Katrina blows the Orellanas north

When the eyewall of Hurricane Katrina hit New Orleans on Aug. 29, the Orellana family had already left their house, just six blocks away from the 17th St. Canal that was about to wreak its own havoc on their neighborhood and home. Still, the Saturday before Katrina hit, they had no idea that when they did get to go home, home would be in northern Michigan.
Lori Orellana, a licensed practical nurse, went to work Saturday, Aug. 27, knowing that her husband, Mauricio, had taken the children and headed for Lafayette, where a son was in college and had an apartment. They had each packed a backpack of overnight things, intending to stay out of New Orleans for a couple of days, or until the storm passed over. Lori went to work.

She worked 12-hour shifts at a downtown hospital. The hospital employed two 24-hour teams, and Lori was on the night shift of the B team. Both sections of the B team knew that if the storm was bad, the A team's regular schedule may Erin, left, Christopher and Elise Orellana have enjoyed kayaking in the Jordan River that flows outside the Barber's home in East Jordan, where they are staying.

Looking eerily realistic in the dense morning fog, the overturned Indian Summer tour bus is merely a prop for the Charlevoix-Cheboygan-Emmet County Emergency Management drill last weekend. (More photos back page.)

Operation: Indian Summer

Emergency management drill in northern counties

With hurricanes and floods and the threat of terrorist attack, Homeland Security and the Federal Emergency Management Agency have been under scrutiny. Could they have done better with relief in the aftermath of Hurricane Katrina? Are they prepared for another natural disaster or attack on the country? In Emmet, Cheboygan and Charlevoix counties, the emergency management team wants to be sure that it is ready before disaster puts it to the test.

The sun rose Saturday morning through a haze of heavy fog, barely illuminating a tour bus on its side on a steep embankment outside of Indian River. The white bus, with its Indian Summer Tours logo painted in red, was also bathed in a thick red wash of blood. Bodies were strewn in the long wet grass and surrounding thicket, and tossed about inside the bus. Blood was everywhere, and victims suffered with gaping wounds, torn skin and clothing, and tell-tale bruising.

Fortunately, it was all moulage: trauma make-up to help create a realistic scene for disaster training purposes. The bodies were those of volunteers, who arrived in the wee hours of the morning to have blood, bruises and torn skin applied, and who were assigned roles (some will be dead and dying, some will have complications such as asthma to further test the rescue process) and then staged in and outside the bus, awaiting the drill like a fog-covered dawn of the dead.

It was Operation Indian Summer, planned by northern Michigan's emergency preparedness team and its director, Jack Messer, since last December. Messer began by meeting with area emergency services personnel, central dispatch and area hospitals to create a plan of action for any case involving large numbers of victims. The goal was to create an organized response plan where multiple services are able to respond quickly and appropriately in a coordinated fashion.

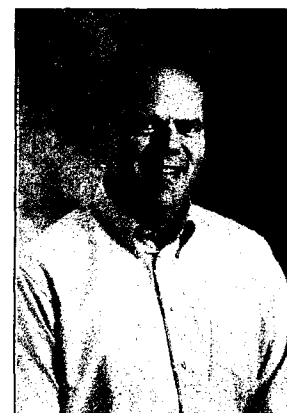

The Indian Summer exercise plan's purpose was to "implement, observe and evaluate the Charlevoix-Cheboygan-Emmet Mass Casualty Plan in real time under realistic conditions." Its objectives included the demonstration of effective communications, the implementation of medical command at the scene and the implementation of hospital emergency plans in response to a mass casualty incident. To facilitate this, the drill involved the hospitals as well as emergency medical services from all three counties, and fire and rescue from Tuscarora Township in Indian River.

The scene was scripted: casinos across northern Michigan had been receiving anonymous telephone threats with apocalyptic overtones that there would be consequences if they did not shut down all gaming facilities. On Saturday, Sept. 17, a call was received at Victories that they had failed to "cease and desist," and that they would be "sacrificed," as a message to the world.

A chartered tour bus, Indian Summer Tours (not a real tour company), carrying 47 people, including the tour guide and driver, was en route to

N. Craig Boss

Doctor selected for sleep fellowship

N. Craig Boss, M.D., Charlevoix resident and a family physician at Boyne Area Medical Center, will leave his practice this month to complete a Sleep Medicine Fellowship at the University of Michigan School of Medicine.

The prestigious program requires an intensive 12-month course of study, which results in qualification to become board certified in sleep medicine. Dr. Boss expects to return to Charlevoix in the fall of 2006, where he will dedicate his practice to the sleep specialty. During the past year, he has been working under the direction of David Walker, D.O., at the Charlevoix Area Hospital Sleep Center, in addition to maintaining his family practice.

"This is an emerging field of study that impacts health in so many ways," said Boss, noting that as many as 10 percent of American adults may be affected by a clinical sleep disorder. "Sleep impacts coordination, concentration, ability to learn, mood, weight, blood pressure, cardiovascular health, and more." Boss added that without adequate sleep patients are at risk of stroke or heart attack.

East Jordan rallies for hurricane survivors

At a meeting attended by representatives from area churches, businesses, the East Jordan Area Chamber of Commerce and city council members, East Jordan citizens came together last week to plan an event to help with hurricane relief for local survivors of Hurricane Katrina.

One focus of the meeting was the Orellana family currently staying with Jim and Marilyn Barber of East Jordan (see related story, top of page). They will need housing, vehicles, employment and other items related to housekeeping, etc.

"We want to help local people first, but not exclusively," said organizer Jim Jordan of the Lighthouse Missionary Church. This idea was echoed by Bob Tambellini of the Charlevoix County Community Foundation.

"The efforts of local communities would be better served trying to meet the needs of families that may relocate here," he said. In addition, the organizers recognized that relief drives are being conducted in Boyne City and Charlevoix, and the East Jordan group did not want to operate in isolation from the other local efforts. To that end, they invited the Boyne City and Charlevoix mayors to attend the meeting.

Chip Hansen, superintendent of the East Jordan schools, said that he believes we can expect more families to relocate to the area, and people expressed a desire to make it possible for family members and friends to have an opportunity to be reunited in our area. The schools are spearheading a backpack drive, collecting school supplies for survivors.

