

Rex Judkins, who for the past 35 years has been the secretary to the Men's Bowling Association in Boyne City, has retired from that position. In recognition of the many years he has endured, he was given a plaque which President Ray Guzniczak is reading while former bowling proprietor Bill Korhase is waiting to give Judkins a check that was gathered from the teams who are bowling this year. Judkins will be spending the $777.00 shortly after tax season when he leaves for Las Vegas on April 24th. His real job has been working for the East Jordan Iron Works as a bookkeeper. Judkins also has had many other positions through the years, having once been the league secretary to all of men's and women's leagues that were bowling where the Sportsman's Bar is located today.

New classroom space needed

Boyne City board awaiting Facilities Utilization Study report

"We are out of space" Superintendent Bob Nakoneczny told members of the Boyne City School Board Monday evening, "and we can't find a place to house another 6th grade classroom."

"Even if we were to have all the approvals in hand from the public, and we were to build new classrooms, the soonest they could be completed would be in 1992, provided construction were to start in the spring," he added.

Nakoneczny was pleading a case for the upcoming Facilities Utilization Study that is to be presented to the community and the school later this month. He said that it is already common knowledge within the community that the schools are short classroom space and have been for the past several years.

Last year the middle school library was cut in half to make a classroom and the use of the portable was started, but that just allowed for the present school year and not the upcoming grades which are all about 120 children.

"Right now, members of the community are just saying that we should move a class up to the high school, but, with the class loads coming, that school will be at capacity itself within five years," he added.

There was a time in recent memory when the high school had about 800 students, but those days are behind us, Nakoneczny told the board, as the type of curriculum being taught then is totally different than what we are teaching today.

Nakoneczny also said that there is a very good possibility we would have to add another section of special education which will also add to the list of demands for classrooms.

Nakoneczny tried to urge the board into hiring a professional firm he worked with in prior years and who has recently been hired to develop a new middle school for the Traverse City School District.

The firm, King-Scott and Associates would present a complete plan for the school system, showing where the strengths and weaknesses are with the school buildings. That analysis would be done first before any thought of new construction was considered, Nakoneczny told board members.

He reiterated that it would be about a two-year program before anything could be done and those two years would put serious strain on the system. And Nakoneczny said that the staff would not feel comfortable using the same architectural firm as had done the new roof for the school.

Nakoneczny said that both the staff and he feels that they could use a "master plan" when it comes to looking at a building program.

He did say that the community is pretty headstrong on having the elementary level be a kindergarten through fifth grade, the middle school be for the sixth, seventh and eighth grades, and the high school remain a traditional grades nine through twelve school.

The board took no action on Nakoneczny's suggestion, but did set a special meeting to hear about the FUS report.

In other action, the board learned that Judy Follette will be trying for the four year slot on the board, while Dale Owen and Linda Simpson will be contesting for the one two-year seat in the upcoming June election.

They then set a truth in taxation hearing tentatively for Monday, June 4th, the annual budget hearing June 28th, and set dates for the annual coffee hours with the school board and school staffs for the elementary school, middle school, high school and bus garage.

In action items, the board approved a staff request which will

Boyne City High School Principal

Dear Sir:

I would like to bring to your attention something that I feel you should be very proud of.

I attended the State Quarterfinal game between Ishpeming and Boyne City which was played in Cheboygan last Wednesday evening. The sportsmanship displayed by your players, coaches, and particularly your fans was very much appreciated by all of us here in Ishpeming. Not only did they applaud the Boyne City players, but they gave an ovation to the Ishpeming players as they came out of the ball game late in the fourth quarter. Many fans also came over to wish the Hematites good luck on the rest of their journey on the tournament trail.

We have a saying up here about "Upper Michigan Is Someplace Special," and I want you to know that the people of Boyne City would fit right in.

My only regret is that Ishpeming lost in the State Finals to Saginaw Nouvel (a private school again), but nevertheless, we did the best we could just as I know Boyne City did their best. Again, thank you and good luck.

Sincerely,
Harold W. Reichardt
Ishpeming, Mich.

Boyne City commissioners were expected to approve a $3,673,025 budget at Tuesday evening's meeting, ending several weeks where the commissioners reviewed each phase of the budget at the weekly noon meetings. With the approval of the new budget, some other changes also had to be made which will allow the city to collect the taxes necessary for the city's operation.

