

Weather

The week was actually better than predicted, with more sun and warmer temperatures that still remained below average. The upgrade was especially appreciated on Earth Day, with none of the anticipated rain dampening planned activities. Sunday skies were a wind-swept blue, with the thermometer climbing to the low 50s. Once again, there's gloom in the forecast, though, with cloudy skies and highs just in the 40s for the rest of the week – a full 10 degrees below normal for this time of year. LAST YEAR: Temperatures ranging from the 50s to 70s were predicted, following a cool and rainy week.

Charter update passes

In a decisive vote of 247 yes to 75 no, East Jordan city residents approved a new charter to guide the city into the 21st century.

The charter directs the change to a city administrator form of government. The administrator, a professional with expertise in management and budgeting, will be employed at the will of a seven-member city commission.

Proponents of the new charter have compared the reformed power structure to the management of a well-organized business.

Perhaps the most delighted at the passage of the issue will be the nine members of the charter commission. The commission developed the new charter through an intensive effort that began 18 months ago. Elected for three years, the commission will continue in the role of advisors during a transitional period of adjustment from the 1911 charter to the 1995 version.

An in-depth report on the transition period will be presented in an upcoming issue of the East Jordan Journal.

School districts adjusts for growth – again

BY DEB SAYGERS HOBBS
Journal Editor

The recent bond issue failure indirectly steered discussion at the April 11 meeting of the East Jordan School Board.

The board agreed to add one new full time position, and two new half time positions to the teaching staff for the 1995-96 school year. The number of students entering first grade next fall has made the addition of another class necessary, so the full position is for a first grade teacher.

"To be consistent with what we believe is best for students," said district superintendent Chip Hansen, "We need to keep the student/teacher ratio at 21 or 23-to-one for first grade." Hansen said without the new section, the ratio will climb to almost 30 students to one teacher.

The other staff additions will be a special education teacher and a middle school Life Management (health education) specialist.

Elementary principal Charles Hershberger said the primary staff recommended the addition of an extra first grade classroom rather than a return to junior primary.

"With 107 students projected, we do have some with developmental concerns," said Hershberger. He noted a high student/teacher ratio would be particularly inappropriate because of such cases. The staff also

Facility review

Analyzing the failure

BY DEB SAYGERS HOBBS
Journal Editor

Refusing to take no for an answer, the Facilities Review Committee (FRC), a school board-appointed group representing a cross-section of the East Jordan community, is recommending a return to the polls.

The proposal will remain the same – a 15-year bond to build a new middle school and renovate both the existing elementary and high schools.

"I think we're obligated to try again," said FRC member Wayne Fries, speaking the consensus of the group.

The FRC met April 12 to plan a reaction to the failed 2.25 mill bond issue. During a brainstorming session organized by school board member and FRC facilitator John Kempton, the group discussed why the issue failed.

The committee decided the primary reasons were:

- Timing – Many residents were still reeling from February notification of increased property assessments, and rejected more taxes with a no vote on March 20.

- Misunderstanding – The committee felt many voters do not believe the extent of overcrowding; don't understand the cost of building projects; and are confused over the details of Proposal A.

- Missed targeting of benefit families – Promotions did not make the project personal enough to those benefiting directly – such as elementary families – or for the community at large; only 22 percent of registered K-12 parents voted; and comparative values were not made available (an example: relating the costs of an addition to the existing building versus the cost of a new building).

RADIANTLY HAPPY, EJHS student Mandy Wittengen was crowned Miss East Jordan 1995 at the annual pageant, April 22.

Miss East Jordan named

BY DEB SAYGERS HOBBS
Journal Editor

The theme was "In Living Color," as a prize package including a $1,000 scholarship was awarded to the new Miss East Jordan, Mandy Wittengen, at the annual scholarship pageant, April 22.

Wittengen, a senior at East Jordan High School, competed against four other young women to earn the honor of representing the city during the upcoming year.

A panel of five judges from the surrounding region chose the queen after casual dress, talent, and evening dress with spontaneous public speaking presentations. Each girl was also interviewed by the judges before the pageant.

The daughter of Claude and Roselyn Cutler, Wittengen was also the recipient of a flight duffel bag for top ticket sales. She was sponsored by the Rainbow Bar, Hair Dimensions and Sunset Tanning. For the talent presentation, she choreographed and performed a modern dance.

First runner-up and winner of a $500 scholarship, as well as a variety of other prizes, was EJHS senior Heather MacNaughton. She also received an engraved plaque and 35mm camera for the best talent performance, as well as a portable cassette stereo as the People's Choice award.

Second runner-up was EJHS senior Catherine Mills. She received a prize package including a $300 scholarship, and was named Miss Congeniality by her fellow contestants. The award included an engraved plaque and AM/FM clock radio.

Amelia Fleming and Catherine Bowerman also participated, and received prize packages including a $150 scholarship. Fleming also won the casual modeling with prepared public speaking segment of the pageant, along with an engraved plaque and Walkman radio and cassette player.

Entertainment during the pageant included performances by Miss East Jordan 1993 Amy Mickey, and her sister Julie, Miss East Jordan 1994. East Jordan pianist Artie Jones also performed.

The pageant was organized by a board of directors – members are Sue Goebel, Chris Kempton, Russ Peck, Allan Peterson, Nancy Sherman, and Joanne Smith. The pageant was hosted by East Jordan business woman Mary Faculak and Jim Brown, English and history teacher in East Jordan schools.

