Will Project Go By The Board?

Area Residents Failing Local Ski Run Support

The public has been dragging its feet on making pledges toward construction of a ski run near East Jordan, it was reported this week by officials of the East Jordan Industrial Development Corporation.

The corporation needs $50,000 in pledges from area residents to go along with the $50,000 offered by the State Bank of East Jordan and the $75,000 to be put up by the ski run owners. Money invested in the venture will draw six per cent interest, it was said. Pledges from $100 and up are being solicited.

Chamber of Commerce solicitors have been active in the area for more than a week asking residents to sign pledges and to take part in the project. The number of pledges signed have industrial development officers worried that the September 1st deadline will not be met. If sufficient pledges have not been signed by that time, the run will not be in operation this winter, it was said.

Area merchants and residents have long expressed desire for a local commercial run but would aid in increasing winter business here. And now that the development organization has paved the way for a financially sound project, they are having difficulty getting pledges signed.

The development corporation said this week that it is hoped that more interest will be shown in the project within the next few days so the program will not have to be given up.

Those not contacted by solicitors as yet may stop at Campbell Agency, the State Bank, Huckle's Camera Shop or

Sonic Boom More Startling Than Dangerous, U.S. Says

The high speed jet corridor established over East Jordan has caused numerous sonic booms during the past few weeks.

Residents are asked to regard sonic boom as a sound of security by the U. S. Air Force. The following is an elaboration of that concept.

Sonic boom is the new sound of security, but because it is a startling sound and may be at first a frightening sound, it is greatly misunderstood.

Basically, the sonic boom is an intense pressure wave of sound comparable to a thunder-clap during a storm, or the shock wave of sound from a dynamic explosion.

It occurs when aircraft pass through the speed of sound and because the Air Force and the Navy are receiving greater numbers of supersonic airplanes, it is going to become more and more common.

This is true in spite of the fact the Air Force has established severe restrictions on the operations of these aircraft. No additional restrictions can be imposed without affecting the ability of the Air Force to do its job of providing the mathe News-Herald office. Pledge blanks may be received at any one of these places, it was said.

The development corporation feels the commercial ski run would increase winter business here to match that now enjoyed from summer tourists.

Workers Rush Installation Of East Jordan Gas Lines

Rev. V. D. Bundy, son of Mr. and Mrs. Vern Bundy, and formerly of East Jordan, was ordained to the Christian ministry on Sunday, August 18 at the Free Methodist Camp in Birmingham, Iowa. Rev. Bundy attended grade school in East Jordan and later took high school and religion courses at Bethel College, Mishawaka, Indiana. He has since finished college and ministerial training at the Evangelical United Brethren College in Le Mars, Iowa where he has, with the help of his wife, the former Lucille Welsh of East Jordan, been pastoring a church for the past five years.

Services Held Saturday For Mrs. Heller

Services were held at the Watson Funeral Home, August 17 at 2 p.m., for Mrs. Florence Heller, 72, who passed away at the Charlevoix Hospital August 14. She was ill four days and death was the result of a cerebral hemorrhage. Rev. John Miller of the Methodist Church conducted the services, and burial was in Sunset Hill cemetery.

Mrs. Heller, known to her friends as Floss, was born in East Jordan, the daughter of John and Mae Flannery on January 13, 1891. She attended East Jordan School and was a graduate of the 1912 class of the School of Nursing of Kalamazoo State Hospital.

On July 12, 1916 she was united in marriage at Charlevoix to Clifton E. Heller, who preceded her in death on January 24, 1963. With the exception of ten years, her entire life was spent in this area. She and her husband resided for twenty-one years on their farm on Boyne Road in the Peninsula area. Since April she has lived at 104 Fourth Street in East Jordan.

She was a member of the Methodist Church, Mark Chapter of the Order of Eastern Star, and the White Shrine.

She is survived by one sister, Fern Minckler of Kalamazoo, two nephews and two nieces and several cousins. Her sister, Bessie Isaman and her brothers, Neil and Bruce preceded her in death.

Relatives and friends from a distance to attend the funeral were Mr. and Mrs. Edgar G. Minckler, Mrs. J. Bruce Flannery and Mr. and Mrs. M. H. Jones of Kalamazoo; Mr. and Mrs. Gayle Flannery of Sturgis, Mr. and Mrs. Leo Smith of Ionia, Mr. and Mrs. Clayton Heller of Livonia, Karl Heller of Elk Rapids, Mrs. Ferris Parsons of Rogers City and Mrs. Lola Flannery of Manacoma.

