

Another successful sidewalk sale

With the juggler Tom Tropic along with many other groups displaying their talent, shoppers had a great time finding bargains and enjoying the day during the annual Boyne City Sidewalk Sale. Perhaps the best job to have during the day was riding the bench on the senior class dump tank. Those who did, got many chances to cool off when they hit the water. Taking the winnings at the first pizza eating contests sponsored by Lena's Pub were Donny Richards, 10 and under; Mark Stryjewski, 11 to 15; and Greg Williams, 16 and over.

BC requesting $40,000 grant for public restrooms

Boyne City decided at its noon meeting that they will go after a grant from the new Quality of Life Bond Grant program, now that rules have been outlined by the State of Michigan.

The grant application would be for the building of a new bathroom facility next to and tied in with the present pump lift station located near the mouth of the Boyne River.

Plans call for an 18 by 24 foot building that would tie in with the size of the lift station, if the grant is approved.

The grant application is expected to be sent in yet this week and is asking for money from the bonding authority between $40,000 and $70,000.

The city's share would be about $5,000 if the $40,000 grant is approved.

The only hitch in the grant discussion was that the building will not be of Victorian design. According to City Manager Randy Frykberg, the Victorian look would add drastically to the building. He had estimates running to about $70,000.

Frykberg told the commissioners the city is going to need the additional restrooms as the present restroom at the Chamber of Commerce building is not adequate. He said the city has been considering some sort of restroom facility for many years.

Of the locations discussed as to where the building would be located, the commissioners settled on the location that would tie in Boyne City Commissioners approved going for a grant which would, if approved by the state, allow the city to construct new public restroom facilities next to this building, a lift station located on Lake Street near the mouth of the Boyne River. The city cited the need for the restrooms saying that the present public restroom at the Chamber of Commerce office is inadequate for the needs of the community.

City Commissioner Thelma Behling told the rest of the commissioners that the city could not afford a Victorian building and they should settle for something that would look like the present lift station but that could be dressed up with some landscaping.

Commissioner Sandra Stanley tried to get the other commissioners to spend a little more money and make the building comply with the Victorian guidelines the city planning board had adopted recently saying that it would add to the look of the city.

After the meeting, Frykberg said that if the Victorian look was the one the commissioners wanted, it would have taken a higher roofline than what he thought the community wanted along the waterfront.

Commissioner Bill Grimm made the motion to go for the grant and limited it to the smaller amount which means the city will be building a restroom facility that is not Victorian. "We just can't afford Victorian at this time," Behling added.

The building is going to be slightly larger than the Victorian styled building located at Peninsula Beach. The larger size is to allow the city to tie in architecturally with the lift house.

The grants are expected to be announced next spring which would allow the city to begin construction next summer if the grant is approved.

In other action, the commissioners approved the setting up of public hearings that would allow special assessment districts for the cost of paving LacVue Drive, Franklin Street and River Ridge Lane. The hearings are going to be held at the monthly evening meeting of the Boyne City Commission, August 8 at 7:00 p.m. The meeting will be held at Litzenburger Place.

Another thing that was considered was establishing a sprinkler ban on odd/even days based on the need to conserve water and help give the pumps a rest.

But, after looking at how much the pumps are working, about 65 percent of capacity, the city administration asked that the ban not be considered at this time.

They instead asked that the city administration be given the power to institute a ban if needed. Frykberg suggested that the city would have the ban only if the dry spell continues and the pumps are having to work at capacity to maintain a reserve of water in case of an emergency.

BC schools borrowing while awaiting tax monies

With a very short special meeting Monday night, members of the Boyne City School Board approved the borrowing of $1,200,000 at a rate of 6.10 percent and hired a new fifth grade teacher for the middle school.

The borrowing of money will allow the school system to function while they wait for the tax monies to start coming in, sometime around next February.

They will then pay off the note to the only bank that sent in a bid for the funds, Michigan National Bank.

The teacher hired was Mark Arneel, a teacher with three years of middle school experience in Frisco, Colorado and hopes to help coach in the middle school program.

Arneel grew up in Traverse City and was the first of his family not to follow ski racing. His father said his interests were in basketball and other sports.

Frisco is located in Summit County Colorado, the home of many nationally known ski resorts.

WIAA Public Radio's "Campaign for Excellence" is a success

WIAA-FM Interlochen Public Radio celebrated the success of Campaign for Excellence 1989 on Saturday, July 15 at 9 p.m. precisely, as a final phone pledge attained the $170,000 goal of the 10th annual fundraiser.

