through the justice served up in the kindergarten sandbox. Drawing from these early experiences, he suggests some standards that nations as well as individuals could decently and safely live by. His ideas led me to conjecturing about how things would go were national leaders in particular to follow them.

(To clear up any confusion, Fulghum wrote this essay and then the best seller book by the same title, which also includes this piece.)

Fulghum's Sunday speech follows the Golden Rule but adds some kindergarten teachings that most adults could handle. Some play each day as well as work, for instance, milk and cookies in the afternoon and a nap with your favorite blanket afterward.

While surely a healthy notion, the nap idea could disintegrate into a battle of the blankets if more aggressive leaders chose to compete on the basis of whose blanket was the most impressive. This could make nap time less than restful when competitors were gathered under the same roof in the afternoon.

The same could happen with the refreshments — competing over who had the best cookies — but the assets clearly outweigh the liabilities in this instance. Most cookies being noticeably crumbly, world leaders taking refreshments together couldn't maintain imperious postures with cookie crumbs on their faces and perhaps down their shirt fronts. Then too, drinking milk, hardly a regal beverage, doesn't go with a commanding air. These two great levelers, milk and cookies, could possibly ease international tensions a bit.

If three of Fulghum's kindergarten teachings were adopted by nations' leaders — not taking things that aren't yours, putting things back where you found them and cleaning up your own messes — a lot of ugliness in the world could be cleared up, on the surface at least. Cartographers would be the only losers, their services for drawing new lines on maps for ever changing national boundaries being called for considerably less often.

For safety's sake, Fulghum speaks of a matter stressed in early childhood — when going out into the world, especially in traffic, hold hands. He believes that this is a good practice no matter what your age.

Leaders holding hands with their foreign counterparts instead of clutching weapons would be tough to sell as a world-wide policy, the trust involved not being much present in international relations. But plenty of kindergartners would likely volunteer to explain how and why to do it.

Fulghum's standards are idealistic, granted, but they aren't unreasonable. They'd work too if every nation's leaders would enact them simultaneously. But until the time that such a miracle should happen, individuals could give them a try. Cookies and naps and respecting others' property wouldn't be hard. And holding hands anytime is a lovely idea no matter where you are.

United Technologies has centralized management of its product lines

To serve its worldwide customers more efficiently, the Automotive Products division of United Technologies Automotive (UTA) has centralized the management of its electromechanical and electronic product lines.

Thomas C. Wolanzyk has been named vice president and general manager — electromechanical and electronic products, with total responsibility for these product lines. Wolanzyk previously was senior vice president responsible for sales, marketing and engineering for electromechanical and electronic products.

Electromechanical and electronic components and systems account for about 20 percent of the Automotive Products division's (APD) sales. These include switches, relays and electronic modules and control circuits for applications such as remote keyless entry, anti-theft systems and power windows and door locks. UTA supplies these products to automotive manufacturers in North America and Europe, including Chrysler, Ford, General Motors, BMW and Honda.

"All aspects of these key product lines — including engineering, sales, marketing, manufacturing and quality — now are under Tom's leadership," said APD President Norman R. Bodine.

"This increased focus on the electromechanical and electronic product lines improves communication and efficiency, and allows us to better serve original equipment manufacturers at a time when products are being designed and brought to market faster than ever before."

Before joining UTA in 1980, Wolanzyk held various positions in engineering at General Motors Corp.

In a related appointment, Carl W. Peach has been named director of manufacturing — electromechanical and electronic products for APD's North American operations. Reporting to Wolanzyk, he oversees manufacturing operations in Boyne City and Traverse City, MI; Kenton and Zanesville, Ohio; St. Matthews, S.C.; and Tampa, Fla.

Peach formerly directed all APD manufacturing in Ohio. He joined UTA's wire assembly operation in 1965 and served as manufacturing manager of its Ohio operations for 10 years before being named director of those operations in July 1986.

In addition to the six plants in the United States and one in Spain, UTA's electronic/electromechanical product line is supported by offices and engineering centers in North America; Koln, W. Germany; and Tokyo, Japan.