That legislation was agreed to when a resolution was approved that establishes a total millage rate of 21.40 mills for the 1991 fiscal year. The breakdown allows 16 mills for operating revenues, 5 mills voted for infrastructure debt retirement and 40 for the City Hall debt retirement funds.

The commissioners were also expected to approve the naming of Jim Knurick to the planning board, Diane Walls to the housing board, and Larry Trumble and Richard Copeland to the Economic Development board.

Most of the action took place earlier during the day at the Tuesday noon meeting where the commissioners approved the raising of several one-time fees for water turn-on or off and for the tap-in fees charged for city water and sewer.

The fees for water shutoff or turn on are now set at $40.00 if the work is not overtime related. If it is, then the fee charged to the person requesting the service will be at $60.00.

Other fees were raised as well with the city splitting off by size, the charges for connecting to the lines. If the standard homeowner wants to connect to city water with a one-inch or less the tap-in fee will become $500, up about $100. For those commercial and businesses that require larger lines, the fee structure ranges from the $500 and up to $3,000 depending on the amount of water that is needed to serve the facility.

Also raised was sewer tap-in fees from $750 on up to $3,000.

In other action, the commission approved a request for the liquor license transfer to the Dilworth Enterprises from the Robinson Management Company.

County residents: hold on to census questionnaires

Beginning March 23rd, most of Charlevoix county residents received census questionnaires in the mail. Those residents should complete the census form and hold it until it is picked up by a census taker. Census enumerators will pick up questionnaires now through early June.

Concerns regarding the questionnaires surfaced when it was reported that some households discarded their forms because a census enumerator had not arrived by April 1st. To clear up confusion, collection of census forms BEGAN April 1, Census Day, and may continue for several weeks. Also, residents should be aware that two different census collection procedures are being used in some counties to accommodate local conditions. Additionally, the national news media has described collection procedures that do not necessarily apply to Michigan's northern lower peninsula.

Individuals who did not receive a questionnaire, or who have misplaced their forms, will be provided with a new form when a census taker visits their household in late April to early June.

The Census Bureau is still accepting applications. Employment for follow-up operations are expected to last until June. Interested applicants should contact their nearest MESC office for further details. Residents needing assistance with census forms can contact the Bureau at 1-800-999-1990.

News Briefs

Three projects in Charlevoix County are well on their way to finding funding by the state. Last week the State Senate approved funding for the Ferry Beach Park, at $215,700, the proposed Thumb Lake Beach at $400,000 and the Beaver Island Lighthouse at $33,800. The proposals are all part of a massive grant program the state is offering. All the proposals have to be approved by the State House and then get the Governor's signature before the money is actually passed out for the projects.

The Boyne Valley Lions Club will again be sponsoring the annual Easter Egg Hunt this weekend, Saturday, April 14 at 12 noon. The hunt will be held at the Veterans' Memorial Park and children between preschool and ten years of age are invited to participate. There will be four age divisions and prizes will be awarded to the top three places in each division.

April 15-21 has been declared Michigan Wildfire Prevention Week, head of the DNR David Hales announced. Locally, residents should make sure they get a burning permit before attempting to start a fire to remove brush or the accumulation of winter.

It is just a matter of days, say city officials, when the stallion completed by the work crews. The floating breakwall will get installed by workers from the departmental device, if it works, will be paid for with funding from the Michigan Department of Transportation. The breakwalls were delivered last fall but the ice came too fast to get the breakwall will help protect.

Nature from your backdoor
How spring affects wildlife

BY GLENN R. DUDDERAR

I'm often questioned about how winter affects wildlife but rarely about how spring affects wildlife. In fact, spring can have a pronounced effect on whether animals survive and how well they reproduce.

April is a good month to illustrate that because it is the beginning of spring and can be a critical period for wildlife.

You can see it in your own backyard if you are engaging in the latest trend in bird feeding — feeding orioles. The best time to begin feeding is in April, and the three most popular feeders are those that hold half an orange, those that dispense grape jelly from a tilted jar, and those that dispense sugar water. The latter is similar to a hummingbird feeder but bigger — oriole sized.

