Most Vital Farm Crop: People

Listening to politicians and economists can give one a distorted view sometimes. Very often politicians, looking to the ballot box harvest of 1956, talk as if what they call the "farm vote" were the most important crop in America. Economists tend on the other hand to rate crops according to their count in dollars and cents. Yet there is reason to believe that the most valuable farm crop is farm people.

But this is a diminishing crop. Today the number of Americans living on farms is less than three-fourths the number only 15 years ago. Just since 1950 some 3,000,000 people have left the land.

Should a National farm program, then, aim at "keeping 'em down on the farm?" Indirectly, many present legislative plans geared to do that. Directly they aim to protect the small farmer from competition by the big mechanized farm factories. The price-support measures for instance, try to guarantee the marginal farmer prices above his cost of production. But often the factory farms can halve these costs.

THIS MEANS THE "big fellows" get government payments which mean 100 percent profit in order to get enough to keep going. It also means that surpluses are piled on surpluses. More and more it begins to appear that price-support plan give most of the help where it isn't needed. So, although there is some agitation for still higher supports, many thoughtful farmers seek a better plan.

How will we find a means for helping the small family without a costly subsidy to the giant factory farm? One proposal calls for limiting the size of price-support payments to any farmer. This would cut bonuses to factory farms while still aiding the "little fellow." Another effort is to help farmers find more income sources outside the farm.

Already people living on farms get about one-fourth of their income elsewhere. Possibly the plan for withdrawing land from use in a "soil bank" could be shaped to give special aid to the family farm.

This general approach to farm problems deserves more attention. For it could save money now going into unnecessary subsidies to big surplus producers and at the same time help the family farm which produces the most important crop of all—farm people.

County Supervisors Approve Tentative Plans For Courthouse

(REPRINTED FROM THE CHARLEVOIX COURIER)

The Charlevoix county board of supervisors approved tentative plans for a proposed new county court house at its regular January meeting and authorized a contract with the architectural firm of R. S. Gerganoff of Ypsilanti for working plans for the new structure which will replace the present 75 year old building, condemned by the state fire marshal's office last fall.

The action by the Board follows that started at the October session when the board appropriated funds to engage an architect for the purpose of drawing up initial plans for the building.

The working plans to be drawn by the Ypsilanti firm will be presented for bids which in turn will be reported to the board no later than the April session. At that time the board will approve the plans.

The proposed building will be of cinder or cement block with brick exterior. The tentative plans call for one section to be a two-story structure with a full basement with a one-story wing to the south which would house the courtroom, judges chambers as well as the offices of the county clerk, treasurer and register of deeds. The two-story section would house all other county offices.

The board voted to start construction as soon as possible after the approval of permanent plans and acceptance of contractor's bids.

It is hoped that a good share of the cost of the new building, which will be constructed on property the county already owns adjacent to the present courthouse, can be met by a sinking fund voted in 1949. The fund which allocated two mills for three years and one mill for seven years to the fund has three years to run. To date $137,000 has been amassed.

A COMMITTEE composed of Clarence Babach, chairman of the public ground and building committee, Henry Lee of Boyne City, Robert F. Barnett of East Jordan, Lee Sneathen Jr., Ivan Phillips, T. R. Miller, Russell L. Curtis, chairman of the board of supervisors, Fenton R. Bulow, county clerk, and Clarence B. Megzison, former supervisor and chairman of the building and grounds committee for many years, who is now state representative from the Charlevoix

U. S. Checks Wage-Hour Violators

A total of 452 places of business were found to have failed to conform with either the minimum wage or overtime provisions of the U. S. fair labor laws.

These violations were among 1,079 firms investigated in the Ohio-Michigan region, according to regional director William S. Singley. The period covered six months ending December 31.

The regional director points out that a new Wage and Hour Law becomes effective March 1, 1956. It requires that employers pay a minimum wage of $1.00 per hour.

Employers may learn more about the new law by writing U. S. Department of Labor, Room 82 Krolik Building, 314 East Jefferson Ave., Detroit 26, Michigan.

Bill Grim Reports On Soils District Work

Conservation of our nation's resources has been readily accepted in our way of life today, but just accepting the term conservation isn't enough, Bill Grim district farm planner says. Conservation must be put to action.

