NEW SCHOOL PROPOSAL WILL BE PUT BACK ON BALLOT

Boyne Falls will try again

With little discussion at its Monday meeting, the Boyne Falls School Board unanimously voted to put a new K-12 school building bond issue back on the ballot.

Constituents voted down a previous attempt to pass the $6.2 million millage by only four votes at the June 8 election, in what was probably the largest voter turnout in the district's history.

December 9 is the earliest the proposal can be back on the ballot because there must be at least six months between votes. The school must undertake another demographics study and then it's back to the state for approval. Also, the bond cost could increase by up to 2.5 percent, based on inflation, said superintendent Pat Smith.

Undersized classrooms, insufficient science, computer and art rooms, and poor ventilation, lighting and electrical systems throughout the building were cited as some of the school's deficiencies.

Estimates for renovations were $3.6 million; for remodeling and an addition, $5.2 million; and a new building to be constructed on district-owned land on M-75 was estimated to cost an additional $1 million at $6.2 million.

Extensive discussion on the matter came prior to the first vote. The board held nearly 10 community meetings which included GBKB architectural firm, to discuss the need for updates or a new school.

The district also sent direct mailings to households in a question and answer format, and the BEE Proud Committee worked to inform citizens on its view for the need to vote yes.

After the failed vote, the board sought out the reasons for the no votes at subsequent meetings.

"We didn't have any other proposals or suggestions that made any sense," board member Joe Skop said.

There were mostly 'yes' voters at a special meeting last Thursday, but one Boyne Falls resident suggested the district at least talk to Boyne City about some sort of consolidation, an idea that has not received much vocal support from the community over the past year. He also said he had heard a letter would be forthcoming from Boyne City to the Boyne Falls board, but wasn't specific on its content.

At Monday night's meeting, board president Marv Schwem said he did talk to Boyne City board president Kathy Anderson after last week's meeting and that she said a letter was being composed suggesting that the two districts meet to discuss mutual problems.

Schwem indicated that is something the district could still do even while moving ahead with the bond proposal.

H&D gets bid for Boyne City airport work

The State Department of Transportation has accepted construction bids for Boyne City airport runway improvements, and crews are expected to begin work on Sept. 8.

The runway will be widened from 50 to 75 feet, and lengthened by 160 feet to 4,000 feet, allowing for commercial aircraft utilization.

H&D of Petoskey was awarded the civil engineering contract for the extension and paving with its bid of $339,600. An out-of-town company won the electrical bid for lighting at $100,300. The overall cost, including engineering and contingencies is $583,900.

The State Bureau of Aeronautics will fund 90 percent of the cost, the city will pay the remaining 10 percent ($58,390).

East Jordan trying out its new street

East Jordan's newly paved Main Street will be busy this weekend for street sales.

The event is Friday, Aug. 21, from 9 a.m.-8 p.m. and Saturday, Aug. 22, from 9 a.m.-5 p.m.

On Saturday afternoon balloons and candy will be handed out to shoppers, courtesy of Glen's Market. A cakewalk, sponsored by participating businesses, is Saturday at 2 p.m.

"Get a great start on back to school shopping while saving money and having fun on East Jordan's new Main Street," said Mary Faculak, executive director of the East Jordan Area Chamber of Commerce. "Come view the Streetscape '98 project progress by car or boat."

Concert series comes to an end next week

Blue Circle will close out the Evenings at the Gazebo summer concert season in Boyne City. They will perform on Wednesday, Aug. 26, in Old City Park at 7 p.m.

The group's music consists of a variety of Old English, Irish, French-Canadian, Scottish and contemporary American selections. Their instruments include guitar, autoharp, violin and mandolin.

Boyne River boardwalk design ready for review

A preliminary design of the boardwalk along the Boyne River is complete and the Downtown Development Authority wants to know what the community thinks of the plan.

The DDA is holding a meeting Thursday, Aug. 20, at 7 p.m. to present the preliminary design for the boardwalk and solicit comments from the community.

All residents, businesses, and organizations are encouraged to attend. The meeting will be held at city hall.

Connie Pulciper of Beckett and Raeder Inc., is the project manager for the boardwalk project. She met with the DDA and community members two weeks ago to gather input before completing a preliminary design.

The boardwalk, as it is currently proposed, will be built along the river from Lake to Park Street. From Lake Street it will run on the south side of the river, then cross on a pedestrian bridge to the north side.

Other issues included in the boardwalk's design are how it connects to the downtown retail areas, how it connects with Old City Park and Veteran's Park and how it may link to a possible future trail system throughout the city.

The design will also include plans for improvements along the south side of the river from the point the boardwalk crosses the river to Park Street.

The tentative schedule for the boardwalk is to complete construction documents by this fall and to bid the project next spring.

Beckett and Raeder is an Ann Arbor landscape, planning and engineering firm. Pulciper, who is the project manager for the boardwalk, worked with the DDA when it was developing its comprehensive long-range plan two years ago.

Tammy Jackson takes over as EJ principal

East Jordan High School assistant principal and athletic director Tammy Jackson was named interim principal for the high school by the school board at its meeting Monday night.

Earlier this summer the district began seeking a replacement for Gus Bishop who, after five years, left the position to become the full-time director of curriculum and instruction, a job he carried out on a part-time basis while he was principal.