Those most likely to succeed in attracting orioles are those who have their feeders up when the orioles arrive back in Michigan. In southern Michigan, that's generally sometime in the last two weeks of April; in northern Michigan, the first two weeks of May. At that time, natural food supplies are low and orioles seem to find the feeders more attractive than they might later in spring, when insects become more abundant. If southern Michigan residents wait until mid-May to start trying to attract orioles, they're likely to find that the orioles simply don't use the feeders.

This difference in feeding behavior at different times illustrates the relationship between the bird and the weather and weather's effects on available food supplies and feeding practices.

Food is not the only thing that might attract orioles to your yard, however. Bird enthusiasts have also found that stuffing an unused suet feeder with string, fine scraps of cloth, hair or other potential nest materials can attract female orioles — and other birds as well — to a site where they can be seen easily. This is a case where knowing what the animal is doing and responding accordingly can lead to a chance to see the animal and observe its behavior.

Of course, making a nest, laying eggs or even hatching young is no guarantee that the oriole parents will succeed in raising their brood. The oriole, like many birds, often loses its first nest in the unsettled weather of May and June. A spring storm with high winds and heavy rains can destroy that first nest and any eggs or young in it.

In short, spring weather can have considerable effect on the adult birds' survival and their reproductive success. Because orioles are common visitors to Michigan backyards with large trees, they provide a good opportunity to observe the relationship between birds and weather.

You might have noticed that I've been referring to this bird as "the oriole." Officially, its name is now "northern oriole," which is actually much more accurate than its old name, "Baltimore oriole." It was given that name back in colonial times because its colors are the colors in the coat of arms on Cecil Calvert, the second Lord Baltimore and founder of the Maryland colony. The ironic truth of the matter is that orioles are far more abundant west of the Appalachians. A better name perhaps would be "midwestern oriole." People coming here from the Atlantic coast states are surprised to see how common a backyard resident the oriole is here.

As a scientist and an educator, I have to agree that "northern oriole" is an appropriate name. But having grown up in Baltimore, I will always think of this bird as the Baltimore oriole. I'm not too uncomfortable holding onto that Boyer City seventh graders spent time last week dissecting chicken wings. Working in groups of 3 or 4 students estimated the number of feathers covering both top and bottom of the wing by counting follicles. They also examined the muscles, the muscle attachments to the bones and the bones themselves. They certainly found that there was much more to a chicken wing than just good food to eat! Here Mike Jepsen, Jason Hugghe, and Steve Crandell begin to remove the skin to examine the muscles beneath.

BC Historical Society to hear Jim Brannan at April 17 meeting

Jim Brannan, well known auctioneer and real estate agent will be the speaker at the April meeting of the Boyne City Historical Society. The meeting will be held in the Museum at the south end of the City Hall building.

Brannan is a graduate of Boyne City High School and has been an auctioneer for 36 years. He remembers that at the time of World War II there were many small farms in the Boyne City area. Cash crops of potatoes, beans, and pickles were grown. He began selling used farm machinery before leaving high school and eventually went into real estate. He remembers that during the war the milk weed was virtually eliminated in this area due to the fact that the "fluff" was used in military items.

The meeting is open to the public, 7:00 p.m. at the Museum. Everyone is welcome. If you have not been to the museum this would be a fine opportunity to see all the interesting artifacts that have been gathered in.

House hazardous waste survey by MSU co-op April 5

During the week of April 16th through the 20th, representatives from the Charlevoix County office of the Michigan State University Cooperative Extension Service will be conducting a random sample phone survey. The purpose of which is to find out about how hazardous and other toxic substances are used and stored in the home, and also to get a better idea how these materials are being disposed of in Charlevoix County.

Over 1200 names have been chosen at random to participate in the survey. Answers to survey questions will be kept strictly confidential and will be used for survey purposes only. The phone call should take approximately five minutes.

BC Ministerial Ass'n. sponsors Good Friday service at St. Matthew's

The Boyne City Ministerial Association is sponsoring the Good Friday Service at St. Matthew's Catholic Church, Friday, April 13th beginning at 12:00 noon. The Boyne City Churches and their clergy will be sharing in this service and the public is invited to share in this special event.