On Saturday, Oct. 1, the project organizers are planning a series of fundraising events, to be held downtown throughout the day. Attractions will include live and silent auctions, a barbecue, concessions, a bake sale, children's games and live music.

A rummage sale will be held in the Civic Center, with the school providing honor society students to help, and the East Jordan Emergency Medical Services offering to take care of items that remain unsold at day's end.

The East Jordan Lionesses and the East Jordan Garden Club will be donating homemade baked goods for the bake sale, and the Lutheran Church offering sloppy joes and hot dogs for

Malpass Foundation mini grants awarded

For 16 consecutive years, the Malpass Foundation has awarded grants to individual and teams of teachers in East Jordan in support of creative and innovative practices in their classrooms. On opening day, superintendent Chip Hansen announced to the East Jordan faculty and staff that the Malpass Foundation will award a total of $11,000 in grants this year.

The selection committee, which is an independent panel of community citizens, reviewed proposals that represented the participation of more than 40 East Jordan faculty and staff. As they have done for the past 16 years, the panel identified 10 grant proposals to be approved.

"I'm always excited to announce the grants that will be funded," said Hansen. "While every proposal was not funded, the more than 40 EJPS staff who submitted proposals demonstrates the high level of enthusiasm generated by the mini-grant program."

Grant proposals funded this year reach across virtually every curricular area. Among the proposals awarded will be support for additional staff training in reading strategies, multiple projects involving history and geology, additional foreign language experiences, ecology, mathematics, and art.

"The ongoing support of the Malpass Foundation has made a big difference for our students over the years," said Hansen.

"The projects planned by our teachers and supported by the Malpass Foundation have taken our students above and beyond where they might have gone without the extra support."

Malpass mini-grant recipients for 2005-2006:

•Jennifer Richardson and Kathy Stangis: provides activities & resources aimed at EJHS seniors as they prepare for their financial future and professional success. Funded: $1250.00

•Sue Carter, Wendy Crick and Tina McDuffie: seeks support to expand opportunities for EBLI training by creating professional observation opportunities. Funded: $1200.00

•Pat Tinney: seeks support linking EJHS students to local artists via demonstrations, discussions and displays. Funded: $1000.00

Chemical plant clean-up

A clean-up was started recently in Boyne City at the vacant property adjoining the mobile home park. The property, in recent years empty except for some concrete slabs, was once the location of a thriving chemical plant.

Elaine Pelc of the Department of Environmental Quality, is an environmental quality analyst who played a role in determining the amounts and types of contaminants persistent in the site nearly a century after the plant closed down. Her research not only included taking soil and groundwater samples, but also a little historical sleuthing at the Boyne City Historical Museum.

Using the results of her investigation, she put together a scenario of earlier days in Boyne City.

In the early 1900s, most of the major logging in the region was over, and only waste logs and small trees were left. Waste wood was cut up and made into charcoal by burning it at high temperatures in an oxygen-free environment. Furnaces for that purpose, called retort ovens, would be loaded with wood and sealed against oxygen and that wood would be essentially baked, rather than burned, and would become charcoal.

The charcoal would then be removed from the retorts, cooled outside and the resulting charcoal would be used in an iron ore foundry for pig iron where the Landings is now.

Iron ore was brought in from the Upper Peninsula and was layered with charcoal in blast furnaces which were on the dirt floor of the foundry. Channels were dug into the dirt, and when the blast furnace had been fired and the layered charcoal had reduced the iron ore to a liquid, the doors of the furnace were opened and the molten iron spilled into the waiting channels in the floor.

When the iron cooled, it was broken into pieces with sledge hammers, and taken out of the channels, whose shape created round pig-shaped chunks of iron — hence pig iron — which was then shipped to steel mills in various parts of the state and country.

At some point in the charcoal-making process, people began to realize that they could trap the vapors coming off the baking wood and, distilling them with cold water, could create certain chemicals, such as acetone, which they converted to lime acetate, and methanol (or wood alcohol) which could be used as fuel or a cleaning agent.

Making charcoal created something called wood tar, or creosote, some of which was reused as fuel, and stored in cedar wood tar holding tanks (in some areas, the wood tar was disposed of directly into the ground, but this was not the case in the Boyne City plant). The chemical-making process also created waste products, and both processes had what Pelc described as general operational wastes, including (possibly) an occasional chemical spill.

Looking at old aerial photographs and Sanborn fire insurance maps, Pelc was able to accurately determine where many of the structures of the operation were, including the wood lot, the cedar holding tanks, the still house (for distilling chemicals) and the retort ovens.

"Contaminants are in the soil and groundwater at the site of the still house," Pelc said, citing benzene, toluene, trimethylbenzenes and, primarily, phenols. "They are persistent — don't break down readily."

The United States Environmental Protection Agency and the Michigan Department of Environmental Quality have criteria for certain contaminants, Pelc explained, developed for the protection of drinking and surface water. While no one is drinking water from the contaminated site, the drive of the project is to discontinue the impact on Lake Charlevoix from the migration of groundwater into the lake.

Based on a DEQ investigation over several years, the area was determined to have a high contaminant level. With the water table close to the surface at 5 feet, the soil has been found to be contaminated to a depth of 15 feet. This means that the area must be de-watered and then the affected soil removed to an appropriate landfill.

This is being accomplished by the emplacement of steel sheeting walls driven into the ground around the site, creating a "bathtub," Pelc said, which prevents groundwater from migrating either into or out of the clean-up area. White, interconnected pipes are used to pump water out of the ground and into blue carbon-filled tanks that purify the water.

The cleaned water is discharged into Lake Charlevoix using a temporary de-watering line run along the north side of the boat launch property. With the water removed from it, the soil is dryer and more easily removable.

According to Pelc, the soil is not considered hazardous waste, but solid waste, and will be put in a Type 2 landfill, which are lined to keep leachate from the groundwater. The groundwater in the area is closely monitored, and the leachate that occurs in a Type 2 landfill is treated.

