A perfect way to cool off

ne way to beat the heat was discovered by these Boyne City girls last eek when the temperatures reached into the nineties. They just took the lawn chairs out into the water of Lake Charlevoix as they tried to get a little sun. The two, Patricia MaGee and Kristi Gipperich spent most of the afternoon basking in the sun and water.

Boyne City construction about half completed

The good news is that the construction work around Boyne City is finally letting the residents see some of the results. The bad new is that the work won't be completed by the Fourth of July said Randy Frykberg at the Tuesday noon City Commission meeting.

The construction around town has tied up traffic almost since the snow melted as M-75 reconstruction started, the North Lake Street project is underway, the Park Street Bridge is being replaced, the sidewalk over the Lake Street Bridge is being completed and the new restrooms at the river mouth are almost completed.

As of Tuesday, the leveling course of asphalt has been completed on Lake Street, East Street and Water Street/Boyne Avenue up to Main Street and will be open for traffic, the new sidewalk over the Lake Street Bridge should be ready for walking by the Fourth, and while workers are trying to complete the new bathrooms, they will not be ready Frykberg said.

Boyne Avenue will be opened for traffic during the Fourth of July weekend with construction halted and the equipment moved out of the roadway. Almost all of the sewer, water and storm mains have been installed on Boyne Avenue and the street is almost ready for the first of asphalt.

Workers are also driving the piles for the new Park Street Bridge and will be starting to demolish the old footings on the south side of the river shortly.

Even with all of the construction, the city learned late last week that they are up for another grant from the Ocean and Coastal Resource Management department of the Federal government which will allow for the completion of sidewalks, lights and benches along the waterfrontof Veteran's and Sunset Parks.

If the grant is approved by the feds, Frykberg said work would start on that project next spring. At this stage of the grant application, the design work as to exactly where the sidewalks would be installed has not yet been completed.

Frykberg did tell the commissioners that although the application was approved by the state, there are many applications and this project could receive no funding. He said that because it was sent on, the chances of it not being approved are slim.

With 8,000 to 10,000 people expected in town for the Fourth of July Celebration and the fireworks, Police Chief Randy Howard outlined some of the activities his force is planning on doing to control unlawful fireworks, traffic and the problems crowd control in the of relatively small two blocks of the park. He said he will be getting help from the sheriff's department. the state police, volunteers from the Fourth of July Committee and the firemen for the many activities being planned for the community.

BC schools okay ^{$}6.6 million budget

Boyne City Schools will be spending almost $6.6 million this coming school year out of an income of almost $7 million after school board members approved ool budget during the last meeting of the schools' fiscal year last Thursday. The budget approval was quickly resolved as most of the board members have worked with the preparation of the budget during the last several months. Specifically, the budget calls for the school system to spend $4,062,981 on the basic programs, added needs, adult and continuing education, unclassified and instruction-employee benefits. They will also spend $2,547,237 on support services, community services, capital outlay and transfers.

MDA reminds us to keep food safe in warm weather

The hazy, lazy days of summer may bring thoughts of relaxation, but it's no time to relax the rules of food handling. In fact, climbing temperatures should signal us to use extra caution in preparing and handling food, according to Dr. Edward C. Heffron, Director of the Food Division at the Michigan Department of Agriculture (MDA).

The U.S. Department of Agriculture (USDA) estimates that each year 4 million people are affected by food poisoning, caused by food-borne bacteria so microscopic it cannot be detected by sight, smell or taste. This often occurs at picpics and backvard barbeques when food is left out in warm temperatures creating a perfect environment for bacteria to grow.

"Food poisoning can be preven-ted," said Heffron. "It just takes some common sense. The key is to keep food cool and limit the time it is exposed to warm temperatures."

In summer months, salmonella, one of the most common bacteria, finds a perfect breeding ground. "Foods that are allowed to remain Fahrenheit or in a freezer at or below zero degrees Fahrenheit. If picnicking, keep perishables in a well-insulated cooler with a cold source, such as ice or commercial "blue gel." If grilling, keep the meat cool right up to the time of cooking and then cook thoroughly. If you precook meat to reduce grilling time, make sure you precook immediately before grilling to prevent bacteria growth. And never, ever thaw meat on the countertop, even during winter months.