When the board was unable to find a candidate to succeed Bishop it decided to fill the position on an interim basis for the upcoming school year. Jackson joined the district in January, 1986, and has served as athletic director for nearly 12 years and as assistant principal for the past four years.

"The deciding factor for me was the opportunity to work with Gus Bishop," Jackson said. "He has been a mentor and a friend and I'm 100 percent confident in his abilities and excited to work along with him to continue to move the school ahead."

"Our mission is so strong that it's really a matter of carrying on with the plan," Jackson said. "I'm running the same race I've always been in, just this year I'm carrying the torch."

She will hold the position for one year, and although becoming a principal is her ultimate ambition, she doesn't foresee herself continuing in the capacity beyond this school year.

"It's hard to give up athletics, that's my passion," Jackson said.

She has a Bachelor of Arts from Central Michigan University in education with a sports medicine and physical education major, and a Masters from Central in secondary education.

She's cruised the waters off Maine, Nova Scotia, Newfoundland and Labrador. And after 10 years in dry shed, she took a soak in Lake Charlevoix recently to prove if she is still, indeed, seaworthy.

"She's floating. The mast is stepped," owner Stephen Wiseman happily reported after hours of refurbishing the boat.

Built in Finland in 1959, Lichen is a 25-foot wood Amphibi-Con, a model of the line of Controversy boats, and so named because of the heated debate its reverse-sheer design caused.

Boyne City resident Wiseman purchased the boat about two months ago from the daughter of the designer, Farnham Butler, and had it hauled from Mt. Desert Island, Maine, to a corner of the Van Dam Marine boat yard in Boyne City.

Butler, who is 89 and still cruising in one of his Controversy lines, checked the boat over for his daughter to make sure it was built to his specifications. Even though Lichen was designed by him, he actually built only a few of the models. In 1968 Lichen was featured in Yachting Magazine.

Wiseman is in the midst of a four-year correspondence course in yacht design from a school in Eastport, Maine. His interest in classic design and his

Say good-bye Mr. President

After four years and $40 million, we are finally coming to an end of the investigation of President Clinton.

No matter how you interpret what's happened during the investigation, in particular the events of the last seven months since Monica Lewinsky became a household name, it's been a pathetic episode to watch.

It's hard to place blame because it's hard to know where the truth is. Has the media run wild? Has our government turned into political savagery? Has it become more effective to destroy politicians than to govern?

President Clinton finally has confessed that he had an inappropriate relationship with Lewinsky. He's sorry for that. He's asking forgiveness.

We should give it to him.

What he should do in return is leave office. Morally he doesn't belong.

What I find so grievous with the president's behavior is that it occurred with a 21-year-old woman. I will never be able to comprehend how the most powerful man in the world could take advantage of such a young person.

It also makes one wonder about Clinton's truthfulness in the many other inappropriate relationships he's been accused of having.

The president is morally suspect. We need no more embarrassment. He needs to resign.

Al Gore will make a great president.

Coming your way

Gusty winds, waves and a sunny afternoon combined for swift sailing and fun on Lake Charlevoix this past weekend.

A MOM'S LIFE

It was easy letting go when the training wheels came off

By CINDI PLACE

I can still remember the first time our daughter decided that she wanted to sleep in her own room. She had been sharing a space with her two little brothers, and thought it was time for her to be in a "girl's" room. That lasted about two days.

A few years later, she again made the decision that it was time for her to sleep in her own room, alone. But this time, she was a few years older and it became a much bigger deal.

A special place was created for her, complete with new walls, sweet little decorations and even a new bed. It was one of the day-bed things, that take an excruciatingly long time to assemble and (as we learned the hard way) doesn't fit through a regular doorway without being taken apart. So you can probably imagine her father's consternation when this single-minded child changed her mind again, and needed to be moved back upstairs into her old room.

When the teenage years arrived, we were faced with the absolute necessity that this maturing young lady move to a bedroom of her own. So the bed, which now was referred to as "the monstrosity," was again disassembled and moved to the old "new" bedroom.

Not so long ago, my husband was re-telling this saga and instructing our soon-to-be college freshman daughter that the episode had better not repeat itself. Especially since a few hundred miles, and at least one flight of steps would soon separate her two bedrooms.

Independence is something we hope for each of our children. We spend much of our parenting energy helping them to learn how to make decisions on their own. And how to live with those decisions. We throw them into the water and see if they can swim, so to speak.

But the difference between the years when they are still little and the time when they are preparing to actually leave home and truly test this new found freedom is that we aren't going to be around to catch them if they fall. If they find out that swimming in the real world isn't exactly what they expected, we won't be right there to boost up their ego and help them to find their self-confidence again.

I remember when we took our daughter and her two-wheel bike to the school parking lot for the "removing-of-the-training-wheels" ceremony. Off came the supporting wheels, and we ran along side while she tried to get her bearings. It took a while, but eventually she could ride all over that big lot without her parents' assistance.

The difference between now and then, is that this time we really have to let go.

VIKING VOYAGE UPDATE

The mood is celebratory

By JOHN ABBOTT

A pair of ringed seals, a gaggle of diving murres and an overly inquisitive polar bear (swimming toward us with purpose) bore witness to our arrival back in North America earlier this evening. While technically Baffin Island is part of the North American continent, having landed in Labrador, we could hitchhike back to New England now, should anything go awol with Snorri.

