East Jordan Is First In Michigan To Meet United Fund Quota

Nominating Petitions Must Be Filed For Primary Election

Santa Gives Candy To 600 Children

Members of the East Jordan Community Chest have been informed the local organization was the first in Michigan to fill its 1956 obligation to the Michigan United Fund.

Maurice F. Beck, admission and budget director, Michigan United Fund, said in a letter that the state organization was pleased to receive East Jordan's quota of $792.

The local Community Chest raised more than $8,000 in its 1955 campaign just recently closed.

Campaign Chairman William Downs, received an award for "outstanding service to the people of Michigan," from Irving A. Duffy, president, of the Michigan United Fund.

THE AWARD was presented at the semi-annual meeting of the state organization. Several local chest members attended the Lansing meeting with Downs.

City Clerk Alberta Nowland this week announced that the last day for filing nominating petitions for candidacy for the Primary election February 20th is 4 p.m. Saturday, December 31st.

The clerk also announced that Monday, January 16th is the last day for registering for the Primary election. All non-registered voters must register before being allowed to vote in the coming primary city election, February 20th.

More than 600 children were on hand to meet Santa Claus at the post office building Friday afternoon.

Sherman Thomas, Fred Vogel and Leo Somerville, who had charge of arrangements for Santa, said they are expressing their appreciation for all those who helped make the children's Christmas program a success.

Santa came into town in a cutter drawn by young horses. He brought plenty of candy for all the kiddies and it was reported that he drew a larger number of children than in former years.

Santa's visit was sponsored by the East Jordan Businessmen's Association.

William Downs receives outstanding service award for his work as campaign chairman of the East Jordan Community Chest. It was presented in Lansing by President Irving A. Duffy, of the Michigan United Fund. See Story On This Page.

A Thin Dime . . .

The dime, as we all know, is getting thinner and thinner. Once upon a time, this diminutive coin was good for two loaves of bread. Now it won't buy one.

But, there is one point where the dime still has a lot of purchasing power. That is in the purchase of newspapers. The newspaper which sold for a nickel twenty years ago, is in many cases, still selling for a nickel . . . and some are selling for even less.

A dime, like our other coins and bills, was established to simplify the exchange of goods. Once, a newspaper and a loaf of bread were a fair exchange. But now a lot of publishers are accepting only a third of a loaf in exchange for a copy of their newspaper.

We don't think the smalltown publisher, who has never made too much money, can afford to be the one to put his finger in the dike to hold back inflation. We think the old standard should be kept in force—one newspaper for one loaf of bread.

In other words—we believe that any weekly newspaper is worth a dime a copy in today's economy. And, at that, the baker will still be getting the best of the bargain.

—American Press Magazine

The First Bible . . .

Since the Christmas season is upon us, it would seem apropos to say something on the subject of Bibles. It will probably rock you but the first Bible printed in this country was not in English! Columbia University has just acquired a copy of it and has sent out some information about it.

The book is the Elliot Indian Bible in its original blind-tool calf binding, and it was printed by Samuel Green and Marmaduke Johnson. In early colonial times, they were running the only publishing business in existence when the Reverend John Elliot needed a Bible for use in his religious work with Indian tribes.

Elliot planned the project and saw it through to completion. The New Testament was printed in 1661, the Old Testament in 1663, both in the Algonquin tongue spoken by several tribes. Since they had no written language, English letters were used to reflect the sound of Indian words. Columbia's copy was a gift from Mrs. Seth Low terrace of Ridgefield, Connecticut.

Another newcomer in Columbia's collection of rare books is a King James Bible of 1613 which is notable for its binding. The brown polished leather is simply tooled. Unusually high relief silver portrait medallions of James I and his Queen, Anne of Denmark, form the centerpiece of the two covers.

Bound with this Bible are the "Books of Common Prayer," John Speed's "The Genealogies," and Thomas Sternhold's and John Hopkins' metrical version of "The Book of Psalms."

"I wish the military occupation of Germany had lasted until 2,000 A. D."

The speaker was a German who is head of the North German bureau of one of the world's great news agencies.

"I wish the Americans had remained in control," he continued, "because I am scared—scared stiff—about the future of Germany with Germans again running things."

"You mean you fear a resurgence of Nazism?" we asked. "No, not that," he quickly answered. "Nazism is a dead duck. We had a large enough dose to be inoculated against a recurrence. But the faults which produced Nazism remain and can produce an equally devastating malady."

"And what are those faults?" we asked.

"Many Germans are super-patriotic, 101 per cent Nationalists. And they too readily and completely submit to authority."