United Technologies Automotive, based in Dearborn, Mich., is a supplier of systems, subsystems and components to the worldwide automotive industry. It is a unit of United Technologies Corporation of Hartford, Conn., which provides a broad range of high-technology products and support services to the aerospace, building systems and automotive industries.

Cooking

Honey is as old as time. It is referred to often in the Old Testament. In early Bible times their unleavened bread was eaten with honey, and honey was used to sweeten wine which had been diluted with 5 parts of water for the table beverage. From Proverbs, "Eat honey, for it is good, and the drippings of the honeycomb are sweet to your taste."

This reminds me of how good that comb honey tasted which my father brought home when he did the shopping. Honey eaten from the comb had no comparison with strained honey. I remember how I chewed on the honeycomb until all of the sweetness was gone. I wonder now why things never taste that good anymore. Maybe it is because in our affluent society we have so much that we do not take the time to savor the abundant produce which is given to us. So let's enjoy our honey. Make this simple dip the next time you have fried chicken in any form.

HONEY DIP

1/2 cup honey
2 teaspoons lemon juice
Measure honey into a glass measure. Add lemon juice. Microwave on HIGH 45 to 60 seconds, until hot. Serve with chicken.

Let us not forget to season our vegetables with honey; it brings out the flavor in many like these.

HONEY GLAZED CARROTS

Slice 8 to 10 medium carrots very thin. Place 3 tablespoons butter and 1 tablespoon of water in a heavy 8 inch skillet. Add carrots, sprinkle with one teaspoon and cover tightly. Stirring occasionally, simmer over low heat about 12 minutes or until tender. Drizzle with 1 tablespoon honey and top with minced parsley. 4 to 6 servings.

We can perk-up those late winter vegetables this way using the microwave.

HONEYED WINTER SQUASH
2 lbs. acorn, butternut, hubbard or other winter squash peeled and cut into 1 inch squares, (the butternut is the easiest one to peel and cut) about 4 cups.
6 tablespoons butter or margerine
1/5 cup honey
1/2 teasp. rubbed sage
1/2 teasp. salt
1/4 teasp. pepper

Combine all ingredients in a 2 qt. glass casserole. Cover and microwave on high 13 to 15 minutes or until tender stirring twice. Let stand 3 minutes before serving.

Or prepare your squash this way; using a regular oven. Halve the squash and remove the seeds, place cut side down on a pan and bake at 375° to 400° until tender. Then add the honey butter and seasonings. Return to the oven for another 10 minutes.

Yesterday, I made this honey cake. There are so many references to honey cakes in the Bible that I thought I needed to bake one. This can be made in the microwave, however I used a regular oven. There is a choice of spices so use your favorites; I used cinnamon, mace and all-spice and when I sampled it when warm I thought that the spices were a little overpowering, unlike today when the cake was cold and the spicy flavors seemed just right. This is more like a bread than cake-delicious with creamed cheese or a little butter. As a dessert, serve a slice with whipped topping and a red cherry on top.

HONEY CAKE

3 eggs, separated
Grated peel of 1 orange
Grated peel of 1 lemon
1/2 cup honey
4 tablespoons melted butter or margerine
3/4 cup flour
1 teaspoon ground cinnamon
1 teaspoon nutmeg or mace
3/4 teaspoons baking powder
1/2 teaspoon baking soda
1/8 teaspoon salt

In a very clean and dry 2 qt. bowl, beat egg whites until stiff peaks form. Set aside.

In a separate 2 qt. bowl, beat egg yolks and grated peels until yolks thicken slightly. Stir in honey and melted butter. Add flour mixed with the spices, baking powder, soda and salt and beat until thoroughly blended. Fold in egg whites.

Pour batter into a well greased loaf pan. Bake at 350° for 30 to 35 minutes until nicely browned and a toothpick inserted in center comes out clean. Let stand for about 5 minutes before removing from pan.

"And the house of Israel called the name thereof Manna; and it was like coriander seed, white; and the taste of it was like wafers made with honey."

BEE HIVES

P.S. - Here is a "honey" of a tip. When making your favorite bran muffins line the pans with this mixture:

1/4 cup brown sugar
1/4 cup shortening
2 tablespoons honey
This will be enough to coat 8 muffin tins. Cream brown sugar, shortening and honey and line the muffin tins. Fill the pans one-half full with your muffin batter and bake 15 to 17 minutes or until a golden brown. Remove from pans while hot, the best way to do that is to invert the pan onto a rack.