An offering will be received to aid the Ministerial Association in assisting with the special needs of our community.

Law Day is Tuesday, May 1

Law Day activities will be held again this year on Tuesday, May 1, 1990. The various programs will be co-sponsored by the Emmet-Charlevoix Bar Association and the Emmet-Charlevoix Legal Secretaries Association.

In some of the 3rd grade classes, students will act out the mock trial "Goldilocks and the Three Bears". This format helps introduce the judicial process to young children through a familiar story.

High school students in many area high schools will view a video tape of a drunk driving mock trial. District Judge Harvey Varnum will portray the judge in the video tape, and several area attorneys will be on hand at the schools to answer questions.

The annual Law Day Luncheon will be held at Stafford's Perry Hotel in Petoskey at noon on Tuesday, May 1, 1990. This luncheon, attended by the legal community from Emmet and Charlevoix counties, will honor this year's recipient of the Liberty Bell Award.

The theme of this year's Law Day is "Generations of Justice". Many programs will be presented across the country under the direction of the American Bar Association.

Lament of a middle aged man

Greensleeves must know that he isn't fooling anyone: From time to time his brown beard shows grey at the roots. And although shreds of his beard that grow in the general area of his left ear get combed all the way across the top of his head to his right ear, there is no mistaking the fact that he is bald.

In other words, Greensleeves looks like a typical middle aged man.

What makes him unique is that he doesn't stop there in his battle against Father Time.

"Why do you only date college girls?" I asked, trying not to sound envious. "There are so many women your own age who are anxious and available - over 40 bright, nice, compatible, stable."

"You've described a mature woman," he moaned, "but I can't seem to get one."

Greensleeves pulled out a large handkerchief and wiped the mist from his eyes.

"I learned years ago that a man can't get a woman by chasing her, buying her a Mercedes, offering her trips to Europe, sending her roses, and other things like that, so I've given up. Now I only keep company with women who appear to be interested in me."

"But they're all so young," I protested. "And they aren't at all what I want," he added. "Remember the 19 year old?—a flighty thing—5 foot 2, a real blonde, 105 pounds with a peachy complexion—took her on a Grand Tour of 14 countries in Europe. After I'd educated her for a month her boyfriend met us at Kentucky airport. Someone told me later she was only after my money."

"I'd like to know a dozen just like her," cried a wicked little voice from somewhere inside me.

"Two months later there was another 19 year old. Cried all the time. I couldn't stand it. A beautiful child—men's heads snapped everywhere we went. Great cook. I started putting on weight."

"A mature woman would have fed you more salad and less home made pastry."

Greensleeves nodded sadly. "An older woman did move in with me last week - she's 22."

"How do you do it?" I marvelled.

"I accidentally mentioned that I was tired of having beautiful young women move into my house. How could I know she needed a challenge?"

"But what does she see in a decrepit wreck like you? You're old enough to be her father."

"It's a double edged sword," he replied sadly. "What do I see in an innocent youngster who modeled bathing suits for the last Sears catalogue?"

"Looks are superficial," I agreed. "It's the inner person that counts."

"And when I put my arms around these young things there is no give anywhere - everything is so firm. I personally like a woman to have a bit of sag to her here and there."

