

Tales of the Northern Trail

Following is the story of a recent trip to Alaska taken by Mr. and Mrs. Elmer Brudy of Howell, Michigan (the former Fern Gidley of East Jordan). It is too long to be complete in one issue of the News-Herald and will be continued next week.

We left home (Howell, Michigan) the morning of July 31, 1956, and after an uneventful, but uncomfortably warm, trip across northern Michigan, Wisconsin, Minnesota, North Dakota and Montana, we crossed the border at Sweetgrass, Montana, about noon, on August 4.

Those of us who live near the Canadian border, as we do in Michigan, are familiar with the usual customs and immigration inspection upon crossing the international boundary, and we had already prepared a list of our cameras, radios, field glasses, fishing and camping equipment.

We were also aware of the fact that anyone who intends to travel the Alaska Highway as a part of his route must have in his possession at the time of entry into Canada a sufficient sum of money for the trip—and he must be prepared to show this money and prove to the satisfaction of the frontier officers that he has it.

Many of our friends and relatives had expressed concern over our safety in such a wild and uninhabited country and had suggested that we should carry firearms for our protection, and we had, also investigated the laws regarding the transportation of guns, and had learned that they must be inclosed in a separate container and corded and sealed by means of an official lead seal at the point of entry.

Then, when one leaves Canada, if there is evidence that the cord or seal has been tampered with, the firearm will be placed under seizure. The only exception is when a rifle or shotgun is to be used for hunting while in Canada; in which case the hunting license should be procured in advance. As one travels thru several provinces before reaching Alaska this would become such a costly procedure that one would probably be disappointed if he didn't meet an enraged bear or a charging moose!

So we were prepared to show willingly our money and to deny the possession of firearms. But when the customs official asked "How are you going to protect yourselves from wild animals while fishing along the shores of some of these isolated rivers?" we were rather doubtful as to either the correct answer or the correct method of protection. Then he grinned and said: "Well you just run like hell!"

We had also purchased before starting our trip a travel aid called "the Milepost—guide to the land of the midnight sun." This small book, we were to learn is the "Highway Bible" of the north.

Everyone we met had at least one copy in his possession, and even when we would inquire locally of road conditions and such, our informant often prefaced his remarks with "According to The Milepost—"

The Milepost is a complete up-to-date listing of accommodations, physical features, hunting and fishing areas, camera opportunities, mileage tables, maps and general information regarding the Alaska Highway and the main routes to it through British Columbia and Alberta.

And just knowing that there is going to be gas available in another fifty miles, or tire repairs, or a place to eat or sleep, made it well worth many times its cost; although it didn't take us long to learn that if one were to recognize some of the places therein described one must first don his rose colored glasses!

At any rate, when we reached Edmonton, capital city of Alberta, we knew we were at our last large city enroute, and so we shopped for camp food. We also attempted to buy charcoal to burn in our little grill as it had seemed silly to carry half-burned wood all the distance from home.

However, we met with no success at all, and the clerks in most places acted as though they had never even heard the word before. (As it turned out, it really didn't matter—we were never able to buy fresh meat to broil anyway!) We did buy another tent, a larger and more adequate one from the famed Hudson Bay Company store; as one night in the little pup tent had convinced us that it truly had room for only two pups. And then leaving civilization behind, we were on our way.

We had been warned by The Milepost that the route from Edmonton to Dawson Creek, (454 miles) was not a part of the Alaska Highway, nor up to its standards of construction or maintenance, and "at times almost impassable"—but a necessary evil if one is to gain access to the Alaska Highway from the east.

In this case, there was no exaggeration on the part of our guide! In wet weather the road bogs down, and cars must be towed through, so we presume we were lucky it was dry and dusty. But the dust is unbelievable.

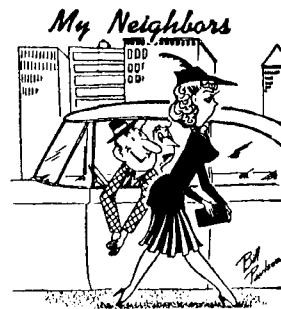

It is so thick that it is impossible to see through it when passing, and one flies by instruments. It is soft and velvety underfoot when given a chance to settle, and yet there is deep muck-like, swampy smelling dirt wherever the caterpillars were working at the side of the roadbed. The roads in this area are traveled with petrified baseballs—and larger!

Trucks throw these from their dual wheels in passing, with the result that few emerge without broken windshields and bent lights. (We were not among the few.) And staggered about on the roadbed are rocks of football size and larger, with the road scrapers continually moving them around to confuse the issue. It is impossible to avoid them all, and after a few attempts, we found it also impossible to straddle them; and we lost count of the number of times that Elmer stopped the car, got out and pushed the largest ones out of our way.

In some areas they are scooping these rocks out of the road and grinding them with rock crushers. When we first came up behind one of these roaring, growling pieces of machinery, enveloped not only in the usual dust, but also in a dense white cloud of ground rock, we stopped. The flagman standing there waved us on. We started bravely enough, but it was like falling into a churning flour bin—absolutely impossible to see or seemingly to breathe. So we stopped again.