Having sailed for 36 hours, covering close to 150 miles since leaving the Kane Channel on Baffin Island yesterday morning, Snorri seems no worse for the wear. The rudder seems to be functioning well and has withstood consistent — and erratic — swell vectors during our meeting with the tidal rush into Hudson Bay last night.

Loathed by seafarers for centuries, the mouth of the Hudson presents tidal flows near 7 knots, and rough navigating when traveling with oppositional winds. While we were tossed a good bit, this tidal flow helped speed us along on our southerly course.

The mood onboard this afternoon was celebratory, as the sun appeared at intervals to light the black-lichened buttresses and massifs of the Northern Labrador coastal mountain range towering over our soon-to-be anchorage in False Bay.

The crew was discussing the number of milestones we've reached over the past two days as we've crossed into the 50-degree parallel of latitude for the first time since our departure from Brattahlid last July. Hodding believes we are likely the first Viking ship to have visited the shores of Baffin Island in the past 800 years. While we fancy that it's our teamwork that has allowed for successful crossings, Erik seems to feel otherwise. "Relax. God is in control" adorns the shoulders of his Mustang suit.

While endlessly waiting for winds and weather during our two summers aboard Snorri, this proclamation sure put some perspective on time (as well as why the Greenlandic Vikings chose not to return to settle). We also celebrated (with two clips of chocolate Hob Nobs...boy, we're living now!) the fact that we have the crossing of the Davis and Hudson Straits — two of the most ominous sailing parts of our journey — behind us now.

Lastly, as I sit here in the dark with the northern lights gathering green steam in the clear and starry sky overhead, we find ourselves more than 2/3 of the way toward our goal of reaching the shores of Vinland — 600 miles to the south as a crow flies. While we are in no way looking forward to the end of the number of incredible experiences and places we've shared (with people, animals and each other), it is encouraging that we are now able to sail more predictably and make progress in larger steps.

The quiet that exists here in the Canadian Arctic is remarkable, and brings with it a calmness that welcomes us to each bay and inlet we explore. Tonight, all is quiet. The northern lights have shimmered and faded. I've got to wake up Homer for anchor watch and happily report that our bear friends are sleeping on shore as deeply as I will be.

Discovering what it's like to be a camp family

By JANE BROCK

I sent my kids to camp this year — it was a first for all of us.

I never went to camp myself, except when I went as a counselor at Camp Roy-El when I was in high school. I didn't think I would like camp, I didn't think Katie or Sam would like camp, and I didn't think I would like them being at camp. These aren't little kids — they are 14 and 16 — so it might seem that I was just over-protective, and that was probably at least part of it. But I really didn't think they would like it.

Then Sam got an opportunity to go to percussion camp at CMU. He got to learn how to play the steel drums under the tutelage of a drummer from Trinidad, and I got seriously enlightened. About camp, yes, but I also learned something about my son. He LIKED camp. He was fun to watch in concert. He looked so comfortable on stage. I don't know how far Sam will go musically, but he's certainly not afraid of crowds or his peers. Both those things seem positive to me.

Then Kate announced that she was going to play basketball and that she wanted to go to camp. Since her little brother had already paved the way, I sent her off with only "You'll miss the family reunion!" to admonish her. But I knew she wouldn't like it. Kate is a couch potato at heart. She loves the computer, the phone, walking, the beach and Marty's Cones and Carry-Out. She never breaks a sweat. She started track but dropped out when she realized that running was sweaty and made her muscles sore.

She loved camp. She came back ready to work, excited for practice, willing to be criticized because, she said, she knew that she wasn't any good yet and had a lot to learn.

So when my sister-in-law and I decided to send our kids to Pleasant Valley Bible Camp, you'd think I would have been prepared to have them love it. But I wasn't. I thought they might hate it. Other Bible campers had been going since they were 5 — Katie, Sam, and their cousin, Corban, only knew each other and had NEVER gone to Bible Camp before (though Corban is a veteran sports camper).

It was the best week of all. I don't even know what to say about it, because I'm not sure I can talk about Pleasant Valley Bible Camp without evangelizing, but the kids came home different — bruised for one thing! Katie broke a blood vessel playing soccer and Sam got a black eye during a relay race. They came back closer to one another, too, and focused on their faith. It has been another enlightening experience — for all of us.

The Summer of '98 — Camp Summer. Summer will never be the same. I'm afraid we're a camp family now, and all I can say is "Better late than never!"

Passage of proposal will benefit terminal patients

TO THE EDITOR:

A doctor assisted suicide proposition will be on the Michigan ballot this November.

If passed, this proposition would give patients who are terminally ill and mentally sound a chance to end their suffering on their own terms.

Two physicians must certify that the patient is terminally ill and not expected to live more than six months. They must also be certified mentally well and not just depressed. The patient can then ask the doctor for a prescription for a lethal dose of a drug. After waiting a week, the patient can get it filled.

This proposal would prevent the kind of assisted suicide that Dr. Kervorkian has been promoting because there are safeguards — the two doctors' opinions, the waiting period and the confirmation that the patient is mentally sound.

Gov. and Mrs. Milliken head the committee backing it.

Please call 888-217-0700 for more information or to offer to help promote it.