"We've been told over and over there is just no comparison of this station to other stations," noted WIAA General Manager Thom Paulson, "but we can tell you there is no comparison among public radio audiences to this one. There are so many people involved in this station - of course there is the staff that's here, but there are now well over 3,500 other people who are directly involved in this station, more than as a listener. We have thousands more who are listeners, but now there are more than 3,500 people who are involved financially in this station, and that's a record."

Indeed, this year's campaign welcomed some 320 first-time contributors, who invested a total of $17,839 in WIAA. These new pledgers represented nearly 32% of the 1,008 callers whose support made the campaign successful. This vital sign of growth was doubtless influenced by a number of factors: the recent availability of a quality WIAA signal in the Charlevoix, Petoskey and Harbor Springs area via 100.9 FM; the 1:1

News Briefs

Don't Waste Michigan-Northern Michigan Chapter will be coming to Boyne City for a meeting at 7 p.m. Thursday, July 27, at the Boyne City Hall Commissioners Chambers. The meeting will include a report by Dr. Gerald Drake on his recent attendance at a national environmental meeting. The steering committee will be meeting at 6:30 p.m. to hear reports on what northern Michigan members are doing.

The annual lake swim which goes from Young State Park over to Whiting's Park will be taking place by about 30 members of the Boyne City Swim School August 16th. The one and a third mile swim will require several boats to accommodate the group. Volunteers are asked to call the Director, Carol Goodenough at 582-7042.

Top O' Michigan Rural Electric Company will be holding its annual meeting for all members August 12 at the cooperative's headquarters in Boyne City. Up for election are members of the board of directors. Refreshments will be offered and a chance to hear Jim Hough, a rural electric member from the U.P. who was a former correspondent for the Lansing State Journal.

Embroidered in the center of the controversy over the development of additional marina slips at the Boyne City Marina, the marina sits waiting for the Department of Natural Resources to develop plans for an experimental breakwall. The DNR would not okay the expansion without the breakwall so the entire project is on hold until plans are developed by the state. In the meantime, the project has come under fire from the County Planners who thought the number of slips that were going to be involved in the project would be about the same. The city had applied for additional slips as they planned on moving some slips from the presently city-owned slips at the Harborage Marina over to the City Marina. They were also planning on expanding to be able to serve additional boats with the development of the breakwall. Those plans are expected from the DNR any day, according to City Manager Randy Frykberg. He added that the present permit which allows for the project will have to be modified or changed so that the breakwall is included. If the plans come through from the DNR, then the project would have to be approved by them. Construction, which was to start sometime this fall, has also been delayed until next spring when both the breakwall and the expanded marina are scheduled to start construction in order to be completed by the boating season next summer.

Boyne City families sought for high school exchange students

Pacific Intercultural Exchange (PIE), is looking to find several families in the Boyne City area to host their high school exchange students that are arriving this August. These students, travelling to the United States from Spain, Germany, Japan, Argentina and Brazil, will spend an academic year in Michigan studying in local high schools. For most, it will be their first trip to Michigan, perhaps to the United States.

The participants, all between the ages of 15-18 years, are fully insured and will bring their own spending money. Host families are asked to provide only room and board during the program. By hosting for PIE, a non-profit, tax-exempt organization, each family is allowed to take a $50 per month tax deduction.

Founded in 1975 and licensed by the United States Information Agency, PIE has sponsored more than 10,000 exchanges. The organization credits as the foundation for their success the extensive network of volunteer representatives who care for the students and the families during the year.

The program is quick to emphasize that there is no such thing as a typical host family. Working together with those interested in hosting, PIE has successfully matched students with single parent families, retired couples and couples with young children. The key factors in a successful exchange are love and a genuine interest by all parties in hosting.

Families interested in learning more about student exchange and the opportunities in hosting are encouraged to contact PIE at 616-527-0012 or 1-800-245-6232.

Jottings

BY JIM SILBAR

I think that the East Jordan Snowmobile clubs and the snowmobile council ought to petition the State of Michigan's DNR to rename the Jordan Valley Snowmobile trail.

That's right. Rename it.

Rename it for the person who has done years of work supporting the trail, developing it, promoting it, and keeping it one of the best trails in the state.

Of course I am talking about former City Council Woman Ellen Cihak, who was also one of the important members of the snowmobile council.