The locally administered Soil Conservation District, which is a local subdivision of State government, has the responsibility of administering the soil and water conservation program within the district's boundaries as established by law.

The district is administered by five elected board members. They are residents in the district, stressing the fact that the Charlevoix Soil Conservation District is a local unit of self-government in which people can solve their own soil and water problems.

Present directors are Clayton Healey of East Jordan, president; Harold Goebel of East Jordan, vice-president; Robert Straw of Charlevoix, treasurer; Robert Reidel of Wilson Twp., machinery chairman; John Willard of Charlevoix, education chairman, have not left the term conservation an idle term.

Since the district program started in October 1948, it has done much to apply soil and water conservation on the land and educate everyone to its importance.

There are 198 cooperators in the district program. This includes 107 basic plans. A basic plan is when a land owner has recorded his decisions to use land within its capabilities and treat it according to its needs.

The remaining cooperators are in various stages toward completing a basic plan. Some of the up to date permanent type conservation accomplishments the cooperators have done are 3461 acres of contour strip cropping, 3,696 feet open ditches, 13,500 tile drain, 6,336 feet of diversions and planting of nearly 300,000 trees.

Some of the educational phases last year were the continuation of the soil run-off plots, Stewardship Sunday, conservation Air Tour.

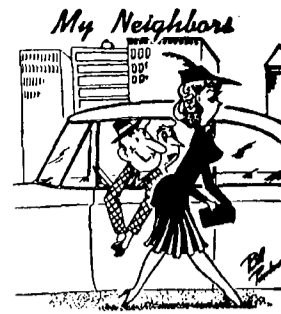

Many soil and water problems become complex and the cooperation of various agencies and organizations are needed to facilitate the program.

Charlevoix County Road Commission has cooperated with district in regards to drainage outlets and courses. Extension Service through the County Agent

Ed Rebman and 4-H Club Agent K. C. Festerling has aided the district in the educational field and technical advice.

Soil Conservation Service of the U. S. D. A. furnishes the technical assistance through Bill Grimm, farm planner. The A. C. P. Program through Joanne Carpenter, office manager, gives incentive payments to land owners in adapting soil and water conservation practices. Farmers Home Administration through Carl Brown, gives financial help in getting these conservation practices established.

The concerted effort of these agencies has done much in assisting the district in their var-

ARTICLE NO. 7

More About German Life After The War

By GUY VANDER JAGT

No Santa Claus with brimming bag of gifts was scheduled to drop down the chimney, no "O Little Town of Bethlehem" or "O Come All Ye Faithful" filled the air with music and hearts with Yuletide joy; no Christmas tree had appeared although it was the night before Christmas and I was beginning to "dream of a White Christmas just like the ones I used to know."

That was before the tinkle of a bell announced the beginning of a Christmas so memorable and even though Christmas is gone and a New Year is here.

In Germany, children's thoughts turn Christmasward December 6th when Saint Nicholas, a 4th Century Bishop, comes down from the clouds to remind little boys and girls of the importance of good behavior—especially with Christmas approaching. St. Nick brings fruit and cookies for the children who have been good and Hans Muff for the children who have been bad. Hans is a devil-like character who carries a switch and a sack. For the children who have been bad there is the switch; and for the children who have been very, very bad there is the sack to carry them away.

Although America's Santa Claus owes not only his name but his white beard and red and white costume to Saint Nicholas, Santa Claus really has more in common with Das Christkind—so impressive that I wish to share the experience with you The Christ Child—who visits German homes on Christmas eve to bring presents and decorate the houses.

We were upstairs singing Christmas Carols when we heard the tinkle of Das Christkind's bell indicating that at last the living room, which had been locked all day, was ready for entry. There was Mama and Papa Wullenweber; 19-year old Angela, home from Heidelberg for the Christmas holidays, 22-year old Lisi; 23-year old Karl; Richard, a son who lives in Bonn, and his wife and daughter Hildegard, 6 years old.

