At A GLANCE

Boyer's Santa Parade coming to town Nov. 29

It's holiday time, and there's nothing that can put folks in the spirit like the annual Boyer City Santa Parade, scheduled, as always, for the Nov. 29, the Friday following Thanksgiving.

Slated to begin at 6 p.m., the parade will travel Lake Street to Water Street, and end at the Dilworth Inn. After Santa makes his big entrance, he'll be waiting at the Dilworth, ready to visit with the kids and hear their Christmas wishes.

In conjunction with the parade, downtown businesses will be taking part in the annual Holiday Open House event, serving refreshments to visitors and offering special shopping deals. The open house will be held after the Santa Parade on Friday, and again during regular business hours on Saturday, Nov. 30.

For more information, call the Boyer Area Chamber of Commerce at 582-6222.

EJ chamber to co-host holiday Business After Hours event

The East Jordan and Central Lake Chambers of Commerce are hosting a Holiday Business After Hours event on Monday, Dec. 2, from 6-8 pm. at Murphy's Lamplight Inn in Central Lake.

Hors d'oeuvres will be served and a cash bar is available. The cost to attend is $3 for members and $5 for non-members.

The event is co-sponsored by East Jordan Iron Works, Jordan Valley Accounting, and Murphy's Lamplight Inn.

For more information, call the East Jordan Area Chamber of Commerce at 536-7351.

A grand opening

Between the annual fall show and a special "homecoming" performance by Boyer City High School alumnus Matthew Chellis, there was plenty to celebrate during the grand opening weekend of the new BCHS Performing Arts Center. A weekend of many highlights, one was surely the entrance of the high school marching band decked out in their brand new uniforms, left. For more photos, see page 12.

Early opening a bonus for Boyer Mountain

The recent snow has been an early holiday gift for both Boyer Mountain and area winter sports enthusiasts. The ski resort in Boyer Falls opened its slopes to skiers and snowboarders on Friday, Nov. 22, running three lifts on four runs through the weekend.

"We had a good turnout Friday, Saturday, and Sunday," said Boyer Mountain general manager Ed Grice. "The conditions held up pretty well."

As nighttime temperatures had dipped below freezing in the previous week, crews at the Mountain had been busy making snow, creating a good base for whatever Mother Nature might decide to provide. Conditions through the weekend proved too mild to continue with snowmaking, though on Monday Grice said crews had been working on Sunday night and conditions appeared favorable to make snow in the days ahead.

Boyer Mountain will be open again on Thursday, Nov. 28, Thanksgiving Day, and will remain open through the weekend. "We will probably have seven or eight [runs open] by the weekend," Grice said.

Following the long weekend, the slopes will remain closed until the resort opens officially on Dec. 6, after which time it will be open daily throughout the season.

As for the early opening, Grice said that "we were shooting for Thanksgiving [to open], so to be able to open a week early was just a bonus for everybody."

"We're excited to be open," he said. "The skiing have been marvelous."

FORECASTS FOR the week call for continued cold and scattered snow, with daytime highs in the low to mid-30s, and nighttime temperatures dipping into the teens. Though by the weekend the lows will have risen into the 30s, daytime temps are expected to continue to hover around the freezing mark.

It was a weekend filled with smiles at Boyer Mountain in Boyer Falls. The resort opened three slopes for the weekend, and expects to have double that amount for the Thanksgiving holiday. photo by Vic Ruggles

City of EJ has new mayor, fills vacant seat on commission

The East Jordan City Commission has appointed former commission Jeanette Norton to fill a vacancy on the council following the departure of Bernie Hammond earlier this month.

Hammond announced his resignation from the commission in September of this year, citing frustration with he perceived to be the commission's lack of control over personnel issues. The first regular commission meeting in November was Hammond's last meeting as a council member.

Norton, one of four citizens expressing an interest in the position, has previously served as a commissioner for the City of East Jordan and is an employee of Grandvue Medical Care Facility.

She will fulfill the remainder of Hammond's term, due to expire in June of 2003.

LET'S TALK TURKEY

For most of us, Thanksgiving is a time to "talk turkey," so to speak. It's possible, however, that those partaking in the first Thanksgiving didn't even have a turkey, and certainly didn't have such modern staples as stuffing, mashed potatoes, or pumpkin pie. The meal, indeed, looked much different than what we stuff ourselves with before settling down to watch the big game. And the menu hasn't been the only thing to fluctuate — it's been a long road to making the Thanksgiving we take for granted an official holiday.