I think I knew her more as the snowmobiler than as a councilwoman, although she was about as vocal doing both positions.

Always looking at the future of the community and trying to promote it to a higher level.

I don't know if the two clubs and the council are planning on doing anything, but I would like to suggest the renaming idea.

It could be called the Ellen Cihak Jordan Valley Snowmobile Trail.

It would also be fitting remembrance for the work she did over the years to promote the area and the sport.

I just learned something else while reading some of the stuff that passes for information that should be published by some government agency. It seems that every other piece of mail that the post office delivers is from some governmental agency, some elected official, or some pseudo-agency that gets government funding.

The latest information, just a minute while I dig it out of the round file next to my desk, is that the Veteran's Affairs Department has been able to get the President's ear since it acquired a spot on the cabinet.

That made me wonder what would happen if the common, ordinary, American taxpayer really had a chance to get the President's ear.

The first thing they would have to do is figure out what to do with it.

Should they put it in some freak show? Like in a bottle of formaldehyde so then everyone who pays the one thin quarter could talk to it.

Then you too, could get the President's ear.

I have discovered that you really need to get the President's ear if you really want to promote some idea nationally.

Just talking with your local congressman or senator doesn't get the job done as well as it should.

Of course you would have to stand in line to get a chance to talk to his ear, there would be thousands also standing in line who also want the chance.

And by the time you get up to the ear, you should shout or else talk loudly.

That's because you want to have yourself heard over the thousands of others who also want to have a chance at his ear.

And probably, you shouldn't talk about lowering the taxes. The ear has heard that story many times before and like ads on a radio, has tuned it out when voices start speaking.

You should talk about something the ear can do something about. What that may be, I don't know only because you are not talking into my ear. Those thoughts and words should be for his ear only.

But that leads to other thoughts.

If the President is missing an ear, like Van Gogh, what would his Presidential Press Conference be like? Or better yet, what would his chances of being re-elected be when the people of the United States want perfection in their leaders.

Then again, sometimes I think our legislators have no ears at all, so it probably would not make any difference.

How many times can it be said that someone's idea for better government fell on deaf ears? It may be too many to write the number. And if everyone who wanted to get a chance to talk to the President's ear had that opportunity, then he would probably have deaf ears also.

I guess that is the fate of the common ordinary taxpayer. To do as they say and not do as you want.

Like some of the laws that are being passed are being written to legislate taxpayers out of existence. It makes you wonder if everyone who was paying taxes stopped working so they would not have to pay income taxes. Let's say that 50 percent of the people of the state, for instance, stopped sending money to the state or the feds. Do you think it would be enough to sway the thinking of Lansing and or Washington?

Maybe it would, and the state would have to stop funding social programs for the indigent, would have to stop funding for government workers, would have to just about shut down the system because they aren't getting enough money to operate in the manner they would like.

Maybe those in government could then hear the complaints and ideas of the taxpayers.

Remembrances

Back in 1954, the H and T Superette opened its doors. The business prospered and ended up moving to where the Glen's Market is today. The building has undergone many different businesses from the recent Sears store to a furniture business and finally today, Kulka Sales, a machinery company that located a northern Michigan office in Boyne City last year. This picture is from John Hawkes, one of the principals in the Superette, who brought this picture to share with our readers. If you have any pictures of the "Early Days", bring them to our office where we can copy them.

Marshall Sayles

Happy summer's day to all.

Two things coming up next week should be mentioned here.

One is a New Moon to be seen on Tuesday night if you are out and about looking for something besides the exciting nightlife on Water Street.

The other, and far more foot stomping event, is the Friday, Saturday and Sunday presentation of the Boyne Falls Polish Festival.

If you are not a Polack, you are still invited just so long as you bring money and can dance a jig.

Some people do not realize that the festival is one of the largest whoop-tee-dos in northern Michigan. In past years police have guessed over ten thousand people attended.

When I was a kid, I saw a whoop-tee-do in Boyne City that was extremely illegal. Night cops of the time were so scared they ran and hid in north Boyne until the noise and nonsense lay exhausted in the streets.

The Boyne Falls whoop-tee-do is legal and one should have no fear of going over and grabbing ahold of whatever excitement they can, as long as she does not threaten to sue.

Now, keep on reading or you will be ignorant of what's coming up next.