The flag man, when the cloud had moved on far enough so that he could see us, came up and urged us: "Go on! It's only a short distance, and I don't think anyone is coming." So we plunged in and through—and found a flag man at the other end prepared to tell those coming from the opposite direction the same thing! And then there are those rocks which are anchored firmly in the roadbed, and with the sharp points that are the result of blasting, sticking up and cutting tires to ribbons. We used eight new tires on the Ford, and then weren't certain we were going to limp home on the patches.

One morning in this area we

Lucille Eggers, Glenn Wilson Married Here

Lucille Eggers, daughter of Mrs. Frank Sweet of Route 1, East Jordan, and Glenn Wilson, son of Mr. and Mrs. Denzil Wilson of Route 3, East Jordan, were united in marriage Saturday evening, January 21st by Rev. Robert H. Moore, pastor of the First Methodist Church of East Jordan.

They were attended by Mr. and Mrs. Jack Wilson of Big Rapids, brother and sister-in-law of the groom.

A reception was held in the evening at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Denzil Wilson. About 40 friends and relatives attended. Those from out of town who were here for the occasion were: Mr. and Mrs. Max Hamacher of Grand Rapids, Mr. and Mrs. Jack Wilson and daughter, Sandy, of Big Rapids and Mr. and Mrs. John Howard of Grandville.

Prior to her marriage, the bride was given a bridal shower by Mrs. Bill Drenth and Mrs. Milton Richardson, at which time she was given many lovely and useful gifts.

Glasses Wanted

An appeal is being made thru WPBN for used eye glasses and salvaged parts from old eye glasses to be used in making glasses for the needy.

Anyone wishing to donate these items may leave them at the City building. The collection is being sponsored locally by the Study Club.

Recent discharges were Mrs. Leona Archer and baby from Boyne City on January 25th and Mrs. Kay Peck and baby from Boyne City on January 29th.

The Trestleboard

The regular meeting of Marl Chapter, OES will be held Wednesday, February 8th.

Prior to that meeting at 7 o'clock sharp, the monthly potluck supper for Stars and Masons will be served. Two short films on the subject of cancer will be shown.

The men have promised to wash the dishes, but wish to make it plain that this experience does not in any way qualify them for domestic service. Reserve this date in your little black book.

Many of you who have not heard, will be pleased to know that one of our well and favorably known home-town girls Jean Bechtold Hudnut, was elected organist of Syracuse, New York's largest OES Chapter. That city boasts five such organizations. We always did like your playing, Jean.

Much to our chagrin, we are compelled to announce that the Masons for some unaccountable reason, again took it on the chin, the blow being administered by those unpredictable, pestiferous IOOF crabbagemen.

The score: 4829-4746. From now on it was decided to hold the contests each Tuesday night instead of Thursdays.

County School Notes

Charlevoix county communities are planning final activities in the March of Dimes campaign as January bows out.

It's too early to get an accurate count of collections to date. Reports of the Mothers' March show Charlevoix leading with $452.75 followed by East Jordan and Boyne City with $285.22 and 246.19 respectively.

Other estimates indicate that an all-out last minute effort will be necessary to meet last year's record of $6,879.60.

Everyone is being urged to make his contribution to this needy cause now that polio may be wiped out in the years just ahead.

Forty-six school administrators met at the Northern Michigan Superintendents Round Table in Grayling, Thursday, January 26.

Dr. A. J. Phillips, Executive Secretary MEA, outlined the current state-aid outlook for 1956-57 and noted that many problems are yet to be solved in the area of adequate financing of Michigan's public schools.

Meryle Bird, Cadillac and Arthur L. Richter, Frankfort gave summaries of their work as delegates on the legislative committee.

The superintendents went on record as favoring the enlargement of the State Board of Education and the removal of the office of state superintendent from politics by making it appointive.

They favored further changes in the state-aid formula that would provide for greater equalization of funds and greater eq-

Chas. A. Robinson, Superintendent Charlevoix County Schools, reported on legislation being drafted that would affect the present status of the county school district.

A smorgasbord dinner was served at Mel-Brook Dining Hall.

Lois Ann Farrow, Norman Crozier Wed At Boyne

Lois Ann Farrow, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Lyle Farrow of Farwell, Michigan, became the bride of Norman Crozier, son of Mr. and Mrs. Harvey Crozier, Sr. of Boyne City Saturday, January 14th at 7 p.m.

The double ring ceremony was performed by Rev. Mohr at the Methodist parsonage in Boyne City. Members of the immediate family were present.

The bride was attired in a charcoal gray box suit with black suede accessories and wore a corsage of red roses and lily of the valley. The maid of honor was Miss Verna Williams, friend of the bride.

Harvey Crozier, Jr., brother of the groom, was best man.

Following the ceremony a large reception was held at the Farmer's Union Hall after which the young couple left for a week's trip to Pennsylvania. Mr. and Mrs. Crozier will make their home in Boyne City where Mr. Crozier is employed at the Boyne Products Factory.

Mrs. Susie Lundy and Mrs. Duwane Graydon and daughter, Debrah Sue, of Zuiand visited their parents, Mr. and Mrs. Cort Hayes and Mr. and Mrs. Guy Hitchcock over the weekend.

Mr. and Mrs. Ollie King of Flint visited Mr. and Mrs. Cort Hayes and Mr. and Mrs. Guy Hitchcock over the weekend.

Mrs. Susie Lundy and Mrs. Ollie King were here to visit their mother, who is recuperating after being hit by a car.

Herman Behling made a business trip to Stevens Point, Wisconsin.