"After the war," he continued, "these men were kept out of responsible positions even the America's de-Nazification program went too far and the harmless party clerk, who joined the party only because he was afraid was fired. Often incompetent, inefficient men replaced him."

"But in 1949 you went to the opposite extreme and returned even top Nazis to their posts where they will pass on to a new generation the poisonous thinking."

I had to concede that there was some truth to what he said about his fellow Germans. The little village ticket-taker in a lonely railroad station is looked up to by his fellow citizens because he wears a uniform and is in the employ of the government. A Ph. D. may have earned his Doctor's degree on a study of organ construction in Bavaria in the 18th century but his views on re-arming are beyond debate because he has the title of "Herr Doktor."

In America the man himself is more important than the uniform he wears or the office he holds whereas in Germany the man's title, uniform, or position is too often the measure of a man. The practice of judging persons in terms of positions rather than in terms of themselves is antithetical to the American heritage of the sacredness of the individual personality.

"What are you going to do?" we asked our friend. "Are you going to speak out and fight for the kind of Germany you want?"

We knew that there was a very large minority of Germans—particularly the younger ones—who were dedicated to democratic principles.

"Of course not," he answered in astonishment.

"But why not? Would it be dangerous? Would you be punished?"

"No, of course not. But that's something that you just wouldn't do."

And here he revealed a striking contrast in German and American thinking which one might have added to his list. An American speaks out against that which he feels to be wrong and is forever organizing movements "to do something about it." A German feels helpless in the face of the gigantic distant forces which shape his destiny and rarely speaks his mind openly and frankly. This difference is reflected in German or American press conferences. American journalists, unawed by even the President of the United States, pry and probe and penetrate. At a German press conference the Chancellor makes a statement and there are no questions. He has spoken. And that's it.

"My friend continued, "I will migrate to America where my five-year old son will grow up in freedom and where, if he must go into the army, he will remain a human being and not turned into a machine to be moved only by orders from on high."

I could not entirely agree with his analysis of Germany. True there was much evidence to support his view. But there was also a host of outstanding German people I had met who did not

NORTHERN LIGHTS

(Compiled by the News-Herald Staff)

At long last science has come up with a good excuse for men who hate to help their wives around the house.

Prolonged, monotonous work—and washing the dishes would seem to fit in that category—is done better by women than it is by men, according to results of psychological tests conducted by Michigan State.

Unfortunately for the men, however, the results do not indicate that they are completely unqualified for domestic chores, only that they tend to become bored and less perceptive than their wives while doing monotonous tasks.

The research also has implications for workers in many industries where monotonous work still must be done by hand.

Dr. Paul Bakan, at Michigan State, did part of his experimentation for the U. S. Air Force which wants to learn more about vigilance as it applies to such things as radar, requiring long sessions of alert watching.

DR. BAKAN had his subjects, 10 men and 10 women between the ages of 16 and 35, watch a light for 1½ hours and note changes in its brightness. At first, the subjects could notice a 16 percent change in brightness. But at the end of the time, the light had to be stepped up about 46 percent for perception.

At the present time "verbal" vigilance is being tested. Veteran husbands, used to the sound of their wife's voice, should fall more easily into what Dr. Bakan described as the usual state of a person engaged in a lengthy, monotonous task: "a state somewhere between wakefulness and sleep."

AN EDITOR had cause to admonish his son because of the lad's reluctance to attend school.

"You must go every day and learn to be a great scholar," said the fond father. "Otherwise, you can never be an editor, you know. What would you do, for instance, if your newspaper came out full of mistakes?"

"Father," was the reply, "I'd blame the printer."
And the father wept with joy, because he knew he had a successor for the editorial chair.

MORE FUNDS NEEDED Last year scientists sought $8,600,532 in grants from the American Cancer Society, but because of lack of funds at hand, it could grant only $5,242,167. Give to conquer cancer.

ATOMS FIGHT CANCER Radioactive isotopes from atomic furnaces aid in treating some cancers, in locating others, and as tracers in basic cancer research, supported by contributions to the American Cancer Society.

The world's largest limestone quarry is located at Rogers City, Michigan.

match his description. He was right only in drawing our attention to the dangers that are present in today's Germany. It is not a foregone conclusion that Germany will be a free democratic ally forever as much current propaganda would indicate. But neither is it a foregone conclusion that Germany will again become an authoritarian state as my friend indicated. The future holds two possibilities. There is a battle to be won for freedom. And that battle can be won! But my friend was also right in calling attention to America's priceless heritage. It is a heritage of independence—of thought and freedom of speech and a refusal to praise or condemn a man on any other ground than what he is as a man. This, far more than our cars and television sets and skyscrapers, makes America "the last, best hope of man."