By next I mean Boyne City's annual Antique Auto Show and Flea Market. The dates are Saturday and Sunday, August 12 and 13. I know this because I phoned up the Chamber and its Commerce. They swore that these dates were correct. They didn't really swear, but what they did say that their information would hold water. And I say the Auto Show will be held at city park across from one of the better restaurants in Boyne City.

The scene changes: Before my recent unpleasantness, I owed my robust health and rich olive complexion to the fact that I had hired someone to mow the lawn for me.

But hold. Here's what happened before that:

Wife: How come you haven't fixed the lawn mower?

Me: I tried my best. It's just that I have somehow failed being a mechanic.

Wife: You like to somehow fail. That's an excuse for not mowing the lawn.

Me: No it ain't. It is better to have tried and failed than never to have failed at all.

Wife: You have a certain questionable wisdom that puzzles my thinking.

All I heard was the word "wisdom". It kind of perked me up. I haven't mowed the lawn since.

More change of scene: I've been watching more television during my recovery from knives and medicine. Most of it isn't good stuff, but it beats looking out the window.

I can tell you one thing. Grandmothers and grandfathers would never have accepted today's television fare. In their day the immodest were walking down the primrose path.

For television to survive there had to be change in programming. It came when advertisers discovered that "restraint don't sell". Today things once whispered behind grandmothers' backs are hyped openly. We've blackedtopped the primrose path and opened the gates to let the good times roll. It's like letting the Devil walk

Detroit artist/critic named as Portside juror

Detroit News art critic Joy Hakanson Colby will select this year's Portside Art Fair winners which will be purchased to join the permanent collection housed in the Portside Art and Historical Society Museum at Elm Pointe, just north of East Jordan.

Announcing Colby as juror for the purchase prize entrants, East Jordan art matriarch Cygred Riley expressed delight at that the award-winning artist will be joining the ranks of notable artists who've juried the event in past years.

Past jurors include such well known artists as watercolorist Charles Culver, sculptor Walter Midener, all-media artist Peggy Midener and painter Richard Kozlow, who recently completed a mural for the new Library of Michigan in Lansing.

Colby, who has been art critic and feature writer for The Detroit News for 35 years, has served on the art advisory panel for the Michigan Council for the Arts. She is listed in both "Who's Who in America" and "Who's Who in American Art".

A Wayne State University graduate with a bachelor of fine arts, Colby studied drawing with Sarkis Sarkisian and pursued an independent study of art history in Italy, Belgium, Holland, France and England.

Author of "Art and a City", a history of the arts and crafts movement in Detroit, she originated the Detroit Institute of Arts exhibit on that theme.

As Portside Art Fair juror, Colby will select both a painting and a craft for purchase prizes, which will be placed in the Cygred Riley Gallery in the museum on Elm Pointe's premises. Riley was sole organizer of the prestigious art fair for its first 25 years and continues to recruit jurors for the yearly purchase prize contest.

Artist entering their works in the competition have already had their work juried to gain acceptance as an exhibitor at Portside, which is limited to 100 artists. The wide range of exhibits include watercolors, oils, acrylics, pen and ink sketches, collages, pottery, sculpture, glass, jewelry and soft sculpture.

This 27th year of the art fair has 96 exhibitors, according to Nancy Carey, one of a five-member committee organizing the event which will take place at Elm Pointe on Saturday and Sunday, August 5 and 6. Other committee members are Ann Dingman, Lynn Carson, Laura Hansen and Pattie Hodge.

This year's fair, which includes many first-time exhibitors, also features a Saturday night concert for the first time. In conjunction with the Jordan River Arts Council, the Northwood Orchestra will present a pops concert, "Serenade of Stage and Screen", at 7 p.m. Saturday, August 5, in Elm Pointe's picnic area. Tickets ($8.25 individual, $27.50 family) are available at stores and chambers of commerce throughout Charlevoix, Antrim and Emmett counties.

No admission is charged from 11 a.m. to 7 p.m. Saturday and from noon to 5 p.m. Sunday. Elm Pointe is on M-66 just north of East Jordan.

USDA's Conservation Reserve Program applications available

USDA's Conservation Reserve Program, (CRP) opened for the ninth time July 17 through August 4, 1989.

The program removes eligible cropland from crop production for 10 years and places it into conserving uses. It authorizes rental payments and up to 50 percent of the cost of placing the land into trees, grass or other permanent vegetative cover.