3. Cook foods thoroughly. Only thorough cooking can destroy most bacteria. Grill meat until the juices run clear or check its internal temperature with a thermometer, cooking beef to 160 degrees, pork to 170 degrees and chicken to 180 degrees fahrenheit.

4. Be extra cautious about highly perishable foods like dishes prepared with mayonnaise or cream. These must be kept cool to be considered safe enough to eat. And only use store-bought mayonnaise, not homemade, which con-

Heffron offers the following advice to guard against contamination:

1. The first step in prevention is to make sure hands, untensils and work area are thoroughly cleaned before preparing food. This is especially critical when working with raw meat and poultry. Anything touched by raw meat should be considered suspect and should be cleaned immediately.

2. Keep food cool. Keep all perishable foods in a refrigerator that is less than 40 degrees tains raw eggs and is always considered a high risk.

5. Caution is also called for when eating eggs. Scientists have recently discovered that the bacteria. salmonella, which causes salmonella enteritis infections, can be found on the inside of raw eggs, not just from outside sources through crackes in the shell. While there have been no reported outbreaks in Michigan, the potential exists for infection. Therefore, foods made with raw or undercooked eggs should be avoided, including Caesar salad, hollandaise sauce, some cake frostings, homemade ice cream or mayonnaise, and soft scrambled or soft boiled eggs with runny yolks. Even cookie dough and cake batter, made with raw eggs, should not be tasted. The rule of thumb is to cook eggs thoroughly so both the yolk and white are firm.

We need control

We applaud the efforts of the Boyne City Police Department as they attempt to control the unlawful fireworks in the park this Thursday.

For too many years, the use of sparklers, firecrackers and bottle rockets have endangered the many people who just want to enjoy the display in the skies.

This year, according to Police Chief Randy Howard, the police will be writing citations for those who do not want to follow the rules of the park which say, no fireworks allowed.

While fireworks can be fun to set off, the bottle rocket could go astray and injure some innocent bystander, just like a firecracker could go off in someone's lap.

We are happy that there will be observers in the crowd with radios to help control those setting off illegal fireworks. There have been too many close calls with fireworks over the years to not let this matter go unnoticed by those of us who want to enjoy the evening.

There are times when I would like to tell those, who offer suggestions as to what the newspaper should do, what they can do. Then a few days ago, I picked up a book of the Mark Twain short stories and started reading it, being I had read very few of his short stories. You remember that Twain was a journalist first, before he became an author of books like Huckleberry Finn and Tom Sawyer. So as I was reading, I came across a story he had written about journalism in Tennessee. That one was perfect for me as he wrote about how he was asked to take a job as the associate editor in order to improve his health.

He went to work for the Morning Glory and Johnson County War-Whoop and when he walked into the office, he noticed the editor sitting, tilted back on a three legged chair with his feet on a pine table. Things I would like to be able to do, but I usually can't even find the desk being I have piled so much stuff, important stuff, on top of it that by putting my feet up on the desk I would displace what order there is and find it on the floor.

Anyway, the new associate editor sat down and wrote a story and handed it over to the editor for him to approve. The story was about a railroad called the Ballyhack railroad that editors of another newspaper in the town wrote a wrong and misunderstood article about how the railroad was going to miss the town and not be able to serve it. The associate editor wrote a correction to the other story and wrote it in a way that would appear to have the railroad explain their positions as to why they were leaving the town in the lurch. He said the railroad admitted their mistake and made plans to correct the way the railroad was to come into the community. Needless to say, after the editor read the article, he threw the story out and started to rewrite it in a common style of the day, in other words, he didn't mince any. He started off with "The In-

The idea that Buzardville was to be left off at one side originated in their own fulsome brains - or rather in the settlings which they regard as brains." The story the editor wrote continued on telling everyone who read it that the other newspaper and its editors were anything but normal people.