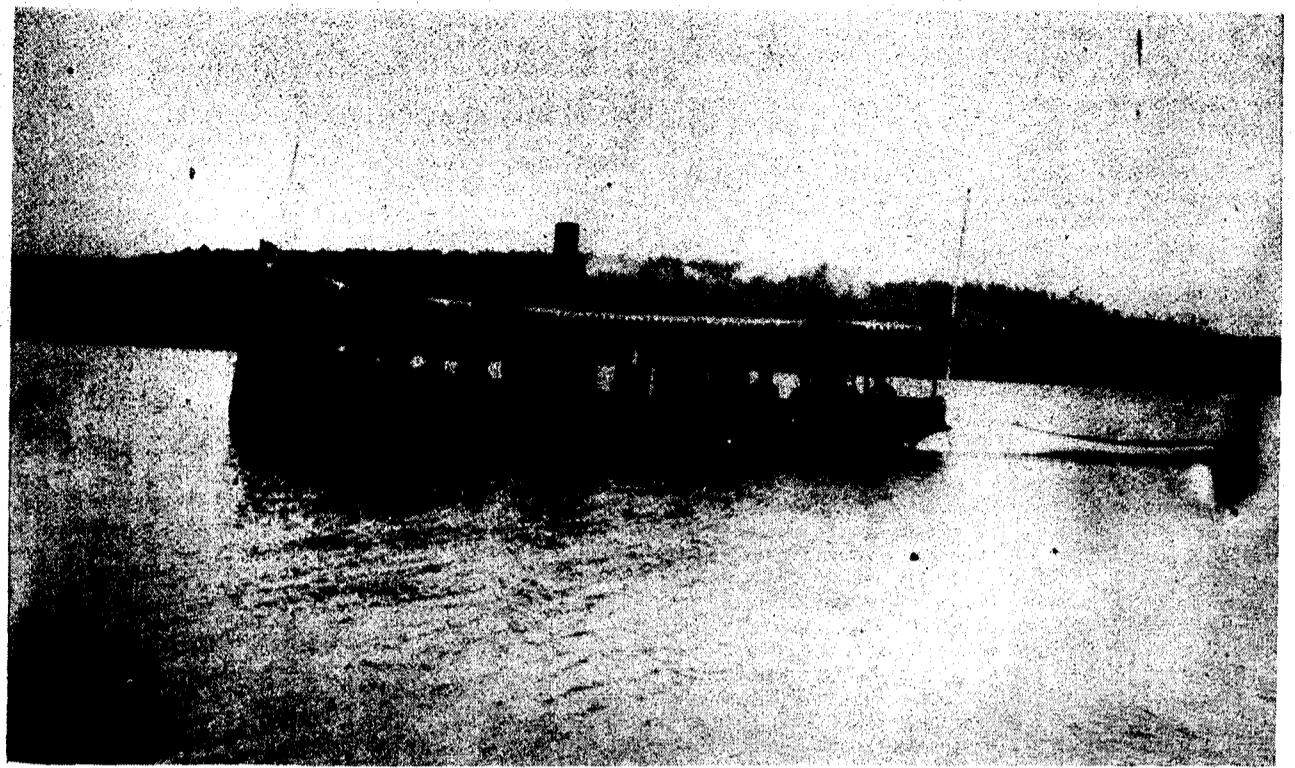

"Boys like girls who live on Tab - but men want something they can grab," I chanted.

"She's witty but lacks the maturity I long for in a woman." He wailed as he wrung the tears out of his handkerchief. "Doesn't plan her time - scrubs floors and polishes furniture until 10 or 11 every night - but why should I bore you with my problems?"

"You do seem to attract young women, Greensleeves, and it's going to get you in trouble someday."

"I know it," he confessed. "This morning I asked a cute one if she wanted to go to Europe and she said, 'Yeah, can I buy candy there?'"

Ware-withal

In the matter of fixing up the family nest, home decorators have decided that its rooms should be outspoken or outrageously attired. Since homes are meant to be havens, refuges from the noisy, pushy marketplace, after a hard day at the office, men and women shouldn't have to face the same sort of behavior from inanimate objects at home.

Jeff Cohen, a builder, justified the new decorating trends when he told a Detroit News reporter:

"Nowadays people expect a kitchen to make a statement."

Cohen went on to clarify his point by saying that people don't hesitate now to install expensive countertops and cooking appliances, an explanation that makes kitchens sound less assertive than he earlier implied.

Of course, to enthusiastic cooks, any report of awakening interest in kitchens, the aggressive kind or otherwise, comes as welcome news since social scientists predicted not long ago that kitchens would soon disappear due to lake of interest in home-cooked meals. No doubt the revived interest in them results from fallout from the cholesterol bombshell. With people aware that restaurant fare could clog their arteries, many returned to their kitchen to whip up healthy if not always hurray-producing meals.

This "making a statement" idea

Letters

His letter drew responses

Editor,

Just a note of thanks for running my letter on abortion dated 3-22-90. It drew many responses from every area covered by your paper. Strangely enough not one response was negative, at least so far. Still more strange was the fact that most of them were from people well on in years, both men and women. You know these people have done a heap of living and are uniquely qualified to make a judgement on the rightness or wrongness of interfering in the affairs of others and are able to separate the wheat from the chaff without outside help.