Tuesday is opening day

The annual Emmet-Charlevoix County Fair opens Tuesday, Aug. 25, and runs through Sunday, Aug. 30, at the fairgrounds on Charlevoix Avenue, Petoskey. The Skerbeck Brothers family midway opens at noon on Tuesday.

The opening day is free admission for senior citizens. "Kids" of all ages can take advantage of Kids Days Wednesday, Aug. 26, and Thursday, Aug. 27, when a $12 armband will let you enjoy all the rides in the midway from noon until close.

The Birdman, Mark Preston and his feathery entourage will entertain with three shows daily from Tuesday, Aug. 25 through Saturday, Aug. 29. Preston will perform a magic show and animal act with his exotic birds and his amiable black mutt, Auggie-the-Doggie.

Other features of this year's fair are the Flying Star Rodeo, scheduled for Tuesday and Wednesday evenings, free concerts in the tent featuring Gaylord's Jeff Fitzgerald & The All Night Crawlers as well as The Chase Buchanan Band from Arkansas & Nashville. The Demolition Derby is Saturday, Aug. 29, at 7 p.m. Call 347-1010 for more information.

Rodeo tickets are $7 for ages 13 and up, $5 for ages 5-12, and free for those 5 and under.

THE 1998 EMMET-Charlevoix County Fair begins Tuesday but for 4-Hers, their work began long ago.

For most livestock raisers, the ultimate goal is to get the most profit for their time and effort at the auction. The animals are sold to the highest bidder. This year's auction begins at 3 p.m. Thursday, Aug. 27.

4-H began 130 years ago. First called "corn clubs," the clubs were extensions of the federal government's land-grant programs. The government gave states land to establish universities to teach students, and also to provide educational services to residents of the surrounding areas.

However, professors soon found it difficult to teach corn farmers how to grow more productive crops. Corn clubs were then formed to teach the farmers' children how to increase the production of crops, with the hope that the information would reach the farmers themselves.

After 20 years, corn clubs were replaced by the 4-H clubs known today. The new clubs sought to teach children from rural areas, as well as children from the cities and suburbs.

Projects judged at the fair include livestock, fruits, vegetables, plants and crafts.

All 4-H entrants receive awards. Judges do not compare project against project, but project to ability. It is not the best tomato overall that is sought, but the best tomato produced based on the growers' abilities and experience.

This combination of regulated competition, emphasis on education, and open-minded judging makes the 4-H program a popular one.

ONE OF THE most popular events of the Emmet-Charlevoix County Fair is the Demolition Derby on Saturday, Aug. 29, at 7 p.m.

The derby is organized and operated by the Emmet County Firefighters Association. All proceeds stay in the community, helping to further educate the local firefighters.

Admission is $5 for children 12 and under, and $7 for adults. The derby will begin at 7 p.m. Saturday, Aug. 29. For more information about the Demolition Derby, fair schedule, or ticket prices, call the fair office at (616) 347-1010.

The band will be performing many of the songs off its new album as well as some old favorites. Jeff has played with such artists as T. The Chase Buchanan Band from northeast Arkansas is a five piece, high energy, Country and Southern Rock Band. They have performed with many of Nashville's greatest talents, such as Alan Jackson, Mel McDaniel, Joe Dixie, Kenny Wayne Sheppard and David Lee Murphy.

Jeff Fitzgerald and The All-Night Crawlers followed by the Chase Buchanan Band are performing in the tent at 5:30 p.m. and 9:30 p.m. Wednesday, Aug. 26 and Friday, Aug. 28, at 8 p.m. All concerts are free.

A+ Boyne City Housing Commission gets top rating from federal agency

The Boyne City Housing Commission and its staff know how to do their jobs.

They have earned a 100 percent rating from the US Department of Housing and Urban Development (HUD) for their management of Litzenger Place, a senior housing apartment complex, and Conkle Development, a group of 26 low-income rental homes.

The commission posted perfect scores in core areas such as rent collections, energy consumption, how quickly units turn over, how fast work orders are turned around, on its operating reserves, and accounts receivable.

It was also assessed and received 10s (on a one to 10 scale) in areas of modernization in which it is graded for administering grant money to fix up houses, and for its tenant initiatives such as the resident councils it has implemented and for its efforts to help residents move out of the low income bracket.

HUD's mission is to create housing

"I couldn't do it without my staff or the support of the housing commission or the city. It's a team effort."

opportunities for low-income families and the elderly fit into that category. The commission holds an annual contract with HUD in which it agrees to operate the housing for such families. The housing management criteria on which it is judged each year are set by HUD under the Public Housing Management Assessment

Program (PHMAP).

"I couldn't do it without my staff or the support of the housing commission or the city," said Todd Sorenson, executive director of the housing commission. "It's a team effort."

The outstanding rating helps reduce oversight by the federal government and gives the commission more leeway on how it administers its programs.

"It means we run good housing and make good use of the funds we receive from the federal government," Sorenson said. "Since they know we can do the job, they don't have to watch us very closely."

Since the inception of PHMAP, the commission's scores have risen from 91 percent in 1992 to a 98.5 percent last year, and to a 100 percent rating this year. The rating system is undergoing some changes, according to Sorenson. But if they raise the bar, "we'll just jump higher," he said.