A BRIEF HISTORY OF THE HOLIDAY

Though the pilgrims did have a feast in 1621 near Plymouth, Mass., to celebrate the first harvest of their new life in the New World, it was not an event that was immediately repeated, and therefore could hardly be called a tradition.

That first meal, which included more than 50 settlers and approximately 90 Native American, was not repeated specifically for many years, though it's likely that colonists occasionally held harvest feasts when the season called for it.

It wasn't, in fact, until 1777 that the first official Thanksgiving of the newly established United States of America occurred, when General George Washington and his army stopped on their way to Valley Forge to mark the occasion in the bitter cold, directed to do so by the Continental Congress.

In 1789, after his inauguration as the first president of the United States of America, Washington made his first official proclamation, designating Nov. 26, 1789 as a national day of "thanksgiving and prayer."

By the early 1800s, however, the tradition of a national day of Thanksgiving was lost, becoming more of a regional observation, until revived by President Abraham Lincoln in 1863, when two national days of Thanksgiving were declared, one celebrating the victory at Gettysburg on Aug. 6, and the other the first of the last-Thursday-in-November annual Thanksgivings.

That wasn't the end of it, however. In 1941, President Franklin Delano Roosevelt signed a bill establishing the fourth Thursday in November as Thanksgiving, an observance that has been consistent nationally since 1956.

A DIFFERENT KIND OF THANKSGIVING FEAST

The Mayflower set ground a Plymouth Rock in 1620, at the beginning of what would prove to be a devastating winter for the pilgrims. But, according to historical record, the harvest of 1621 proved to be a bountiful one, prompting the colonists to celebrate with a feast, and include some of the Native Americans who, it is widely believed, helped the pilgrims survive

EJ school board appoints trustee to fill vacancy

Local resident and businesswoman Deborah Manville has been appointed to fill the East Jordan Board of Education seat recently vacated by longtime board member John Kempton.

Manville, appointed at the board's recent regular meeting, sought the seat based on her active involvement with the schools as a parent and volunteer.

She and her husband, Irv, are the parents of two children, Michael, a fifth grader, and Joseph, a second grader.

A personal banker/investment representative at Huntington Bank in East Jordan, Manville has been involved in recent years with the First Kids Bank program at East Jordan Elementary School.

In October of this year, Kempton tendered his resignation after more than 11 years of service, citing a need to direct his energies towards "personal and professional priorities."

Manville will serve out the remainder of Kempton's term, which expires in June of 2003.

IN OTHER BUSINESS, the board also heard an informative presentation on the Michigan Literacy Program and the use of the profile at the elementary school as a vehicle for assessing reading skills and instruction. Collaborating on the presentation were second grade faculty member Marie Haley, Char-Em Literacy Consultant Allison Mellon, Char-Em School Psychologist M.J. Doyle, and elementary school principal Cal Prins.

Former BCMS finds new life

A year ago, the fate of the then-Boyne City Middle School hung uncertainly in the balance, as a facility review committee studied the feasibility of the district maintaining a three-building versus four-building configuration. With student numbers making a three-building configuration a necessity, the question then became, what to do with the fourth building, if it would not be housing students for the time being.

That's where a little creative thinking came in and has, ultimately, begun to pay off. Once it became clear that the district would need to find another use for the building until it's needed for classroom space, facility committee members, administrators, and the school board formulated a three-phase plan to fill the building, bringing in educational, community, and business components.

After putting the feelers out, it wasn't long before the district realized that the building might, in fact, be filling a need in the area. In short order, queries began to come in from programs like Head Start, Be-Four, and other Char-Em early childhood programs. By early in the current school year, a large amount of space in the building has been filled, having become the new home of Be-Four, New Horizons, and the district's Title VII Native American Education program, conference/training space for the Char-Em ISD, Char-Em staff offices, and office space for the district technology director, as well as home of the Boyne City School District's administrative offices.

The uses, according to Boyne City schools superintendent Jim Cooper, are just the beginning. "Other programs are interested [in leasing space]," Cooper said. "It's just a matter of time."

The approach to seeking tenants for the building has been three-fold, Cooper said, encompassing education, community and business components. While thus far, education and community uses have been implemented, the business community is likewise working towards uses of the building space as well, primarily through programs in development with the Northern Lakes Economic Alliance.

And while other outside parties will continue to fill the building, the district is also planning to utilize the extra space to expand its own offerings, like the early childhood daycare program currently in the works and slated to kick off next school year. Initially, the daycare program will focus on caring for toddlers, and fits in with the goal of co-ordinating a comprehensive early childhood piece in the district.