He said after writing the piece "Now that is the way to writepeppery and to the point. Mush

Trash and Treasure

Big trash can, neat work spacethe '90s good life. Or, time to tidy up, guys. (Guys in its non-gender specific sense, for those sensitive on such matter.) The target area for 1991 is the office worker's business center - the office desk the deplorable amount of debris upon and within it, that is. But not for long, not if specialists in what's considered a science - ergonomics have their way.

Ergonomics? That's a term whipped up in 1949 to apply to a field of study devoted to figuring out how to arrange things so that they and the people using them can interact most effectively and safely.

What the ergonomics experts do is help desk keepers uncover and discard aging newsprint, longpast-their-prime agendas, memos, notes on last week's, year's, even last decade's assignment. Then there's an assortment of other stuff (cookies, toys, tons of pens, some gutless lighters, cosmetics, candy), much of it long forgotten. And in cases of food, all agree trash beats the tummy for disposition.

Meantime, these specialists from firms with impressive names like Priority Management Systems and The Mircle Worker, enjoy a mighty good life themselves. They make big bucks surervising Operation Throw Away.

Professional organizer John White of Fairport, N.Y., explains his job philosphy: "Everything on your desk that's not moving is a failure to make a decision."

Another efficiency expert, John Wareham, puts it this way: "Orderliness is a form of power. A truly smart operator knows where to find things." He says that there is no such thing as a successful executive with a cluttered desk, implying that to rise up, one must clean up. No doubt this news has set many reluctant clearer-outers to the task.

The call for more efficiency in the office results from statistics showing that, in the last decade, white-collar productivity has increased only 11 percent while blue-collar workers' has risen 44 percent. Ergonomics experts claim that "desk stress" - anxiety caused by working at a messy desk - slows folks down.

But not all folks. Creative types, writers especially, are rated messiest. Successful author, Studs Terkel, calls the state of his desk "dishevelry". And noted critic Rogers Ebert's desk is littered with Mickey Mouse, baby ducks, baseballs, and what else? A gum ball machine, or course.

Perhaps it's Ebert's desktop memorabilia, or enjoying wondering who else would give ergonomics folk fits, calls to mind Christian C. Anderson, Chadds Ford, PA. Unwittingly, he built a monument to mess, which his friends turned into a museum after his death. About 4000 visit there every year.

Doubtless organizers would note that Sanderson's cash fortunes never rose much; in fact, he needed help at times to pay his rent. But he needed only his charm to acquire considerable memorabilia, primarily of the Civil War. And, as a student of history, he managed to attend, uninvited, every Presidential inauguration from Teddy Roosevelt's to Lyndon Johnson's. He died in 1966 at the age of 84.

Among his souvenirs was a scrap of a bandage used on Abe Lincoln's fatal gunshot wound given to Sanderson by an attending physician, a flashbulb he used to photograph the woods where his grandfather died during the Civil War, and sawdust from the floor of a Billy Sunday revival meeting.

He amassed two tons of stuff, stored it in his house, (now the museum) explaining this note he left: "I apologize for look of house, but everything is precious to me."

Clearly Sanderson's ways wouldn't do at all in today's tidy climate, never did much in his day. But knowing a like spirit survives in famous folks cheers some of us hugely.

BVGC holds special program for June meeting

BY NANCY NORTHUP

A delicious luncheon at Springbrook was enjoyed by 61 members and guests of the Boyne Valley Garden Club as they met for their June 27th meeting, with President Thorneta Rowe presiding. The centerpieces on the tables were geraniums in clay pots that were decorated with flowers which were painted by club member, Olive Bernier.