Jake's Place hosts fund raiser for Special Olympics

Jake's Place, a Boyne Falls tavern, will team up with endurance snowmobilers Wertz Warriors to host a pig roast and raffle on Saturday, Aug. 22, to help raise money for the Michigan Special Olympics Winter Sports program. The public is invited to attend.

The Winter Games is a three-day event in which children and adults with mental retardation train and compete in alpine skiing, cross-country skiing, speed skating, figure skating and snowshoeing.

All proceeds from this weekend's cook-out will go toward Special Olympics, with 20 percent of the earnings remaining in Charlevoix County.

The Wertz Warriors are a group of snowmobile riders who drive their sleds 900 miles, criss-crossing the state, to raise money for Special Olympics. They raised $35,000 when they first rode back in 1982. Their goal this year is to raise $300,000, and fundraisers like the one at Jake's Place are held prior to and during the event to generate more contributions.

Jake's Place owner Kim Rotermund will sponsor rider Fred Tate of Lambertville, and the tavern will be added as one of the pit stops for the 63 drivers on their February trip. Former Detroit Tigers pitcher and Wertz Warrior Mark Fydrich is expected to stop by Boyne Falls with the rest of the group this winter. Rotermund said, and be available to visit and sign autographs.

"I wanted to get involved in something," Rotermund said. "This gives me a chance to give something back to Boyne Falls, the community and the county." He provides the site and insurance, and local residents and businesses have generously donated the food and raffle items for the event.

The all-you-can-eat cook-out begins at noon. The cost is $8 for adults, $7 for senior citizens, and $5 for children. Jake's Place is located at 2670 U.S. 131, and the number is 549-3346. For more information about Wertz Warriors call (810) 954-9770.

BOYNE CITY HANDS OUT MARVIN LODING AWARDS

Taking pride in their community

A group of Boyne City residents and business people were presented with Marvin Loding Community Pride Awards by the city commission last Tuesday, for making improvements to their property and for exhibiting outstanding community spirit.

Maria and Woody Everest won the residential division of the award for "taking pride in their home through landscaping design and appearance." The Everests have lived at their bungalow style home at 330 State St. for nearly 50 years.

A newer roof and siding are complemented by a sprawling lawn and flower gardens which the couple waters via wells they hand-drilled. "The green grass makes all the difference in the world," Woody said.

"We enjoy it and our grandchildren enjoy it," Maria said.

Business partners Gary Deters, Becky Voice and Jeff Wellman were honored for "taking pride in their business through landscaping and appearance." The trio rebuilt the retail space, now called the Tower Center, at the corner of Water and Lake streets in downtown Boyne City, into four smaller units.

Extensive facade renovations are in keeping with a more traditional look and were designed with direction from the city, a local designer, and architects. The tower on the corner will eventually house the old city clock. The space now houses four businesses: Thick and Juicy, Kilwin's Chocolates and Ice Cream Shop, Cindifranco's Cool Stuff, and Roast and Toast.

Susan and Hugh Conklin were presented the award in the Community Spirited Division "for taking pride in their community through their involvement in youth, church, civic and community."

The nine-member planning commission voted by secret-ballot to choose the winners. Nominations were made by local citizens, staff, board members, and volunteers.

The award is named in honor of former citizen Marvin Loding, whose list of accomplishments and contributions include his being a three-term mayor, a planning commissioner, and a member of the Charlevoix County Board of Commissioners.

He was also actively involved in the development of the North Boyne Launch Ramp and Shelter House at Veteran's Memorial Park, was instrumental in the engineering of the Boyne City Wastewater Lagoon System, and spent much time working on Avalanche Preserve.

heart and soul and I'll do whatever it takes to insure a smooth transition while we search for a replacement."

Steve Hines, a former athletic director, and now a government teacher and girls varsity basketball coach, will become the interim athletic director with some assistant principal duties on a part-time basis. The district will look to fill his teaching position with a substitute.

"He's highly qualified and ready to take on the responsibility for a year," Jackson said. She will continue to oversee the long-term planning for athletics.

Superintendent Chip Hansen felt the district's late start in its principal search was the reason for so few qualified candidates. "We'll be the first district in the administrative search next year," he said.

In other business the board:

- Approved its annual resolution to borrow $1,200,000 against anticipated state aid revenues.

- Reviewed the progress being made on the elementary school renovation and playground improvement projects with Hansen and elementary principal Chuck Hershberger. The renovation project is moving along well, and awaits fire marshal and electrical inspections, which will take place in the next two weeks.

- Reviewed progress on the implementation of the district's strategic plan with director of curriculum Gus Bishop.

- Appointed Darrin Podskalny and Juli Runberg to teaching positions. Podskalny will teach art and drafting at the high school and Runberg will teach art and special education at the middle school.

- Appointed the fall sports coaches: Irene Ferguson (cheerleading), Brandon Stadt (golf), Ted Sherman (varsity football assistant), John Ubbing (JV football assistant), Duane Cutler (middle school football) and Brad Jones (freshmen girls' basketball).

- Approved a resolution increasing substitute teacher compensation to $36 per 1/2 day and $61.20 per full day for the 1998-99 school year.

- Approved the sale of a 1979 International school bus to Kalamazoo Metal Recyclers for the bid price of $526.

GARDENING

Flowers of all shapes and colors fill Lou and Dan Faust's yard

Those who regularly drive by Lou and Dan Faust's home probably take notice if there's a lull in gardening activity.