Bearers were Lewis Prebble, Joseph Leu, William Olstrom, Carl Grutsch, Sr., Henry Von-Seusten and Elmer Olstrom.

Michigan Consolidated Gas Company announced today that natural gas will be available in a portion of East Jordan on September 16, 1963 and the remainder of the city by September 30.

The contractor, Van Ess Construction Company of Grand Rapids, now has 30 persons working on the installation of gas mains. Additional personnel are to be moved in within a week.

The original contract provides for the installation of 1 1/2 miles of mains and 340 services. The mains are of varied sizes ranging from 1 1/4 inch up through 8 inches in diameter.

The installation of the system will proceed as quickly as possible. Persons planning to convert their heating equipment in the near future are asked to contact Michigan Consolidated Gas Company office in Petoskey to verify whether or not they are on the proposed gas mains.

Charlevoix County In Vast Economic Program

Many Michigan organizations and agencies are to be involved in planning for a Michigan, Wisconsin, Minnesota Land and People Conference set for Duluth September 10 and 11. Of the 81 northern Great Lakes counties that will be urged to send community leaders to the conference, 45 are in Michigan. They include all of the Upper Peninsula and 30 of the counties in the northern part of the lower peninsula, including Charlevoix County.

A Michigan public relations and information committee is being formed to assure that the state gets maximum participation and benefits from the conference.

United States Department of Agriculture officials who have called the September conference have asked Michigan Conservation Department Education Consultant Rod Smith of Marquette, U. S. Forest Service Supervisor Louis Pommerening of Cadillac and Michigan State University Information Specialist James Gooch of Marquette to form the public relations committee. Gooch, who is to serve as chairman, has called a meeting in Lansing for Wednesday, August 14 to broaden the committee's membership and activities.

The Duluth Conference, say USDA officials, is to provide an estimated 1,000 community leaders from the three states an opportunity to share their experiences in mobilizing natural and human resources to boost the area's economy. It is hoped also to strengthen the team approach so local, state and Federal resources can be concentrated on specific community problems.

Community leaders, agency and educational people from the three states met in Escanaba in September of 1960 and the Duluth Conference agenda will include a progress report on state achievements since that meeting.

East Jordan Grand Rapids Picnic Sept. 8

David Holland, president of the East Jordan and Grand Rapids Picnic Association, announces that the annual picnic will be held September 8 at 1 p.m. at Palmer Park in Grand Rapids for all former East Jordan residents.

It will be a potluck dinner and coffee will be furnished. There will be games and prizes for the children.

Anyone needing any additional information may call Mrs. Clifford Brown of Grandville. If it should rain, the picnic will be held the following Sunday.

The National Music Camp at Interlochen is a unique center of musical art. Situated in a virgin pine forest 14 miles southwest of Traverse City, it attracts the nation's best junior musical talent for 10 week summer sessions.

Says Jordan Fishing As Good As 50 Years Ago

Editor's Note: Detroit Free Press, outdoor editor Jack Van Coevering reported in Sunday's issue that fishing on the Jordan River is as good now as it was 50 years ago. The News-Herald herewith publishes Mr. Van Coevering's article.

Trout fishing in Michigan is as good now as it was 50 years ago, says Burt Weyhing, 88, of 1415 Parker, Detroit's oldest active angler.

He proves this weeks after week by coming back with a limit of trout from the Jordan River, his favorite fishing stream.

"The Jordan River is pretty much as it was 50 and 60 years ago," says Weyhing. "There has been little change. It is not fished as hard as most other streams."

"There are no cottages for anglers. There are few canoeists. I can fish a whole day and see only a few other fishermen. And that is I do see are more considerate of one another."

When I fished the Jordan River with Weyhing, guide

Andy Anderson put us into the river up a piece from the Hogs Back. A few days before, there had been a rather heavy rain. The water of the Jordan was brown to an extent of murkiness. Being inclined to favor flies, I tried a few dry patterns without any luck.

Then I switched to streamers. Again, the trout spurned my offerings. Meanwhile, Weyhing was catching trout—on worms.

"That's the only thing that will catch them today," said Andy. And so it was. He showed me how he fixed up his hook, threading the steel through the worm and running the worm up the leader a bit. Then he broke off one end of the worm and tossed it into the river.