Financially, this year will be "difficult" Cooper said, due to the lack of baseline data on which to predict the costs of running the building in such a capacity. By next year, however, Cooper predicts that breaking even is more than a possibility. Capital improvements made by tenants like Char-Em ISD have enhanced the building at no cost to the district, and, ultimately, the uses are accomplishing what the district set out to do, which was keep the building from sitting idle. "And the truth is, if three years down the road, if K-12 numbers dictated it, we could move into this building," Cooper said.

Be-Four students, and teachers, are enjoying their new space at the Boyne City Early Childhood Education building, the former home of Boyne City Middle School. Previously housed in "portables" at the elementary school, the program now has a home of its own.

Getting closer

■ Negotiations with Boyne City top manager candidate continue

Negotiations with Boyne City's top candidate for city manager were still in the process early this week, according to interim city manager Dick Huebler, though both parties are close to an agreement.

After Michael Cain, one of five candidates interviewed recently for the position, was selected by the City Commission as the top choice for the job, he submitted a list of terms for a potential contract. City attorney Jim Murray, designated by the commission to negotiate for the City, has been working with the commission to review those terms and draw up a contract agreeable to both parties.

"We're making sure what he had submitted was common with the former contract, to make sure we're all talking the same language," Huebler said of the process. The contract process, it appears, will be more of a matter of "refining" rather than major negotiation. "There are no stumbling blocks," Huebler said of the terms requested thus far.

In the meantime, Boyne City representatives have traveled to St. John's and Fenton, where Cain served previously as city manager, to get a better feel for the candidate by interviewing Cain's former co-workers and community members. "They came back with glowing reports," Huebler said. Cain was chosen as the top candidate by commissioners two weeks ago. Two other candidates, Todd Campbell and Maureen Barry, were designated as first and second alternates for the position.

The city manager position opened in September after the termination of previous manager Eric Strahl's contract. Strahl was hired as city manager in 1997.

Possibilities are endless at new BCHS auditorium

TO THE EDITOR:

It's really hard to explain the thoughts and emotions that went through my head this past Friday and Saturday nights.

To sit and watch all the talent and outstanding performances of our students, not to mention all the variety the show offered this year. All of this topped off by the band coming out in their brand new uniforms, how cool was that?

And then to come back Saturday night to be entertained by a true artist. How gracious of Matthew Chellis to donate his time to make the grand opening just that ... GRAND.

It was so nice to hear the comments that were coming from folks who traveled from East Jordan, Charlevoix, Harbor Springs, Petoskey, and Gaylord, not to mention all of us from Boyne City.

People were completely in awe of the outstanding acoustics, how comfortable the seats are, the fact that there is not a bad seat in the house and how great it was to have the large commissary area to visit with friends and enjoy the outstanding food provided by the hospitality class. A class act!

It's a great accomplishment that the auditorium has been in use seven weekend nights so far this month for different shows, from symphonies, to jazz, all the way to opera.