To apply for the program, farmers must submit bids for rental payments on the designated acres and provide a cropping history covering the years 1981 to 1985. Producers who farm erodible land or have wet soils are urged to consider the CRP for these acres, and submit bids during the July 17 - August 4 sign-up period.

For further details contact either the Charlevoix or Emmet County ASCS Office.

And now for the latest word from the field of mental health — it's O.K. for parents to be happy. Really. In fact it's more than O.K.; it's good, good for the whole family, kids included. What a concept.

This theory comes from respected family psychologist and syndicated newspaper columnist John Rosemond, who's written a book entitled "John Rosemond's Six-Point Plan for Raising Happy, Healthy Children".

Rosemond says that the current unhappy state of most parents can be laid at the door of the child-rearing experts who have turned the process of raising children into heavy duty mental work plus a lot of indulging the kids at the expense of their parents.

Rosemond knows and names who started all this nonsense too, none other than the fountain of childrearing wisdom, Dr. Benjamin Spock. That Spock has changed his mind on some of his original child-rearing ideas, Rosemond gives him no credit for and clearly hasn't forgiven Spock the damage that he and his followers have done either.

Elaborating further on this indulgence business, besides giving children unhealthy precedence over parents, Rosemond says that it produces "self-centered, self-indulgent, spoiled, sassy and out of control kids". (In light of this graphic description, it can be fairly safely assumed that Rosemond knows some such children and doesn't much care for them.)

As for putting a lot of thinking time into parenting, that doesn't impress him much either. He figures that gut feeling and common sense work better than long hard thought, those two plus sensitivity to the parents' needs and those of the children, in that order.

This sounds like throwing out all the modern experts' theories and following your own heart and intuition in bringing up children, and that's just what Rosemond has in mind. He figures that our grandparents did a great job of raising their young, that's how they did it, so why not do the same.

He does offer one new idea. He suggests that the parents' role is to help children assemble a picture of the way the world works. This involves helping children shatter their illusions, destroy their fantasies. This is tough duty and a tough way to put it, but it makes sense.

Something parents don't have to do but many do or try to do anyway (thereby shooting themselves in their collective foot) is make choices for their children, such as whom to choose as friends and what to do after school. If children don't learn to make choices for themselves, they can't grow up to be independent adults. And heaven knows, adolescent convictions to the contrary, that this is the goal parents strive for, long for every bit as earnestly as their young.

But Rosemond's theory that people can combine parenting with happiness is his most cheering. He even goes so far as to say that kids can't be truly happy unless their parents are. Happy parents, happy children, both at the same time. What a lovely concept.

matching gifts for first-time pledges, and, most importantly, the legacy of stewardship, as young listeners joined their parents to care for their public radio station.

There were a substantial number of listeners who called in a second time to increase their pledges, as the WIAA audience battled the clock during challenge pledge periods. And, new this year, some challenge pledgers offered to match, dollar for dollar, donations called in to the station during the playing of the challenger's selection of music.

Another pledge of interest came from composer/keyboard artist Bob James, who challenged the station's music experts to identify his own composition in the style of Scarlatti, masquerading among the genuine Scarlatti works recorded on Mr. James' new album. Byron Hanson, Resident Conductor of the Interlochen Arts Academy Orchestra, searched through over 500 Scarlatti scores and successfully identified the cleverly composed imposter.

The pledges called in during the one week fundraiser, combined with donations sent in by mail directly before and during the campaign totalled $170,879, with listeners continuing to call in even after the $170,000 goal was attained.

One part of my mind says afternoon soap operas are racing toward the everlasting bonfire; the other side is inclined to say, "Let her rip."

I do, however, have some scruples fluttering around in the hind part of my head. They show up in a soap opera when a man and woman walk toward the bedroom. That's when I give a forty-nine cent shriek and turn the dang thing off.

Now that I am taking lessons on how to be old, I have discovered how to tell whether or not a man is retired. It's simple. Watch the way he walks down the street.

Rear seat lap/shoulder safety belts now required

On June 12, the National Highway Traffic Safety Administration (NHTSA) announced that die each year in automobiles will be required to provide rear-seat lap and shoulder belts in new cars sold in the United States, effective in six months.

NHTSA said the action will provide added crash protection for back-seat passengers, and represents another milestone in the ongoing program to promote vehicle occupant safety.

Manufacturers always equip many new-car lines with rear-seat lap and shoulder belts, and indicate that virtually all 1990 models will be so outfitted. Many manufacturers have made similar commitments for light trucks and vans during the next few model years.