We lined up in order of age—the youngest having the high privilege of going first. In quiet awe we stepped into the dark room lit only by the flickering flames of the Christmas tree candles. Hushed we listened to Vater Wullenweber read a prayer from the liturgy of the Christmas mass and softly sang "Stille Nacht, Heilige Nacht" ("Silent Night, Holy Night"). With handsakes and kisses we wished each other a Merry Christmas (Froehliche Weinachten).

Christmas gift opening was next. Christmas in Germany taught me that gifts do not have to be extensive and expensive to make a Happy Christmas. My German Christmas presents were perhaps typical of what the average German receives. There was a date book and calendar; a pair of sheepskin slippers, which Mama Wullenweber had made from the wool of Adde, the family sheep; and an original portrait of Albert Schweitzer, taken while he was in Bonn last month. Appropriateness and thoughtfulness had taken the place of costliness and proved to be a perfect recipe for a Merry Christmas.

The difference in German and American Christmases are many. Instead of America's Jolly Santa Claus with his department store and television appearance there is the elfish, mysterious Christkind, whom no one has ever seen. Not as a family project but secretly by Das Christkind is the Christmas tree decorated—and then not until Christmas eve. Instead of brightly colored lights German Christmas trees are lit with little white candles, or, when electrically lit, with little white lights resembling candles as closely as possible. Instead of 50 or 60 the average German family receives 5 or 6 Christmas cards and is astounded by the cards received by an average American.

These are only surface differences, however, and the real spirit of Christmas is as universal as families and laughter and love. In retrospect, with the quiet beauty of flickering candles and inspiring carols uniting us in good will and love, Christmas eve stands as an expression of the theme of our lives together. A great symphony's theme is often lost in the orchestra's inter-play, counter themes and conflicts and only in a few inexpressably rich moments does the entire orchestra unite in playing the theme which gives meaning and unity to the whole. So as men live together the spirit of love is frequently obscured in conflicts, competition, irritations and just plain routine; but there are those rich moments when the best within us finds expression and all of life is the richer. Christmas is such a time. Not even commercialization and tinsel or war and hate can entirely suppress the annual surge of love and good will which reminds men of life's true meaning.

Walking into the New Year, we dare to speak of peace in a world where there is no peace because we sense the unconquerableness of the Spirit of Christmas no matter how many Spirits of Geneva may come and go. Something deep within responds to the annual reminder that love, not hate; peace, not conflict; good will, not evil and life, not death will have the last word. On a hot July afternoon depressed by headlines screaming of war and the threat of war we might cynically ask "Oh yeah?" but on December 25 we sing "Amen!" to the angels' proclamation of "Peace on Earth, Good Will Toward Men." And from the Christmas experience we draw the strength to continue the struggle for peace.

With a little help from our neighboring city of Charlevoix, the IOOF of this city was able to take the opening round of the cribbage tournament from P. and A. M. No. 379 by the score of 4138 to 4020.

The contest closes at the end of ten weeks when the losers will give the victors a big feed. Come on you belly Masons.

A small fee of ten cents per evening is charged which goes into the pot. See you Thursday night.

Form Two New Brownie Scout Troops

Because of the increased growth in Brownie Scout membership, two new troops are being organized. Troops one and two under the leadership of Mary LaPeer and Adeline Bowerman, have been too large to work with effectively. These groups will be divided.

Mrs. Viola Clark and Mrs. Dorothy Mayhew are starting a troop on the west side. Mrs. Esther Porter and Mrs. Dolores Weaver will work with a group of girls who have joined the organization more recently. This will make 10 troops with 140 girls registered.

The Rebekah Lodge, sponsors of the organization, are planning a Valentine party next month for all of the intermediate troops and a party for the Brownie Scouts in the spring.

Scouts Plan Activities For Boy Scout Week

The seven dens of Cub Scouts are planning activities during Boy Scout week. A display of some of the work done by the boys during the past year will be on exhibit in the Olson Hardware window starting February 5th. Last year our display was the prize winning window in the district.

On February 8th the annual Blue and Gold Banquet will be held in the American Legion hall. Last year the event was a huge success and it is hoped that this year will be even better. Several boys will receive advancements and some will be graduating to Scouts.

Sunday, February 12th, all boy scouts are urged to attend church in uniform. A new four year program, "Onward for God and My Country" is started. The charter for the year ends the last of February, so each scout should try to get his dues earned before that time.