The program for this special occasion was the interpreting of music with the art of flower arrangements on a backboard or design unit. The first rendition was "Monastary Bells", which traced the history of music boxes and the times in the mid 1800's. This was depicted with a wood carved monk on a backboard covered with a heavy cloth such as that used for a monk's robe, pheasant tails, dried okra pods, Oregon holly with a small bouquet of day lilies. The second musical number was "Circus" with the light, happy music of the steam calliope, which could be heard five miles from towns in the early days when the circus came to town. The Circus (Circle) had its origin in ancient Rome and began in America in 1770. The interpretation for this was done in a red, white, and blue theme and used a clown, vertical pipes denoting the calliope, colorful triangular flags like those that fly over tents, and a small stand, representing the one the elephant used. Adelaide Daly did the third arrangement which was of the 1920's and the era of Irving Berlin and his "Blue Skies". She interpreted this with an arrangement of abstract design that had line. color, and texture. She used the lovely seed heads of the goats beard to denote sky, lily blossoms impaled on cattails to represent the stars, and some hosta leaves for the earth. A small bouquet of yellow blue delphinium, marguerite, and baby carnations was used for this design unit. Lois Pollock's interpretation of "Second Hand Rose" was a design with the use of dried roses, yarro, eucalyptus, old pearls, lace, and an old picture frame which were of this era, and followed the theme of "used". "Madame Butterfly" was shown with the use of four flowers (which signifies death) in an oriental style. She incorporated the use of a silk embroidered butterfly, a weeping willow branch, mulberry and Japanese paper, and a mirror, denoting water. She related the interesting story of this opera which ended with the song "One Fine Day" and the death of Butterfly.

This special program was videotaped by Lois's husband, Chuck Pollock. The enjoyable afternoon ended with a reminder of the July 4th pie sale and the July 19-20 booksale.

WITH BEA SMITH

Sprinkling of paprika Yields 4 to 6 servings. Preheat oven to 375 degrees Bring large pot of water to boil for noodles. Add about 2 teaspoons of salt and cook noodles at a rapid boil for 7 minutes until al dente. Drain in colander. Meanwhile, heat 2 tablespoon butter in medium saucepan. Stir in flour and cook, stirring over medium heat for 2 minutes. Stir in milk, raise heat to high and bring to boil, whisking almost constantly. Reduce heat to medium and cook for 1 minute, until sauce is smooth and medium thick. Season with mustard, salt and cayenne.

In bowl, combine noodles, sauce, tuna and scallions. Stir gently to combine and transfer to a $1\frac{1}{2}$ quart baking dish, such as an 8x8 inch square. Melt remaining tablespoon of butter in small skillet. Add bread crumbs and toss to combine. Scatter this mixture over top of casserole and sprinkle with paprika. Bake, uncovered in preheated oven 25 minutes, until crumbs are lightly browned on top and sauce is bubbly around edges. Note: This recipe may be assembled several hours ahead or made ahead and frozen. Reheat thawed casserole covered with foil for 20 minutes. Then uncover and bake about 20 minutes. BEANS AND PASTA MEDLEY 1/2 lb. ground beef tomato sauce 1 can (about 8 oz) whole kernal golden corn, drained 2 cups cooked small shell macaroni

Desserts go good with dinners like the above. For something special try this rhubarb cake as served at Milliken's Tea Room in downtown Traverse City. I thought that I did not need dessert, however I could not resist their rhubarb cake. I loved it and "ate the whole thing." Shirley Caplinger, the tea room manager very graciously had the recipe written out for me.

RHUBARB CAKE

3 lbs. rhubarb 1 C. brown sugar

³4 C. flour

1¹/₄ lb. yellow cake mix

1 C. butter (melted)

1 cup nuts.

Mix and dump the first 3 ingredients into a greased 13 x 9 inch pan. Mix cake mix with the butter just until moistened. Add nuts. Spread cake mix over rhubarb mixture in pan. Bake at 325 degrees for 45 minutes or until golden brown.

This cake is delicious, though Shirley says that it is even better with a scoop of ice cream. Anyone who likes rhubarb will love this dessert.

David Priest, R.N., house supervisor, is heading up the employee portion of the campaign which will set the pace for the entire campaign. Priest says, "It was the employee group itself that set an energetic goal of $95,000. This goal is certainly attainable if the majority of the employees pledge or contribute an hour's pay per pay period over a five year time span. I am very optimistic that we will make our goal."