The clean-up's projected completion is the end of October. Because the contamination is sub-surface, there is some potential for unexpected discoveries, but unless that occurs, the project is on track to be completed on schedule. At that time, the site will be back-filled with clean fill, and the de-watering system and sheeting will be removed.

Monitoring wells will be placed at the site upon completion of the cleanup, and the DEQ will continue to monitor the groundwater and collect soil samples for approximately two years, after which the wells will be removed.

Craving control

I am on a diet. Not the kind of thing you should confess in print, I know, because then you are not the only one watching your weight, but there it is. I have no sense.

I have quite a bit left to lose. But I have lost the first few pounds, the easy ones, I suppose, and it has already made a difference in my wardrobe. Things that didn't fit do, and things that fit, technically, but still made me look like a sausage, are a little less fitted. So there's a lot to love about weight loss already, right?

LAST CALL

Jane Booze

I get a limited number of points per day (22) to spend wisely on food.

But look at this. For dinner, I might have a breast of chicken with just a splash of olive oil, baked with some herbs of Provence, and a little fresh garlic; sweet corn on the cob; sliced tomatoes from the farmer's market; and a fabulous spring greens salad, and the whole darn meal (depending on the salad dressing) would be about 6 total points! I could even have a little 2-point dish of sherbet for dessert. Who wouldn't stay on this diet?

So what happened that caused me to come crashing out of the routine of fresh, good, healthy food? What possessed (possessed seems an apt word) me to get completely hooked on Cheese-Its and Mary Janes; had me justifying a Burger King shake; or pretending (and fooling whom?) that there's no difference between buttered popcorn and air-popped?

Who's in charge here?

I am an addict.

I may never get over it. I may have to live with the fact of cravings. There is nothing as addictive as a Cheese-It, and possibly nothing less satisfying in fact than in theory.

When I am in binge mode, there is almost no stopping me, but when it passes, the regret is instantaneous — I don't have to wait to come down from some high — the bumpy descent is immediate. It comes with a sense of hopelessness, and it lasts. Days later, I am still in the throes. The image of myself thin, recently so easy to conjure, has been replaced by a grim certainty that I am destined to refill these looser clothes. It is accompanied by continued, dysfunctional eating.

This is universal among chronic dieters. I think it's why diets really fail. I don't have an answer that will sell a million books; I don't even know if I will ever be able to stay on the weight loss wagon.

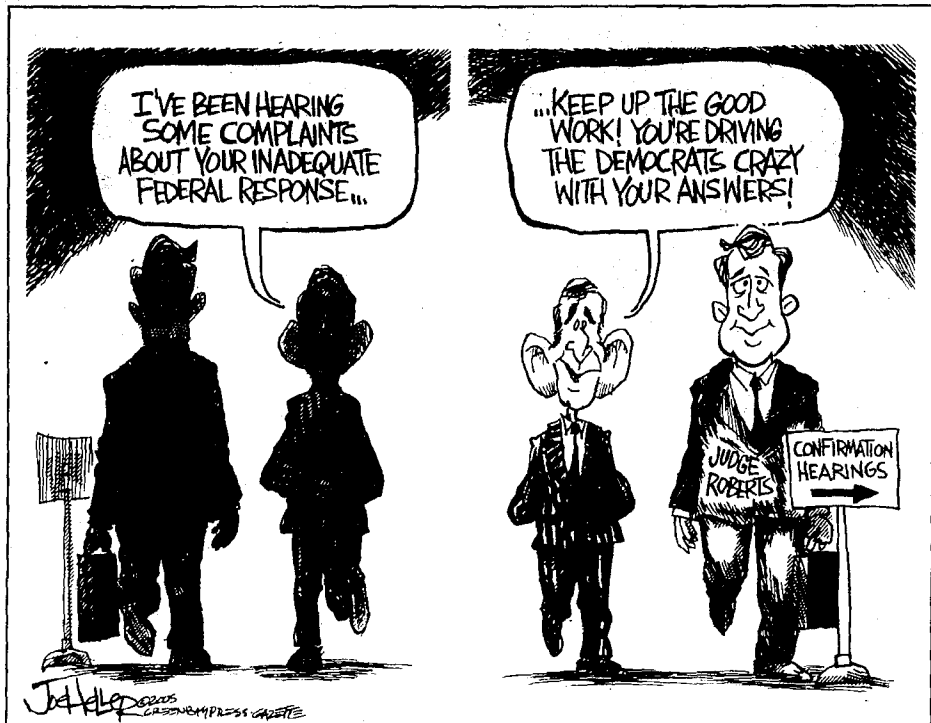

But I know this: I can keep climbing back on it. I can remember that, yeah, I might have regained a pound or two with Cheese-Its and Mary Janes. But I didn't regain it all, so I am still ahead of the game. And when I started on this diet I was worse off than I am now, so I am ahead of the game again. There is nothing that comes naturally to me about dieting. What comes naturally is an impulse to overeat and to indulge myself without thinking it through.

The truth is, though, when I contradict my nature and eat smaller portions of wholesome foods; when I indulge myself carefully — selecting what will really satisfy, even if it isn't "diet food," — it feels like me. It feels healthy to eat healthy. It feels like me.

I think if this awful lifetime change is going to stick, it will admit some foods that will never be identified as diet food.

Here's my plan: this week, before I eat something on impulse, I will ask myself if it is truly what I am hungry for. Before snacking rampantly on artificially flavored cheese crackers, I will identify the real craving. Is it cheese? If I am tempted to shovel in a large quantity of candy, coated in waxy fat-laden chocolate, I will wait and see if a single good piece of dark chocolate might better satisfy me.

And I will adopt Winston Churchill's credo, and never, never, never, never quit. If it takes a year to lose 15 pounds, so be it. So what? The important thing is to keep the direction downward, and to remember that being in charge may not be a constant, but I can make it a persistent consistent, nevertheless.

TODAY'S YOUNG CHILD

Children are born learning

Children are born learning, and parents are their child's first and best teacher. With this premise in mind, United Way, United Way Success by 6 and Civitas are making contributions to support the Born Learning campaign. Born Learning is a public engagement and material distribution campaign that provides important information about what young children need every day to ensure quality early learning. It was designed specifically to help young children prepare for school. The campaign offers "doable" action steps that make it easy and fun to help young children learn during everyday activities.