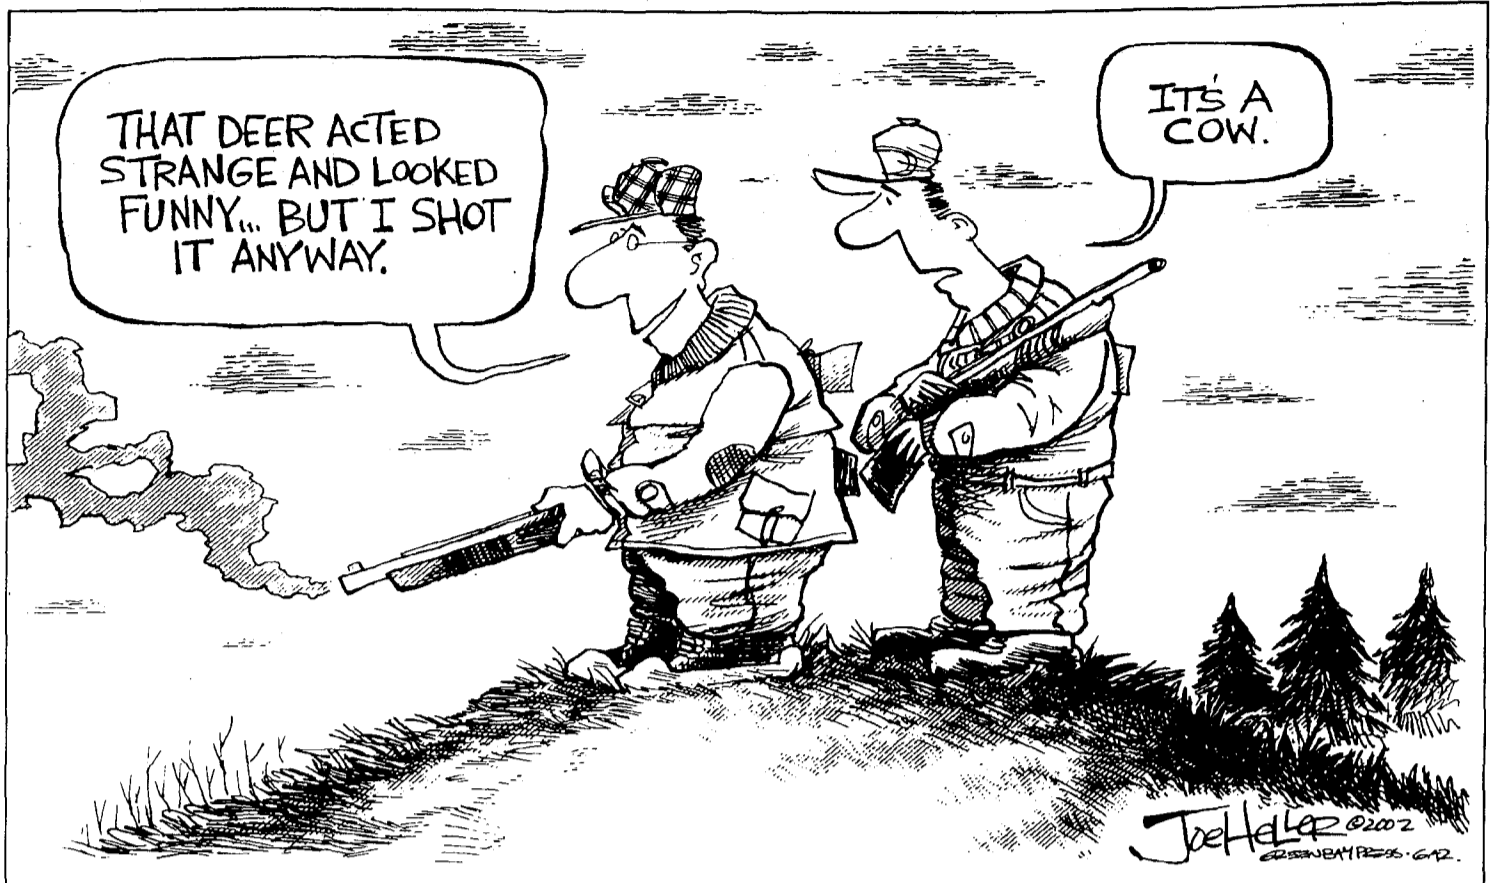

The possibilities are endless with this awesome facility.

I think we are very fortunate to have so much commitment from individuals who have made this performing arts center such a great success.

I just want to say thank you to all who made this grand opening so memorable.

P.S. There are still nameplates available for the seats in the auditorium. Anyone who is interested in supporting this great fine arts facility, call me at 582-1567 for more information.

Opening of Performing Arts Center 'truly incredible'

TO THE EDITOR:

Wow! What a night! That's about the best way to sum up the Grand Opening of the Boyne City High Schools Auditorium this past Friday night. The night was truly incredible.

For those that didn't go (or couldn't because the night was sold out), you missed the event of the year, and maybe even the decade.

The night was a showcasing of the wonderful cross-section of what the Boyne City Public Schools Fine Arts programs have to offer, and what an offering it was.

It was a night full of fun for young and old to enjoy, from the talents of past alumni Marty Ward and Matt Chellis, to the young upcoming talents of the Boyne City Elementary School fourth-graders the crowd ached for more.

They were truly surprised and delighted to see the high school band, in their beautiful new uniforms.

The jazz band was as spectacular as ever, and what would a Christmas show be without an appearance from our great choir.

On top of it all was the showing off of the awesome talents of the Boyne City High School drama department under the direction of Bob and Jackie Wollenburg.

The kids that we have in our high school drama department could go up against any Class A school around, and some of them could even take on some professionals. From the awesome dance routines, to the scenes from "Stomp", and from the backstage and set crews, to the light and sound crews, our drama department was and is the best around by far!