Swan City memories

The annual East Jordan Derby has a long tradition of bringing out the boys in good-natured competition as this 1952 photograph (in the present East Jordan Middle School gym) proves. From left, the jockeys are Max Damoth, Gayle Saxton, Harry Jankovich, Ken Diller, Norm Bartlett, and John Downing. The "steeds", built many years ago, appear eager to go every year at the Rotary Father and Son Banquet - as they will again on Saturday, April 29.

Sax says ...

Writing is in his blood
by Gayle Saxton

It has been 35 years since I last wrote anything for the late Marshall Sayles, editor of the now defunct East Jordan News and Charlevoix County Herald, owned and operated by the late G. A. Lisk and his son, Paul Lisk. Paul ran and published the Central Lake Torch for awhile (35 years!) before retiring from the news media.

My journalistic interest dates back to around 1930, when I assisted Mrs. Mable Secord and her son George writing for the Grand Rapids Herald.

In the summer, I believe that it was either 1934 or 1935, I was asked by the elder of the Lisks if I would write the activities of the Charlevoix County Fair. Yes! I said - and he even gave me $40 for doing it.

Approximately five years prior to writing the fair, I got my initial experience writing sports as a scorekeeper for the men's slow pitch softball league. I have been writing ever since, except for a few years that I spent instructing ROTC at Austin High School as a U.S. Army Sgt. in WWII.

I've been writing here at Houghton Lake for the past 35 years.

When I was in the sixth grade I purchased an old L.C. Smith typewriter. It would still be in use if my very close friend Marshall had not bumped the table and there went my typewriter . . .

After graduating from Alma College in February, 1948, I spent two-and-a-half years teaching and coaching all sports at Class C Carson City High School. In September, 1960, I moved to my home town, East Jordan. I taught Spanish and coached all sports.

Is it true what the Bible says, "A man is without honor in his home town"? I thought so when I was not given a contract to coach, so I was on my way to Houghton Lake High School.

East Jordan native Gayle Saxton has been writing, reporting, and broadcasting sports for many years. Now a retired educator in Houghton Lake, "Sax" will share his memories of East Jordan and his many friends through this column in future issues of the Journal.

River group appreciates interest

Thank you for your coverage of "Sights and Sounds of the Jordan: A River Celebration" held last month. It was a huge success. The main purpose of the event was to raise awareness of our group - Friends of the Jordan River Watershed, Inc. (FOJ) - and to promote one of our major efforts underway.

This effort is achieving the DNR Natural River designation of the lower Jordan River from Rogers Bridge to its mouth at Lake Charlevoix as a "Wild-Scenic" River as the remainder of the Jordan is so designated.

FOJ will be holding a preliminary public meeting not a public hearing - (that will come later) - on the topic to allow the DNR to discuss the proposed designation with interested citizens. This meeting will take place on Thurs., May 11, at 7 p.m., at the East Jordan Civic Center.

Once again, thank you for your continuous coverage of this effort. We hope to see you at the upcoming meeting. Thank you.

Blood drive a success

BY DEB SAYGERS HOBBS
Journal Editor

"We had outstanding community support," coordinator Tom Sheridan said of the March 30 American Red Cross blood drive sponsored by East Jordan High School.

Sheridan attributed meeting 122 percent of the original donor goal to that fact. All possible time slots were filled, beginning at 9 a.m., and donors were still lined up at 3:30 p.m., well after the scheduled 1:45 closing time.

Sheridan said 77 donors gave 70 pints of blood (seven deferrals.)

"Our goal was 55," said Sheridan. "It was just a fantastic response."

Not surprisingly, first-time donors dominated the ranks, one of the purposes of the high school location. Even so, there were 30 people donating their first pint, an excellent record.

But first-timers weren't the only ones present. Guy Vallance of East Jordan made an impression on many of the students - it was his 76th donation.

"He's been giving since he was 18," informed Angie Swan. "Now he's 66." Swan was working at the sign-up table with Dawn Loviska. By 11:40 a.m., the girls had checked in 40 eager donors.

Most of the work stations were manned by high school students. They served and passed out goodies and punch for donors completing the process. And of course, many of them were donors themselves.

Amid protests and plaudits, paving project approved

BY MARY FREY, Editorial Director

ECHO TOWNSHIP — A special April 4 meeting to finalize paving plans for a local road brought area residents out in force earlier this month.

Many spoke in favor of a long-time plan to make Skinkle Road the township's next paving project. Several others favored Muckle Road.

When the dust settled, plans to pave 2.33 miles of Skinkle, beginning at Old State and continuing to the township line, passed by a 3-2 vote.

Approving the plan were supervisor Bob Pearsall, clerk Shirley Folsom and treasurer Shirley Beal. Opposing were trustees Dale LaVanway and Donald Holland.

LaVanway's concerns centered on the validity of the original schedule (paving Finkton, Skinkle and Lewis roads, in that order) formulated years before his term began. He also took exception to paving a half-mile of county-owned Skinkle Road property. "They own 80 acres with that frontage," he said. "Why should we pay for it?"

Pearsall explained original plans involved paving either end of Skinkle and leaving the county-owned portion untouched. However, he said road commission officials responded, "Why leave it? We'll try to do it all."

Holland's problem was not with the target site, but with the Antrim County Road Commission itself. "Until they start maintaining our blacktop roads, I'm not in favor of paving," he said. "Look at Vance Road — it's needed a sealcoat for five or six years. We pay for it and they just let it deteriorate."

Holland also expressed concerns on project agreement language, which states, "... changes in scope of the work or unforeseen conditions may change this ($182,000) estimated cost." He predicted serious cost overruns could result.