I used a 7 oz. Jiffy muffin mix and it was enough for 8 delicious muffins.

Think snow!

BY REG SHARKEY

Stymied! Yep, every once in awhile — even after writing outdoor columns for over thirty years — my mind goes blank, and as a deadline nears the panic light goes on.

So, bear with me as I write this column on a hot, humid day, the first one of summer.

And my mind wanders back to a part of my World War II tour of duty on the Gold Coast of Africa, now called Ghana, just a few degrees from the equator.

After leaving the wet coldness of December at Allied Headquarters in Caserta, Italy, flying down to Accra on the then Gold Coast for rest and light duty, I experienced the same type of weather conditions we've had in this third week of June, day after day.

Being a native Michigianian, I soon hankered for a spell of the cracklin' cold of my home state.

As I sat drinking warm British beer at the bar of a corrugated tin lashup, called the Sea View Hotel, listening to a black man by the name of Sam tinkling out "White Christmas" on an out of tune piano, I imagined the feel and nip of near zero temperatures; of walking through the snow, squeaking underfoot with each stride; of reading the prints of wildlife going about the business of survival; of seeing those of a whitetail deer wandering from bush to bush nipping twigs to fill an empty stomach; of seeing the dainty dimpled tracks of a scurrying white-footed mouse and a drop of blood framed by wing tip imprints where Bubo the great horned owl snatched up a midnight snack.

Of standing on a hill, looking down into a winter bound swamp, the snow sparkling like a field of cut diamonds; of hearing the silence; of breathing deep until the cold-chilled lungs objected to the frigid invasion; and of exhaling in a cloud of vapor.

Of turning homeward, arriving refreshed, thankful once again that I was from the land of changing seasons, hoping that someday I would be able to go home to Michigan to once more enjoy the exhilaration of a frigid, sunshine-filled winter day, there to forget about the monotony of heat and humidity, day after day.

And so it is on this "Gold Coast" weather day I salute winter: Long may it survive, and long may I enjoy it.

So, think winter! It's not against the law, nor is it sinful.

Every native of the Great Lakes State knows that snow scenes like this one abound in northern Michigan. On hot summer days, just meditating on a snowy landscape like the one above could cool you off a few degrees.

Viking yachts to visit Boyne City next week

About 45 to 50 Viking yachts will be making Boyne City their home for a few days next week as the Eighth Annual Great Lakes Viking Rendezvous will be held with the boats staying at the Harborage and City Marinas.

The yachts, which range from 35 to 63 feet in length, will be tying off each other and the crews will find plenty of activities for them on shore between July 11 and July 13.

Other rendezvous have been held at Mackinac City, Cedar Point, St. Clair Shores and the Catawba Island Yacht Club.

The yachts, all motor yachts, are built in New Jersey with world wide distribution. The rendezvous is partially sponsored by the Viking Yacht Company.

The events include cocktail parties, sponsored by the manufacturer of the boats, a pig roast, two nights of entertainment with the Jelly Rolls Blues Band and the Epsilon Jazz Band, a fishing contest, and a tour of the area going to Harbor Springs.

HOW WOULD RISING ENERGY DEMAND, FALLING INTEREST RATES AND INDUSTRY MERGERS AFFECT UTILITY STOCKS?

FIND OUT AT OUR FREE SEMINAR.

Our research analysts see these as three compelling reasons why selected utility stocks, and electric utility stocks in particular, offer compelling investment value today.

Demand for electricity in this country has increased 20% in the last five years, and is expected to continue to rise.

Utility stocks have historically outperformed the broader market in times of declining interest rates. Right now, we believe interest rates have peaked.

And we believe the wave of mergers and consolidation in the utility industry — as evidenced by the 14 transactions proposed or consummated over the last 18 months — has only begun.

Come hear the views of Shearson Lehman Hutton's Senior Utility Analyst and Sr. Vice President Edward J. Tirello. Find out how you can take advantage of today's favorable outlook for the utilities industry.