Then just when you thought the night could not be topped, another of Boyne City Public Schools' incredible classes was heard from. The brand new hospitality class at Boyne City High School led by Mr. Dennis Crissman (many of you know his as one of the finest chefs in northern Michigan), handled the After-Glow in the commons area.

Those students put out a wonderful array of fine desserts to the enjoyment of all who decided to indulge themselves. It was a first class event all the way.

How lucky we are to live in this great community that cared enough to give the town this incredible auditorium! A huge thanks to the Boyne City Foundation for their enhancements to the auditorium as well.

We truly are blessed, and can be proud of the fact that we should be and are the fine arts school of choice. Go Boyne!

FROM THE CENTRE

'Rituals' are what keep us connected during the holiday season

By BERNADETTE BEYER

As we begin this holiday season, I believe it is essential to have rituals for our times that help us to know we are connected (with ourselves, with others, and with our Creator).

Rituals are food for the soul. In our culture many have replaced presence with presents. We can let our denial rule us so we do not experience the tragedies, the hopelessness or the faces of fear and pain that surround us in our world today, or we can become centered, listen to our hearts and know of the profound yearning to be connected and at peace.

On the outside it looks like doom and gloom surrounding us, but on the inside we are pulling together as never before: working to create communities and families of love. Routines are essential for families, especially those with young children (bedtime, mealtime, and homework).

As humans we are pattern-seeking. It is a wise parent who has learned to keep his/her children on a routine in spite of the holiday festivities. Rituals, however, are not routines. As Becky Bailey, Ph.D. states in her book I Love You Rituals, "The goal of routines is continuity. The goal of rituals is connection. Rituals create sacred space designed for togetherness and unity."

Perhaps there has never been a greater need for togetherness and unity than ever before in our lifetime. Present giving can become an empty routine if we are not mindful of the intention of connecting with a loved one by our presence. Every family, every nation, every spiritual practice has rituals. Some rituals may be traced back several generations to your great-grandparents. Your ancestors may have brought these traditions from another country when they first moved to North America.

Rituals are a way for families to remain connected with their roots, extended family members, a country, or a religion rich in tradition.

As the holidays approach many are contemplating their cherished family rituals. You may be searching for your pumpkin pie recipe for Thanksgiving (you know, the one that only Grandma knew how to bake).

Perhaps you are planning your annual tree trimming party that is filled with memories as you hang treasured ornaments. Others are preparing to take out your Menorah so you can be in the glow of the eight candies, while you play the game of dreidel at Hanukkah.

Soon, you can start the daily ritual of opening the Advent Calendar that helps you and your families remain mindful of the spiritual meaning of Christmas.

This year I encourage you to consider re-examining your old rituals to determine if they need to be revamped. Some rituals can become an empty meaningless routine. Living in a world filled with uncertainty and threats of war may call us to create new rituals for our families and ourselves. Ask yourself do your present rituals help you to go within and connect with your spirit and the spirit of others?

All you need to do is open the newspaper or turn on the television to know there is a growing uncertainty in our nation, which unfortunately can be felt even in the beautiful north country. I see and hear these uncertainties and anxieties from adults and children.

Children show me in their play and their drawings that our world can be a scary place. The growing number of children who have hyperactivity, impulsively, temper outbursts or fits of displeasure when they do not get what they want, may have roots in our world condition.

It is not surprising that the latest Harry Potter movie is so popular! Many children identify with wanting to be a child wizard. Living in a world they cannot control is frightening and can leave a child wanting to escape into a fantasy land where they can confront terrible demons with magical powers.

As adults we too know we cannot control the world around us. Many an adult finds pleasure in the magical fantasy world of a Harry Potter. Rituals can be empowering for you and your children. Meaningful rituals can create an inner calm and peace in spite of warnings of terrorist attacks.

A favorite warm and loving memory of a ritual from my childhood is baking Christmas cookies.

Each person in the family had his/her part in the project. The ritual lasted for several days as we prepared all the favorite kinds. To this day, when my siblings gather together we recollect back to Christmas cookie baking days. It is not the green Christmas tree cookies with assorted sprinkles, or the chocolate oatmeal cookies that were so important. Rather it is the love and connection we each felt as a family during our December baking days.

The ritual of baking Christmas cookies provided a way to be present to each other at a deeper level of connecting. For those days, our family kitchen became a sacred space that was filled with the spirit of togetherness and unity.

This season you could spend your time looking at your budget trying to figure out how to find enough money to buy the perfect presents for your children, your parents, and your friends.