Some disgruntled audience members questioned Skinkle being paved at all, and urged a traffic survey to measure actual need.

However, Pearsall was not to be swayed.

"This board sat here two years ago and told the people Skinkle Road was next and by God as long as I'm sitting here, I'm going to keep my word," he said. His comment was met with applause.

By setting aside $8,000 to $10,000 annually over a period of several years, about $100,000 has been saved toward the Skinkle project, Pearsall said. "The road commission said they'll do it all for what we have, and if there's any left over, we can pay it next year," he added.

Audience member Leon Beal praised the board's long-term commitment. "Most townships around here are broke; some of them from paying high salaries for their elected officials. Echo Township's not like that. They've done a whale of a job with what little money they had, and we've come a long way with our roads because of it."

Supervisor Pearsall later stated a review of the agreement with road commission officials had confirmed there will be no additional costs for the Graham Road culvert work. "They were going to replace it anyway," he noted.

In fact, the only difference identified during the discussion was a reduction in asphalt costs to reflect a drop in current prices over the original quote, Pearsall said.

Work on Skinkle "will probably start sometime in June," and be wrapped up in "a couple of weeks," according to road commission field supervisor Fred Hunt.

May requests district court judgeship

Richard W. May, Charlevoix County Prosecuting Attorney, announced that he has submitted a request to Governor Engler to be appointed as the new 90th District Court judge.

"It would be a privilege to complete the term of Judge Harvey C. Varnum who has served the community with integrity, diligence, and understanding for 32 years as a public servant," May said.

"I feel that I am uniquely qualified for the District Court Judgeship because of my twenty-one years of experience in all areas of the law. I have handled criminal cases as both prosecutor and defense attorney, civil disputes, administrative responsibilities, and developed many community programs," May said.

Richard W. May

While in private practice May was also involved in community activities including president of the Boyne City School Board, president of the Chamber of Commerce, planning board which started the Charlevoix County Hospice, and Little League coach.

He is a member of the Emmet/Charlevoix Bar Association, State Bar of Michigan, American Bar Association, and Prosecuting Attorney's Association legislative committee. He has taught courses on criminal law, and law and banking at two community colleges.

Prior to moving to Boyne City seventeen years ago he was as Assistant Prosecutor in Ingham County for five years. He received a Resolution from the Board of Commissioners for improving the quality of life in Ingham County for developing and implementation of the Pre-Trial Diversion program, Career Criminal program, and demonstrating exceptional ability as a trial attorney.

May said as 90th District Court judge, he will stress fair treatment, prompt resolution of cases, seeking victim input before imposing sentences, streamlining of court operations and impositions of tough sentences for assault crimes, drunk driving, and domestic violence.

Handgun class offered in Charlevoix

A course of instruction on hand gun safety will be offered Sat., May 13, 9 a.m. at the Charlevoix Rod and Gun Club, US-31, two miles north of Charlevoix.

The class is designed specifically for women, and will include classroom instruction, training, and practice on the firing range. The class is free of charge to women in Charlevoix County, and is sponsored jointly by the Charlevoix Rod and Gun Club and the Charlevoix County Sheriff's Department.

Charlevoix County Assistant Prosecuting Attorney, Mary Beth Kur, will discuss the rights and responsibilities of hand gun ownership and self-defense issues. Participants who successfully complete the class will be awarded a certificate.

Instructor for the course is Deputy Jim Owens from the Charlevoix County Sheriff's Department. Deputy Owens is certified as an instructor by the National Rifle Association and the Law Enforcement Training Council.

The class is open to any Charlevoix County woman, 18 years of age or older, but registration is limited to 20 participants. If registration warrants, another class may be offered that will be open to both men and women.

Participants should bring their hand gun to the range locked in the trunk of their car, glove box if there is no trunk, or in some other secure fashion; the hand gun registration; 50 rounds of factory ammunition; and ear and eye protection. All hand guns will be inspected prior to firing on the range.

Classroom instruction will take place in the morning, with firing range instruction after lunch. (Lunch is on your own.)

To register, call 547-9062. If you have further questions, call Deputy Jim Owens at the Charlevoix County Sheriff's Department.

The sheriff's department and the rod and gun club are not advocating or encouraging hand gun ownership. The decision to own a hand gun is a very personal and highly emotional issue, but this training is offered to those who choose to own a hand gun, to teach them how to shoot and to handle a gun safely.

Mushroom Festival coming

For over thirty years, springtime has lured outdoor enthusiasts and gourmet food lovers from throughout the U.S. and foreign countries to the Boyne City area to search for the elusive morel mushroom.

During the Mushroom Festival, you may enter the National Mushroom Hunting Contest, sponsored by the Boyne Valley Lions. A group is taken to a secret destination to hunt for this delicacy. There is a chance for cash prizes and trophies for the most morels found. But more importantly, you can return home with enough elusive morels to compliment meals throughout the year.

The carnival is from Thursday to Sunday, May 18-21, with events including local restaurants featuring mushroom specialties on the shores of Lake Charlevoix, and a children's mushroom hunt. All weekend, local restaurants will feature morel specialties, and you may browse through the arts and crafts fair, and purchase morel related items.

A mushroom lecture will be held Friday evening with information from the experts. A special "guided hunt" will depart Friday evening so hunting contestants can practice and get "mushroom eyes" before the contest on Saturday. Maps of nearby state forest lands for hunting morels are also available.

The Mushroom Festival Cookbook will be offered this year. It features morel recipes from local chefs, restaurants, and championship hunters.

Also new to the festival this year is a Hole-in-One Golf Contest. Prizes include a fishing boat.