Public service announcements, parent and caregiver education materials, and a website (www.bornlearning.org) provide action tips, information and resources. In Michigan, an operator at the toll-free phone number (888) 232-4376 can connect parents and caregivers with materials, resources and local programs. Local programs in our region include the TBAISD "Way to Grow" program and The CharEm ISD "Stepping Stones to School." These active early childhood programs offer families a variety of activities and resources in their local schools as well as assist in making connections to community resources.

We dedicate this poem to all parents who are their children's first and best teacher!

PARENTS ARE TEACHERS TOO

All of you are parents
But you're also teachers too
And if you want to help your child
I'll tell you some things to do.
Whenever you're in the kitchen
Let your child be your helping hands
And show them all the labels
And let them read the brands.
Say beginning and ending sounds
And find some things that rhyme
And they will quickly learn to read
In a short amount of time.

Let your children help you measure
The butter, eggs and flour

And let them help you set the timer
For thirty minutes or an hour.

Then when you have to leave your house
In the car or for a walk
Don't forget this time
To teach and learn and talk.

Read all the street signs that you pass
And the house numbers on the door
And all the license plates on cars
And there is so much more.

There are many words on buildings
And trucks and cars you meet
There are billboards standing tall
And shops on every street.

Then when at last you do return
And you sit down together
Please take this opportunity to read
A book about whatever.

Being a parent is very special
But as a teacher you're special too.
Just take the time to make learning fun
And your child will love what you do!

MANY THANKS

TO THE EDITOR:

On behalf of the entire Boyne City Main Street program, I would like to thank all of the volunteers and sponsors that made Stroll the Streets of Boyne such an incredible success this summer. Every Friday night the downtown was filled with music, activities, and fun that would never have been possible without the hard work of the volunteers and the support of our sponsors.

I would like to specifically thank Karen Guzniczak, Linn Williams, Michelle Culver, Shirley Howie, Marilea Grom, Leslie Neilson, and Cindi Malin for the incredible amount of time and energy they dedicated towards the Stroll. I am always amazed at the huge impact a small group of people can make and these ladies never cease to amaze me with their ideas, enthusiasm, and energy.

Without the financial support of our sponsors though, Stroll the Streets would have been boring. Because of the sponsors, we were able to provide quality entertainment that everyone could enjoy. Thank you to the following sponsors for supporting our efforts to make our downtown a vibrant place everyone feels welcome: Boyne Country Provisions, Feeny Chrysler Dodge Jeep, CindiFranco's Cool Stuff, North Central Michigan

College, Pat O'Brien & Associates, Crooked Tree Arts Center, Bluegreen Vacation Club, Boyne City Ace Hardware, ball living imports, Clark Construction, Country Now 'N Then/Up the Lazy River, Dr. Kirkby Family Dentistry, ATS/Habitec Security, Bob Mathers Ford, Boyne Country Books/The Daily Cup, Boyne Rapids Golf, Boyne River Bait & Outdoor Sports, Carpentree, Inc., Dan Wood Plumbing & Heating, Paga Family Dentistry, Eyes on Main Street, Huff Pharmacy, Huntington Bank, Kilwin's of Boyne City, Lake Street Market, Lost & Found, Lynda's Real Estate Service, Medicap Pharmacy, North Country Cycle Sport, Pet Haus Cuisine, Points North Printing, Rita's Révênte, Studio One Hair Design & Spa, and Sweetgrass Framing.

I would also like to thank all residents and visitors of Boyne City that took the time to come and enjoy the wonderful downtown we have. Music and activities are a key component to Stroll the Street's success but it's the people "strolling" that make it fun.

Kelly Larson, Program Manager

RUBY VANALSTINE JUST RETURNED from visiting her daughter Tina and Brian Horn and family in San Diego, Texas for 10 days. She went to help take baby Allysen to the children's hospital in Dallas for tests and checkup. She reports that she is walking all over now and is really doing well. It has been hard for them all to adjust to the different location and the heat, but Brian really likes his new position and they are getting better medical care for Allysen.

SISTERS DIXIE LAHTI, OF HASLETT, CONNIE SHALER, Bette Brewer and Christy Reinhardt of Boyne City, and Sara Hildebrandt of Gaylord, all spent Thursday until Sunday way up north in the Porcupine Mountains. It was a first-time event for just being together as sisters, and they enjoyed sight-seeing, hiking and cards.

THE BOYNE AREA HURRICANE RELIEF effort reached its goal! Two semi trucks were loaded by the hands of many volunteers working together as non-perishables, clothes and other items of all kinds from many generous donations of the area's businesses and individuals wanting to help disrupted families, were stacked and packed for the long trip to New Orleans. A doubly high moment it was, as the one that left on Friday night tooted its horn as it headed out past the Boyne City - Charlevoix football game in progress, knowing the hurricane victims would soon be receiving needful things from a caring part of northern Michigan.

THE ANNUAL BOYNE CITY HOUSING end-of-summer cookout and potluck dinner for the residents had a good turnout and a fun time on Tuesday. Chef Ray Detcher and the maintenance crew, Brenda and Jessie, did a nice job on the chicken, burgers and hot dogs. Nice it was, seeing neighbors, old and new.

Main Street seeking facade improvement candidates

The Boyne City Main Street Program will be selecting three more buildings in downtown Boyne City in Oct. to receive a facade improvement design package. This is the third and final year the design services are being offered to downtown district property owners. The services are provided by the Michigan State Historic Preservation Office and the Michigan Economic Development Corporation. They are available to property owners based on a state-specified selection process, as part of the Michigan Main Street technical services grant.

To kick off this year's design services, the Boyne City Main Street Program will be hosting a Design Services and Historic Preservation Workshop for property owners and the public on Thursday, Sept. 29, at 6 p.m. in the Boyne District Library Community Room. The workshop will focus on financial incentives for building rehabilitations, building maintenance and low-cost design solutions, and design guidelines. The design services package includes a schematic drawing of the proposed facade rehabilitation, including pertinent detail sketches, paint chips, and color swatches, and also includes specifications detailing the proposed work, products, and cost estimates. An application must be completed to be considered for this service. Applications will be graded on set criteria provided by SHPO, including need, visibility, and a commitment to implement the facade improvements within 12 months.