An alternative endeavor could be to consider how to create time to give your presence to meaningful family rituals or create new rituals that call to you this holiday season.

Consider how to incorporate gratitude, empathy, admiration, wonder, and humor into your busy routines.

May you soon discover that you have created authentic rituals that radiate beauty from within and enliven your soul and reaches out to the souls of those you love.

When you listen to your heart center you will bring into being sacred space for rituals of unity, connectedness and awe to take place within yourself, your home and our community.

This Thanksgiving my heart is filled with gratitude for all the wonderful people who have blessed me with their presence since opening The Centre in Boyne City!

NEIGHBORS

By NANCY NORTHUP

DON WOLCOTT and sons Daniel and Aaron of Dennison, Texas, arrived late Sunday afternoon to spend the Thanksgiving holidays with parents and grandparents Bob and Alice Marshall, on Marshall Road. The boys are hoping to see snow while they're here!

KATHY DAGLEY of Lapeer was here this past week, to take her mom Ruth Yahr to the doctor and also brought to share in a pre-thanksgiving time, a complete turkey dinner with the trimmings of home.

A WARM "Welcome" goes out to Ronda Denton, the newest resident to Litzenburger Place.

HER AUNT AND UNCLE Nancy and Bruce Korhase honored Mackenzie Korhase, daughter of Roger, for her 10th birthday with a family dinner party on Saturday night. Later, Nancy and Bruce, Jean Korhase, Pat Schroeder, and Karen and Ray Guzniczak joined many from the area, including Betty Kelts and Gen Varnum, in attending "Homecoming," starring Matt Chellis, at the new Boyne City High School Auditorium. "It was wonderful and the acoustics were great!" said Jean.

HEARTFELT SYMPATHIES go out to the friends and family of Harry Knapp, who passed away this past week. Following a memorial service at the Petoskey Seventh Day Adventist Church, a dinner for the family, including his Litzenburger Place family, was held in the community room, as Harry and wife Mabel have lived here for quite a few years.

LYNNELL AND DENNY WAKLEY and sons, Gannon and Gabriel of Marshall, Lori and Bill Bailey and son Justin of Alto, Jenny and Tony Witer and Marie, Jessica, Allie, Elizabeth, and Faith of Ohio and Tony's parents, Mac and John Witer of Newberry will be gathering with Nels and Louisa Northup at the family home in Deer Lake for the Thanksgiving weekend. A close family time of combining Christmas and a gift exchange, as well as farewells to Justin Bailey, who leaves for the U.S. Navy on Jan. 13, will make this family Thanksgiving a memorable one for all of them.

PEG AIMESBURY returned to her Boyne City home late last Sunday night after having spent 10 days in New Hampshire, caring for her grandchildren, while Mom and Dad, Carl and Karen Aimesbury, enjoyed a cruise to Jamaica.

LORI PARKS of New Port Richey, Fla. was recently in Boyne visiting her family. While here, Mom and Dad, Ann and Harley Parks, honored her birthday, combining it with a Thanksgiving dinner, with the family all gathering around for a great time of being together.

PAM SMITH of Redford was here for the weekend visiting her mother, Gen Varnum, and family.

KASSIE LINDSEY of Battle Creek was here over the weekend visiting her mother, Maryanne Watkins.

WAYNE KING, youth director of Boyne City's Christ Lutheran Church, accompanied his group to the Palace in Auburn Hills on Saturday, where they attended a Michael W. Smith and Third Day Concert.

MARK BRYAN and his sister, Julie Bradford, spent this past week in Orlando, Fla. where they attended a Theme Park Convention. While there, they visited their brother, Patrick Bryan and wife Pricilla. Returning, they met Jeff Bradford in Grand Rapids and all continued on to the home of their sister, Janet and Wayne Milos in Illinois for a gathering of the Bryan Clan for the Thanksgiving holiday.

MARK, RUTHANNA, and Marissa Chellis were in town over the weekend, staying with Mark's parents, for brother Matthew's performance at the new Boyne City High School Performing Arts Center on Saturday, Nov. 23. While here, they visited with Gordan and Naimo Capelin.

THE YOUTH GROUPS of the St. Matthews and St. Augustine churches did a wonderful job on Saturday night, as they brought in steaming dishes of delicious turkey and all the trimmings, as their treat to the many residents of Litzenburger Place and Deer Meadows. All attending appreciated the efforts of this group in their true spirit of Thanksgiving!