Bringing history alive

East Jordan High School students were rapt observers as Holland historian and actress Sandra Hansen became five different women of the past, presenting their unique views of the Civil War as interpreted from actual diaries and journals. Two of the women were escaped slaves, the others were a physician, a southern belle, and a woman who disguised herself as a man and enlisted in the army. Women's History Alive was made possible by a Malpass Foundation mini-grant, and the East Jordan Academic Boosters, and was one of a series of special presentations during the school year.

Christianity is not a system of human philosophy; not a religious ritual, nor a code of moral ethics.

It is the application of divine life through Christ.

Without the Way – there is no going. Without the Truth – there is no knowing. And without the Life – there is no living.

Oh! but there are good preachers/pastors in northern Michigan; listen and heed their messages. Read myriads of good Christian literature, but most of all adhere to God's Holy Word in the Bible and obey.

Four generations of women from one family gathered together recently, celebrating the January 27 birth of Noel Keri Jadon. ## UMW sew bibs at meeting

The tables were decorated with a St. Patrick's Day theme for the March 14 meeting of the United Methodist Women. Delicious refreshments were served by hostess Virginia Vance.

Juanita Delo conducted the meeting in the absence of president Evelyn Morken. Linda Watson read February's minutes, and Jackie Brooks read the treasurer's report. The group voted to donate $150 to the renovation of the parsonage kitchen.

For the program, the UMW became "Sew 'n' Sew". Some ladies cut out bibs from patterns, while others pinned and basted. The result was a stack of bibs and some sheets and quilts for the Wesley House in Ohio. The group is also still collecting greeting cards and plastic pill bottles.

Members are asked to remember their Prayer Pals and the reading program. Books for borrowing are displayed every Sunday.

At the April 11, the group heard Jan Mancinelli of the Women's Resource Center in Petoskey speak about the work of the organization. Members donated useful items and food for the women and children the center serves in an "April Shower of Gifts." After Ours Circle

The circle met the evening of March 14 with six members present. LuAnne Reed conducted the meeting in the absence of president Linda Chase.

Helen Shaw brought a list of shut-ins to receive an Easter visit and basket. Members spent the rest of the meeting putting together the baskets which included goodies, tissue, lotion, and a squeeze bunny, handmade by Adeline Bowerman.

THE ILLUSTRATED BIBLE

Another Mystery of Faith

"Among you, whoever wants to be great must be your servant, and whoever wants to be first must be the willing slave of all."

— Matthew 20: 26

Do you know anyone who has really "made it" in the eyes of the world? Individuals within our society measure success in terms of money, power, prestige, authority and titles. In this passage from Matthew however, Jesus radically reorients the criteria by which success is measured. Real success, according to this new criterion, is servanthood. When one serves his fellow human beings with costly acts of love, he is a success in the eyes of God. Thus, it is possible to be a success in the eyes of the world but a failure in the eyes of God. Wouldn't it be marvelous if we viewed our homes, jobs and financial resources as vehicles for serving God? By whose criteria do you want to be a success?

Some facts on underage drinking and driving

- Nearly one-third of Michigan eighth graders are currently using alcohol, compared to one quarter nationally.
- While Michigan drivers ages 15-20 represent only 11.3 percent of the driving population, they accounted for 14 percent of crashes involving alcohol during 1990-91.
- Of the Michigan crashes in which teenagers were killed in 1991, 42 percent involved alcohol.
- Daily alcohol use is three times the national average among Michigan eighth graders, and more than twice the national average in 10th grade.
- More than one in four 10th graders binge drink, and nearly 30 percent of Michigan 12th graders do so. Another 17 percent of Michigan eighth graders binge drink, compared to 13 percent nationally. Binge drinking is drinking more than five or more drinks in a row in the past two weeks.
- Alcohol-related motor vehicle crashes are the leading cause of death for youth who can legally drive. A young person under the legal drinking age is nearly twice as likely to die in an alcohol-related crash as an adult over 21.
- Although alcohol use increases the risk of a motor vehicle crash for all drivers, for young drivers the risk begins to increase at very low blood alcohol concentrations.

House revamping "polluters pay" law

Redesigning the environmental laws that govern property cleanup would spark redevelopment and hold polluters liable for costs, said state Rep. Beverly A. Bodem after the House overwhelmingly approved a three-bill reform package.

The Alpena Republican said House Bills 4596-4598 would revamp Public Act 307, better known as the "polluters pay" law. The package streamlines the cleanup process, encourages recycling of urban sites and effectively protects public health. Bodem added that current cleanup standards have not been able to promote reinvestment because standards have been too arbitrary and expensive.

"The impetus for this package is based on the fact that existing law, which has good intentions, is not working," Bodem said. "PA 307 became its own worst enemy," Bodem said that instead of fostering reuse, the law caused owners to build on clean sites. She noted many companies identified as the polluter have also been getting off the hook, costing taxpayers millions of dollars for litigation to determine who can afford cleanup costs.

"Meanwhile," said Bodem, "nobody is being held accountable and sites are not being cleaned. PA 307 says you are guilty until proven innocent. That's unfair and against the principles on which this country was built. Ensuring due process of the law is critical to any liability decision." Bodem explained a land-use based standard will be

Red Devils split with Lancers

East Jordan got revenge on Ellsworth in the second game of their softball double header April 20, boosting morale and preparing them for the grueling Lake Michigan schedule ahead of them.

Ellsworth's talented bunch intimidated the Red Devils enough to force errors and capitalize, leading to a 10-0 Lancer victory.