Applications will be available at the workshop and are due to the Boyne City Main Street Program office by 5 p.m. on Friday, Oct. 21.

To learn more about the workshop and design services, contact Kelly Larson, 112 S. Park Street, Suite F, in Boyne City or call (231) 582-9009.

Scholarships awarded

The Northern Michigan Detachment of the Marine Corps League has awarded three scholarships to local high school graduates who will be attending colleges this fall. Each scholarship is worth $750 to the recipient. According to Detachment policy, two of the recipients will be attending North Central Michigan College and the third must have an immediate family member connected to one of the armed services.

In addition to outstanding academic achievement, each awardee was involved in leadership roles, participated in a number of extra-curricular activities, was active in community events, and wrote an award-winning essay on "What America Means to Me."

All scholarship funds have come directly from the proceeds of the Detachment's annual Flag Day sale, which was held on Friday and Saturday, June 10 and 11, this year, in various locations throughout Charlevoix, Cheboygan and Emmet counties.

Ashley Nichols, East Jordan High School, will be attending Cornerstone University and anticipates a degree in business.

Ashley Mauchmar, Boyne Falls High School, will be attending NCMC, pursuing a degree in education.

Katie Anderson, Inland Lakes High School, will also be majoring in education at NCMC.

East Jordan eight graders hold garage sale

The East Jordan eighth graders are in their third year of fund-raising for the annual class trip to Washington D.C in April. The students begin saving for the trip in the sixth grade, selling cookie dough, cookbooks, calendars, and a potpourri of catalog items, as well as holding a springtime bulb and plant sale around Easter time.

In the eighth grade, and final year of raising funds for the trip, the eighth graders have a garage sale every year in the middle school gym. Students bring items from home, or donated items that they collect from family and friends. One hundred percent of the proceeds from this sale goes to student trip expenses. The Washington D.C. trip, taken as part of the eighth grade social studies curriculum, costs each student $600, all of which may be raised through the class fund-raising activities. World Strides tour company arranges the trip, during which students will visit the Holocaust Museum, place a wreath at the Tomb of the Unknown Soldier, and may get a tour of the White House. In addition they will see the various monuments, and other attractions of the nation's capital during their three-day stay.

The school provides a chaperon for each 10 students, but this year about a half a dozen parents are opting to go on the trip as well, according to Paul Keyser, the eighth-grade math teacher who is coordinating the fund-raising events and trip this year.

The East Jordan schools have been providing this opportunity to eighth graders for about the last 10 years. Keyser said.

This year's garage sale will be on Saturday, Sept. 24 from 9 a.m. to 1 p.m. at the middle school.

be interrupted, so they anticipated that they might be working some irregular hours. But no one could have expected that B would not be relieved until Sept. 6, and by that time, Lori had no home to go to.

In the intervening days, the hospital staff continued to work, often without the emergency power that kept elevators and air conditioning running. The nurses had to be resourceful in keeping up patient care, and just maintaining temperatures in the torturous heat following the storm was a challenge. Lori told of bundling a patient in ice packs, and fanning him, but the ice was made of water that was no longer safe, so the nurses had to be creative in keeping patients cool but also ensuring that they did not come in contact with contaminants.

Patients who had to be moved from floor to floor were transported up and down stairwells on sheets in the absence of elevators. Lori said that it wasn't long before the dress code "went right out the window," with nursing staff borrowing from the hospital laundry in an attempt to maintain cleanliness. By Sunday night, even before the eyewall devastated the area, Lori was feeling nauseated as she worked. It was motion sickness: the building was moving with the force of the storm.

The two sections of the B team were able to keep rotating shifts, and the hospital had an attached hotel where the off-shift hospital staff could sleep. The two buildings had a shared, three-story atrium, which the staff was warned to stay out of, as it was cracking from the wind. The water rose to the feet of a statue of the hospital's founder, and came no further — he wasn't letting it come any closer, Lori said.

Inside the hotel, the toilets were not working, and the water coming from the showerheads was brown. But before too many working days had passed, nurses were showering in the dirty water, and hauling buckets of water from the hotel's pool to flush the toilets, making do with what they had.

Rescued patients were flown by helicopter onto a dry overpass, where the hospital had waiting ambulances, fire trucks and Bloodmobiles pressed into service as additional ambulances, transporting people through the flooded streets to the hospital.

When air conditioning was restored, the humidity kept it from working properly, and the hospital became intolerably cold. Now patients were bundled under extra blankets, and Lori told of having to keep blood bags warm to prevent them from clotting. A plan was in place to evacuate the patients if the water had continued to rise, but the hospital was never flooded.

During all this time, Lori was unable to contact her family in Lafayette, but was able to contact her cousin, Jim Barber, in East Jordan. And what he was telling her was making her certain that she and Mauricio and the children would not be going home. Jim and his wife Marilyn encouraged Lori to come to Michigan.

Her family, in the meantime, was safely in Lafayette, but pasted to the news. Still, even seeing the news, they expected to return home. It was Wednesday before Mauricio was able to get through to Lori at the hospital.

"Lori said, 'I don't think we can go back.' It hit me in the face at that point," Mauricio said. "You don't turn to the kids and tell them at this point."

Relieved from duty at 11 a.m. on Tuesday, Sept. 6, Lori got on a shuttle bus and was taken to a satellite clinic in Baton Rouge, where Mauricio met her.

They quickly made the difficult — and only viable — decision to move the family to Michigan.

"When we finally got together, it felt like we were conspiring against the kids," Mauricio said. With two sons in college (Andrew stayed in Lafayette where he was enrolled in college; Matthew was going to school in New Orleans), and Elise a senior, it was hard to move the children from their home and friends. But it was their only chance to get back on their feet. So with one backpack apiece, the Orellana family accepted the Barber's offer, and the gift of airline tickets from another relative, and flew to

Detroit where they were met and moved to East Jordan, though Mauricio felt that they had dropped a bomb on their children, ripping them "from that little bit of sanity we had found in Lafayette."