MAY ALL OF your homes, hearts, and tables be bountifully blessed, in enjoying a Happy Thanksgiving!

A twinkling smiling Santa now adorns the facade of Studio One in Boyne City, thanks to donations collected to make the downtown more festive for the holidays.

Donations will make Boyne more festive this year

There's nothing more becoming of a small town during the holidays than twinkling lights and brightly-colored decorations boosting the holiday spirit.

Of course, festive holiday adornments don't come cheap, and that's why Boyne City residents Steve Baker and Shirley Howie have made it their quiet mission over the last few years to raise money to deck Boyne City's streets in style.

The effort, which has taken the form of some low-key raffles and a 50/50 drawing at the buck pole, has slowly amassed a small amount of funds which, this year, has finally resulted in enough to make the first big purchase, a cheerful lighted Santa Claus freshly mounted on the front of the Studio One building owned by Lori and Craig Cheadle.

While Baker and Howie have no beef with the lights the City of Boyne City provides downtown, Baker notes that traveling to other communities one often finds much more elaborate displays. The idea to raise money to bring more holiday spirit to the downtown area was born in 1998, just to give the City "something extra."

Now that the first big decoration is up, Baker hopes that the effort will receive more attention, and by extension, more backing.

All funds donated for decorations are put into the non-profit Boyne City City Booster organization, earmarked for decorations.

For more information, or to make a donation, call Baker at 582-7211.

Ramblers close season with loss to Harbor

The season came to an end for the Boyne City Ramblers when they lost to Harbor Springs in the semi-finals of the district basketball tournament last Wednesday.

While the Ramblers took advantage of their opportunities at the free throw line, connecting on 14 of 18 attempts, their field goal shooting was less than stellar.

They shot only 23 percent for the game.

The Ramblers played Harbor even for much of the first half, but in the final two minutes of the second quarter

Harbor opened a nine-point lead and Boyne City struggled the rest of the way.

"To begin the second half, Harbor went to a zone forcing us to shoot outside, which we didn't do very well," said Boyne City head coach Maurie Tomkins.

Harbor built a 20-point lead in the second half, but Boyne made a late run cutting the margin to 11 before pulled away. 19 points, followed by Sarah Hal with 11.

Kim Foster led the Ramblers with 18 points, Amber Lehto grabbed seven rebounds to lead the team.

Boyne City finished the season with an overall record of 3-16.

their first year in a harsh new land.

Though native crops were certainly utilized, records from the time indicate that the colonists probably did not try to copy the culinary techniques of the Native Americans, but rather adapted the foods to the cuisine with which they were familiar.

The fowl that was included in the three-day long event was most likely of the goose and duck variety, and venison, too, was served.

With the supply of flour lacking, pilgrims were probably without bread or pastries of any sort; instead, they are believed to have eaten boiled pumpkin, as well as a form of fried bread from corn crops. With no domestic cattle to produce dairy products, the colonists had no milk or butter, and potatoes were not yet widely consumed by Europeans.

Though to our modern palate this would be a Thanksgiving meal sorely lacking, the colonists rounded out their celebration with the inclusion of what was widely available - things like fish, berries, lobster, dried fruit, clams, and plums.

THE CULTURAL PHENOMENON OF GIVING THANKS

Though Americans often think they have cornered the market on a holiday of giving thanks, the fact of the matter is that harvest festivals celebrated in gratitude for a bountiful season have a long and rich history throughout civilization.

For over 3,000 years, for example, Jewish families have celebrated the autumnal harvest festival called Sukkoth. The ancient Greeks worshipped Demeter, the goddess of the harvest, and honored her each autumn with a harvest festival, complete with feasts and offerings of seed corn, cakes, and fruit. The Egyptians celebrated a springtime harvest festival dedicated to Min, the god of vegetation and fertility. Romans dedicated their harvest festival to Ceres, the goddess of corn, offering the pigs and the first fruits of the harvest along with a feast of gratitude.

Regardless of its origins, though, our Thanksgiving holiday has evolved into a thoroughly American affair. Happy Thanksgiving!