"Just to let the trout know the bigger part of the worm is coming," he explained.

For worm fishing, Andy recommended a monofilament line on a Froline reel, mounted on a flyrod. He tossed out the lure, then with the boat anchored, retrieved the worm slowly, after allowing it to sink.

"When you feel the trout hit, give him a moment to get the hook in his mouth, then set it," he admonished. His advice was good. Soon I, too, was pulling in trout.

A parist fly artist might not have approved the procedure, but there is skill in "worming" just as there is skill to fly casting.

By the time we had a half dozen nice fish in the livebox they were up to 11 inches long - we feared we would exceed our limits if we were to keep all we caught. We began to release the trout which were hooked only in the lips without injury.

This would have been a rather simple matter with flies, but using worms meant that we kept about half the fish we brought in.

As the middle of the day approached, we found we were hugging the shaded side of the

If you believe that you have heard all the "far-out" wasteful expenditures of taxpayers' money by the federal government then consider these new examples of appropriations for studies which were cited recently by Rep. Homer F. Abele (R.-Ohio):

- $17,500 for modification of alcohol preference in rats.
- $15,200 for a study of society and demography in ancient Babylonia.
- $36,800 for social behavior of ants.
- $2,100 for behavior patterns of the barren-ground caribou.
- $16,800 for social behavior of termites.
- $20,600 for communication signals in birds.
- $16,900 for revision of the classification of earthworms.
- $13,700 for social structure in Madagascar.
- $29,300 for mammal fauna of the highlands of Ethiopia.
- $65,400 for behavior and ecology of the wandering albatross.

Congressman Abele is to be commended for having ferreted out these truly shocking instances of wild extravagance. Anyone who has ever attempted to plough through the voluminous, intricate and "cover-up" phraseology of the federal budget knows that it really takes patience and expertise to spot the flagrant spending abuses.

It is to be hoped that Rep. Abele's labors will not have been in vain; that something is done to stop these giveaways, and fast.

Duck hunters in the Mississippi Flyway will have bigger bag limits and a longer season to look forward to this fall.

Some restrictions remain on species of ducks still in short supply but the daily limit of four ducks and the possession limit of eight is double that of 1962, the Bureau of Sport Fisheries and Wildlife, Department of the Interior, reports.

States in the Mississippi Flyway will have the option of choosing a duck season of 35 consecutive days or split seasons totaling 32 days. The states will elect their seasons within the extended period starting Oct. 5 and ending Jan. 5.

The daily bag limit on mallards and black ducks will be two mallards or two blacks or one of each, with the possession limit set at four. Hunters in this flyway are also allowed a bag and possession limit of two wood ducks, the same as in 1962.

By CHUCK REICHLUM

From J. F.: Who's the biggest man in pro football today?

A. A tackle with San Diego, Ernie Ladd. He's 6-9 and weighs 320.

From K. D.: There have been lots of unbeaten football and basketball teams in history, but has there ever been a pro baseball team that was undefeated for a whole season?

A. Baseball's first pro team, the Cincinnati Red Stockings of 1869, won 'em all, touring the country and playing all teams that would meet them. How many they won is in dispute, the figures ranging from 65 to 81, but all authorities agree they were unbeaten. Their first loss came in June the following year when the Brooklyn Atlantics beat them in 11 innings.

From several readers: Has anyone in pro golf history won more tournaments than Arnie Palmer?

A. Only three have -- Sammy Snead, Ben Hogan and Byron Nelson.

From A. T.: We know Saratoga is the oldest horse race track still in existence, but what's the oldest harness track?

A. Historic Park in Goshen, N. Y. It opened in 1838.

M. L. asks: How long has Arnie Palmer been a pro?

A. It seems strange, but just nine summers ago there was no Arnie Palmer in the world of pro golf. He didn't become a pro till October, 1954.

Walter Cassel Comes To Traverse Playhouse

Metropolitan opera baritone Walter Cassel and Broadway musical comedy star Gail Manners combine their musical and acting talents at the Cherry County Playhouse Tuesday, August 27 through Sunday, September 1, in "No Bed of Roses", a brand new play with music adapted from the popular Broadway hit comedy "The Fourposter." In real life husband and wife, the Cassels will star in "No Bed of Roses" when it opens on Broadway this fall.

Coming to Traverse City especially to adapt the show to the arena stage at the Cherry County Playhouse will be Robert K. Adams, formerly National Production Manager for NBC, who produced the world premiere of "No Bed of Roses" earlier this season.