East Jordan welcomed the family with open arms. North Central Michigan College in Petoskey provided Matthew with a scholarship and he began classes immediately. The other children, Elise, Christopher and Erin began school in East Jordan and were making friends right away, their parents said.

"If East Jordan public schools had been in New Orleans, that is where they would have gone," Lori said. For Lori, the move is a strange realization of a dream. Having been here four years ago, she had wanted to move to Michigan. The rest of her family resisted the idea, but circumstances conspired against them.

"The exercise you and the boys will get shovelling snow will be so good for you," Lori teased her husband.

The family was quickly outfitted with clothes and shoes, school supplies and necessities, and they are currently living in a comfortable fifth wheel at Jim and Marilyn Barber's home. But housing, vehicle and job offers were coming in, and one of the family's biggest challenges is just not being overwhelmed with thankfulness. Lori began to name people who had helped, but quickly gave up.

"I would never be able to say the list of people who have been wonderful," she said. "Everybody."

There is so much more to be done. At one point Lori put two photographs of her son, Andrew, on the table.

"This is what we have left for pictures," she said. "We're alive. I know my husband and children are safe, and I know where they are. The things don't matter. You don't have time to think about the things you've lost — and when people ask you, you don't go there. You can't think about it."

"The good news is, we didn't need a moving van."

HEALTH TIPS FROM MEDICAP PHARMACY

NOTHING LIKE AN AFTERNOON NAP

One of the benefits of retirement is the opportunity for an afternoon recharge. However, some have cautioned that this habit may spoil nighttime sleep. Several studies, most recently the January 2005 Journal of the American Geriatric Society, suggest that you can gain extra sleep time without significantly affecting your ability to hit the hay at night. So if you're feeling a bit sluggish after lunch, take a nap, you can still sleep soundly at your regular bedtime.

State Reps. Darwin Booher, left, Kevin Eisenheimer and Tom Casperson were in Sault Ste. Marie on Monday to unveil a House Republican plan to eliminate the flow of Canadian trash into Michigan once the federal government acts to grant the jurisdiction to do so.

Republicans introduce legislation to stop trash

House Republicans are taking action to stop Canadian trash from entering Michigan once and for all, state Reps. Tom Casperson, Kevin Eisenheimer and Darwin Booher announced earlier at a news conference in Sault Ste. Marie.

The lawmakers were at Lake Superior State University as part of a statewide announcement of a three-bill package that will ban the trash from entering Michigan. The package hinges on approval of bipartisan federal legislation soon to be taken up in Washington, D.C.

"Foreign trash coming into Michigan has become a great concern for residents during the last handful of years as more and more is trucked over our roads and through our communities," said Casperson, REscanaba. "This is a complex issue, but one we must address to maintain the health and safety of the people of Michigan."

The legislation is centered on approval of a U.S. Rep. Mike Rogers bill expected to be approved by Congress in the coming weeks. Rogers has been working since 2001 on federal legislation that will allow states to enact laws addressing foreign trash flow.

A U.S. Supreme Court decision in 1992 said states don't have the right to prohibit trash from crossing their borders without authorization from Congress.

Eisenheimer said the progress Rogers' measure has made so far is the closest the states have ever come to having a say in the issue.

"Michigan lawmakers have attempted to stop Canadian trash from coming into the state before, but because it's a federal commerce and trade issue have never been able to present a real solution," said Eisenheimer, R-Bellaire. "Last session's Legislature enacted a law that stipulated out-of-state trash had to meet the same standards as set for in-state trash, which didn't totally stop the flow but even the governor said it was the best that could be done under the current federal rules.

"Now those rules may change and Michigan will be ready to act on them with this legislation in place."

Earlier this year, state House Democrats announced legislation to impose a $200 million tax on trash. Democrats claimed the measure would discourage Canadians from shipping trash to Michigan, however, the overwhelming majority of the tax would hit Michigan residents and businesses because of contracts Canadian trash haulers have with Michigan landfills.

The House Republican legislation will:

- Ban foreign municipal waste from landfills or incinerators located within the state;
- Take effect upon passage of federal legislation allowing the regulation of foreign waste;
- Go into effect 90 days after the effective date or 90 days after the passage of federal legislation allowing the regulation, which ever is later; and
- Charge violators with a felony punishable by up to two years in prison and/or a $5,000 fine per offense.

The state House legislation is expected to be introduced this week. It is anticipated it will be referred to the House Natural Resources, Great Lakes, Land Use and Environment Committee.

"Our plan is the right way to address the Canadian trash issue once and for all," said Booher, R-Evart. "Firstly, it doesn't cost Michigan residents an added tax that wouldn't affect those across the border anyway, and secondly, it actually stops the trash from coming in to Michigan and posing a risk to safety and filling up our landfills."

Three Men and a Tenor perform in EJ

Three Men and a Tenor, or 3MT, voted Michigan's highest-rated touring group, will bring a high-energy, vocal music show to East Jordan on Friday, Oct. 7, at 7 p.m. at the Community Auditorium.

The group has their very own National PBS-TV music concert special, airing in places like Los Angeles, Philadelphia, Miami, and Nashville, and nearly 70 other cities. They've also been an opening act for several nationally touring entertainers, like Lee Greenwood, Dionne Warwick, and The Beach Boys.

This live concert consists of a cappella arrangements from popular musical artists like The Temptations, The Eagles, The Doobie Brothers, Elvis Presley, The Beatles, Bob Marley, Sugar Ray, Garth Brooks, and even Aretha Franklin, and several of the groups own original songs.

"We want to include all age groups in our shows," said Mark Stiles, one of the "Men" of the group. "Most people just need some positive energy in their lives right now, and we feel that by giving them some great, upbeat music, we may help them feel better. When we take the stage, the 'Three Men' are all 6'4", and our 'Tenor' is 5' even. It is hard for an audience not to laugh, or smile right when we take the stage.

Once we have them laughing, it is easy after that. We just try to help people forget about their worries for an hour or 2, and leave our shows feeling better than when they came. To us, that is what our job is all about".

