Last week we said everybody would be too busy with other things to work at the tourist park; and 50 people went right down there to prove we were mittee, Merrit Shaw and Yours Truly were forced to face the facts. They put us to work.

Tom St. Charles says there's another day a' coming for those who were unable to enjoy a fine outing at the park. It's next Thursday afternoon.

Leon Bartlett said papa could not get away with that, so he brought his truck along, too.

Being different, Vern Whiteford brought along a saw instead of an ax. We held the twigs while Vern sawed them off.

Everyone worked like beavers and Tom St. Charles is kinda proud of the way that everyone is taking such a real interest in the whole project.

Only lump in the afternoon was a false alarm which required the driving of the fire truck from burning brush piles to the fire all and back to the brush piles again. Someone saw all the smoke and thought the tourist park was "gonner."

Speaking of Vern Whiteford, back up there a way, he is reminding residents that now is the time to get that picture framing done. Many people wait right up to the holiday and then want a hurry up job on a picture frame for a gift. Come early and avoid the rush, Vern says.

The sun came out Wednesday and right away the danger of outdoor fires was noted. Mrs. Myrtle Gidley called to say some young folks tossed a burning cigarette into the leaves and it started a fire. This is one of the most dangerous times of the year for outdoor fires.

Robinson, in company with Bruce Blanchard, Emmet County superintendent of schools, was in Washington DC attending a national convention of county superintendents and a national meeting on rural education.

He couldn't quite believe his eyes when he first spotted Mrs. Schroeder as she smiled at him in friendly tourist fashion from the doorway of her Potomac Motor Court, when he called next door for Bruce Blanchard.

Not wishing to be too familiar, he called for Mrs. Robinson who had talked with Mrs. Schroeder only three days earlier in Petoskey. Surely enough, the open door revealed Dick, his wife, and four children jammed into the open spaces between suitcases, other paraphanalia and the necessary furniture, sweltering in the humid heat of 90 degrees. Mr. Schroeder's father was visiting them.

Schroeder has been agriculture instructor in East Jordan for the past several years until his recent resignation to accept duty abroad.

The American Way

A United effort is the American way of providing for health and welfare needs. When our forefathers signed the Mayflower Compact and drew up the Declaration of Independence, they planned and worked together for the common good-and they flourished. We can follow their example and in so doing will build better communities.

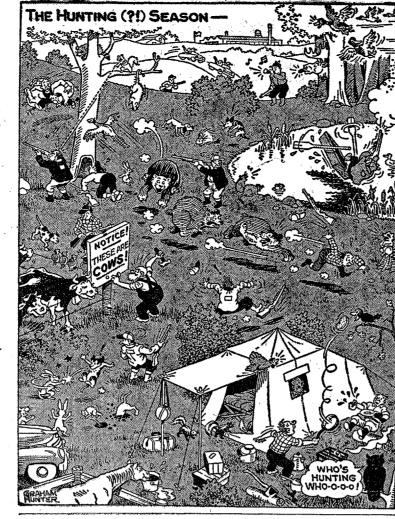

Today, because of our own neglect, we are in danger of losing the liberties our forefathers-and many of our present generationhave fought for. We talk about apathy; but we're apathetic ourselves; we expect someone else t oaccept our responsibilities.

Working and giving in our East Jordan Community Chest campaign is a responsibility and a privilege. Everyone of us owes something to our local community and usually we don't pay back our

BOYNE STRUGGLES TO

SLIM FIRST 7-YEAR WIN

Who is this James Maddock who sparked the University of Michigan football team Saturday to an astounding 14-13 victory over the high and mighty team from Iowa?

He was an unknown until he was sent in to quarterback the Wolverines and they soon came to depend upon him for the spark that would win the day.

Maddock's playing reminded older East Jordan residents of another Maddock who was claimed to be the greatest player on a University of Michigan Football team.

He was Joe Maddock, a former East Jordan Red Devil, who became assistant coach to "Hurry Up" Yost and also an "all western tackle."

Maddock went on to become head football coach at University of Oregon.