"Mentally we played very poorly," said East Jordan coach Meg Fowler.

Angie Snyder took the loss for East Jordan, allowing 13 hits, striking out one and walking one. JoDee Cam had two hits for the Devils.

Game two was a new beginning, and the Devils took advantage of that to take a 2-1 lead into the sixth inning. Ellsworth jumped up 3-2, but the Red Devils grouped together a six run sixth inning and pulled off the upset, 8-3.

"The girls never gave up after the first game and turned a bad day into a much better day. They showed a lot of heart and desire," Fowler said. "Amelia Fleming played great at shortstop and Cam was excellent at catcher."

Dawn Meads won the game, allowing six hits with three strikeouts, and contributing three hits on offense including a double. Angie Reid added two hits, Cathy King doubled and Fleming had a hit for the upstart Red Devils.

East Jordan girls run first; boys edged

Without running a single relay, East Jordan took on and defeated Benzie Central and conference rival Harbor Springs in a triangular meet April 20.

The Red Devils have just 10 very able girls running, and Harbor was without several runners due to injuries. The combination proved fatal for the Rams chances to win. East Jordan scored 66.5, Harbor 61.5 and Benzie Central 34.

Leading the ladies were Callie Ransom, a four-time winner, Jenny Goebel won twice as did Amanda Pepin.

Ransom won the 100 dash in 13.54 seconds, and the long jump with 14-9, the 200 dash with a 29.18 timing and the 400 in 1:08.12. Goebel took first in the 1600 run, 6:18.82, and the high with 5-11. Pepin picked up first place in the 100 hurdles in 18.76, and the 300 hurdles in 58.93.

On the boys side, Benzie Central edged out the Red Devils 70.33 to 69.67, with Harbor Springs a distant third with 32.

East Jordan won seven events, two by Steve Wiltfong. He took the high jump with a leap of 6-0, and the 300 hurdles in 44.86. Mike Newkirk added two wins, the 800 in 2:06.53 and the 1600 in 4:39.06.

Single winners included Steve Burks in the 110 hurdles with 17.99, and Josiah Middaugh in the pole vault, clearing 11-0. The 4x400 relay team won with a 3:45.5 clocking.

implemented to determine the level of cleanup required, compared with current law which requires all sites to be cleaned at levels beyond what is necessary.

The package also would:

- Allow greater flexibility in addressing groundwater contamination by eliminating the current requirement that aquifers be remediated in all cases.
- Require a baseline assessment of environmental conditions to calculate liability with respect to future use of the site.
- Modify requirements for soil cleanup, eliminating unrealistic assumptions about the need to protect groundwater in areas where it's not vulnerable.
- Permit institutional controls, such as local ordinances, to manage contaminated sites.
- Bring the state cleanup standard for carcinogens in line with federal guidelines, changing it from 10-in-1,000,000 to 1-in-100,000. This maintains a high level of protection while creating significant savings.

A mail carrier's best friend ...

Since the advent of door-to-door mail delivery in the late 1800s, thousands of the nation's letter carriers have heard well-intentioned homeowners exclaim, "Don't worry, my dog won't bite," just as the animal is tearing into the carrier's flesh.

Unfortunately, over the years the dog-letter carrier relationship has been joked about and laughed at while postal customers bear the costs and dog bite victims bear the often significant pain.

Every year, dog bites cost postal customers millions of dollars for medical expenses and costs associated with replacing injured employees.

Although these costs to the Postal Service and its customers are measurable in dollars and cents, there is no way to calculate the pain and terror experienced by thousands of past and present letter carriers. In many instances, these dog bite victims have to resort to filing lawsuits to claim damages due to dog owner negligence.

After a 1988 dog attack in Miami, Florida, the owners of two Irish Setters were ordered to pay $274,850 to cover the medical expenses, pain, suffering, and lost work time of a letter carrier who permanently injured her knee during an attack.

In September, 1992, a California letter carrier was viciously mauled by seven dogs owned by one of her customers. Her ordeal started immediately after she had delivered mail to the residence. One of the dogs burst through a screen door, viciously pulled her to the ground, and bit her repeatedly. Six other dogs from the same household joined the brutal attack.

The carrier was bitten 28 times on one arm before the owner was able to pull the animals off. She spent two days in the hospital, incurring medical bills in excess of $5,000. Postal officials called the attack the worst in recent memory.

As a result of the attack, mail service to residents in the immediate area was affected. The Postal Service stopped delivery to all addresses on the block. Delivery did not resume until the dogs were removed from the area.

To a large extent, the pain, suffering, and mail service disruptions attributed to dog attacks are preventable. If a letter carrier's safety is considered threatened by a loose or otherwise uncontrolled or vicious dog, mail service can be delayed or withheld.

As responsible community residents and caring citizens, dog owners are encouraged to properly restrain their animals at all times.

Keeping a dog on an appropriately strong leash or tether, in a fenced yard, or inside the house during normal mail delivery hours will reduce the problem of dogs attacking letter carriers as well as meter readers, and others who, as part of their job, visit households regularly.

Pet owners who get mail delivery through a doorway mail slot should keep pets from entrance ways during normal delivery hours.

A story of cruelty and kindness

Editor's note: This article came to us from Kerry Ovaitt at the Jordan Valley Animal Clinic. The cruel details of the injuries have been left unaltered so the reader can understand the extent of Jet's injuries, as well as his canine courage.

Recently, the national news media carried the heart-wrenching story of two Texas police officers who allegedly used a small stray dog for target practice. While the officers were acquitted of the charges, the story captured the attention of animal lovers everywhere who were outraged at the very idea of such a cruel atrocity inflicted on an innocent, helpless dog.