There are approximately 170 employees of the hospital including both full-time and part-time. Captains for the campaign are Bill Jackson, Heather Kage, Rachelle Mackowiak, Judy Mazur, Alex Niedzialkowski, and Chris Wilhelm.

The total campaign goal is $1.4 million. The dollars will be raised through pledges solicated over the summer and early fall. The $3 million building program includes a new surgical and ambulatory care facility attached to the hospital and a remodeling of the obstetrical unit to allow for the modern childbirth concept of labor, delivery, recovery, and postpartum stay in one room. The volunteer network is presently being set-up for the areawide campaign. Dr. Jeffrey Porter is the general campaign chairman.

Eagle count slightly up

Bald eagle watchers scanned the January winter skies during the 1991 mid-winter bald eagle survey, and reported observing eagles in 58 of Michigan's 83 counties.

"This year," reported Director David Hales of the Department of Natural Resources (DNR), "the Michigan citizens who participated in this volunteer program reported a total of 222 bald eagles, including 50 immature and 172 adults. In the Upper Peninsula counties, 70 eagles were counted, 111 eagles were counted in the northern Lower Peninsula counties, and 41 birds were sighted in the southern Lower Peninsula counties. We thank the citizens of Michigan for their continuing support for the threatened bald eagle, especiallythe 400 who took the extra effort to report their eagle observations." The number of eagles observed in recent years during the January survey has generally increased and reflectes the increase in our nesting eagle population. This year's total is down from the high of 334 recorded from the 1990 winter count but is nearly the same as the 216 and 217 reported in 1988 and 1989. The high count last year is believed due to the unusually mild winter and because of the 20 percent larger number of people sending in eagle sighting reports.

The Nongame Wildlife Fund, through citizen contributions, has supported the annual summer and winter surveys of bald eagles as well as special studies of bald eagle

Boyne comes alive again for 4th of July

It has been said that Boyne City comes alive on the Fourth of July and this year, even with all of the construction going on around town, the word is still usable.

Starting with the annual Waterside Arts and Craft Fair today from early morning until 8 p.m. in Veterans park on through to the fireworks which will close out the activities for the day on the fourth. There is something for everyone to enjoy this Fourth of July.

Thursday, July 4th, will see the annual Independence Day Run get off at 8 a.m., an earlier start this year due to the heat problems the runners faced last year. Also for the runners, an additional water station, ambulances and additional help monitoring the courses the runners will use.

Sign-up for the races will open at 7 a.m. at the park.

Then for the first event for the youngsters, the decorated bicycle and costume contest will get judged at the Boyne City Middle School where the annual parade will start to line up.

Meanwhile, members of the Eta Nu sorority will be dressed in clown costume for their balloon dle School and go north on East ting at 10 a.m. Also at the same time the Arts and Craft Fair will for the annual festival, the 100 East Jordan Iron Works sponsors years of graduations will be celebrated by a dance at the Civic Center. Yesterday's music will enhance the atmosphere as young and old come together.

The present East Jordan students are also involved in the festival as they sponsor a carnival of street games. Held both Friday and Saturday, the High School Student Council has organized numerous games of chance for all ages. "It's a big opportunity for our students to get involved and try to earn some money for their class projects," Yettaw said.

For those not going to the alumni dance, Memorial Park will be the site of a Lip Sync Contest. Following the silent singers will be Michael Camp and the Sleeping Bear Band for an outdoors concert.

Saturday's main events include two parades. As a tribute to Jim-Henson, creator of the muppets, area youth will grace the streets at 10:30 a.m. in assorted Sesame Street costumes. According to Yettaw, over the years of the festival the youth parade has been "growing in leaps and bounds."

The Grand Parade will have a special aspect this year as the grand marshalls will be the local military personnel. The parade has many musical entries, which include six marching bands.

Once again Memorial Park will be the center of attention as the Primary elections facing city opposition

BY JANENNE FROATS

Every four years along with the election of a United States president, comes the state presidential primaries. Each primary gives specified party members the opportunity to cast their March vote for the candidate they think will best represent their party.

