

Grand Opening

It's official, Boyne City has a new Little Caesar's Pizza Restaurant which opened to the public Tuesday. Cutting the ribbon to open the restaurant at a special ceremony Monday evening was owner Roger Skiba (with the scissors) while his wife, members of the City Commission and building owner John D. DiMartino look on. The new store is located on N. Lake Street near Glen's and is the second national fast food franchise to open in Boyne City this year. The store is open for lunches and dinners on a carryout basis.

BC school board hires new high school principal

Boyne City High School students will be getting a new principal, perhaps as soon as February 3. This was decided after members of the Boyne City School Board unanimously approved the final recommendations of the superintendent and the committee charged with finding a replacement for the former principal who left shortly before the school year began.

The new principal, Xavier Gaudard, 40, is coming to take over the position as soon as it can be arranged, said Superintendent Bob Nakoneczny after he was approved for the position by the board. The date of February 3rd is still tentative as some things have to be worked out with his former school.

Gaudard is presently the principal of the Ovid-Elsie High School, located between Owosso and St. Johns, Michigan. He has been an employee of that system since he graduated from Central Michigan University in 1973. He was an instructor, teaching math, science and computers for 12 years before he gave up a teaching position to become the Assistant Principal at the high school. He served in that capacity for three years before being elevated to the Principal's position in 1989.

He holds a Masters Degree in Education Administration from CMU and is working towards a specialist in education degree.

Interviewed by phone late Monday night, Gaudard said he was excited about the position and is looking forward to learning and working more with the "outcome based" educational system that the Boyne City School System is developing.

He said he expects few problems, based on his experience as a principal at Ovid-Elsie.

Nakoneczny told the board he was a "real caring, people person" but added he is firm, fair, and caring about the students.

Gaudard was picked from over 25 applications for the position by the members of the committee that represented the educational side as well as the community side of the table.

Nakoneczny said the list of applicants was brought down to 12 by the committee, who then ranked the twelve according to what they saw in resumes. From the 12, preliminary interviews narrowed it down to four candidates. Administration team interviews narrowed it down further to two with the final decision made by the full committee.

Gaudard said he is called "Mister X" by workers in the Elsie-Ovid system and expects that to carry over to Boyne. He said he was called Mister Gaudard by the students in the system.

The board agreed to give him a 2 1/2 year contract with a salary of $51,881 per year that will be prorated down because of missing the first semester of the school year. He is paid on the basis of 215 days per year, Nakoneczny said.

Gaudard is married, his wife's name is Mary, and has three children ages 13, 10, and 8. He will be coming to Boyne this weekend to find a home so he can relocate here as soon as possible.

His arrangement and contract with Boyne will allow him several days of absence to help his former school system through the school year or until they find a successor.

In other action at the Monday night school board meeting, the board read the second reading of a policy which they hope will provide rules under the Freedom of Information Act.

They also agreed to a contract with Shelly Martin, based on the number of full time students she is working with in Adult Education.

They tabled hiring a new social worker for the high school and middle school pending getting more information on credentials of applicants and discussed the upcoming Michigan Association of School Boards Mid-Winter Conference as well as the National Association of School Boards meeting that will be held soon.

They authorized the administration to take bids on three used busses they want to sell and adopted a curriculum change for the eighth grade algebra I program for the 1991-92 school year only. The change was recommended by the curriculum committee which has been studying the matter for some time.

Board members also hear a portion of the Christmas play that will be presented by the third grade class of Mrs. Ekstrom.

Fuel tank for airport approved

Boyne City's Airport will be getting a new 4,000 gallon gas tank which the city workers will install as soon as it arrives in the city.

City Manager Randy Frykberg was authorized to order the new tank, a double walled tank, Tuesday afternoon.

The new tank will be replacing two tanks that were removed last week by the supplier of gasoline for the airport, Renko Brothers, who pulled the tanks because they did not meet current fuel tank regulations of the state. The pulled tanks held 80 to 100 octane aviation fuel.

With the tanks pulled the airport is currently without any source of revenue as the sales of gasoline helped pay for the costs of the airport.

The new tank will only hold 100 octane gasoline, according to John Talboys, the head of the Airport Board. He also said after the meeting, he wished the city had extra money to be able to install another tank for jet fuel.

The total cost of the new tank will be $6,500 according to Frykberg. The supplier will be providing the pump and the hose as well as all of the connections.

The new tank will be installed in a different location from the previous tank, located just off the taxiway.

The city commissioners also approved a bookkeeping change in the way the city reimburses its medical coverage for the employees to be in conformance with the IRS regulations covering reimbursements.

They then applauded with approval the giving of a plaque to Von Seamon who is retiring after 13 years and 7 months of service as the city's secretary. She was honored after the meeting with a dinner party in the commission chambers.

Bendix consolidates, ends fears

Workers at Boyne City's largest employer, Allied Bendix Signal, Courter's Division, breathed easier after a Friday afternoon meeting of employees that was held at Boyne Mountain.

The meeting was held to inform the workers of a reorganization plan being put into effect by the company which will combine several of the aerospace companies into one corporate entity beginning next year.