The truth is, this type of cruelty occurs with sickening frequency. Each year, most often in late winter or early spring, we see several cases of gunshot wounds inflicted on pets. Sometimes the wounds are minor, more often they are life-threatening or fatal.

Such was the case with "Jet." The Labrador mix stray was brought into our clinic in early December by clients whose son found him in a field on Mitchell Road in Ellsworth.

Jet may have been injured for days. His right rear leg had been shattered by what must have been a high-caliber bullet. The entrance wound was about 1.5 inches in diameter. The exit wound was a big as a large fist.

About 2 inches of bone had been blown away, as well as the surrounding muscle, tendons, nerves and skin. His nearly severed leg dangled loosely, held on only by a few blood vessels, nerves and skin.

Miraculously, Jet's foot was still warm, indicating a viable blood supply. His other rear leg was seriously damaged by shrapnel from the explosion of bullet hitting bone. He was dazed from shock and blood loss, feverish from infection and pain.

As we hurried to assess his vital signs and administer antibiotics and medication for pain and shock, he fixed each of us in turn with his penetrating brown eyes and clearly said, "I trust you." Through all of the manipulations, injections, and being lifted and carried, he never once whined or attempted to bite, as injured animals naturally will do. Clearly he understood that unlike the heartless idiot who shot him, these people meant no harm, and wanted to help. He placed a warm wet kiss on my nose.

We wrapped a temporary bandage on the leg to keep it from flopping and to protect it from further contamination, and waited for his condition to stabilize. We also waited to hear from owners who surely must be missing this exceptional dog.

The Good Samaritans who brought Jet in agreed to do what they could to locate the owner. Area animal shelters were alerted, found ads placed in papers, notices posted in stores. We waited two days, and decided surgery needed to be performed to begin the healing process.

Under anesthesia, we were able to take radiographs and explore the wounds more closely. It was worse than we initially thought. We resigned ourselves to trying to save the leg, but were convinced it would probably end up being amputated. So the stray underwent the first of four surgeries to piece together his mangled leg.

By this time, we were calling him Jet, partly because of his rich black coat, and partly as an optimistic wish for his future.

For what seemed like weeks, we lifted him in and out of his cage to clean him and wash the urine and feces from his coat. He was still unable to use the less seriously damaged rear leg, so he suffered the humiliation of having to relieve himself where he lay. We would encourage him to try to walk, but weakness and pain thwarted his efforts. Through it all, he maintained his wonderful attitude, never crying, growling, or even thinking about biting. Instead he would wash our faces with gratitude after every exhausting clean-up.

Finally, on the 10th day following his admission, someone who thought he might be Jet's owner called. He wanted the dog, but was unwilling to pay even half of the costs we had incurred in Jet's care, and refused to reveal his name. We knew Jet would need more surgery, so after some discussion, it was agreed we would keep Jet and find him a good home that was willing and able to care for him.

Two days later, Jet underwent his second surgery, this one to reposition and reinforce the stainless steel pin holding his pieces of leg together. A third surgery followed soon after to apply a different type of fixation device and splint.

Jet was getting depressed from being in a cage so long, so we began taking him home every night. We kept him in the back room to protect him from the resident menagerie. His bladder capacity, compromised by repeated anesthesia, required frequent middle of the night trips to the back yard in the freezing snow, accompanied by a painful combination of struggle, lift, drag and support.

When allowed out of the back room to join us, Jet, although still unable to rise without assistance, would move about the house by dragging himself in a bizarre crawl-hop that caused severe rug burns on his "good" leg. He quickly learned the house rules and gradually gained the strength and coordination for three-legged locomotion.

Jet constantly chewed at his bandage, requiring daily changes or repairs to his splint. Through every painful dressing change, he would stare stoically at me with those liquid brown eyes, and kiss my nose every time it came close to his.

JET, WITH his new master Kerry Ovaitt, continues to wear a cast as the result of a gunshot wound in December.

We stopped looking for a good home for Jet. We had found one.

It has now been over four months since we first saw Jet. He goes to the clinic with us every day, meeting and greeting with a wag and a lick every critter and owner who allows him. He has had a fourth surgery, and is wearing his sixth splint.

He exuberantly races around every chance he gets, like the joyful pup he is. With each step his cast foot taps out a rhythmic reminder of the pain and suffering he has endured because some uncaring fool with a gun used him for target practice. Our rage against this unknown criminal will never fade.

Since this article was written, it has been decided Jet must undergo a fifth surgery, because healing of the leg bone is not progressing satisfactorily. A sliver from either Jet's pelvis or a rib will be attached to the leg in an effort to stimulate growth and strengthen the bone. The alternative is keeping the leg in a cast for Jet's lifetime.

A story of cruelty and kindness

Editor's note: This article came to us from Kerry Ovaitt at the Jordan Valley Animal Clinic. The cruel details of the injuries have been left unaltered so the reader can understand the extent of Jet's injuries, as well as his canine courage.

Recently, the national news media carried the heart-wrenching story of two Texas police officers who allegedly used a small stray dog for target practice. While the officers were acquitted of the charges, the story captured the attention of animal lovers everywhere who were outraged at the very idea of such a cruel atrocity inflicted on an innocent, helpless dog.

The truth is, this type of cruelty occurs with sickening frequency. Each year, most often in late winter or early spring, we see several cases of gunshot wounds inflicted on pets. Sometimes the wounds are minor, more often they are life-threatening or fatal.