"Every morning, every evening and in between," they're out in the flower beds, Dan said. Planting, watering, fertilizing, or pulling weeds from around the rose bushes — lots of rose bushes, or from the hollyhocks which stand close to 8 1/2 feet tall this year (a foot higher than Dan's outstretched arm).

In fact, a few years ago, a neighbor had a feeling something was wrong when he didn't see the duo buzzing around the yard for a while. He was right. Dan was sick, and the flowers were put on hold.

But they dug right back in once he recovered — Dan estimates they each put in 20 hours per week.

The gardens are grown in long strips. Different flowers, bushes or groundcover are tried out. If they don't make it, the Fausts don't force them, or extend any further effort. Those taking root, get to stay a good long time.

There are daisies, ladies mantle, poppies, miniature bleeding hearts and primrose — the earliest bloom in the spring. There are hibiscus, coneflowers, Sweet William and bee balm. The lupine is supposed to die out year to year, but is prolific in their garden, even jumping over a walkway, mingling with the other flowers. That's O.K. Mother Nature will have her way.

The mums are already in bloom. Everything's ahead of time this season, although the Faust's spot in a valley keeps things a little cooler and a bit behind the in-town plants.

Permanent garden structures take their place among tufts of greenery and color. A sandstone rock, covered in hollows and holes was moved to the garden from another part of the yard. In the process the moss came off and Dan wonders how to get it to grow again. Lou has recently heard to break moss into small pieces and add them to a mixture of one quart of ammonia to two gallons of water. It does seem an odd solution, she admits.

There are six bird feeders, four watering dishes, six birdhouses, a sundial, a love-birds statue and a few angels.

Lou and Dan Faust's secret for lots of blossoms is the time they devote to tending to their flower gardens throughout the growing season.

For six or seven years, maybe more, they've been tending to the beds — since they retired. Lou said. Before that there wasn't any time. Each year it turns a different length of sod is turned over to house new plants.

"Every time we go by, there's another rose garden," said East Jordan Garden Club member Ginny Carey. She presented the couple with a certificate of appreciation from the club for their contributions to beautifying the city.

"Like the grandkids said, how many more gardens are you going to have?" Lou said.

"Everybody notices your garden," Carey said. And no wonder. They live on Boyne City-East Jordan Road, just before the road curves into East Jordan. Traffic is steady.

They freely give gardening tips. No high-powered fertilizers or fancy pruning shears.

There's homemade compost mixed with wood chips — they chip their own wood now — for the soil, and some miracle grow now and then, but not much.

Dan suggests at least two inches of water per week. "More wouldn't hurt."

Lou said well-water doesn't do as well as the rain because the well is too cold.

The deer like to snack on the blooms, so Dan gets human hair from Lou's Barber Shop up the road. They put it in cheesecloth around the garden to keep them at bay. "It's about the only thing I found that works," Dan said.

Time-release pellets under the rose bushes seem to do the trick Dan said. Lou thinks the acidic soil from the all the pine trees help them grow.

A rose bush that Lou calls "Mom's Rose" was grown from a sprout she took off an old bush from her childhood home last year. It grows near a bench — all that's left of an arbor Dan made year's ago for their daughter Linda's wedding. Lou planted one bush each to remember her parents who passed on 30 years ago.

Dan has also transplanted a trumpet vine from where he grew up, rooting it from his sister's plant.

It's time to pull weeds after a week away from home.

Last year Dan built another arbor with a bench and trellis overhead. A cement walkway meanders up to it from between the flower beds. He poured the free-form ovals himself. Grass grows in between them. They planted peace roses — pale pink and yellow petals — on either side. One's in full bloom, the other is just ready to open.

"The tension just goes away," Lou said of digging her hands into the soil each day.

"I've got to have something to do," Dan said. "I just can't sit around."

"We're going to change some things this fall," Dan said. They'll move some roses from near the house. "Evidently the soil isn't right, by the deck."

Come Christmas time, the spruce trees are outfitted in lights, and a Santa and sleigh are strung up to glide from one large tree to another.

"People start asking the first of November, 'when are you going to do that?'" Carey said.

Dan says he's not very creative. "I'd often thought I'd like to have a landscape architect. I'd like something different, I don't know what." The drive-by fans would probably disagree.

Not one to play favorites, Dan said, "I guess we like whatever grows."

They garden because its fun, said Lou. "Is there any other reason?"

Keeping deer away a big challenge for Robert Price

Deer are a problem this summer in Robert Price's garden on Spring Street in Boyne City.

They are as bad as he can remember in the many years he has been gardening, which is a lot of years for the 75-year-old Boyne native.

"A deer or two can ruin a garden," Robert said.

He's tried a few tricks to let the deer know they are not welcome. Betty Shaver, president of the Boyne Valley Garden Club, gave him some canna bulbs to plant which have been known to keep deer away.

He planted them on one side and they've grown more than a foot tall and might be working. He plans to get more and plant the whole perimeter of his garden.

He also has a radio in the garden next to his tomatoes, but it's not for his listening pleasure. He turns it on about 11 at night and keeps it playing until 7 or 8 in the morning.

The deer haven't bothered his tomatoes, Robert said.