The new plan should not effect any of the workers at the Boyne City Courter operation according to local company officials.

The reason the company changed the way of managing the divisions is said to be because of the downsizing of the national defense budget. The new headquarters of the plant will be based in Teterboro, New Jersey.

Rumors and a newspaper article gave credence to a possible shutdown or lay-off at the plant, which is the sole contractor to the government for some critical aerospace components.

The company, nationally, has announced reductions in its work force as the government was purchasing less components. The announcement was made last October.

So as far as the plant is concerned around Boyne City, about the only thing that will be different is who the company officials report to at corporate headquarters, one official said.

Admiring some of the little dressed up Barbi dolls was this group of shoppers last Saturday during the annual Boyne City Holiday Hobby Craft Show which was held in the high school gym. Again this year, the aisles were filled with shoppers looking for those special gifts, for themselves or for someone else.

News Briefs

Children can have breakfast with Santa this Saturday in East Jordan at the Elementary School as the Elementary P.T.O. is sponsoring the affair. Breakfast includes French toast, waffles, sausage, juice, milk and coffee at a cost of $10 per family or $3.00 each. The breakfast will be held from 8 a.m. to noon.

Nativity Episcopal Church in Boyne City will be holding their third annual Cookie Walk between 9 a.m. and 2 p.m. Saturday at the church located next to the Boyne City Library. Hundreds of cookies are being prepared by church members who will be offering them at reasonable prices.

Former employees sue Library

East Jordan Library problems continue as two former employees of the Jordan Valley District Library are suing for wrongful discharge, a charge that the library board denies.

The two, Karen A. Bennett and Barbara R. Alger say they were fired for refusing to do janitorial services.

According to the library board, both resigned from their positions after the library tried to contain some of the costs of operation and included minor cleaning of bathrooms and other areas in the work schedule.

Alger and Bennett filed their suit with the 33rd Circuit Court November 4. They are asking for more than $10,000 in damages as they figure that the loss of their positions has caused them to lose future earnings and benefits. Both say they have not been able to find other similar employment.

According to members of the library board, employees of the library are asked to perform "light housekeeping" duties as part of their work. The two indicated the housekeeping duties were heavy physical labor, and could not do the work as it would jeopardize their health.

The two also said the library director, "set them up" by requiring them to do the extra work and by asking them to work different hours so they would not be able to be present during a library board meeting. The board and Pringle both deny the charges.

Part of the problem stems from a change in worker policies that the board changed early this year after determining a shortfall in funding. The major change was from an alleged "Contract" the board had with the two to an agreement that placed them as "at will" employees.

Pringle was given permission at the same meeting to fire any employee who refused to perform the light housekeeping functions. When the two women refused to do the work, and failed to continue to work, the library board had no choice but assume they quit.

Scare tactic not needed

Sometimes, we get ashamed of scare tactics of other newspapers, trying to sell readers a tale of gloom and doom. And have the general public reading it and believing it may be possible.

Such was the case last week when an area newspaper decided it was good journalism to spread rumors that would have decimated Boyne City and wiped it off the map as far as a manufacturing community.

Sure, a lot of us were concerned, but those who understand the manufacturing processes of area plants, as well as what was being done nationally by defense plants throughout the nation, knew the gloom and doom forecasted by newspapers wasn't justified.

Yes, Boyne City did lose a manufacturing plant, and along with it, many second and first income jobs which that plant created. But in the second case, we feel the accusation of another plant being lost was just that, an accusation and a pure rumor.

Rumor, because if the newspaper had delved a little deeper than the surface, they would know the Boyne City plant is the sole source of many items used in the defense world.

Because of that, and the expense of trying to move the equipment that makes the parts plus the additional expense of recertifying the machines and plant, to meet government codes it just wasn't true.

In times like this, we don't need an outside newspaper telling our community what is going to happen. We wonder if they would run such a story if a plant in their community were going to have a company meeting to tell all the employees something at one time, so the employees could hear the news directly instead of second hand.

What did happen, is just the consolidation of a declining defense industry that makes total sense if you have any managerial experience.

We applaud the way the plant presented the news to the employees and damn the forecasting of doom and gloom of any newspaper in the state for those type of articles.

Needless cuts in welfare

Editor,
News of Michigan leaks down here every now and then. It makes me think. How can turning certain welfare recipients out of their homes, and cutting off their food supply in one of Michigan's earliest and most severe winters by cancelling their State assistance possibly help the state's economy? Of course it may have helped the members of congress when they voted to raise their own pay. Engler tells these recipients to go get jobs. Has he tried that lately in their circumstances?

As a volunteer transporter for social services for the past eleven years, I could count on the fingers of one hand the recipients whom I thought were undeserving and that would be stretching it. Because of an infinitesimal minority, a great many innocent people are being made to suffer.

And those self-righteous people who point at single women with children, legitimate or otherwise; how many of these children did you father? Also when you were welcoming home the soldiers from Saudi Arabia with yellow ribbons and hoopla, how many of those uniforms covered soldiers who were raised in single parent homes supported by the state? Would it have been better for those children to have starved or died of exposure? Think it over.