Such was the case with "Jet." The Labrador mix stray was brought into our clinic in early December by clients whose son found him in a field on Mitchell Road in Ellsworth.

Jet may have been injured for days. His right rear leg had been shattered by what must have been a high-caliber bullet. The entrance wound was about 1.5 inches in diameter. The exit wound was a big as a large fist.

About 2 inches of bone had been blown away, as well as the surrounding muscle, tendons, nerves and skin. His nearly severed leg dangled loosely, held on only by a few blood vessels, nerves and skin.

Miraculously, Jet's foot was still warm, indicating a viable blood supply. His other rear leg was seriously damaged by shrapnel from the explosion of bullet hitting bone. He was dazed from shock and blood loss, feverish from infection and pain.

As we hurried to assess his vital signs and administer antibiotics and medication for pain and shock, he fixed each of us in turn with his penetrating brown eyes and clearly said, "I trust you." Through all of the manipulations, injections, and being lifted and carried, he never once whined or attempted to bite, as injured animals naturally will do. Clearly he understood that unlike the heartless idiot who shot him, these people meant no harm, and wanted to help. He placed a warm wet kiss on my nose.

We wrapped a temporary bandage on the leg to keep it from flopping and to protect it from further contamination, and waited for his condition to stabilize. We also waited to hear from owners who surely must be missing this exceptional dog.

The Good Samaritans who brought Jet in agreed to do what they could to locate the owner. Area animal shelters were alerted, found ads placed in papers, notices posted in stores. We waited two days, and decided surgery needed to be performed to begin the healing process.

Under anesthesia, we were able to take radiographs and explore the wounds more closely. It was worse than we initially thought. We resigned ourselves to trying to save the leg, but were convinced it would probably end up being amputated. So the stray underwent the first of four surgeries to piece together his mangled leg.

By this time, we were calling him Jet, partly because of his rich black coat, and partly as an optimistic wish for his future.

For what seemed like weeks, we lifted him in and out of his cage to clean him and wash the urine and feces from his coat. He was still unable to use the less seriously damaged rear leg, so he suffered the humiliation of having to relieve himself where he lay. We would encourage him to try to walk, but weakness and pain thwarted his efforts. Through it all, he maintained his wonderful attitude, never crying, growling, or even thinking about biting. Instead he would wash our faces with gratitude after every exhausting clean-up.

Finally, on the 10th day following his admission, someone who thought he might be Jet's owner called. He wanted the dog, but was unwilling to pay even half of the costs we had incurred in Jet's care, and refused to reveal his name. We knew Jet would need more surgery, so after some discussion, it was agreed we would keep Jet and find him a good home that was willing and able to care for him.

Two days later, Jet underwent his second surgery, this one to reposition and reinforce the stainless steel pin holding his pieces of leg together. A third surgery followed soon after to apply a different type of fixation device and splint.

Jet was getting depressed from being in a cage so long, so we began taking him home every night. We kept him in the back room to protect him from the resident menagerie. His bladder capacity, compromised by repeated anesthesia, required frequent middle of the night trips to the back yard in the freezing snow, accompanied by a painful combination of struggle, lift, drag and support.

When allowed out of the back room to join us, Jet, although still unable to rise without assistance, would move about the house by dragging himself in a bizarre crawl-hop that caused severe rug burns on his "good" leg. He quickly learned the house rules and gradually gained the strength and coordination for three-legged locomotion.

Jet constantly chewed at his bandage, requiring daily changes or repairs to his splint. Through every painful dressing change, he would stare stoically at me with those liquid brown eyes, and kiss my nose every time it came close to his.

jordan memories

From Jordan Township Chatter by Mrs. Vern Bundy (Rosalind Westcott) Mancelona Herald, March 29, 1956

You probably know that the country around Mancelona, Bellaire and East Jordan was settled quite a bit ahead of the area between these towns. But did you know that when these towns were settled, in about 1840, the surrounding land, especially north of Mancelona toward East Jordan, was known as the Megesee country?

This name was on records until 1875 when Jordan Township was organized and the name officially changed.

I have no record of Chestonia Township's naming but it must have been later. The book I have on northern Michigan pioneers does not mention Chestonia Township, although there are a number of the pioneer families of that township recorded.

By 1867 the villages were established and people were beginning to move out from them in all directions, wherever they could find a desirable location.

At this time a man named William Jaquay established a homestead on land later included in Jordan Township. He was also the first man to fell a tree in this area, so to him goes the distinction of being known as Jordan Township's first pioneer. Perhaps some time I may be able to tell his story.

In reference to last week's pioneer story I want to say I was most happy to receive a letter from Middleville, written by Mrs. Ida Marchbanks. Formerly Miss Ida Eby, she lived near and was acquainted with the family featured in the story.

Her letter was most interesting and gave a picture of the life of the young people of that day, which I shall cherish. Told by one who really lived it, it took on a reality which I find most difficult to approach. I will be very glad to hear from any others who would like to write.

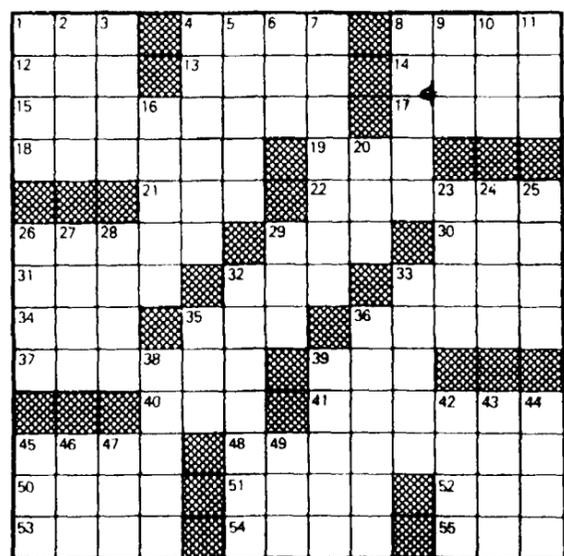

I have a report that an Arctic owl was seen near here Thursday morning. I guess that means the winter was pretty hard farther north. All I know is that if I had his wings, I would have kept on going.