Robert is protective of his tomatoes. Of the all the vegetables in his garden — corn, beets, zucchini, beans, radishes, green peppers, spinach, lettuce — tomatoes are his favorite.

He starts them from seed — Gurney Girls ordered from South Dakota — the last week in March. He averages about 7 to 8 bushels each season. He used to sell part of the crop, but now just gives them away to family and neighbors. The other half he and his wife JoAnn can for the rest of the year.

Robert's had his garden in the same spot since 1961. That was two years before he retired as a seaman for US Steel after 22 years. He sailed from Loraine, Ohio to Duluth working on ships carrying iron ore.

After that he worked for the Tannery and Maple Blocks of Petoskey.

Robert begins planting his garden in early May. Potatoes are first.

He has no secrets to share about what makes his garden grow.

"All I do is plant it and water it." The rest is up to Mother Nature.

He did say he never refrigerates tomatoes.

He spends about $40 for seed and since he drilled his own well he has no water cost. His time in the garden averages about three hours a day.

A happy bunch of children at Camp EJ posed while enjoying popsicles on the beach at East Jordan's Tourist Park last Friday.

Camp EJ wraps up another season

Another season of Camp EJ came to a close on Friday with one last trip to the East Jordan Tourist Park on Lake Charlevoix for swimming, sunning and sand-castle sculpturing.

The day camp is jointly sponsored by the City of East Jordan and the East Jordan Public Schools and was host to 163 children over an eight-week period this summer — up from 98 students last year.

"We've had a great summer," director Sarah Werth said. "It's a great thing for kids in this and other communities to do."

Most campers are East Jordan residents, and children from Boyne City, Central Lake, Ellsworth and Charlevoix also participated.

Mornings at base camp — the East Jordan Elementary School — were spent in rotations of archery, basketball, arts and crafts, and hiking. Afternoons included capture the flag and swimming at either the city pool or at the Tourist Park.

The group also took field trips to local places of interest including the Grass River Natural Area, Wagbo Peace Center, Aten Place, the fire department, the ambulance service and local museums.

"Things just keep getting better," Werth said. The camp has space for 400 enrollments per season, and it filled up 370 of those slots over the summer.

In addition to Werth there were four staff members, Mike Mazzeola, Renee Perreault, Mandy Reid, and Matt Shaw. There were also three guest counselors, Patty Gee, Emily Nieuwendorp and Rusty Steinhoff.

Sign-ups for next summer will begin in March. The cost is $50 for a week (five days), and families can enroll 5 to 12 year olds for up to eight weeks of camp.

NEIGHBORS

By NANCY NORTHUP

A "FIRST ONE in quite awhile" reunion took place this past Saturday at the Peninsula Grange Hall, thanks to Henry and Marion Grutsch of East Jordan, and Gordon and Maxine Hunt and Alice Cooper, all of Boyne City. Between 50 and 60 descendants of Thomas Hunt came from the Charlevoix County area, Traverse City, Morrice, Detroit, and Colorado. The potluck picnic was a great success as family ties were renewed and plans were made to make it an annual event. Missing this good time was Alice Cooper, due to recent surgery.

KEN AND BECKY ORDWAY of Boyne City welcomed the arrival of their first child, a son, who was born July 11, 1998 at Charlevoix Area Hospital. Joshua Charles Ordway weighed six pounds one ounce and measured 20 inches long. Grandparents are Bob and Georgie Quackenbush of Midland, Marvin and Kathy Potter of Boyne City and Larry and Barb Ordway of Kalkaska.

THE AUGUST GATHERING of the Northern Slopes Farm Bureau was held on Saturday night at the home of Hilda Reinhardt. Twelve members enjoyed a pot luck picnic.

THE WALLOON LAKE Community Church families enjoyed a potluck picnic at the Village Park, following morning worship services on Sunday. Later, out away from the shoreline, there were 22 baptisms officiated by pastors Jeff Ellis and Brent Hammer. A late afternoon or early evening church service, featuring world class violin and fiddle artistry, was presented by Bill and Jean Mirk and daughters. The special afternoon wound up with family harmony and heartfelt testimonies.

ON THURSDAY, AUG. 20, Nathan Potter, age 20 and the son of Marvin and Kathy Potter of Boyne City, will graduate from the Great Lakes Training Center in Illinois. He will be stationed in Charleston, S.C.

MR. AND MRS. VICTOR PAVEL of Punta Gorda, Fla., are here as houseguests of Thorneta Rowe.

GREAT-NIECE MELISSA Goldsmith Brantley and husband Paul and two sons from McLeansville, N.C., were Sunday overnight guests of Anne Jenkins. Visiting Goldsmith relatives as well, Melissa was especially here to attend her 10th class reunion of Petoskey High School.

DARLENE BRICKER of Boyne City and friend Bill Duffield of Gaylord returned on Sunday night from Haslet, where they visited her daughter, Dixie Lahti and family. While there, they were among the 67 attending the annual Bricker-Cremeans family reunion. "It was a beautiful day and we had a wonderful time," Darlene said.

A CALIFORNIA CALL came in this week from a happy son, U.S.N. Petty Officer Curtis Leist. An avid reader of the Citizen, he wanted to tell what a great week it had been, having his mom, Kathleen Leist of Boyne City, there in San Diego, visiting him and his family. Grandchildren and all enjoyed fun in the sun, baseball games, and just being together.