This young man from Boyne City near the turn of the century showed he could deliver the goods with his cart and mule. He evidently delivered goods to area residents as the cart had boxes installed to keep things from falling out onto the roads around town.

BY JIM SILBAR

The word of the week seems to be "When do you think the lake is going to freeze over." After all, it did freeze over in December last year and the people who really want to get started ice fishing are starting to make guesses as to when it will freeze.

To most of the people who have been around these parts for many years, the lake won't freeze over until the second or third week of January. At least that is what they are saying based upon previous years. Last year, they say, was a freak of nature, because it froze over in December.

Too, if the lake does freeze over in January, that will mean the lake did not freeze over at all in 1991. That is because it froze over in 1990 and 1992.

But that is calling it reality. I much prefer thinking of seasons as the lake seems to freeze over every year.

Of course, there may be some year when it doesn't freeze at all, but I haven't seen that happen in the short time I have been around.

And if it doesn't freeze, then what will all those fishermen do when they can't get their ice shanties out to play cards in and drink coffee while they are waiting for the fish to bite.

Another thought is that since we are in a depression, maybe this year will be a good one for smelt fishing. Someone said the smelt always bite when times are tough.

Myself, I could use a couple of meals of smelt. Seems like I am the only one in the family who likes them, while one other tolerates them and the others just refuse to eat something that lives in water.

About the only thing she will eat that comes out of the water is something like lobster, and that only lately after she determined it was eat or starve.

I even like to eat some other kinds of fish also, like whitefish, walleye and maybe perch. Heck, I even like to buy that smoked fish that leaves you with an awful amount of breath. Or pickled herring, and something like octopus and squid.

I will have to admit I have eaten all of that, some of it was good, while others tasted like shoe leather. But, I digress.

Just when the lake freezes over?

Well, I will give a free subscription to the person who comes the closest. Only thing is, they have to use my rules.

I won't be checking the lake by the minute as in a real contest, and I won't want to miss any meals waiting for the exact minute the lake does freeze.

So I will note the day, take all of the entries from that day and draw one out and he or she will be declared the winner.

Then we can all sit back and enjoy watching the guys pulling out the shanties to make up the famous Smeltania City, laugh in the face of the DNR who doesn't want anybody on the lake in the winter to have any fishing or fun, and enjoy eating what we catch. Just send the entries in to our office, and we will have to tally them arrange them to fit the calendar, so we can be ready to award the prize.

In the meantime, pray for cold, really cold weather if you say the lake is going to freeze over yet this year. If not, figure out when you think and let us know.

Problems, problems, problems...I think I am going to have to buy a new computer as the one I have has started to make mistakes. Of course, no blame can be expected of the person running the machine, as everyone around here, knows who is boss. But the real boss won't touch the machine, as it might bite or something.

A broken computer sure puts a delay in the productivity, as you can't compose as fast due to keyboards of typewriters when

The Way It Was

Ask Al Gruler, Jr. what kind of luck he had deer hunting this past season and you'll hear a tale of woe.

Seems that on the second day of the gun season hunt, Al and his buddy, Scott Leech, were hunting south of US-31, near Blackbird Road, when things started happening that put a crimp in their anticipation of a successful season.

Walking into a pre-scouted, permission granted area, they came upon four deer bedded down on the high bank overlooking the highway.

Al said, "The deer stood up, hesitating momentarily, then ran down over the bank towards US 31, and in a matter of a few seconds I heard two quick thumps and I knew the deer had collided with a vehicle. Leaving my rifle on the crest of the bank, Scott and I ran down to see if everyone was OK."

Continuing on Al said that the two deer, a doe and a fawn, lay near the vehicle. According to the woman involved in the collision (name withheld at her request) the doe had attempted to leap over her vehicle, but instead had slid across the hood smashing out the windshield then coming over the top where it joined the windshield.

But that wasn't the extent of damage to the vehicle. Evidently the fawn, close behind the doe, had collided with the back door window on the drivers side and it was shattered.

Al said the fawn lay gasping on the should of the road. Going over to check on it Al said as he approached the fawn it scrambled to its feet and raced away.

Al said that the whole incident had a simple beginning and ending, but after the "Story" started making the rounds it got dressed up with a dozen different versions, some not so good.

But his version of what happened really happened on the morning of Sunday, November the 16th, is literally straight from the people who were involved.

P.S.: By the way the damage to the ladies vehicle tallied up to a $4500 repair bill.

But it was a miracle that she wasn't injured, had the doe come through the windshield on the drivers side.

Oh yes, talking to the lady she said Al, and his friend were most helpful, calling for assistance on their cellular phone.

So dear (deer?) friends although this was, more than likely an unavoidable accident, there are among in Michigan, 40-45,000 yearly car-deer accidents many that could have been avoided by learning to avoid "tunnel vision". Learn to take in a broader scope when tooling down the road. Especially at night.

Deer can be anywhere at anytime.

Correction: A couple of weeks ago an article on varied colored deer, called piebald, turned out to be pie bald. Editor blamed it on a word processor glitch.