The problems this type of election faces in Michigan is the low number of party preferences on residents voter registration cards. According to Boyne City City Cierk Tom Garlock, out of the 2300 about 250 people have stated a party preference.

"only an advisory vote. The parties can choose who they want anyway," she said. At the present time, it is state law that each city hold the primary. The cost of the elections vs. the lack of voter interest and participation has thrust Michigan cities into legal action. "Cities have adopted the resolution all over the state," Staley said. The resolutions are flooding the offices of Senator George McManus, State Representative Ralph Ostling and the Michigan Municipal League. Garlock expres ed the City push was for the state to pay for the election while Staley said, "we're trying to not hold one." Even if the final means differs within the cities, the overall view has been that the expense and time spent on such an election is unwarranted. With Boyne City, Charlevoix and East Jordan in accord with many other Michigan cities, the petitioning of the state to either change the process of the presidential primary or abolish it completely continues.

Sportsman Bar takes co-ed tourney over weekend

BY JANENNE FROATS

Twelve teams were left eating dust as the Sportman's Bar softball team cruised through undefeated in last weekends 1991 Miller Lite Co-Ed Invitational. The double elimination tournament left the Sportman's teammates kings and queens over Rotary Park after final match-up early Sunday evening.

To get to the top, the team defeated F & L Painting of Gaylord, Rosiniski Construction from Traverse City and Century 21-Kowalske from Boyne City, Tom's Glass of Gaylord and finally Sports Peddler of Petoskey to win the championship.

Another board member said if the school is afraid of Lansing, we'll never get anything done.

According to Superintendent Bob Nakoneczny, the district could afford the purchase, even though the budget showed the district was not "fat, but it was not stuck in the mud either."

The computers will be used as part of the instructional program of the school and will allow the students to become computer awafe as they grow up.

Nakoneczny then gave an update on the tax anticipation notes saying that the school will be Tabled for future consideration was the revision of the development plan for the First State Bank on Clinton and State Streets. Due to two abstinations, due to conflicts of interest, the board was unable to pass the revision.

Respecting the sprinkling schedule could be beneficial to the residents as a $500 fine could be given if found not adhering to the sprinkling rules. According to Mayor David J. Novotny, nobody has yet to receive such a fine. Designated driver for boats, too especially while intoxicated.

Everyone knows a Designated Driver, but did you know that boaters can be Designated Drivers too? More and more people are designating one member of each party who will not drink alcoholic beverages in order to drive home and make sure everyone gets home safely.

The Designated Driver concept has gained widespread public acceptance among automobile drivers, but many boat drivers still continue to take the helm under the influence of alcohol.

To increase awareness of the Designated Driver concept among boaters, the National Marine Manufacturers Association (NM-MA), and the Miller Brewing Company have produced a public service campaign to promote the Designated Driver concept on the water. They encourage everyone to designate a driver who will not drink for the safety and welfare of all passengers.

Some people who wouldn't consider driving a car while intoxicated think nothing of taking the helm of a boat in the same condition.

COACH, 1969

County Hospice completes their 10th.

Reg Sharkey's Northern Journal Where are the birds and other questons answered

This column will be a smorgasbord of this and that acquired through spring and early summer.

First of all I ask this question: "Where are all the birds?"

Those beautiful white and black, red-bibbed grosbeaks just aren't in good supply around my feeders like other summers. And those little yellow and black dickey birds (goldfinches) aren't showing up either. That goes for the purple finches too, and I wonder if my local observations jibe with those of other bird lovers.

One bright spot in the avian world is the comeback of the eastern bluebird. With the awareness of the plight of this beautiful avain a few years ago bird lovers made a concentrated effort to revive the dwindling population. Hundreds of bird houses were constructed to replace cavity-ridden wooden fence posts that were once common around farmer fields. And the tiny kestrel hawk also benefited with houses replacing natural nest cavities in trees.

And the question from martin lovers remains: "Where have the cheerful, insect catching colonies gone?"

About the only thing I can surmise is that with the revival of bird appreciation there are many more martin houses available and not enough birds to go around. Surely lack of airborne insects can't be in short supply. And that brings up a boo-bo I made a few columns ago about May flies; either a typo on my part or a slip-up in transposing from manuscript to the printed media.