LAST SUNDAY, there was a gathering of 98 attending the annual Everest Family Reunion held at Whiting's Park. They came from Illinois and Detroit and the Boyne City area for a good old "visiting time." The birthday of "Grandma" Marie Everest was also celebrated, as it was that very day. All are looking forward to the August, 1999 reunion.

SALLY MCGEORGE of Boyne City, who was admitted to Northern Michigan Hospital as a medical patient last week, is reported to be doing better.

MR. AND MRS. CRISTY DAVIS of

Jackson called on his sisters, Ruth Yahr of Boyne City and Edith Tillotson of Bortz Health Care in Petoskey over the weekend.

SEVERAL MEMBERS OF the Boyne Valley Slim & Trim Club enjoyed Wednesday afternoon with a picnic and bingo games at Deer Lake's Fall Park.

TENANTS OF LITZENBURGER Place extend their sympathies to the families of former resident, Lelia Voelker. Lelia, who was a resident of late at the Havencrest AFC in East Jordan, (and my friend of many years) died early in the morning, this past Friday. Her farewell service was held on Monday at the Stackus Funeral Home, followed by a luncheon for the family at the Free Methodist Church. Lelia, age 90, was laid to rest at the Greenwood Cemetery in Petoskey later in the afternoon.

ROSEMARY SMITH, the wife of retired Pastor Elwyn Smith of East Jordan, was a surgical patient at the Charlevoix Area Hospital this past week.

NANCY CAMPBELL and daughter Kelli of Crystal Falls were Saturday overnight guests at the Boyne City home of Flo Kominaki.

"ABOUT 60, MAYBE MORE" attended Saturday's annual Towne Family Reunion. This year's event, hosted by Gene (Delbert) and Linda Towne and Robert and Pat Towne and held at the latter Towne's Court Street home, brought them from Walloon Lake, East Jordan, Boyne City, Lowell, and Ludington. Coming the furthest was Phyllis Rentz of Dearborn. There was lots of visiting, good times and good food throughout the day. After supper, ice cream and cake was enjoyed for an early family celebration of Linda's birthday of Aug. 17. Next year's reunion will be hosted by Kathy Leist.

Lichen's billowing sails coaxed the boat out of port during its first excursion onto Lake Charlevoix.

Sailboat

new-found love for sailing (and an ad on the Internet) led him to the East Coast to purchase the boat.

"In Maine the wooden-boat revival has really taken off," he said. There are few cruising wooden boats in this area, most are fiberglass.

The only maintenance difference between the two is that you can let the fiberglass boat go longer without maintenance, Wiseman said. "But they certainly don't look good. You have to maintain both boats to keep them looking Bristol."

"And just the feel of wood once you're in a wooden boat — I mean I could never go back," Wiseman said.

It's not the teak or exotic woods he speaks of, but some of the more common timbers very similar to the timbers of northern Michigan forests. In fact, some oak replaced by Wiseman was purchased in Boyne Falls. The Lichen is trimmed in Mahogany, but has cedar strip planking and an oak backbone. "It's very functional. It feels good."

"People are finding out that fiberglass is not the totally no-maintenance product that it was promoted as being, and people like to touch wood and feel wood. You can't get that in the plastic world today," Wiseman said.

An overnight trip found Chase tending to dinner in the galley while his brother Stephen, sister Christina, and friend Lane McCarry peeked out of the V-berth.

For two weeks, Wiseman and his children Clay, Chase, Christina and Stephen — with lots of support from his wife Tina — worked from sunup to sundown with a tag-team approach to readying the boat for sailing.

"Our intent was to put her right in the water which was very overly optimistic," Wiseman said. "We immediately found out that the center board was seized up and would not come down."

Repairs began with taking off some of the interior wood and timber to get to the center board. And that led to taking the center board all the way off and completely refurbishing and restoring it — replacing the pins, cables and epoxy. Then there was the usual scraping, caulking and painting of the bottom, to cleaning the bilges.

Victor LaCombe of Boyne City hauled the boat back from Maine.

"And while all that's going on, it ended up mushrooming into 'we may as well replace this and that.'"

"It's been one thing after another. Little surprises just like in home restoration, it's very similar. You uncover one thing and you find three more things that need to be done, so you have to enjoy it," Wiseman said. "I enjoy it and I'm learning. My experience in non-naval restoration and understanding of materials has been very helpful."

The Lichen sleeps four adults, or six people if some are children. It houses a locker, water closet, and a galley with an icebox. The wood-heat stove — which may or may not be the original — was made in Benton Harbor, Mich. The machine-gunner on its door could place it around World War II. There are very few electronics on board.

and she's lit with kerosene.

Wiseman said he plans to keep it that way.

The one-inch strips of cedar planking, placed on the oak frames, are made rigid by glue and bronze nails.

Lichen is a cruising boat, not a racing boat. "She will be relatively slow, but that doesn't concern me," Wiseman said. "I'm more interested in being on the water, not how fast she goes."

They kept the name, Lichen, as it's bad luck to rename a boat and it was the wish of the previous owner.

The Wisemans set sail with Lichen for the first time two weeks ago and all went well.

"It was great," Wiseman said. For the rest of the summer they'll sail on Lake Charlevoix, next year the Great Lakes.