The Ladies Club of north Echo Township is sponsoring a drive for funds for the purpose of erecting a permanent memorial to the war veterans of this area. It is to be erected in East Jordan. It will be 10 feet long, 7 feet high, and there will be some 800 names engraved on metal and covered with glass. If all goes well, it is hoped it will be finished in time so that the dedication service may be held on Memorial Day.

Analyzing the failure

Connecting with voters

The group took several response options into consideration, including:

- holding another election with changes in the plan, either additions or deletions.
- using the district fund balance to add classrooms to the high school now and hold another election for the rest of the plan.
- present the same plan in split issues.

In the end, they decided to stick with the plan they spent the past 10 months developing.

"The plan is a good plan," emphasized FRC member Donna Inman. The group was encouraged by the close outcome of the election, high voter turnout, and a 30 percent increase of yes votes over a previous attempt for a new school building in 1992.

The group also determined a course for rectifying some of the failure issues. A late September election will avoid coinciding with tax bills, as well as county or city millage elections. A stronger caller encouragement campaign will be organized, as well as efforts to encourage voter registration of incoming new parents.

Better education of the community will be the main thrust in efforts to convince voters to buy a new building to house the district's overflowing population. Inman said elementary parents probably have the best perception of the overcrowded conditions, because many are in the building regularly.

"We need to get more parents into the schools," she remarked.

District superintendent Chip Hansen noted that a September election would keep the construction timeline basically intact as originally planned. He predicted that the cost of the bond would remain about the same.

"It appears that bond interest expenses are likely to remain stable through the summer," Hansen told the committee. Consultation with the district's bond management agency will determine the actual bond cost – the FRC will hear a presentation on the details at a meeting in late May.

felt it was better for the children to be assimilated into first grade with good teacher attention rather than held back.

"The majority of the kids that look developmentally needy, we feel would be inappropriate to hold back further, because of age," said Hershberger. "We did wrestle with that, though."

Programs lose classroom space

"Unfortunately," remarked Hansen, referring to the new section, "We're already strapped by how many kids we service at this building."

As a result of space required by the new classroom, as well as other program considerations, music and exploratory arts teachers will lose their classrooms. The two instructors will teach in home classrooms, using carts for transporting equipment and materials.

"It will definitely impact those programs negatively," Hershberger said. He noted teaching in general classrooms will limit space for the physical movement integral to elementary music, and regular piano accompaniment will no longer be possible.

"I have no doubt that the program will still be meaningful," Hershberger added.

In addition, it will be necessary for some elementary classes to be taught in the middle school gym and the cafeteria.

Other growth-related difficulties

Middle school principal Shirley Bishop said the space problems in her building also effect scheduling.

"A critical component of the middle school approach is shared planning time," said Bishop. "It's very difficult to work out scheduling the teachers together."

Another issue is shared staff. Several teachers, most notably band director Tom Steggall, teach both middle and high school classes. For the past two years, students in the three middle school bands have been transported daily to the high school for rehearsal, and this schedule will remain necessary. With the shuttle time required and other scheduling difficulties, rehearsals are shorter in length than previously, and band students must choose between music and computer instruction.

"Band kids are getting short-changed with the present schedule," noted Hansen.

Bishop said the middle school staff is trying to expand the curriculum into more hands-on, performance based instruction.

"But active learning takes more space," she said. "It creates a lot of teacher frustration."

At the high school, Hansen said some adjustments will be made this year, but 1996-97 is when the space issue will become critical.

Classrooms will no longer remain empty during teacher planning periods. The teacher will have to move to the lounge or library during their conference time. Study halls will rotate wherever scheduling allows, rather than meet in one location.

The introduction of PACE (interactive television instruction) in the next school year requires space devoted to the immobile hardware installation. Because of the specialized equipment, Hansen anticipates difficulty using the PACE room for other activities.

As changes occur in vocational education offerings, the district will also re-evaluate the welding and metal shop, which is presently in use only two hours per day.

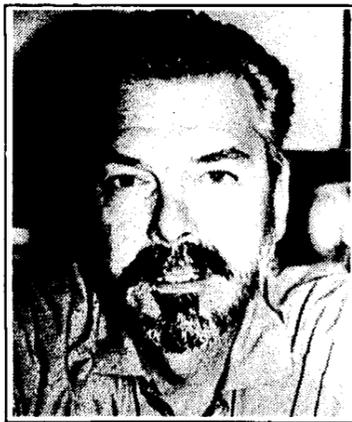

"This is all attributable to the increase in numbers of student enrollment," said Hansen.

New council member named

The East Jordan City Council approved the appointment of former city DPW superintendent John Michael Dionne to fill the council seat vacated April 4 by Sherry Sineway.

The action was taken at the April 18 regular meeting. Dionne, owner of South Arm International marine surveys and consulting, served as superintendent of East Jordan for 11 years.

Dionne came in second against First Ward council member Dan McKinnon for a seat in the November, 1994 election. He will complete Sineway's term, which ends Jan. 1, 1997.