The new NHTSA final rule assures 100% coverage of the new car fleet, and establishes minimum technical requirements for belt systems. Today's action make the United States one of the first major vehicle-producing nations in the world to require rear-seat lap and shoulder belts by regulation.

NHTSA said its decision reinforces the importance of increased safety belt use, evident in recent years as the public has become more safety conscious. Front seat safety belt use rose from 11% in 1982 to an all-time high of 47% today, stimulated by 33 states and the District of Columbia, as well as extensive public education efforts.

Rear-seat safety belt use is lower but the trend is upward - from less than 2% in 1982 to 16% now. NHTSA predicted that the back-seat usage rate will continue to climb because of state laws (five states now require back seat safety belt use) and the positive effects of front-seat safety belt

Bounty hunter

BY REG SHARKEY

Yes sir, as a younker back in the days of moonshine and blind pigs, I was a bounty hunter.

Although I didn't collect wild scalps or catamount hides, alias cougar, I did manage to keep in ammunition for my trusty single shot Kin BB gun by bounty hunting.

At the time sparrows — those English imports — had a 2¢ bounty on their feathered heads. Black-birds, those beady-eyed long-tailed critters, were worth a nickle, and when you graduated to a crow, or brought in the head of a woodchuck to the county clerk you were in "clover" with a fifty cent piece resting in an overall pocket, and you moved up to a big game hunters status. Course crows and chucks didn't fall to the weak plunk of those spring-charged BB guns. We trapped chucks, and crows usually became the victims of the bigger boys and their 22s.

Sparrows were plentiful for horses were still the main furnishers of transportation and farm work.

Livery stables had plenty of nags producing their share of manure. We called them road apples.

It was no trick to waylay sparrows digging partially digested grain from those "apples" and many a feathered scavenger fell dead over his steaming repast.

Then there were the grist mills where farmers and their grain milled for livestock feed and also to have wheat milled for flour. They were a bounty hunters paradise, and mill owners were only too glad to get rid of the indiscriminate defecators.

Then, too, sparrows were hazards to some of the buildings of the day. That's according to some of the tales heard at the time.

One story that made the rounds was that sparrows weren't above carrying a discarded, still smoldering cigarette butt to be added to nest building material tucked in the crevices of a hay loft or other farm buildings.

Bounty hunting became an obsession, and in due course, I became a deadeye Dick, chalking up as high as twenty sparrows a day. Any sparrow within range of my gun usually fell victim to its carelessness.

When all of us bounty hunters had a goodly number of sparrow heads, or grackles, strung up on a piece of haywire we'd go to the county clerk's office to get paid off.

Sometimes by the time we hove to at the clerk's office the heads were beginning to smell, and the clerk at the time, Barney Laisure (Mecosta County), would pay us off in a hurry so he could deposit the odoriferous lot in the back door garbage can.

One time a couple of us pulled a trick on Barney that still gives me a twinge of regret for Barney was a cripple, having lost his left hand in a sawmill accident. Waiting for awhile after the heads were thrown into the garbage can we fished them out, restraining them in different lots and went back a day later to collect some more bounty.

If Barney surmised we were double-crossing him he never let on.

He did say, however, "The next time you come in for bounty, for heavens sake don't wait so long. It Back many years ago, there used to be a fifty cent bounty on crows that was payable by taking the heads to the county clerk's office. Today, it would be hard to hit a crow due to their growing wariness, besides it being against the law.

store-bought pleasures and hub-bub living of today's fast-paced society.

Great Lakes trout test results released

Officials of Michigan's Departments of Agriculture (MDA) and Public Health (MDPH) moved today to assure consumers that commercial fish from the Great Lakes is safe for human consumption. In announcing the results of recent testing on lake trout samples taken from three Great Lakes — Huron, Michigan and Superior — Dr. Burton Cardwell, MDA's Acting Director, announced that trout in the two to four pound range, the size normally sold commercially, tested well below the Food and Drug Administration's (FDA) tolerance level of two parts per million for PCB (polychlorinated biphenyls).

"Based upon these test results I feel confident that Great Lakes' trout may be purchased and consumed as part of a normal dietary intake," Cardwell said.

MDPH Director Raj Weiner wants the public to recognize the nutritional benefits of fish consumption, however, she cautions women of child bearing age and children should not eat lake trout over 20 inches in size.