The group recently toured eight different U.S. military bases in Germany to sing for the troops, and their children that are in the schools. General Motors financially supported the tour by providing the vehicles and the sound system, but 3MT paid for their own flights, meals, and lodging. It was a great partnership to help boost morale to our U.S. families stationed overseas.

Tickets for the hilarious, a cappella vocal music presentation are available at the East Jordan Public Schools district office at 304 Fourth Street and in downtown East Jordan at Café Casa and the Busy Bridge. Reserved seating tickets are $15. For more information, contact the school office at (231) 536-3131.

Ethan Mapes scored the Rambler goal with the assist going to Sam Jabara.

Boyne City out shot the opposition 21-17 for the game and Rambler goalkeeper Mike Fox recorded 16 saves.

"I was pleased with our team's intensity, which they kept up all the way through the second overtime," said Boyne City coach Nick Baic.

BOYNE CITY 2 EAST JORDAN 1

The Ramblers picked up a victory in their first Lake Michigan Conference game of the season downing East Jordan 2-1 on Monday, Sept. 12.

East Jordan held a 1-0 lead at halftime before Boyne City's Jason Fountain and Mapes tallied one goal each after the break to pull the victory.

Kaleb McNamara assisted on the Fountain goal, while Matt Keiser picked up the helper on the Mapes goal.

Fox made eight saves in goal.

"Our defense is really coming along," said Baic. "Ryan Clubine is doing a superb job at sweeper, joined by Eric Makarewicz and Jared Friedrich on the sides," Baic added.

Boyne City will host Elk Rapids next Monday and travel to Kalkaska on Friday.

While the Red Devils maintained a lead in the first half of last week's game, the Ramblers overtook them to win their first Lake Michigan Conference game of the season.

Red Devils, Kalkaska tie, 2-2

BY PHIL TROMBLEY
Sports Writer

Kalkaska scored two first half goals on its home field, but East Jordan countered with two goals in the second half as the two teams tied 2-2 on Thursday, Sept. 15.

The Blazers opened the scoring midway through the opening session and added a second goal with five minutes to go before the break.

R.J. Green scored East Jordan's first goal on a breakaway setup by Jeff Keyser two minutes into the second half.

The pair swapped roles halfway through the period when Keyser found the net with Green getting the helper.

"I was very pleased with the way the team pulled together in the second half and worked very hard to win the half. It shows great character for them to come back to even the score," said East Jordan coach Pete Elliott.

Peter Sladick started in goal for the Red Devils, but moved to the fullback position to help with the offensive attack during the comeback. Michael Cardwell stepped into the net and made seven saves to shut out the Blazers in the second half.

East Jordan will be home for its next three games against Bellaire today, Charlevoix next Monday and Grayling next Wednesday.

The East Jordan Red Devils evened out their league record with a win over Elk Rapids last week.

Red Devils roll to victory

BY PHIL TROMBLEY
Sports Writer

East Jordan running back David Marr rushed for 168 yards in 19 carries, including a 63 yard touchdown romp, to lead the East Jordan varsity football team to a 22-12 Lake Michigan Conference victory at home over Elk Rapids on Friday, Sept. 16.

The Red Devils evened their league record at one win against one loss despite a less than stellar performance.

"We didn't play real well, but we found a way to win and that's what's important," said East Jordan coach Kris Ernst.

Marr opened the East Jordan scoring with his long run at the 8:02 mark of the first period, while Josh Cooper added an eight yard run two minutes later to give the Red Devils an early bulge.

Quarterback Justin Wilson found receiver Chad Kraemer for a 40 yard strike midway through the second quarter as the Red Devils forged a 20-12 halftime lead.

Elk Rapids reached the end zone on its first drive of the second quarter and then added a second touchdown with two minutes left in the first half.

East Jordan closed out the scoring with a safety at 8:48 of the fourth quarter.

Cooper (11 tackles), Kraemer (ten tackles, one fumble), Alex Baijko (eight tackles) and Cliff Graham (eight tackles) paced the Red Devil defense.

East Jordan (2-2) will host Boyne City (3-1) this Friday.

"Boyne's a great football team with great coaches and big players. We'll have to be at our best to beat them," said Ernst.

JV's Victorious

Scott Hansen threw for three touchdowns and one point after touchdown, ran for another and totaled 180 yards in the air to lead the East Jordan junior varsity to a 26-16 victory.

Marshall Page ran for 126 yards, Anthony Castle added 87 yards and Jordan Richards ran for 71 yards as the Red Devils moved to 4-0 on the season.

James Brown caught two touchdown passes to add to the offense, while Erin Stadick had two interceptions and Nick Bourdo had 13 tackles to lead the defense.

Ramblers rout Rayders

BY PHIL TROMBLEY
Sports Writer

The Boyne City varsity football team put together 324 total yards (292 yards on the ground) and scored 33 points in the first half of play en route to a 33-2 victory at home over Charlevoix on Friday, Sept. 16.

Will Brown ran for 114 yards in 20 carries to carry a big part of the load for the Ramblers, while Joe Robert rushed for 87 yards in ten carries and Grant Ameal chipped in with 76 yards in 11 carries.

Ameal threw only two passes in the game for 32 yards, but both of his competitions went for touchdowns.

The Rambler defense held the Rayders to just 58 yards (-12 yards rushing) and one first down during the first half barrage, while the Ramblers out gained the Rayders 416-152 in total yardage for the game.

The Ramblers struck for paydirt on their first three possessions as Ameal connected with Tyler Kruzel for five yards at 7:17, Robbie Jensen romped for 58 yards at 5:06 and Ameal found Jensen for 27 yards at 8:41 of the first period.

Charlevoix went three and out in its first three drives as Boyne City jumped to a 22-0 lead at the end of the first quarter.

"We came out with some real good intensity to set the tempo early," said Boyne City coach Dave Hills. "Our offensive line had a lot to do with the pace and execution."

The Ramblers scored twice more in the second session when Ameal ran it in from five yards out at the 8:41 mark and Brown added a four yard ruf at 3:26.

Charlevoix tallied its only points in the fourth quarter when Brown was forced to fall on the ball in his own end zone following a high punt snap from center.