I would also like to thank these people for their response. It is always nice to be recognized as well as to be agreed with. A special thanks for the person in Norwood who I wish would contact me again after April 16. Everybody have a Happy Easter.

Well, Fortune Magazine came out with their famous Fortune 500, and as hard as I tried, I did not find the Charlevoix County Press listed. I even started at the bottom of the list and even there, no name could be found that I recognized as belonging to me.

Heck, in just looking at the last four or five on the list of 500, I wonder what these guys have had to do to get so big. Of course, General Motors is leading the list, and we all commonly refer them to as "generous motors". The reason they earned that nickname was because of the generous contracts the company had made with the unions over the years. But I guess when you make as much money as that company, you can afford to be somewhat generous with your earnings.

Back to my part of the list.

We should develop a top 20 thousand among just newspapers that are published on a weekly basis in a somewhat rural community. I think that even we could find ourselves on some sort of list like that. Of course knowing that there are only about 8,000 weekly newspapers for the nation give me some kind of chance.

We should be developing other lists also, there has to be room for some recognition to a Gocha's, a Huff's, a Moore's, and a Roberts.

Those are small businesses that are helping to provide much of the economy of the north. And small businesses are the reason many of them have moved to the north to try their hand at operating a small business. Some will succeed, while others will go down in flames, so to speak. In some cases they may really go down in flames, but that question is best left to people on the fire department.

If this sounds a little like I am just rambling on, that's probably right. I got knocked down last Thursday with that flu bug and have not been able to get back onto my feet yet. Of course I am not the only one who got sick, there must be a few hundred others, but in my case, I happen to think my getting sick is a unique experience. I want to know why every joint, muscle, and hair on my body seems to react to touch, to heat, and to sleep.

Sleep, that is something I can do without much effort, and I think I am going to head back off towards home to see if that bed still has some warmth left in it.

Supersalmon a coming!

BY REG SHARKEY

It's been a few years now since the big boom in salmon fishing began in the Great Lakes, thanks to the brainstorm of Howard Tanner, former head of the DNR's Fisheries Division and then later the DNR's Director.

I was, at the time, in the Fisheries Division and did my share in helping establish the ocean-going coho and chinooks in Lake Michigan.

Previously the saltwater alewife had followed the pestiferous sea lampy into the Great Lakes system, multiplying into stupendous numbers. It was a bonanza for the salmon. Gorging themselves on the trash fish the salmon grew rapidly creating a sport fishery unheard of in fresh water angling.

Of course there was that terrible spate of snagging that fostered unsportsmanlike deportment in the angling ranks. Spawning streams and banks were littered with spent, discarded salmon.

But like the gold rush days of California experience and time shaped those days into a semblance of order.

And then the Indian Fishing Rights erupted into bloodless warfare over who owned those salmon and other Great Lakes fishes — and it hasn't been settled yet. Why?

Now, however, Howard Tanner, now with the Fisheries & Wildlife Department of Michigan State University, has come up with another brain storm.

Tanner, and some of the University staff have created a "supersalmon"! According to a bulletin from MSU 5-year-old chinooks that stayed in the Great Lakes last fall continued to get bigger instead of succumbing to sex.

According to Tanner and MSU's research staff these sexually sterile fish have not developed reproductive glands. Hence no spawning interest and death as with normal reproductive 4-year-old chinooks.

These same sterile "kings" will continue to grow to whoppers of 70-pounds or more, living to a ripe old age of eight years, or even older.

According to the bulletin there are around a thousand of them cruising around in the Great Lakes system adding weight, gorging themselves on alewives, smelt and the likes.

Of course your chances of latching on to one of these super salmon are rather slim. But if you do you'd better have one of those Puget Sound 14-foot super flyrods that Washington State natives use to subdue the 50 to 70 pounds kings cruising the Sound.

The salmon experiment started in the spring of 1986 when 25,000 of those sterile chinooks were planted in the Great Lakes system. Out of those 25,000 piscatorial "steers" mortality will probably reduce them to a thousand.

If you should luck out and hook one of those giants, size will tell you as well as a missing adipose fine (that's the fatty little tab just ahead of the tail) that you've taken a rare futuristic supersalmon.