OH, WHAT A NIGHT

■ Grand opening weekend of BCHS Performing Arts Center exceeded all expectations

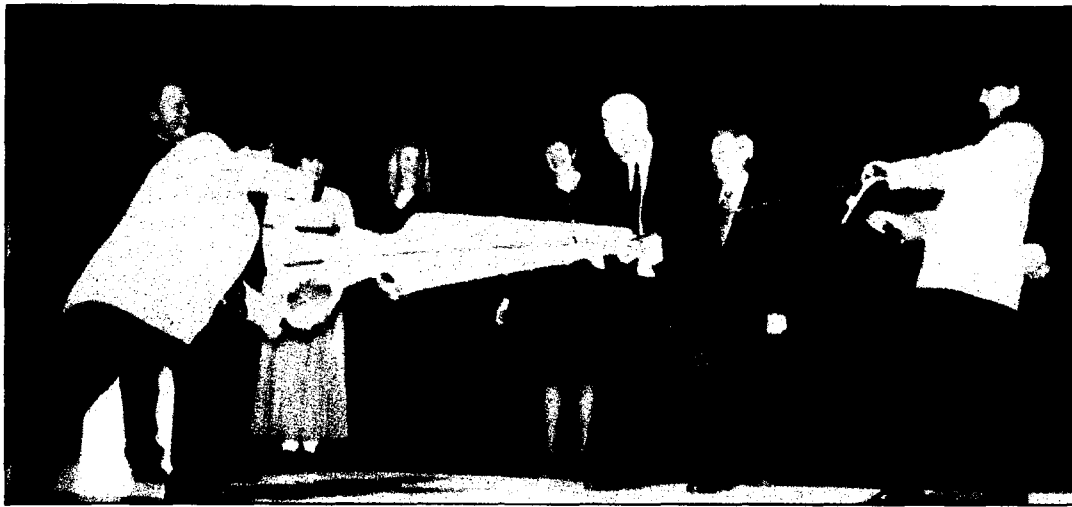

From the opening stans of BCHS alumnus Marty Ward's sax rendition of "Somewhere Over the Rainbow" to the drama department's simple closing performance of "White Christmas," complete with snow, the grand opening concert at Boyne City High School's new Performing Arts Center was a grand success, indeed. It was the hottest ticket in town, with the 600-plus seats sold out days in advance, and a waiting list a mile long. Those that were lucky enough to get tickets found that they got much more than their four dollars worth.

From the high school drama department's varied offerings, to a spectacular set from the high school jazz band, to guest performances by such famous alumni as Ward and singer Matthew Chellis, as well as appearances by the elementary and high school choirs, the show had a little something for everyone. A highlight, to be sure, was the moment the high school band arrived in full uniform for the first time, performing a rousing version of the Rambler fight song.

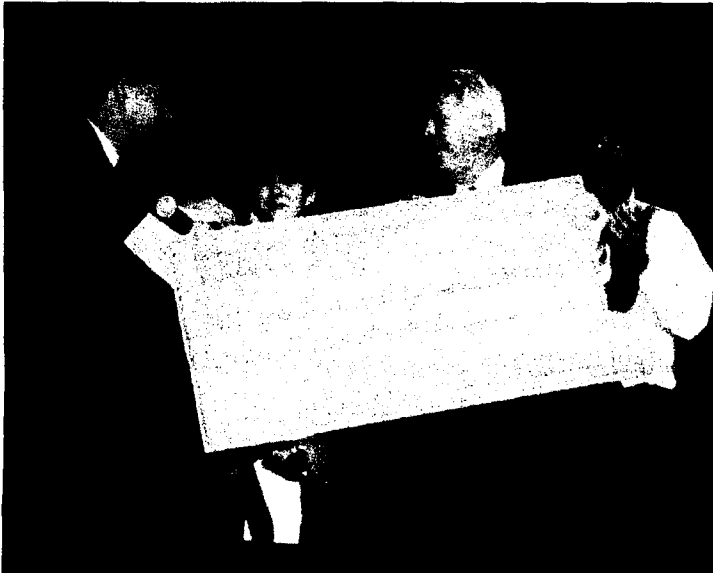

Part of the joy of the evening, surely, had to do with the long hard road it took to get there. The school bond issue that was finally passed in 1998 to help create this magnificent auditorium was a long time coming, and contained the blood, sweat, and tears of a lot of dedicated community members. It was a wonder, then, to sit in that theatre last weekend, and see just how much good was coming of that vision, not only for students, but the community as a whole.

The Accapella Singers, left, treated the audience to their smooth sounds, while the drama department as a whole showed off its many talents with numbers from "Oklahoma!" (above) and "Stomp" (top).

From fourth-graders (left) to professional talent like Marty Ward, above, Friday's show had something for everyone. On Saturday, audiences enjoyed a rare treat in the form of a show by singer Matt Chellis. Proceeds from both shows benefitted the fine arts programs at Boyne City schools.