Boyne City (3-1 overall, 1-1 Lake Michigan Conference) will travel to East Jordan (2-2 overall, 1-1 LMC) this Friday.

Ramblers celebrate a touchdown during Friday's win over Charlevoix.

Lady Devils defeat Elk Rapids in hoops, 73-52

Kayla Hines scored 16 points and added five rebounds, four assists and four steals to lead the Lady Devils to a 73-52 road win over Elk Rapids Tuesday, Sep. 13.

Kristi Werner and Meghan Thomas chipped in with 13 points each, while Katherine Rowley added 11 points to bolster the high powered offensive attack.

Sierra Roberts grabbed six rebounds on defense, while Werner had five boards, Thomas had ten steals, Rowley had four steals and Jessica Roberts had four assists.

"Meghan played a great game and was very active. Kayla and Kristi shot the ball extremely well and Jessica continues to be steady. The girls are working very hard and I am very proud of them," said East Jordan coach Sean Ferguson.

JV's Win Big

Cassy Crick scored 17 points, Tori Crum added 12 points and Lacie Knebl had ten as the East Jordan junior varsity defeated Elk Rapids 78-46. Mary Shaw chipped in with ten rebounds and nine steals.

East Jordan will travel to Traverse City St. Francis tomorrow and play at Boyne City next Tuesday.

Boyne City remains perfect, downs Elks 68-51

The Boyne City varsity basketball team kept its record perfect when the Lady Ramblers opened Lake Michigan Conference play with a road victory downing Elk Rapids 68-51 on Thursday, Sept. 15.

Boyne City (5-0) jumped out to a 20-14 lead at the end of the first quarter and then stretched the margin to 36-25 at the intermission.

Elk Rapids got within ten points midway through the third quarter, but after a timeout to regroup Boyne City picked up the pace to forge a 61-36 advantage going into the final quarter.

"Our defense made some mistakes and let them get some easy baskets in the third," said Boyne City coach Scott Hausler. "Offensively we didn't have very good shot selection and we need to get better at that."

Holly Stanek scored 15 points, hauled in 23 rebounds and grabbed six steals to lead the Lady Ramblers. Emma Clemens contributed 12 points and Haili Friedrich chipped with six steals.

Stephanie Steuer led the Lady Elks with 17 points.

Boyne City will be home for two games against Grayling tomorrow and East Jordan next Tuesday.

stories on its third and final day of casino stops. The bus exited I-75 at Indian River and was westbound on M-68 near Burt Lake when a bomb planted in the luggage exploded directly beneath the driver. The bus left the road, and rolled down an embankment, killing the driver, tour guide and several others. A passing motorist reported the event to 9-1-1 via a cell phone.

At approximately 8 a.m., the Tuscarora Township was dispatched to the scene and the drill was underway.

Each facet of the drill was observed and evaluated by medical service directors and Messer, whose role was to discover the weak areas in the plan or in training, to enable services to provide extra training as needed, and to make sure different services are receiving compatible training.

Messer anticipated mistakes and weaknesses, but emphasized that the drill was for training purposes, and that the exercise would ultimately strengthen the area's emergency preparedness.

In all, 13 ambulances from as far as East Jordan and Boyne City responded to the emergency drill. EMTs and first responders from the participating services entered the scene without prior knowledge of the script, and had to perform duties according to the evidence they encountered, performing triage, treating immediate life threats, bundling and collecting patients at a central location for the most efficient transport.

The fire chief always assumes incident command, and the first ambulance on scene assumes medical command of the event. The incident commander must oversee the entire operation, and assign people to different positions: someone to man the "staging area," or direct emergency vehicle traffic to ensure that there is no bottle-necking and that ambulances can leave as quickly and safely as possible. Someone else to establish and prepare a patient collection area; another to oversee triage.

Each of the areas was observed and evaluated.

Some training needs were observable quickly, and Messer, watching, often said, "This is good. This is good," as he noted those needs.

"So far this has all been textbook," he said, adding that the exercise was for many the first time some of their textbook knowledge was put to the test. "They've never done it. This is good."

"It's my job to create the problems," Messer said. "Theirs is to solve them."

Evaluator Jon Deming, director of EMS in Otsego County, said that he was very pleased with the way it all came together with the emergency medical services, and evaluator Sally Galbraith, director of EMS in Mio, agreed. She said she felt that triage, bundling and patient care went very well.

True to his promise of creating problems, Messer released "bystanders" into the scene, and these volunteers distracted the rescue efforts by demanding to be allowed to see "family members" or to be told what was going on.

There were other, unplanned complications. One volunteer victim became a real patient when he developed chest pains; a hospital emergency radio network was down, so calls were made by cell phone, and were impossible to monitor or evaluate; the heavy fog made it difficult for emergency vehicles to locate the incident.

While some victims "died" in the wait for transport, Messer and others agreed that that is a real life risk as well. The victims had a chance to talk about the experience afterwards, and some said they felt they should have gotten more treatment, more quickly, and their characters might have survived.

"We had more victims than we had hands," Messer said. "Some people don't make it. These are the real life issues that first responders deal with."

John Bell, an assistant emergency management planner, said he learned in the Marines that plans that "a battle plan never survives contact with the enemy." No one can plan to the finite detail, Messer said, and that is why the plan must be tested with this type of exercise.

"The exercise went extremely well," he said. "The turnout, the effort, the volunteers — it went very, very well."

"The mass casualty plan needs work, but that was the purpose of the drill. The communications part didn't work — that's the pivotal part of the plan, so now we've got to solve that," he added.

Messer was also pleased that the area hospitals took the opportunity to work on their own mass casualty plans. Charlevoix Area Hospital had six doctors come on Saturday to drill, as well as the nursing and other hospital staff.

The use of moulage created a visual reminder of the urgency of the disaster in last weekend's drill, while nature played its part in the exercise, bringing in fog and a heavy dew that soaked victim volunteers and trainees participating in a three-county disaster plan exercise. The event, designed to test the effectiveness of the plan, went well, with significant turn out from local fire, EMS, law enforcement and hospital participants.