And the loon pictures in last weeks column were just plain terrible. I'll take the blame for that even though I haven't seen the negatives.

But the loons on Round Lake are doing fine, and the two sootyblack, back-riding chicks seem to be thriving.

On a visit last Saturday morning to the eagle aerie (nest) near Pickerel Lake, I saw the one young eaglet reving up his flight muscles on the edge of the nest. Id say in a couple of days he, or she, will be aireborn. Hopefully the transition from being fed to self-sufficiency will be successful for it is a crucial period.

I'm hearng about raccoon complaints, and it's logical to assume that the coon populations aren't being controlled by natural preditors. That coupled with the fact that Animal Rights Activists have launched concentrated campaigns against those who wear fur garments, and the trappers who provide the pelts is beginning to backfire.

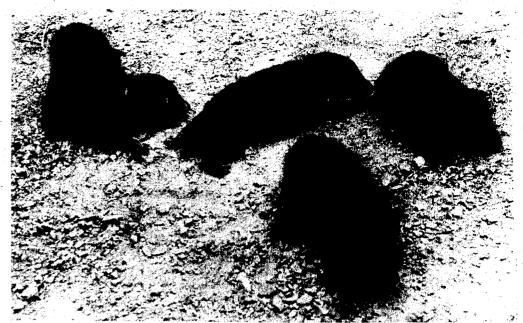

Anyone with one iota of common sense knows, or should, that man is the supreme preditor; that civilization and it's unjustified phobias throws a monkey wrench into the works when man is removed from his role as a preditor.

So what to do with all those surplus coons? Don't expect the DNR to respond to every coon complaint. Nor will county animal control officers be able to ignore dog complaints in order to remove a pestiferous coon. Without a doubt you will be given permission to humanely destroy the animal.

And I ask this question: "How come a person that can set a snap trap for a poor helpless little mouse without qualms take offense at those who harvest a natural bounty in an efficient and conscious manner?"

On a better tact I'd like to say that this extremely dry weather, although a detrement to tilled crops, has been a boon to increasing the wild turkey crop. Young turkeys after hatching can be wiped out by prolonged cold rains. And there should be a good crop of grasshoppers coming along to feed the young turks.

And coming up in a later column: all about an orphan whitetail fawn that is being cared for at the Siegrist fawn orphanage out in the Chandler Hill area. This little gamin in recuperating from a broken leg. Should be interesting.

This group of baby raccoons may look cute when they destroy gardens, eat bird feed from feeders and get inare young, but chances are they will develop into to the garbage. About the only cure is to relocate them trouble making critters when they grow up and far into the woods and hope they will not return.

Jones to stand trial in October

Jeanette Lynn Jones, 25, of 136 Court Street, Boyne City will be going to trial for manslaughter this coming October in the death of her former roommate David Allen Lambert. She is also charged with resisting and obstructing a police officer.

Judge Richard J. Pajtas entered not guilty pleas on the woman's behalf when he set the trial date for October 29 in the 33rd Circuit Court Room in Charlevoix. Jones stood mute to the charges.

Jones allegedly stabbed Lambert a number of times on November 25th in Boyne City. He died 12 days later according to court reports. The death was investigated by the Boyne City Police Department.

Jones, according to police officer Ken Schrader, admitted that she stabbed Lambert but claimed the stabbing was the result of selfdefense.

Representing Jones at the trial will be Attorney Gregory Justis of Petoskey who was assigned to the case after downstate attorneys Arthur Greenstone and James Feinburg asked to withdraw. The switch of lawyers caused some delay in the scheduling of the trial according to court records. She is currently free from custody and is under a bond to ensure she will appear at court.

If convicted, she could be punished by up to 15 years in prison and/or a $7,500 fine. Jones is also up for a count of resisting and obstructing a police officer which carries a two year prison term maximum and/or a $2,000 fine. The resisting and obstructing count is set for a one day trial Friday December 20.