PCBs are stored in the fat of the fish. Of the thirty-two trout samples tested by MDA, all were well below the 2 ppm except one larger fish, which was 34.5% fat and tested at 2.4 ppm.

"In general, commercial fish are smaller in size and have a lower percentage of fat," Cardwell explained. "The levels of PCB in these fish has declined steadily since we began our testing program in 1969."

Director Weiner continues to advise the public that they can easily reduce their exposure to the trace levels of contaminants present in most fish by removing the skin and trimming away fatty deposits before cooking. Cooking the fish in ways that allow oils to drip away from the portion to be eaten further reduces the levels of contaminants. Baking, broiling or grilling fish on a rack are among

CORN

Corn; the color and taste of summer. What is more beautiful than those green acres of tall corn growing everywhere in our area. They say that if you listen hard enough you can even hear it grow. Then those delicious ears of golden corn on our picnic or dinner tables also make a perfect picture of America's bountiful harvest.

Corn or maize is the only important cereal of American origin and U.S. Hbrids make it the most productive of all grains. Indians introduced corn on the cob to the pilgrims. I wonder how they cooked them, most likely they were roasted over an open fire. We can evoke the past, yet use modern simplicity when preparing and serving corn. The main thing to remember when cooking fresh corn is "do not overcook". My old cookbooks even suggest serving corn on the cob in a very fashionable way. From "Catering for Two" published in 1898.

"Strip the husks and silk from ears of freshly pulled corn. The sooner corn is eaten after being gathered, the sweeter it is. Steam in a steamer for twenty minutes, or boil ten minutes. In either case serve soon, each ear wrapped in a small napkin. To roast, lay on a gridiron over a clear but not fierce fire, turning over a little at a time as the surface becomes browned; time about twenty-five minutes. Wrap in a napkin and eat with butter, salt, and pepper, the same as boiled corn. The napkin is used to protect the fingers from the heat. Serve as a separate course."

P.S. I do not believe that they had paper napkins at that time.

This is the way that I fix corn on the cob; from my microwave book.

CORN ON THE COB

4 ears of corn

Place unhusked ears of corn directly on the floor of the oven, leaving space in between. Microwave uncovered, at power level HIGH for 15 to 19 minutes. Let stand 5 minutes.

To remove husk, grasp corn at the base of the ear, using a napkin to protect your hand. With your free hand, gradually pull back the husk at the tip of the ear, allowing the steam to escape before continuing to strip off the rest of the husk. Remove the silk by grasping firmly with your hand or by brushing away with a napkin. This makes 4 servings.

I do this with just one ear of corn and microwave just under 5 minutes. The corn is always cooked just the right amount.

The old books all have recipes for corn pudding and I know that they were delicious. Here is a more modern version of the old favorite.

FRESH CORN PUDDING

Use the freshest corn possible for this favorite; the juicier the better.

6 to 8 ears fresh corn (enough for 3 cups of pulp)

2 eggs separated

2 teaspoons sugar

1 teaspoon salt

About 3 tablespoons butter or margarine, divided.

With sharp knife slit down center of corn kernels. With dull edge of knife press out pulp and juice into a bowl. Add egg yolks, sugar, salt and 2 tablespoons butter melted. Beat egg whites until stiff peaks form, fold into corn mixture. Turn into greased shallow 1 qt. baking dish and dot with remaining butter. Bake in 350 degree oven 45 minutes or until golden brown. Makes 6 servings.

I just made the above recipe and I could not believe how very delicious it was. It was as light as a feather and beautiful to see. I made it with corn from the supermarket and it was not home grown so this could be made any time that you can buy fresh corn. The cutting of the kernels and scraping was a little time consuming but not difficult and so well worth the effort. I will make this pudding again and again. You may notice that no milk is used, just the delicious juice of the corn.

I used to make corn fritters. My family loved them. You can use the canned or fresh frozen corn for these:

CORN FRITTERS

1/2 cup flour

1/2 cup milk

1/2 teaspoon baking powder

1/2 teaspoon salt

1 tbs. melted butter or margarine

1 can about 2 c. of drained creamed corn (or 1 can drained whole kernel corn.)

Sift flour, baking powder and salt together; beat the egg; add the butter and milk then the flour and the corn. Bake in spoonfuls on a griddle like pancakes using vegetable oil mixed with a little butter for flavor. Serve with pancake syrup or honey.