Original music and lyrics are by Martin Kalmanoff, whose hit tunes have been the basis for more than 200 recordings by such popular stars as Eddie Fisher, Pat Boone, and Rosemary Clooney, and whose concert songs have been presented on all the networks by Robert Merrill, Gladys Swarthout, Maria Callas, and others. Kalmanoff will provide the musical accompaniment for the Cassels at the Cherry County Playhouse.

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Gentlemen:

Since I closed out the last note, we have begun the series of shore visits which makes the difference between a cruise trip and an ordinary sea voyage. Shortly after I placed it in an envelope, we woke to find a number of row boats outside our polarized porthole and strapping young men from the island of Mediera who wanted to dive for coins. They were soon joined by other boats hawking native goods with a line and a wicker basket arrangement between boat and upper decks.

We were moored in the harbor of Funchal, the largest city of this Portuguese gem located about midway between the Azores and the North African coast. It is a rugged chain of islands, mountainous, with clouds that cling to the summits and provide an adequate moisture supply. We went ashore by tender and found cobble stone streets, picturesque houses and a magnificent display of flowers blooming in a complete riot of color. For 25c my daughter purchased a bunch of sweet peas nearly a foot across. For 50c she could have had orchids.

Some years ago, British missionaries introduced the art of embroidery to Madiera, and cottage industries thrive, primarily linen and organdy goods of all kinds. Their grapes produce the famous Madiera wines. There are other products such as wood carvings. Here, also, is the mountain sled rides guided by still older of the strong young men which the island seems to propagate. Similar, but less spectacular, is the colorful ride on a sleigh pulled around the city by two large oxen. With steel runners just like the old time snow sleigh, these vehicles also have a leather strap over the runner which is greased with tallow as it goes uphill. Downhill the leather dries out to act as a break as it slides over the cobblestones.

Our visit to Madiera concluded with a dive from the top deck of the Independence by one of the coin divers. He solicited about a dollar from the passengers, not much for a dive of at least 50 ft. Then we continued through the island chain and proceeded to Casablanca, in Morocco.

As we "dropped the hook" at 2 p.m. it was like a homecoming for our family since we lived there from 1954 to 1956. In fact our youngest son was born there and therefore displayed keen interest in returning. Various people took different kinds of tours here, including one tour operated by American Express to the capital city, 50 miles to the north. We drove around by taxi, viewing the interesting beach area with its many salt water swimming pools, including one that is 1500 ft. in length, the world's largest. We viewed our old home, the markets where we purchased produce and flowers, and went to the top of a hill tower to view the city. We were impressed with the new construction, the general cleanliness and the business like attitude of everyone we contacted. However, one can still barter prices of leatherwork and copper goods down about half-way in the ancient areas known as medinas where fish and goats are still hung in the open air butcher shops.

At Casablanca, we had our first scheduled delay due to slow unloading of freight. Some of the space deep in the bowels of each liner is reserved for commercial cargo. A number of cars were off loaded and others put aboard. So it was by the light of a full moon that we finally moved out to sea, leaving the lights of a city of a million population behind. Three other large liners preceded us from this, the largest artificial harbor in the world. The view of the tall white buildings illuminated against the horizon was truly spectacular and one to remember for many years.

During the overnight run to Gibraltar, we got back on schedule so we grabbed an early breakfast and once more went ashore. Gibraltar is a free port and a wonderful shopping area, with shops of all kinds lining a narrow but fascinating street. Each time we return to Gibraltar, my children re-stock with wrist watches at very low prices. Jewelry, clothing, silver, liquors, actually, there isn't much that can't be purchased in Gibraltar.

Aside from the shopping, "The Rock" is a small rugged piece of real estate that is quite breath-taking in its beauty. Horse drawn surrises serves nicely at the base, but a taxi is necessary to wind up toward the crest. Somewhere on the slopes of Britain's bastion of will be found the colony of Barbary apes, the only tail-less monkeys in Europe. They are medium sized, friendly, curious and protected as wards of the British crown. As someone remarked, it is easy to distinguish the apes from the tourists because there are lots more tourists! However, the old fear that the apes may die off and, according to superstition, the British will lose Gibraltar appears unfounded. Today there are several new babies for the visitors to oggle.

the Col. Thomas L. Thacker family here, and continue with their interesting experiences in next week's paper.
